REP. GARNER CONFERS WITH JOHN CURRY

Prospective Democratic Speaker Has Social Hour With the Tammany Chieftain

Washington, Nov. 21.—(AP)—John Curry, the Tammany chieftain, and Representative Garner of Texas met today for the first time—having breakfast together at 7 A. M.

"Purely Social" was the way the meeting was described by Garner, the prospective Democratic speaker of the House.

The Texas representative declared at his office in mid-morning that he had no business with the Democratic party before the election.

"I never had seen one of these politicians from Tammany Hall," he said, "and I wanted to see what they looked like. I couldn't see any horns or hoofs on him like I had seen in the cartoons of the Tammany hall boys."

"Curry appeared to me to be a mighty nice man and a very pleasant gentleman."

"We didn't talk about any business because our breakfast just lasted about 20 minutes and you can't do much talking and eating in that time."

A Tammany man, Representative O'Connor, arranged the meeting after Garner had told him he wanted to meet Curry. O'Connor only yesterday claimed he would be elected floor leader of the party.

Last night Curry called up Garner and asked him to dinner.

Last night Curry called up Garner and asked him to dinner.

"I told Mr. Curry that I didn't eat much dinner or have much for lunch but that I could see him at breakfast," Garner said. "He told me that would suit him so I said that I had breakfast pretty early, around 7 o'clock. Curry laughed and said 'why, that is the time that I usually breakfast.'"

"Well," the Texan continued, "we had a mighty nice chat. Mr. Curry told me that he had a brother and 45 other relatives in Texas and that he had visited my state from time to time. I told him that I liked 'Sittin' Bull' John Carver, who used to be the leader of the Tammany delegation in the House. Sittin' Bull was a big help to me."

Rev. W. A. Ryan to Deliver Thanksgiving Sermon at St. Paul's Church

Next Thursday morning, all Greenville will be given an opportunity to express thanks and appreciation of the many blessings which they have received during the present year in the union Thanksgiving service at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The service, an annual affair, will be held at 10:30 o'clock and the sermon will be delivered by Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Church of Christ.

Although his subject had not been announced, it was a well known fact that Mr. Ryan would deal with the inexpressible blessings which the locality and nation have received during the year and attempt to impress upon the populace the importance of keen appreciation.

Considerable significance is always attached to the Thanksgiving services because they are reminiscent of the first service of the kind hundreds of years ago when the first American settlers gathered to express thanks for the bountiful blessings bestowed upon them, despite thousands of dangers lurking upon every hand.

The service is promoted by the Ministerial Association and hope was expressed by its members that the public would attend in large numbers and help make the occasion one of the greatest of its kind in years.

In spite of the depression existing throughout the world, it was pointed out, this community has been bountifully blessed with boundless acres of food crops, and it is nothing but right that appreciative people should lift up their hearts in praise and thanksgiving on this day set apart by our forefathers for this purpose.

The sermon was delivered before the largest crowd of the series of revival services which opened Sunday week and which will come to a close tomorrow night. The conference overflowed into the balcony, aisles and Sunday school room and scores were turned away because of their inability to gain access to the building.

Tonight the evangelist will deliver what has been hailed as the most gripping and stirring sermon of the series. It will be on the subject, "From Gypsy Tent to Pulpit" and will afford a vivid picture of the life of the evangelist and his father who at the present time are considered the most picturesque characters in the field of evangelism on two continents.

In view of the fact that each of his sermons has contained some striking reference to his Gypsy forebears, the hundreds of people who have heard the evangelist during his brief stay here are looking forward with inexpressible interest to a more complete exposition of facts connected with his eventful life.

Thousands of people were also expected to throng the church at the two final services tomorrow, and the church is making every effort to accommodate as many worshippers as possible.

John Clark, member of the congregation, announced last night that offerings Friday, Saturday and Sunday would be given to Mr. Smith. All contributions prior to that time went to the local expense of the meetings. Envelopes for the offering to Mr. Smith were issued last night and the previous night when Dr. Herbert ReBarker made the first announcement in this connection. The public was urged to give liberally.

Last night the evangelist's text was taken from the first verse of the 19th chapter of St. Luke. "And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho." It centered about Jesus and Zacchaeus, the chief among the publicans and was that Christ came to the earth to seek and save.

If President Hoover should come to Greenville he would be greeted by one of the most tumultuous receptions imaginable because he is President of the United States and one of the leading figures in public life, Mr. Smith said. But when Jesus entered Jericho there was no celebration in his behalf. The people were asleep to the opportunities which His coming held forth to them. The same condition prevails today, he asserted. The world is asleep, suffering from a spiritual inertia that causes it to fail to appreciate the vast opportunities opened up to it through belief in the great cause which Christ represents.

FORTY GIRLS REPORT FOR BASKETBALL PRACTICE

During the past week the call for candidates for the girls' basketball team was issued by Miss Evelyn Smith, adviser for girls' athletics. About forty girls reported for practice.

Several practices have already been held, and the first team will be picked in the next two weeks.

Last year's team was an undefeated group, and with such a heritage, this year's team is expected to strive even more to maintain the excellent standard.

Miss Smith, the new coach, is from Charlotte.

GREENVILLE FROSH WIN 7-6 OVER KINSTON

On Thursday afternoon, Nov. 12, Coach Porter took his freshman team to Kinston for a return game with the Kinston Frosh.

Kinston's Frosh put the Greenville lads under a strain and allowed them only one touchdown with the extra point. Greenville, however, held Kinston to one touchdown minus the goal.

V. C. Fleming, Nathan Bullock, and Archie Jones tackled in fine style. "Pete" Brewer and L. G. Hamilton scored the touchdowns and goal. Jack Forbes and Ed Wells made good gains for Greenville from time to time.

GREENVILLE VARSITY LOSES GAME TO KINSTON

Fridly, the 13th, was an unlucky day for Greenville. Kinston won its first football game from Coach Porter's boys when he took charge of Greenville's athletics five years ago. The game took place on the Third street gridiron at 3:30. Howard Summerell was elected captain.

An aerial attack in the third and fourth quarters netted the Red Birds their score of 19 points. Two completed passes, and a Greenville intercepted pass, together with many costly fumbles told the sad story for Greenville. Burks Douglass, fullback, and Babe Jordan, halfback, played a stellar game for Kinston.

Though Greenville was unable to score, Mark Turnage, fullback, and Carl Cahoon, halfback, did some outstanding playing for the local warriors.

The last game of the season will be played on Thanksgiving Day with Farmville, in Greenville.

GIpsy SMITH WILL CLOSE REVIVAL HERE TOMORROW

(Continued from page one) is because they are blinded by the glitter of the world, and are willing to drift along with the tinsel oblivious of the countless blessings held forth by Christ.

People of vision and discernment are able to see the wonderful power of God reflected in all the glory and beauty of nature, he said. "You can see nothing in this life," the speaker asserted, "or you can open the eyes of your soul and see things that will make heaven ring with hallelujahs."

Zacchaeus was wealthy, but all the riches in the world will not buy happiness, he said. He was one of the most hated men of his day, yet he made up his mind to see Jesus, and saw Him.

He painted a glowing picture of the wonderful works of Jesus in healing the sick and afflicted, raising the dead, and declared His power is just as great today as it ever was. God is able to help civilization overcome the countless obstacles facing it at this time just as he enabled Zacchaeus to overcome the apparently insurmountable obstacles which faced him.

Mr. Smith urged his hearers not to let the world stand in their way. Friends may jeer and chide you for taking a stand for righteousness, but don't let them dictate what you shall do and shall not do, he pleaded. "Any dead fish can float with the stream, but it takes a live one to go against the current."

God demands more of people with opportunities to aid His cause, it was asserted, and makes allowances for those who have been handicapped by conditions.

"God is not a monster," he vehemently declared. "He is a God of light, and knowledge and justice."

Describing God as omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent, Mr. Smith said He knew the needs of the people as much today as He ever did, and was willing to respond to their call the minute they are ready.

God hears, sees, knows and understands everything, and only waits for the people to take Him home as Zacchaeus did.

He closed with a story of his conversion, declaring he had never regretted the step because it had converted him into a right-thinking, straight-shooting individual, attempting to carry the message of God to all those who need it.

ed after which the appointments will be read.

Tonight Dr. Harry M. North, presiding elder of the Raleigh district, will complete a series of sermons delivered during the conference. He was chosen by Bishop Mouzon to deliver the principal sermons.

Last night was marked by one of the most inspirational sessions of the week. It was the annual conference of the Historical Society, presided over by Joseph Daniels, president of the historical society, presided over the session of the society last night, and it was under his supervision that the program was prepared.

Addresses on Governor Jarvis were made by Mr. Daniels, Dr. R. H. Wright president of the East Carolina Teachers' College, George W. Connor, associate justice of the supreme court, and by Dr. M. T. Plyler, associate editor of the Christian Advocate. Robert N. Page was on the program, but on account of sickness was unable to be present.

"At most sessions of this historical association," said Mr. Daniels opening his address, "emphasis has been laid—and properly—on the life and influence of the circuit rider, whose abundant labors and leadership helped mightily in shaping the religious and social foundations of this commonwealth. It has been deemed appropriate to centre this year's gathering around the career of a great son of a devoted Methodist preacher who worthily in a long public career illustrated the teachings of Methodism. It seemed to the officers of the association peculiarly appropriate to celebrate here in the Jarvis Memorial church in Greenville, the contribution made in his generation by Thomas Jordan Jarvis, whose spirit lives and guides in this church, this community, this commonwealth.

"The first man in high official station I ever saw was Thomas Jordan Jarvis. To my boyish eyes his tall figure and commanding presence comported with the dignity of the great office of Governor. When I had grown older and was admitted to his friendship and sought in political creed and practice to follow where he led, I found that to physical distinction he added the soundest judgment and loftiest patriotism inherent in noble manhood.

"In or out of office for half a century he had a leading part in fashioning public policies in North Carolina; his counsel was sought and followed; his political addresses had about them convincing and winning power.

Gov. Connor, commencing his address on "Governor Jarvis as a lawyer," recalled the fact that Governor Jarvis was the guest of honor at the meeting of the State Bar Association in Asheville in 1912 when he was introduced by Judge J. S. Manning in these words:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I have the distinguished honor and great pleasure to present to you tonight the most distinguished and best loved living North Carolinian, the most respected at home, the most honored abroad: The Hon. Thomas J. Jarvis, ex-governor, ex-minister and ex-senator."

"This," said Judge Connor, "was the last occasion on which Governor Jarvis appeared at a public meeting in this State. It is pleasing to the members of the North Carolina Bar Association, his fellow-lawyers, who justly regard Governor Jarvis, because of his high character, and steadfast loyalty to the people of this State, as a typical North Carolina lawyer, to recall this fact. They honor, they honor themselves in showing their appreciation of such a man as Governor Jarvis. Let those who are sometimes critical of lawyers, and their profession remember that lawyers, whatever their faults and shortcomings, delight to honor members of their profession, such as Governor Jarvis."

Judge Connor pointed out that in his Asheville speech Governor Jarvis indicated three rules which a lawyer ought to observe, one that he must remember always to be a gentleman; the second, that he ought always to remember that he is a citizen, and the third, that there is something in the practice of law besides the making of money. The speaker quoted the eloquent words in which Governor Jarvis laid down these rules and added:

"Those of us who knew Governor Jarvis in the fullness of his splendid manhood, when his very presence was a benediction and an inspiration, recognized in these simple but profound words, the philosophy which guided him through all the years of his long and successful life. He was at all times and under all circumstances a gentleman—home in his office, on the streets, in the court-house and, of course, in his home, where he and his charming wife—whom he delighted to call the real ex-governor of North Carolina—dispensed a gracious hospitality which will never be forgotten by those who were so fortunate as to be their guests. He was always considerate of others, tolerant of their opinions however they differed from his, respectful and deferential in manner toward a man.

Dr. Wright spoke of the contribution Governor Jarvis made to education in North Carolina and made special reference to his leadership in building East Carolina Teachers' College.

Dr. Plyler, a former pastor of Jarvis Memorial church spoke of Governor Jarvis as a religious leader and paid a fine tribute to him. He said that the governor was possessed of a simple, unquestioning, childlike faith; that he was a most humble worshiper and was always an inspiration to his pastor; that he was a born leader of men and he was always ready to give his most mature thought to the best interests of his church and that he was one of the most liberal men, according to his ability, he had ever known and that he belonged to that exclusive class of Christians that is larger than the circle of his own denomination so that he was the common possession of all who claimed allegiance to Jesus Christ.

The Historical Society elected officers as follows: H. C. Smith, president; O. L. Hinson, first vice president; O. T. Singleton, second vice president; E. L. Hillman, third vice president; T. M. Gant, secretary, and T. A. Sikes, treasurer.

Adventures Of Betty And Scarlet Bunny

By W. A. LILLYCROP

Mother sat watching Betty and Scarlet Bunny at play. Then looking out the window at the lovely sunshine she had an idea.

Getting up quietly and going back to the kitchen, she found Betty's little basket. This she filled with a delicious lunch for two. Then coming back into the living room she asked:

"Betty, wouldn't you and Scarlet Bunny like to go for a picnic?" Betty looked at her mother eagerly and shouted:

"Why, we would love it! Please, may we go?" She added.

Mother looked at Scarlet Bunny. He, too, seemed delighted.

So mother gave them the lovely basket of lunch she had already fixed and told them they could go.

And a very happy Betty and Scarlet Bunny were soon on their way toward the woods near the lake of the College Campus.

Arrived there, what fun they had! Leaving their basket of lunch under a tree, they went exploring through the woods. Betty had the time of her life as Scarlet Bunny showed her many marvelous things that she had never dreamed existed, out of doors. Presently they grew tired and hungry. So they tramped back to the tree where they had left their basket. And in a few moments, on the snowy white blanket, which Mother had put in the basket, they spread their lunch.

Suddenly, just as they were merrily eating away, Betty and Scarlet Bunny looked up. There, right before them they saw standing a thin, raggedy little girl, who looked tired and dusty and very hungry.

They had not heard her come up at all. But there she was, looking wistfully at their picnic lunch.

Quickly, Betty stood up and said sweetly:

"Come, sit down and have some lunch with us. I am Betty, and this is Scarlet Bunny. We are out here having a picnic!"

"Yes," chimed in Scarlet Bunny, "It will be such fun if you will join us!"

The little girl did not say a word. But she did seat herself shyly by Betty and Scarlet Bunny. And soon she joined in their laughter and ate heartily of the lunch they divided with her.

When they had finished the last bite of lunch, Betty asked anxiously, "Aren't you very, very tired? You look as though you had walked a long way. If you will, I'd love to have you come home with me and rest!"

"Oh, thank you so much," declared the little girl. "But I really am quite rested now and must be on my way." Then she stood up as though to start on her way.

But as Betty and Scarlet Bunny sat looking at her, instead of going away, she stood there a moment then suddenly her appearance changed. And she was not a poor little girl any longer but the Fairy Queen herself!

Both Betty and Scarlet Bunny were too surprised to speak a word. The Fairy Queen smiled at them. Then she raised her wand over her head, and instantly from under every rock, there scrambled a Fairy, until, in a few moments, every Fairy in the Fairy Kingdom was there! With the Queen they stood smiling down upon Betty and Scarlet Bunny.

Betty pinched herself and then turning to Scarlet Bunny, she said: "We both must be dreaming."

But the sweet bell-like voice of the Fairy Queen interrupting her, said:

"No, my dears, you two are not dreaming."

"But all the Fairy folk really have come to do honor to you, because we love you."

"You didn't know it, of course," continued the Queen. "But today you passed the final test of the Fairies. Before this you have helped the needy, another time you overcame unkindness to each other; but this time in sharing your lunch and your friendship with one whom you thought was only a poor little hungry stranger you passed the final test of Fairy approval."

Betty and Scarlet Bunny did not know what to say. Nor did the Queen give them time to say anything.

She shook her shining wand and there came and stood before her hundreds of Fairies who all together were supporting on their wands the weight of a great, golden bag.

Marguerite Churchill plays a queenly role in "Ambassador Bill," Fox production starring Will Rogers. State — Thursday-Friday from the mouth of which there were hanging many strings of different colors.

"We Fairies," said the Queen, "would like to give to each of you another wish. But you both wasted the one you had. And wasted opportunities can never be regained again, not even in Fairyland."

"But we are going to do the next best thing for you," the Queen continued. "We have here the treasure bag of the Fairy Kingdom. A colored, silken string is tied to each of the treasures we have in it. And we want each of you to pull a string and to draw one thing from our Treasure bag to be your very own forever."

The Queen motioned to Betty to draw first. Very shyly she reached out her hand and pulled one of the colored strings. Out of the golden bag there came into her hands a rather long package wrapped in silver paper. When Betty untied it, what do you suppose she found? It was a large beautiful doll. And as Betty stood holding it with her face filled with happiness, the Queen told her:

"She is a magic doll and can both walk and talk just as you do."

"Oh, thank you, thank you!" said Betty.

Then the Queen motioned to Scarlet Bunny to draw. And when he pulled one of the colored strings, out came a round package tied in red paper. Quickly, Scarlet Bunny untied his and what do you suppose he found? It was a round tub.

"It's not a bath tub," she said smilingly. "It is a magic tub, which always has in it a fresh, tender bunch of carrots."

And Scarlet Bunny, instead of wriggling up his nose as he first thought of doing, said, "Oh, thank you!" and looked as pleased as Betty.

Again the Queen waved her wand, and the Fairies, carrying the great golden bag, moved away with it, while all the other Fairies knelt on one knee.

"Now," said the Fairy Queen to Betty and Scarlet Bunny. "If you will kneel, I will confer on each of you the special honors of the Fairy Kingdom."

Quickly, both of them knelt.

Then the Queen touched Scarlet Bunny with her wand and said: "I bestow upon you the title of the Prince of all good Bunnies, the special helper of the Fairies!"

Next the Queen touched Betty upon the title of the princess of all the Little human Helpers of the Fairy Kingdom.

Before Betty and Scarlet Bunny could rise to their feet, there came a noise like leaves blowing in the wind and with a merry whirl the Fairies were gone.

Betty and Scarlet Bunny stood looking solemnly at each other.

Had all this really been possible. Or were they both really dreaming? But they did not have time to discuss it. Hearing a noise, they turned around and found Betty's magic doll saying:

"Say, you two. Wake up! How long before you are going home?"

tor" saying you want them and telling him why.

LADY with a PAST

By Harriet Henry

SYNOPSIS: Venice has set three goals for herself—to become popular in New York society, to repay Roland Wainwright for an old snub and to attract Drake Farley. She returns from Paris with a manufactured spic reputation that makes her popular. She captures Wainwright's interest. But Drake remains aloof.

CRATER 36
RUMOR TRICKS VENICE
Venice and Drake talked impersonally in the taxi and it was not until they were at a small table, their dinner ordered, that she summoned the courage to say, "Lola's news of me has disconcerted you, hasn't it?"
"Yes, it has, rather."
"Why?"
"You won't like what I'm going to say."
"Say it, anyway."
"I don't particularly admire a girl who leads on a married man or who gets a chap in such a state that he kills himself when she turns him down."
Venice felt the shamed color creeping into her face. That was exactly the way it all appeared and yet up to now it had served her well. It had intrigued a score of imaginations. And yet here was the only person who seemed real to her, a friend in whom she could confide, with whom she could rejoice in being her genuine self, who regarded it all as a blot on her personal escutcheon. She couldn't bear this. She wanted him to admire her, to offer her his sincere approbation.
"It wasn't really at all like that," she protested earnestly.
"What was it really like then?" His tone was a trifle amused. She could see that he was prepared for a manufactured recrimination.
"Gay Byron, the American, and I played about together because we were both lonely. It wasn't a sort of arrangement. It was an affair. We never once thought of each other that way. He never held my hand. Renee de Thierhardt was a fortune hunter. He wanted to marry me for my money. He finally killed himself because of one particularly unbearable debt to a woman."
Drake laughed. It was that infectious laugh, but there was a quality in it this time that hurt.
"Venice Muir, you're a genius."
"What do you mean?" He didn't believe her. Her dinner was going practically unattended.
"Look here," he protested, "you're not eating. Isn't everything all right?"
"The food's delicious. But I didn't mean it to be a horrid laugh. But I'm not a boy of eighteen. You shouldn't talk to me as if I were."
"I talked to you as if you were a friend. I told you the truth, Drake."
"Yes, but so beautifully glossed. Expurgated for the idealistic young man's ears."
She loved unhealthily with her fork. It all seemed suddenly hopeless. He accepted the rumors as willingly as every one else, but the reaction was so different.
This was dreadful. Inside her she was miserable and yet she couldn't let the evening completely collapse.
"Let's talk about you," she forced herself to say brightly.
"I'm an uninteresting guy."
"No, really. What do you do with yourself all the time?"
She did so much to want to know and most earnestly desired to reach that warm, friendly footing again.
"Nothing that would be entertaining telling."
"Please, Drake."
He smiled at her serious, almost intense mien.
"Has the naughty little girl been snubbed?"
She did not return the smile.
"Yes, you are snubbing me. I wouldn't ask questions if I weren't interested. Even the iniquitous sometimes really like some one and want to hear what he does. Be friends with me Drake."

He stated at this little speech, a puzzled look coming into his clear amber-yellow eyes. The hurt sarcasm with which she had employed that "iniquitous" perplexed him and the childish sincerity of the last sentence could not be denied.
"I'm sorry, Venice. Prepare yourself for a dull chronicle. But wait, let's set the check first and we'll start the daily grind of Drake Farley in the taxi homeward bound."
In the cab they were silent for a dozen blocks, she looking out of the window, her mind busy with this new unhappy problem. Drake hated the very thing she had written to achieve. Her carefully builded wall of rumor. He was lost in watching her clear-cut profile. How could this grave, feminine girl who appeared so honest and so shy be at the source of all that Lola had gleefully reported? If he could only believe her interpretation of the gossip. But no. It was her ability to make people believe that had misled him in the beginning and had no doubt fooled this Bryson person and the Marquis.
Venice suddenly turned. Their eyes met and clung. Hers were grave, his smiled for the seriousness of her expression.
"Begin now, Drake. I go down town every day and—"
He laughed.
"Yes, I go down town every day and I slave in the offices of Peasley and Whitcomb. In the evenings I make drawings for blue prints or stay home and play contract with the family. Occasionally I go out with a girl or one of my special cronies. That's all. An uninspiring existence, monotonous yet pleasant."
"I didn't know you had a family. A big one?"
"A mother and a father, two sisters and two brothers."
"Go on," she begged.
It was as though he suddenly thought he was boring her. He smiled and shook his head.
"Nothing glamorous about my existence. And here we are anyway."
Back in Venice's living-room, divested of hats and coats, they stirred the fire to a cheerful blaze and made themselves comfortable.
"What would happen if you won this contest?" she asked.
"They'd use my drawing and I'd probably get good offers from all sorts of firms."
"Would that mean a tremendous lot to you?"
"Yes." His face went alight. "I'd have a chance to bridge the years of back work under other people. I—"
He stopped again. Once more she sensed that he was afraid she wasn't really interested.
"Please, Drake. I love hearing."
"The perfect hostess," he chaffed.
"What had this knowledge of Guy and Renee done?" She felt desperate.

WHAT CAN VENICE DO? She makes one more effort to explain to Drake, in Monday's installment.

FOUR DEATHS FROM COLD

drifts with an unknown number of occupants, were details in the picture.
Residents of central and north Idaho were digging from under a blizzard that apparently swung into Montana, accompanied by temperatures as low as four degrees above zero.
Some fears were expressed for the safety of 30 road workers last reported between Blue Lake and Shuttle Lake, Oregon, high in the Cascade mountains Thursday. It was pointed out, however, they probably had made some preparation against cold.
The Spokane weather office said the Canadian cold wave possibly would strike in fullest strength east of the Rocky Mountains, bringing below zero temperatures.
Occupants of five automobiles stalled near Lookout Pass, east of Wallace, Idaho, were being taken food and supplies by highway crews.

AMERICA RETALIATES AS BRITAIN RAISES TARIFF
tervading duties go into effect automatically whenever the American duties on certain articles are less than charged by a foreign government on the same article.
Treasury and Department of Commerce experts are preparing a list of articles on which the duties would be increased.
Assistant Secretary Lowman, of the Treasury, disclosed the plan this morning.
The British anti-dumping tariff measure, which becomes effective Wednesday, allows duties of 50 per cent based on value upon a long list of articles imported from the United States.
In this list is metal furniture, cutlery, agricultural implements, wireless sets, typewriters, woolen manufacturers, stockings and hose of silk and artificial silk, men's clothing, gloves, except those of rubber, tires and tubes and paper.
Customs collections under the tariff law are administered by the treasury and are under the direction of Lowman.
He said today every effort was being made to hasten the preparation of the list of articles upon which the duties will be increased to equal the British duties. He expected that it would be ready and the increases in force by the time the new British duties will go into effect.

NOTRE DAME AND TROJANS CLASH TODAY

New York, Nov. 21.—(AP)—The football map was split into three sections with South Bend the point of greatest intensity.

At the Indiana city the most important battle of the day from a national championship angle sent the Notre Dame Ramblers into action against the Trojans of Southern California. The east's contribution was the 50th classic between Harvard and Yale at Cambridge. In the far west, the traditional duel involving Stanford and California at Palo Alto was the high spot.

These three games alone accounted for 200,000 of the day's expected aggregate attendance with about 90,000 at Palo Alto and more than 50,000 at Cambridge and South Bend.

Harvard was the favorite at Cambridge, and Stanford and California appeared evenly matched although the latter was a slight public choice.

The south marched on toward the end of the 1931 football season by way of a meagre and unexcited schedule today.

None of the week end's six intra-conference games seemed likely to have much bearing on the southern championship situation. Little short of something cataclysmic now can change the course from a co-championship for Tulane and Tennessee and the tumult and the shouting is dying.

Tulane was confronted by Sewanee, enemy of long standing. Although Tulane is rated much too strong for Sewanee, the battle was in the forefront among the day's offerings by reason of the enduring rivalry of the two schools.

Georgia has journeyed to Columbus, Ga., to meet Auburn in another traditional game. The series started back in the '90s. For all of being the favorite, it was conceded that Georgia would have its hands full.

Then, there was the game between Georgia Tech. and Florida in Atlanta. Florida swamped the Yellow Jackets last year but today's score promised to be close. North Carolina and Duke had a state argument to settle at Durham while North Carolina State met South Carolina at Columbia.

Maryland, victorious over three of Virginia's conference teams, hoped to add Washington and Lee to the string today.

There were three fairly outstanding games on the southern intercollegiate association program for the week-end—Louisiana Tech and Louisiana College, Centre and Louisville, and Birmingham Southern and Howard.

In Friday's S. I. A. A. battles, Texas defeated Centenary 6 to 0 at Shreveport, La., while Wofford edged in a 13 to 12 victory over Erskin at Due West, S. C.

Aside from these contests there were a score of others of varying interest. The Big Ten, where Northwestern seems to have a strange hold on the championship, presented a full slate to five contests—Northwestern vs. Iowa; Illinois vs. Ohio State; Minnesota vs. Michigan; Purdue vs. Indiana and Wisconsin vs. Chicago. The Big Six championship was at stake in the clash of Iowa State and Nebraska.

In the east, Southern Methodist came up from the southwest to give battle to the navy; Fordham and Bucknell collided at New York in a duel of undefeated eleven; Syracuse played Columbia and Lehigh and Lafayette renewed an ancient rivalry.

The southwest conference scheduled was limited to games between Texas Christian and Baylor, and Arkansas and Rice. Temple and Denver were foes in the big game in the Rocky Mountain district.

Canzoneri Holds The Light Crown

New York, Nov. 21.—(AP)—The champion of the lightweights still Tony Canzoneri; but as surely as he is Kid Chocolate.

Through 15 blistering rounds of unceasing action in Madison Square Garden last night and by only the narrowest of margins did Canzoneri slay off Chocolate's formidable bid for his lightweight crown. For this important duel, a crowd of 19,000, largest at the garden in two years, piled into the Eighth avenue arena, saw one of the most savage battles between little men in the modern history of the ring and remained for ten minutes at the finish to see the official decision.

So close was the milling that one judge, Charles F. Morrison, gave the verdict to Chocolate while the other judge, Joe Angelo, and the referee, Willie Lewis, cast their ballots for Canzoneri. The Associated Press score card listed eight rounds for Canzoneri, five for Chocolate with the first and eighth even.

HEELS MEET DUKEMEN AT BULL CITY

Charlotte, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Duke and the University of North Carolina clashed at Durham today in one of the high spots of the football season for the Tar Heel state while N. C. State, only other Big Five team in action, wound up its season at Columbia, S. C., with the South Carolina Gamecocks.

Although the Big Five championship, already held by the Tar Heels, was not at stake at Durham, the renewal of the contest between the old rivals drew thousands to the Duke Stadium.

Johnny Branch, the university's suspended quarterback, was relegated to a spectator's role again, but with the knowledge that he would get into action next week.

Coach Chuck Collins who suspended Branch five weeks ago for breaking training, announced he reinstates him Monday and allow him to play Thanksgiving Day against Virginia.

N. C. State with its morale at the highest point of the season after a clean-cut conquest of Duke, went to Columbia in high hopes of turning back the highly-touted Gamecocks.

Earl Clary, South Carolina's best back, was on the injured list and unable to play. Davidson and Wake Forest, the other Big Five members, were idle today. They meet at Charlotte on Thanksgiving Day.

NO TROUBLE FINDING ALL STAR ENDS

Atlanta, Nov. 19.—(AP)—Dixie's gridiron experts won't have much trouble selecting the ends for the 1931 all-star southern conference team. They probably will be Jerry Dalrymple of Tulane and Catfish Smith of Georgia.

If there are any dissenting votes, they probably will be in favor of Vernon Haynes of Tulane. Haynes hasn't been as sensational an end in past seasons as Smith or Dalrymple, but his play this year ranks him alongside these two.

Other flankmen who have played well this season include Hall of Florida, Foster of Vanderbilt, Kelly of Georgia, Parnell of Florida, Derryberry and Reburn of Tennessee, Gant of Auburn and Ben Smith of Alabama.

Possibly none of the tackles this year have played as well as Singleton of Alabama in 1930 but there are a number of fine performers to choose from.

Patton of Sewanee has been an outstanding figure in every game. Upton of Tulane has played well. Mamerick and Rose of Georgia are veteran performers. Saunders of Tennessee and Levedecker of Vanderbilt are among the best. Cobb of North Carolina State has been a star in every game.

Georgia offers two fine guards in Maddox and Leathers. Hackman of Tennessee and Scaife of Tulane have played well all season. Fysal of North Carolina has been prominent in every game. Frank of Tennessee played sensationally before injuries cut him down and the same may be said of Godfrey of Alabama who has been handicapped by hurt.

Pearley of Vanderbilt is good and Wright of Kentucky can play either guard or tackle. Krajovic of Maryland has been a star lineman in all the old liner's games.

Douglis of Tulane and Graesy of Vanderbilt have set the pace for the centers. Lorraine replaced Lloyd Roberts, Tulane's all-southern pivot man of 1930, has handled the position with credit.

Neblett of Georgia Tech, Ferrazzi of Florida, Mayer of Tennessee, Sharpe of Alabama, Reiss of Virginia, and Gilbreath of North Carolina are all good centers. Torrance of Louisiana State is an offensive tackle, but plays defensive center.

He is a 265 pound giant and is six feet five inches tall. There are many other fine linemen but these seem to be the cream of the crop.

C., and

SPORTS SLANTS

There's a lot of acreage to be covered in the All-American scramble but to start with at least, for a great pair of ends, it isn't necessary to look any further than Georgia and Cornell.

Some of our most eagle-eyed observers would like to know about it if there are any better wignmen than Vernon (Catfish) Smith of the southern Bulldogs; of Joe Martinez, Zorrilla, the youthful Mexican firebrand who holds down one side of the line for Gil Dohie's Ithacans.

Both have had a lot to do with keeping Georgia and Cornell unbeaten. Smith is a quintuple threat for he can punt, pass, and run with the ball in addition to doing the required offensive or defensive chores of a wingman. He is fast, rangy and resourceful.

The younger of the famous Martinez-Zorrilla boys, brought up from Jalisco, Mexico, by their father, a Cornell old grad, to play side-by-side in the Red line, is a showy and sensational workman.

He has the easy grace and nonchalant on a gridiron that bespeaks class. Red Grange possessed it and so does Albie Booth.

Jose dusts himself off coolly after diving through interference to walk—not run—back to position. Either he has been reading theatre programs, as Gil Dohie probably suggested to him, or he conserves his energy.

This youngster is like a startled deer, however, on the receiving end of a pass and his defensive work, under punts or on end plays, in the Columbia game, drew high praise from coaches and officials.

A New Kaw

There has been only one Eddie Kaw, so far as Cornell's Gil Dohie is concerned. The veteran coach has never tutored the equal of the ball carrying star of the Ithaca juggernauts of a decade ago, but Gil considers the sophomore star of this year's backfield, Johnny Ferraro, "a good boy, with prospects."

Ferraro has the advantage of rare blocking assistance from such backs as Bart Viciano, Phil Kline and Hedden, on extended haunts; but the Buffalo boy is hard to stop when roaming on his own account.

He can also kick and pass about as well as any Cornell back since George Pfann. He is rangy, powerful and colorful.

Pitt's 'All-America'

Pittsburgh has a candidate for All-America tackle in Jim MacMurdo.

"Ordinarily a tackle's reputation is based on a lot of mere hearsay," writes Frank Carver from the lair of the Panther, "but this year MacMurdo will have a chance to prove his worth as he will be playing against two men who were of All-America calibre last season in Jack Price of the Army and Hugh Rhea of Nebraska."

Pitt plays Army at home November 14, and entertains Nebraska two weeks later.

"A Little Child Shall Lead Them"

HE DOES NOT KNOW THAT MOTHER IS FAR, FAR AWAY! "He who gives a child a treat, Makes joy-bells ring in Heaven's Street, And he who gives a child a home—Builds palaces in Kingdom Come"—Masefield.

Contribute the income of a day to the orphanage of your choice.

FOLLOWING THE CHILD

"And a little child shall lead them." Isaiah 11:6.

Of all the prophecies in the Book this seems in the light of its setting to have had the least chance for fulfillment. Seven centuries stood between the prophet and the Messiah, in whose name this radical promise was uttered. All that man had ever known was force—it was his answer to every problem. To expect a revolution in the world accustomed to the marching pageant, the blowing trumpets, and the ringing bells, was to invert the whole order of society.

Yet, that is exactly what has happened. The Child was born into a kingdom in which the strongest ruled by virtue of the power to destroy. Think of the Roman Empire, whose iron-heeled Caesars shook the earth as they rolled over it with their engines of war. Yet all that remains of that kingdom into which Christ was born is the religious institution which was dedicated to the leadership of the Child.

A New World

And so we have set the child in the midst of us and undertaken to destroy the world of force. That destruction is far from complete; we still cling with fanatical conservatism to the rod of iron. But the most thoroughgoing pessimist will burst into a paean of praise if he will go back to the social, political and industrial conditions of Christ's time and observe the appalling disparity between the world in which He was born and the world which He has transformed. To be sure, we have far to go to establish the Kingdom of Heaven on earth, but we have gone far enough to change the whole moral landscape of life.

And the little child has led us. Every year the power of the child gains on the rule of force and every year there will be gains on the rule of greed. There will be many conflicts yet, but love and greed will be better matched than ever before and the fighting will be in the open. It may be another two thousand years before the Kingdom of Love overthrows the kingdom of greed. But come that day, as it will, "and a little child shall lead them."

Here At Home

North Carolina has nearly 4,000 of these children, such as Christ blessed, in the Orphan Homes of the State. Religious and fraternal organizations house and mother them, but hundreds stand in line and wait for admission into these homes. There are many tests which a great people must meet to survive. But of nothing are we quite so certain as we are that financial care and spiritual death await us if we neglect these children.

Then and Now

We know now why the poet and the prophet sang centuries in advance of the Child's coming and promised that a little child should lead us. We know now why Jesus reserved His greatest wrath for those who would offend the least of men. Every child is God's recurring hope of redeeming the world; every birth puts a new rainbow in the sky; every cradle rocks a son of God.

If, then, every birth is a miracle, every cradle a holy place, every child a son of the Most High, and every occupation is an education for immortality; if the child is to be the mightiest force known among men; if every common duty of men is to be an opportunity for heavenly revelation; if a celestial radiance is to shine on every birth and a child of God is to sleep and wake in every crib, consider these orphans and suffer them to come unto us all, "and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

THANKSGIVING

This is one of the "special days" which, during recent years, comes to North Carolinians freighted with the spirit of good will, of cheerfulness, of happy greetings fragrant with friendship that means service where service may be needed. A generous spirit has been manifested toward the various orphan homes of the State and the North Carolina Orphan Association once again renews its appeal for liberal offerings for these beneficent institutions during the approaching Thanksgiving period.

On or before Thursday, November 26, the day set apart by the President of the United States and the Governor of North Carolina for prayer and thanksgiving, every high-hearted citizen of the State is requested to contribute the income of a DAY to the orphanage of his or her choice.

Help for the Destitute

POSITIVELY, THE NEED HAS NEVER BEEN SO URGENT AS IT IS TODAY. SURELY THE CONTRIBUTIONS WILL BE MORE LIBERAL THAN FOR ANY PREVIOUS YEAR. LET EVERYONE RISE TO THE DIGNITY OF THE HOUR BY EACH DOING HIS OR HER LEVEL BEST TO AID THESE HOMELESS IN THE TRAINING AND EDUCATION OF ORPHANED CHILDREN WHO MIGHT OTHERWISE BECOME A MENACE TO SOCIETY AND A CARE UPON THE PUBLIC. CONDITIONS INVITE AND DUTY DEMANDS THE CO-OPERATION OF EVERY NORTH CAROLINIAN IN AIDING A CLASS OF CHILDREN WHO SHOULD RECEIVE THE PROTECTION OF EVERY MAN'S ARM AND THE AFFECTION OF EVERY WOMAN'S HEART.

Respectfully, M. L. SHIPMAN, Chairman, JOHN D. BERRY, GURNEY P. HOOD, REV. A. S. BARNES, MISS FANNIE H. YOUNG, MRS. W. T. BOST, MRS. JOSEPHUS DANIELS, Publicity Committee.

Raleigh, 1931. Contribute the income of a DAY to the orphanage of your choice on or near Thanksgiving Day, November 26.

Market Report Cotton--Stocks--Grain

N. Y. COTTON

New York, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Cotton opened barely steady today at a decline of 3 to 5 points on a renewal of southern and local selling. January set off to 6.13.

According to the Census Bureau, 14,210,301 bales were ginned prior to Nov. 14, compared with 11,926,827 last year, making an outturn for the first November period of 2,080,613 bales against 1,098,931 last season. These figures failed to stimulate offerings materially, however, while the decline brought in a good deal of trade buying which seemed to be partly for foreign account, and the market stiffened up after the early selling had been absorbed on this demand combined with week-end covering. At the end of the first half hour January was selling around 6.16 and May 6.55 or about net unchanged to 2 points lower.

Liverpool cables said that trade calling had offset hedging in that market and reported a fair demand for cotton cloths and yarns. Cotton on shipboard at U. S. ports awaiting clearance was estimated at 185,000 bales against 145,000 last year.

GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Nov. 21.—(AP)—Off the track and on again, the grain markets dashed into new advances today during the late dealings. Wheat was temporarily ditched by a break of more than 3 cents a bushel owing to reports that Japan would conditionally accept an armistice with China. Resumption of active speculative buying, however, rallied the market in the final hour, with short sellers making haste to reverse their market position.

The Manchurian situation formed almost the sole pivot on which the market turned with nearly bewildering speed.

STOCK MARKET

New York, Nov. 21.—(AP)—The stock market made an unsuccessful effort to recover today from the setback of the previous session.

The rail shares led a fair rally during the first hour, but renewed pressure against U. S. Steel unsettled the list later, and gains of 1 to 2 points, which had been widely registered, were lost. The close found a mixed assortment of narrow gains and losses. There were fractional recoveries from the lowest in the last few minutes. Trading was moderately active, the turnover for the short session approximating 900,000 shares.

The market was helped for a time by the firm opening of the wheat market, following an upturn at Liverpool, and a more hopeful attitude toward the railway executives conferences with the brotherhood heads. A temporary reaction in wheat during the final hour of trading shows may have contributed to the fresh setback, as well as a less cheerful estimate of steel mill operations for the Youngstown area. U. S. Steel sold up to 63 1/8 in the early trading, fell back to a new low since 1915 at 60, and closed at 60 3/4, a net loss of only 1 1/4 of a point. Westinghouse and American Can closed virtually unchanged. Shares off a point or so, net, included American Telephone, Woolworth, General Electric, National Biscuit, International Harvester and American Smelting.

In the rails, most changes at the finish were fractional. New York Central and Santa Fe closed about a point higher, and Union Pacific was off 1. At the peak of the rally these three issues were up more than 2 points each.

Operations of the steel mills in the Youngstown area for next week were estimated at 36 per cent of capacity, against 40 per cent during the past week.

Atlanta Editor Died Early Today

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 21.—(AP)—Dr. Samuel Waite Small, associate editor of the Atlanta Constitution, died at the United States Veterans Hospital here today.

Dr. Small was in his 80th year. Death was ascribed to the infirmities of age and ill health resulting from injuries in a fall while he was covering the Republican National convention at Kansas City in 1928. Until a few weeks ago Dr. Small had continued to perform his editorial duties, although his health had been failing gradually during the three years.

For several days he had been in a state of coma. Recently he was sent to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington but failed to improve.

An Apology!

It was with much regret that we were unable to handle the crowd that attended our sale this morning. Due to lack of salespeople.

An Appreciation!

We do appreciate, however, the interest shown us, and the patience you maintained during the rush.

Come Every Day!

There will be bargains until the last piece has been sold.
