JAPS CAPTURE TOWN WITHOUT ANY STRUGGLE

Five Regiments of Infantry March Into Kowpangtze Without Meeting Action

Hukden Manchuria, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Japanese cavalry, advance guard of General Tamon's column, reached the banks of the Taling river tonight and were within fifteen miles of Chinchow.

There were no indications of serious Chinese resistance and it was believed that the Japanese forces would celebrate the New Year by the occupation of the city which has blocked their mastery of the whole Manchuria for three months.

Japanese airmen reported there were strong indications of a wholesale evacuation of Chinchow by Chinese troops. Seven trains left for the southwest between ten and twelve o'clock this morning and five more trains were waiting in the yards.

Mukden, Manchuria, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Five regiments of Japanese infantry marched into Kowpangtze, 40 miles from Chinchow today, took the town without a struggle and camped there for the night.

It was 11:30 in the morning when the stocky little warriors poured into the town and half an hour later came General Jiro Tamon himself, a little five-foot conqueror riding on a black horse at the head of his staff. He is the man who took Tsitsihar, Tawa and Panshan. It looked as though his next move would be against Chinchow, China's last stronghold of authority in Manchuria.

G.O.P. WATCHES 'THIRD PARTY' DEVELOPMENTS

High Command Adopts Policy of "Watchful Waiting" on Activities in West

Washington, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Watchful waiting is the attitude of the Republican high command toward the third party movement.

There is an inclination among the regular Republican leaders to scout third party talk as a political maneuver at this early stage in the presidential race.

There also is a belief among some that a Republican bolt might serve to aid the Hoover cause in 1932 on the ground the third party would take away a block of the dissent vote which otherwise probably would go to the opposition Democratic ticket.

Others, however, vividly recall the disastrous Republican split of 1913 between President Taft and Theodore Roosevelt and the resulting election of Woodrow Wilson.

The Hoover leaders are more immediately concerned in uniting their forces to assure his renomination. There is every sign that the President is going to encounter open opposition in the forthcoming primaries.

Senator Johnson of California, keeping all sides guessing on his intentions. It is realized that a race between Johnson and Hoover in their home state of California may have a real effect upon the next Republican convention. This primary is among the first to be held.

Regardless of a third party, there is no doubt that the northwestern Republican independents are ready to support what they term a "progressive" candidate against Hoover for the nomination.

In addition to Johnson, Senators Norris of Nebraska; Borah of Idaho, and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, are among those the group would be glad to back.

Norris himself has declined to go into the Republican convention race. He bolted Hoover in the 1928 campaign, however, and around the veteran Nebraska political insurgent is clustering the hopes of those talking about a third party.

JAPS CAUTION TOWN WITHOUT ANY STRUGGLE. (Continued from Page One) that the law has been violated," said Medlie.

Washington, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The Democratic National committee today stood charged with violating the corrupt practices act by a Republican—Representative Will Wood of Indiana.

Critizing the Senate campaign funds committee for its failure to recommend an inquiry into Democratic committee expenditures in 1928, Wood said the latter's reports concealed the name of the recipients of over $348,000 in that year.

The law requires that expenditures reports must give the names and addresses of persons receiving $10 or more, Wood, chairman of the National Republican congressional committee, said.

"Why was there a concealment of the payroll of the Democratic National committee's main campaign headquarters in 1928?" he asked.

Enforcement of present election laws instead of additional ones was urged by Wood in referring to the recommendations of the Senate committee headed by Senator Nye, Republican, North Dakota.

"Naturally a committee which has expended $150,000—an unusually large portion of which went to enrich pullman and dining cars, high class hotels and cafes—felt it had to recommend something in order to make a pretense of giving the public taxpayer a run for his money," he said.

BERLINGER WINS SULLIVAN MEMORIAL MEDAL FOR '31. New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The qualities which were revealed in Barney Berlinger, former all-around athlete of the University of Pennsylvania, during his trip to South Africa with an American track team last summer, have won him the James E. Sullivan Memorial Medal for 1931.

A year ago, when Bobby Jones outclassed the field to win the medal the first time it was awarded, Berlinger received 255 votes and finished in fourth place, far behind Helen Madison, Seattle swimming star. After captaining the Penn track team and showing ability as a diplomat as well as an athlete during the South African tour, Barney won over Miss Madison by two votes, 424 to 422, in the 1931 selections.

The Sullivan medal, given "to the athlete, leader or executive who by his example and influence as an amateur, had done most during the year for any of the branches of sport fostered by the amateur athletic union," is awarded by a jury of 600 sport leaders, who first send in their nominations and then make their final selections from a list of ten picked by the committee of the A.A.U.

If the committee should try to investigate the changes it would have to ask the House to pass an authorizing act appointing a subcommittee to hear the evidence and present it to the next session of Congress.

Charlotte, Dec. 31.—(AP)—A civil action before the Circuit Court of Appeals, in which the decision was against Miss Mary W. F. Speers, principal stockholder of the Speers Sand and Clay Works, Inc., of Baltimore, was believed here today to lie behind the petition to Congress that Judge John J. Parker acts be investigated.

Judge Parker said that he was one of three judges who sat in the action, the others being District Judges Webb and Chestnut.

The federal reporter's account of the case says that Miss Speers owned the controlling interest of Speers Sand and Clay Works, Inc., and appealed from a lower court decision which had upheld sale for $6,000 of approximately 100 acres of her property to satisfy a judgment. She contended the property contained valuable clay deposits and was worth $40,000,000.

The property was sold to George D. Pratt, of New York, who invested $50,040 in the Speer Company and charged fraud in its handling. The court upheld the fraud charge and gave him the judgment. When the land was sold, Mrs. Speer, according to the record, bid $100,000, but failed to post $5,000 deposit required by the court and Pratt's bid was accepted.

Miss Speer came to Charlotte, and filed an appeal from the decision which refused to recognize her valuation of the land, and also on the ground that the lower court had refused to grant her a continuance so that she might properly prepare her case.

J. M. Scarborough, of the law firm of Scarborough and Boyd here, said he and his partner helped Miss Speer prepare papers for presentation to the circuit court, but had never received his fee nor any part of it.

Judge Parker professed ignorance of any factor of the case which might have given grounds for an investigation of his conduct, but admitted the congressional petition must be based upon the circuit court decision. He said the hearing in which he and the district judges sat was the fourth time the Speers-Pratt case had been before the Circuit court in one form or another.

The other dead: Hattie, 22, and Nannie Lou Lee, 16, daughters of William Lee, negro farmer living five miles south of town, killed in the demolition of their home.

The two year old child of Aaron Smith, negro, living at a turpentine camp eleven miles northeast of Magee. William Lee, his wife and one son, all believed fatally injured, were rushed to the charity hospital at Laurel today.

John Rankin, Magee farmer, his wife and one son, reported missing last night after their home was blown two and one half miles to Black Highway 49, were accounted for today, but Mrs. Rankin was reported as seriously injured.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 31.—(AP)—South Mississippi today surveyed a path of death and destruction cut through two counties by a tornado while lowland dwellers of the delta and north battled against new floods which rolled over the levees around Glendora.

Shortly after heavy rains over the delta swelled the Yazoo and tributaries until flood waters burst through the dykes to force evacuation of Glendora's business section last night, the windstorm ripped across Simpson and Covington counties, snuffing out three lives, injuring a score and damaging farm properties.

Mrs. Anse Everett was instantly killed when her home, three miles south of Magee in Simpson county, was demolished by the tornado. Early today the body of Wilbur Brown Jr., 2 years old, was discovered in the ruins of the home of his parents in the Mt. Zion community. Willis Lee, negro farmer, was killed in the same community.

The home of John Rankin was reported blown two and one-half miles to block highway 49 near Magee and the farmer, his wife and one son were missing last night. Mrs. Dolly McAlphin was reported perhaps fatally injured near Magee. There were reports of perhaps a score of others injured and heavy damage to farm houses and buildings.

The break in the levee that caused evacuation of Glendora's business section last night, occurred 300 yards below the town. A two-foot wall of water swept through the crevasse to pound against a weakened temporary levee farther back while the rain swollen flood rolled over the main levee in several places.

Residents of Glendora took refuge behind a railroad tump which presented a wall four or five feet higher than the levees and protected the white residential section of the town.

Planters south of the town sent calls for aid from convict labor reporting water pouring over their levees.

There were rains over the Tippan Tallahatchie and Coldwater river sections yesterday which weakened the already waterlogged levees.

General rains brought fear of a new flood crest just as the delta residents had come to believe the crisis was past.

Three Drowned as Car Plunges Into River in Virginia

Winston-Salem, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Two men and a woman drowned today when a truck plunged into a river near Galax, Va.

The dead: J. G. Clayton, 45, business man of Rural Hall, N. C. and a member of the school board there. Kenneth Moore, 25, of Rural Hall. Mrs. Kenneth Moore, of Rural Hall.

Information of the triple drowning received here did not include details of how the car went into the river.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore were married a few weeks ago. With Clayton they left Rural Hall at about 2 A. M. this morning for Elk Creek, Va. Mrs. Moore's former home, to secure some personal effects she had there. The bodies were recovered from the river.

quent borrowers although there is no specific provision of law to the effect. John Fields, president of the Wichita, Kansas, land bank, expressed a similar view, saying enactment of the provision would lead all the borrowers to think they could get extensions.

Fields said the provision would affect the ability of the banks to sell their bonds.

He read numerous letters to show that many farmers who are not delinquent are planning to seek extensions if the measure passes.

"Our experience has been," Fields said, "that you are not being kind to the farmer when you permit postponement of installments due when he has the money."

Fields said it had been the practice of his bank for ten years to "do exactly the same thing contemplated in the bill as passed by the House" when mortgage extensions were badly needed.

The bill would add $100,000,000 to the land bank's capital.

There were rains over the Tippan Tallahatchie and Coldwater river sections yesterday which weakened the already waterlogged levees.

General rains brought fear of a new flood crest just as the delta residents had come to believe the crisis was past.

D. P. Hogan, president of the Omaha land bank, said the amendment looked harmless but that "more people are going to ask extensions than could possibly be permitted."

"It will greatly increase our difficulties, increase the expenses of the banks and have a very bad effect," he said.

He added that at present the banks often "carry along" delin-

ABOUT TOWN

Pitt county people will start out on another New Year's journey tomorrow. Just what the year will bring forth is problematical, but if we take the opinion of leading thought of the nation, it will witness a decided recovery from the depression which has swept over the world the last two years, and especially this year.

Believing implicitly in the advice of the men who have sounded the depths of economic conditions and found them perfectly sound, Greenville people will greet the New Year gladly, confident it will be filled with just as much achievement along some lines as any particular period of the past.

Nobody attempts to dispute the fact that the economic situation is not what it should be at this time, but the majority have faith in the ability of the nation to recover and believe the change is already taking place in some localities.

Naturally, there is considerable work ahead before the change occurs, but American people are indefatigable workers and are going to put everything into the task ahead. Let people know that they are at that point when it is either sink or swim and they will strike out and swim in spite of the severity of the storm.

By careful attention to business combined with strictest economy, the state and the nation in due time will be able to work their way back to that point where they will be able to see their heads above the water.

It is a man's task—this business of climbing back to former status—and those who do not feel equal to the occasion are defeated before they start.

Pitt county has raised one of the most bountiful food crops in years, and this is going to enable the people to feed their families even though money is short.

Many remedies for the depression have been provided, but the ones that will figure most prominently in rehabilitation are hard work, common sense, and economy. People who combine them in their New Year's resolutions should find them of invaluable aid in their attempt to reach the higher ground of national prosperity and happiness.

By the taxing of people able to pay, Democrats were planning to raise $200,000,000 to relieve the hard-pressed national treasury without a general increase of taxation such as that suggested by the Republicans.

No sooner had the statement been made than Republican leaders let out a yell "That there were no big moneyed interests to tax—that incomes had been wiped out by depression."

It was just what might have been expected. Republicans have forever favored the boys with the big money. It is the principle of the party to keep the government in close touch with moneyed factions so that they would have much in common to talk about and act upon.

Nobody will dispute the fact that the government must do something to relieve the steadily mounting deficit, but an additional increase of taxation is out of the question. The people have as much as they can carry already, and another increase would be like placing the proverbial straw on the camel's back.

The Democrats, if they should be able to raise the amount of money they say they can, apparently are on the right track, and that they will receive the appropriation of the hard-pressed public is not to be questioned.

The hearing on the prohibition question set for January 8, apparently is going to draw more fire than at first anticipated.

Two men appointed as members of the committee to conduct the hearing have refused to serve, and just what other developments will take place during the intervening time is purely problematical.

But it is a foregone conclusion that the committee is going to be able to compile more information than a similar body ever gathered before. Both proponents and opponents of prohibition even at this time are gathering material for the battle and when they get through

Sunset Pass

SYNOPSIS: "Rock has asked your name in marriage, and I've given it," Gage Preston told his daughter, Thiry. But Trueman Rock fears the suddenness of the proposal. Thiry is both angry and frightened. Rock senses that she knows a secret about Preston, who is thought to be a cattle rustler.

A BOOT TRACK
 "Cowboy, you shore are an appreciatin' cuss," returned the rancher, with sarcasm.

"If I ever had any hope to win Thiry, it's sure gone now," fumed Rock.

"Much you know about women," said Preston. "I had a hunch Thiry took a shine to you, an' now I know it."

"Man, you're drunk or crazy, as Thiry said."

"Wal, Rock, if she hasn't before she will now," replied Preston, imperturbably. "She knows now you want to marry her. That always fetches a woman, provided she ain't in love with some one else."

"Preston, I can't be mad at you, but I sure want to be," returned Rock, resigning himself.

"You'll shore be goin' in to town with the rest of the outfit," Preston remarked. "They're leavin' day after tomorrow. That reminds me, I run into that pretty Mrs. Dabb, an' she said to tell you to give her an' come to her dance. She's havin' the town hall decorated."

"I might go," replied Trueman.

"Cowboy, wasn't this Dabb woman an old flame of yours?" inquired Preston.

"Well, she wasn't exactly mine, but that wasn't my fault."

"Ho! Ho! I know the lady. . . . Wal, Rock, if she happened to be a little sweet on you yet it'd shore be lucky for you."

"Preston, I fall to see how," exclaimed Rock, aghast.

"Wal, just you fool around Mrs. Dabb some an' make Thiry jealous," replied Preston, with a chuckle.

"By thunder!" exploded Rock, yet partly with a laugh. "Even if I could make Thiry jealous—which is preposterous, I'd never do it."

"Then ou'r a darn sight of a fool," returned Preston, complacently.

"How would you handle this particular case of mine, regardin' the dance?" inquired Rock.

"Are you a good dancer?"

"I used to be. Reckon I haven't forgot."

"Wal, then, as you're a handsome cuss, to you want to make the most of your chance. It's to be a masquerade, you know."

"Masquerade? I sure didn't know."

"You get yourself up in some dandy outfit. Then first off be cold to Thiry an' sweeten'n pie to your old girl."

Rock laughed rather wildly. The absurdity of the thing so blandly suggested by Preston did not quite submerge a certain excitement.

"Old-timer, I'm afraid I couldn't do it," replied Rock, with a grimace. "It would be unkind to Mrs. Dabb. I think I'll rustle now, before you get me locoed. Good night."

Trueman strolled in the black shadows of the pines near his cabin. He concluded that Preston had some deep motive besides a longing to see Thiry safely settled for life. What could that motive be? No matter how Rock looked at the problem, one fact stood out—what ever furthered his courting of Thiry Preston could only render Ash Preston more dangerous. Did Gage Preston's motive hide in that?

Rock tried to give it up and went to bed.

One by one his thoughts brought him back to the conviction that Preston was deeply involved in crooked work and Thiry knew it. If so, why did not the father aid and abet the daughter in gettin' rid of a new rider who was not exactly a dunce, at least in ways of the range?

He awakened at dawn with the idea that he should start toward Wagoning ahead of the Prestons instead of waiting until they had gone. He wanted to ride over that part of the range which had been the scene of Preston's latest labors. With Preston at home and his family on the road, there would be opportunity for Rock to confirm or disprove his suspicions.

At breakfast Rock asked permission to leave that day, and it was readily given.

Slagle's ranch, which was hidden in the rough hilly country west of the Flats, the wagon tracks and hoof tracks of saddle horses turned off the road. Rock did not care to follow them until the Prestons had passed.

Rock, surveying the country ahead, concluded that unless Preston had made a cut-off to avoid passing Slagle's ranch, soon to meet the road again, he had surely been stopped shortly by rough going.

A couple of miles down the road Rock met the wagon tracks again, coming from across the Flats.

"By golly! looks like a short-cut, doesn't it? I guess not!" exclaimed Rock derisively. Then he discovered that these tracks were fresh, and made on the return home. The wagons had been empty. This was longer and harder going than round the road. Rock passed on a few hundred yards to find where the Prestons had driven into the road on their outward trip. And still farther on he came to more tracks, older by some weeks.

Somewhere along here the Prestons had done their latest job of butchering beeves; and Rock was intensely eager to find the spot.

After pondering awhile, Rock decided he might safely risk some careful scouting around, provided he left no traces and kept keen survey of the several miles of road.

With this in mind he tied Egypt on hard ground, and taking to the thickest part of the cedars he mounted the hill.

He would have to follow the wagon tracks, to find where the Prestons had last butchered, but the present was not the time to undertake that. Keeping within the cedars, he went on to the summit of the ridge.

The wind was strong in his face. It carried more than heat, and as he gained his objective point, he both smelled and saw dust in the air. Then something faint, but raw, an odor that was tainted!

Eagerly Rock came up behind a cedar, and from this cover he peered out and down. The slope on that side sheered steep and rough, down to an open draw, up which his keen sight roved. White objects flashed in the sunlight, drawing Rock's gaze the quicker. Then he discerned a cabin and corral, covered with white spots, also men on horses, and some on foot.

The white objects were cowhides, thrown over the corral fence, and nailed on the cabin, hair side down. There were seven riders. Voices floated faintly to Rock as he hid there, suddenly covered with cold sweat. Bunch of cowboys snoooping around! Curiosity was a characteristic of any cowboy on a range where cattle mysteriously disappeared.

One of the cowboys, a tall fellow wearing a red scarf, turned toward the cowhides over to look at the under side. Watening like a hawk, Rock convinced himself that these riders were curious about Preston's butchering business. Nothing inimical to the Prestons manifested itself.

He counted the cowhides in sight. Thirteen! That was rather a small number, if the hides in sight represented all the beeves killed by Preston on this occasion. He retraced his way to his horse.

"Aw, hell!" blurted out Rock, in disgust. "If it was anyone but Thiry's people I'd know. I do know, only I keep hopin' I'm wrong." No doubt at all was there that the cowhides in plain sight bore one of several of Preston's brands. If other stock besides Preston's had been butchered, which Rock did not doubt in the least, the hides with their telltale brands had of course been well hidden. Heads were easier to dispose of. Hides, however, were branded to protect the owners.

But if hides ripped from stolen beeves were carefully hidden, as Rock believed was true in the matter of Slagle's well, the chances were very few that the theft could ever be detected. Preston was safe for the time being if he called on Slagle's well to conceal his thefts, Rock could never betray him. The best that Rock felt he might do—in case he proved his suspicions—was to tell Preston and scare him from any further crooked work.

Straddling Egypt, once more, Rock rode toward Wagoning. Where the road crossed a culvert, Rock's eyes suddenly espied the heel imprint of a rider's boot.

Slipping out of the saddle, Rock bent to scrutinize it. And he experienced a queer little cold chill.

The impression of the heel was well defined, but the toe part was dim. It pointed off the road. Rock found another like it, though not so plain. For his trained eyes the trail might as well have been made in snow. It led into the coarse white grass, to the edge of the culvert, where it vanished.

There was no doubt in Rock's mind that this imprint was identical with the one near Slagle's well. He had the little sticks with which he had measured that track. His instinct prompted him to take a look at the culvert. He walked on, stepping on stones.

The culvert was not the handiwork of masons. The aperture was large, to take care of a considerable flow of water during the wet season. Crude walls of heavy stone had been laid about ten feet high and the same distance apart. Logs and brush had been placed across the top. Above this a heavy layer of earth formed the road.

When Rock stepped into the mouth of the culvert, he saw a lumpy floor, which at first glance he thought consisted of rocks lying on the dried mud.

A foot track the one he was trailing, brought a low exclamation from his lips. Bending quickly, with his little sticks he tried them. They fitted perfectly. Moreover, this one had been made recently.

When Rock rose from that track he knew what he was going to find. The tunnel appeared about a hundred feet long, with light shining in at both ends, and the middle dark. The numerous stones on the floor were of uniform size and shape, and he noted that the first of these lay back several yards from the opening of the culvert.

Rock kicked one. It was soft. Bending to feel of it and to look at it more closely he ascertained that it was a burlap sack tied round something. He laughed sardonically.

"Cowhide," he said, and went on, kicking to right and left. These stone-like objects were all hides tied up in burlap sacks. They were old. Some of them were rotting. Then toward the middle of the culvert, where the bags were thickest, he found that those in sight were lying on a bed of bags, flat, decomposed. Altogether, hundreds, perhaps thousands of hides had been destroyed here. He detected a dry, musty odor, but it was not strong.

Rock went back to the point where he had found the boot track. It was useless to attempt to conceal his own trail. He reflected that a few days now the rains would come, and with water running through the culvert all traces of his having been there would be obliterated.

If fresh cowhides had lately been deposited in this hiding place where were they? Back from the opening it was difficult to see well.

Naturally then he reached up to feel where he could not see. He had to put his toes in crevices between the stones to climb up and reach over the top of the wall.

When Rock's groping hand came in contact with a sack he felt no surprise. It appeared to hold heat. Grasping it firmly, Rock dropped to the ground and hurried with it to the light. He ripped it open. Quicklime, hot and moist! A fresh cowhide, wrapped with hair inside!

With hands that actually shook Rock unfolded the hide. No slight thing was this proof of somebody's guilt—about to be disclosed! The brand was clear—a half moon. Rock had never heard of it.

He rolled up the hide stuffed it in the sack, and put it back where he had found it. He struck a match. By the dim light he saw rows of burlap sacks, neatly stowed away.

Rock sneaked out of that culvert and up to his horse as if indeed he were the guilty one himself. To ferret out rustler tricks and discover evidence of thieving practices on the range had been part of his experience. How vastly another thing here! That boot track had been made by Ash Preston. Rock knew it. Gage Preston was growing rich by butchering other ranchers' cattle. The very least implication Rock accorded to Thiry Preston was that she shared the secret, and therefore indirectly the guilt. And Rock loved her—loved her terribly now, in view of her extremity.

Rock had no idea how far this extraordinary dealing of the Prestons had gone. But it had proceeded far enough to be extremely hazardous for them, and in fact for any riders connected with them. One remark Gage had made to Thiry had been thought-provoking. It might well be true that Ash Preston, having led or forced his father into criminal practice, dominated him wholly. Rock must know more, and if possible everything, before he could formulate any plan to stop Preston and save Thiry.

It was long past dark when Rock arrived at Wagoning. He went to the hotel and to bed. Rested and fresh again, and with the bright gold sunrise shining in his window, Rock dared to pit himself against Ash Preston in anything. Least of all did he consider Ash particularly dangerous to face in fair gun-play. He was several years younger than Rock, and had been only five on the range. Calculating on that, and his own long experience, his instinct for divining an opponent's intent, and his swift hand, Rock felt a certainty of his power to beat Ash Preston to a gun and kill him.

After breakfast, which Rock partook of rather late, he went round to see "So: Winter."

"Dog-gone, I'm glad to see you!" Winter said.

"Same here, old-timer," replied Rock. "I want to find out something."

"What?" asked Winter, as Rock led him back into the store.

"Preston drove in here a couple of days ago," went on Rock, lowering his voice. "In the outfit were three wagons I know of. One was full of hides, which I helped pack. The other two were loaded with meat. Beeves! Now I want to find out how many beeves there were and where they went."

"Wal, I'll be darned if that ain't funny," ejaculated Winter, his eyes narrowing to mere slits. "I shore can tell you right now that you're so damn keen about knowin'."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Rock, and he sat down heavily.

"Heard it quite by accident," went on Winter. "Jackson, who runs Dabb's butcher shop, once worked for me. Wal, I went in last night. I seen a lot of fresh meat hangin' up. All I said was: 'See you're stocked up plenty an' fresh.'"

"Preston is killin' now altogether instead of sellin' any more on the hoof," Jackson told me. "He's gettin' thirty dollars more by killin' on each head of stock. He'll sell to anybody. Today he shipped thirty-six beeves, Driscoll told me. Shipped them to Marigold."

Winter paused to see what effect this news might have upon Rock.

"Thirty-six!" muttered Rock, with unreadable face and voice.

"Yep. And I counted ten beeves hangin' up on Jackson's hooks. All fresh. So that makes forty-six.

What do you want to know all this for?"

"Gee, Sol, you're a gabby old lady!" returned Rock. "Who runs the Half Moon brand?"

"New cattleman named Heshbitt," replied Winter. "Clink Peeples is foreman."

"Clink Peeples. By gum! that sounds familiar. I've heard his name, anyway. What does he look like, Sol?"

"Onusual tall puncher. Sandy complexioned. Eyes sharp like a hawk's but tawny. Always wears a red scarf. An' he's one of the gun-packin' fraternity. Clink will be in town shore over the Fourth."

"Red scarf? Ahum!" said Rock, dropping his head. "Well, Sol, I'll run along and drop in again."

Reaching Dabb's new store Rock went in. It chanced that there was in stock a black broadcloth suit, with frock coat, which might have been made for him. Rock purchased it and an embroidered vest of fancy design, a white shirt with ruffles in the bosom, a wide white collar and a black flowing bow-tie to go with it.

Rock carried his possessions back to the hotel. While in his room he cut a pattern of a mask out of a piece of black cloth.

What with a late dinner and leisurely saunterings around town, the day passed by. After supper, Rock went out to walk in the darkness.

Footsteps sounded behind him. A hand seized his arm, and a feminine voice he knew rang under his ear. trail all afternoon. trail all afternoon.

HELINGSFORS VOTES FOR RUM

Finland City Goes Overwhelmingly in Favor of Repeal of Prohibition

Helingsfors, Finland, Dec. 31.—(AP)—With 57 per cent of the local votes counted in the prohibition referendum Helingsfors has gone for surprisingly and overwhelmingly in this afternoon's editions of anti-prohibition newspapers talked about a "national front" against the dry laws.

At 4 P. M., the returns showed that out of 132,730 votes, or 57 per cent of the entire city electorate, 82 per cent voted for repeal of the prohibition laws. What surprised observers most, was the fact that 90 per cent of the repeal votes were cast by women.

Continuance of the present laws was supported by 12,910 voters or 17.2 per cent. Only 656 ballots were cast for modification to permit light wines and beer.

The vote in the capital does not determine the national outcome, but supporters of repeal were confident that their large vote here was an indication of how the rest of the Finnish cities would go, and their prediction was that the prohibition laws are doomed.

Government officials apparently thought so, for T. M. Kieimaki, minister of justice, began drafting a bill for government administration of trade in alcoholic beverages.

His plan, it was understood, provides that there shall be no private business in alcoholic portables but that every department of the business shall be handled by the government. Each citizen would be entitled to a ration card fixing the amount he is permitted to purchase; the government would handle all importation through bureaus but the nature of which has not yet been defined.

Whether a government-owned stock company would be established or whether concessions would be let to private individuals for dispensation of liquor was still undetermined.

Curious crowds watched the bulletins posted by the newspapers but no returns were available outside of Helingsfors, for election officials decided to check the vote here before beginning the count in other sections of the country.

Scientist Gives Report on Anger

New Orleans, Dec. 31.—(AP)—College coeds get angry about four times a week and college men about six times, but the anger may last from one minute to 48 hours, a scientist reported today.

Coeds get angry most often at people, men's feelings are ruffled more by events. Thwarting of self assertion is the cause of 86 per cent of the anger of both college boys and girls. These were some of the conclusions reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science by H. Mellzer, psychologist of Washington University, St. Louis.

He had "anger diaries" kept of men and women students at Oregon State College and by women at Columbia University, New York, in which anger fits were noted down, with their durations, causes, responses and after-effects.

Coeds when angry feel like crying, screaming, jumping or swearing, he found. Men more often have an impulse to do physical injury to the person who made them angry. Actually both sexes usually respond with a sharp retort.

Week ends in New York seem more likely to be irritating than week ends in Oregon, the study showed, from Columbia girls were angry most often on days when classes did not meet, but Oregon students were angry least often on those days.

When his girl refused to see him, a boy stayed angry 48 hours, but only five minute angers resulted from falling in the mud, being interrupted while trying to study and dropping an ink spot on an important paper. One girl was angry 11 hours when somebody stole her candy.

U. S. Will Not Be Represented At Conference

Washington, Dec. 31.—(AP)—High official circles made it clear today that the administration does not intend to have representation either officially or unofficially at the reparations conference in Lausanne next January 18.

It was pointed out that this government has maintained the attitude that it was not concerned with German reparations and that its only indirect interest in the matter was the cost of the army of occupation which is being paid the United States by Germany. There has been no change in this attitude.

The view was also expressed that the granting of the debt moratorium had led European countries to expect that there might be an adjustment of the war debts at the end of the year, but it was added that this was based on the general situation in Europe and not upon any communications that had been exchanged.

CULBERTSON STILL GAINS

Wins Five of Eight Rubbers Against Sidney Lenz in New York Marathon

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—In a rage, as she expressed it, for the first time during the match, Mrs. Ely Culbertson had a large share in causing the lead of her side in the contract bridge match to be greater than ever today.

She and her husband won five of eight rubbers played at the sixteenth session ending this morning after a turbulent scene before a card was dealt.

The plus of the Culbertson side increases 3,900 to the total of 20,229. The total points became 107,365 for Culbertson and 87,155 for Lenz, the rubbers 68 for Culbertson and 52 for Lenz. There are 30 rubbers left to play in the 150-rubber match. In the opinion of neutral experts it is impossible for Lenz to catch up.

Mrs. Culbertson's anger was due to what she regarded as a deliberate attempt to excite her husband.

Sir Derrick Werner, an Englishman, vice-president of the American Bridge League, D. S. L. from the Royal Flying Corps, son of a South American diamond merchant, assistant lexicographer for the Literary Digest, came to the match with George Reith, declared Culbertson enemy, and Sidney Lenz.

Lenz introduced the two about the press room. In walked Culbertson.

Sir Derrick said casually: "I have decided to accept the challenge you made last July, Culbertson."

"I remember no challenge," said Culbertson, "besides I do not play with minor sharks."

"I am ready to put up $2,000 against your $5,000," said the Englishman.

"I'll bet $500 you haven't $2,000," said Culbertson, "and who brought you here to make a scene, to rattle me five minutes before the start of my match with Lenz? Get out of here! If you are not a coward you will wait for me outside!"

"It's a deliberate plot!" declared Mrs. Culbertson who walked in at the middle of the argument.

Sir Derrick left the room. Lieut. Alfred M. Gruenther, chief referee of the match, asked Culbertson to begin the play.

"Not until that yellow coward leaves!" said Culbertson.

"He is gone," said Gruenther. "I'll look for myself," said Culbertson stamping out of the room. In the hallway of the suite he ran into Lenz.

"Sidney, what do you mean by bringing that fellow up here to rattle me? Was it to get my goat?"

"I had nothing to do with it," protested Lenz. "But he is my friend, and since you put it that way, I invite him now as my guest."

A. J. Beattie, state comptroller general, said tax collections were improving, and that "the attitude of the people is one of self-reliance, feeling that we have passed the worst and realizing that we must pull through."

Cheering news for cotton producers was contained in a statement by J. Clifton Rivers, warehouse commissioner who deals directly with the "dirt farmers" of that state.

He said he was convinced the price of cotton would make a "material jump within the next three months," and that the state's farmers would be in a position to benefit, since they still hold 50 per cent of their crop.

Market Report Cotton--Stocks--Grain

N. Y. COTTON

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 1 to 3 points on trade buying and covering, promoted by relatively steady Liverpool cables. March sold at 6.51.

The demand was supplied by southern selling and realizing, while the trade demand seemed a little less active than recently and prices sagged off slightly with March ruling around 6.47 and July 6.81 at the end of the first half hour or about 2 to 3 points net lower. The early buying was again attributed largely to the trade and was supposed to include some further buying by brokers with far eastern connections. Liverpool cables reported local and continental buying in that market and said there were moderate sales of cotton cloths for the British home trade and South America.

GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Dec. 31.—(AP)—Despite end-of-the-year settlements wheat prices today showed a general tendency to advance. The factor which stood out was uneasiness concerning reports apparently indicative of disturbed political conditions in Russia. On the other hand, German advices were at hand saying Russian re-sellers were offering wheat at lower prices.

STOCK MARKET

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The stock market dressed itself up today to greet the arrival of the New Year.

Most of the leading issues moved up at least a point while some of the less actively traded shares jumped up two or three points or more. The railroad stocks, which bore the brunt of selling all through 1931, seemed particularly pleased with the impending change in the calendar. Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, New York Central, and Chesapeake and Ohio were up 1 to 2 points, or thereabouts.

Industrials which scored gains of 2 points or more included U. S. Steel, Coca Cola, American Tobacco Co. and Standard Gas. American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service, National Biscuit, Corn Products and a wide number of others firmed more moderately.

In bidding good-bye to the old year, the stock market as usual absorbed a number of cash sales made for income tax purposes. Several hundred of these transactions were registered on the ticker tape. Wall Street regarded them as a final vestige of the specialized type of tax selling which was so persistent in December of both this year and last.

The day's firmness of stock prices was regarded cheerfully. While gains were not of great importance from a purely stock market standpoint, it was reasoned that they would lend a brighter hue to the year-end condition statement of banks, and of corporations holding sizable blocks of securities.

The course of the market during the year was almost steadily downward as shown in the Associated Press-standard statistics averages.

GIVES CAUSE OF FATALITIES IN FOOTBALL

New York, Dec. 31.—(AP)—A large measure of responsibility for football's weighty toll in deaths and injuries was placed on authorities in charge of organized eleven and the parents of sandlot players by E. K. Hall, chairman of the national football rules committee, in his annual report today to the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

In every aspect except the problem of injuries, now under exhaustive study, Hall said that the football season of 1931 had been most satisfactory, with more versatile attacks developed by the new fumble rule, same graduate attitude toward the game, less proselying, better spirit, and gratifying responses to the call of charity.

The chairman pledged the committee, however, to unhesitating action "to lessen the possibility of injuries by additions to or modifications of the present rules" if the causes of the almost 50 deaths during the 1931 season indicate need for new rule legislation. He did not discuss or suggest possible new rules.

Hall explained that the committee had no expectation of making football "safe" in the sense that players occasionally would not be hurt. No sport, he said, calling for speed, stamina and endurance could be freed from a minimum of injuries.

"The responsibility for the care of the players and the decision as to whether a boy should participate in the game must rest, in the case of organized school and college teams, on those in authority." "For unorganized play and sandlot or playground games, in the absence of other authority, responsibility would seem to rest on the parents of the boys."

Commenting on information already gathered regarding football deaths, Hall said that in 1930 college members of the N. C. A. A. only two deaths had occurred, one from a brain injury due to a collision, a type of accident frequent but seldom fatal, and the other from a spinal injury suffered in an ordinary tackle.

Six deaths, he said, occurred in minor college or normal school games. The rest were about evenly divided among boys of high school divisions, in some instances under little or no supervision, and boys in unorganized games under no supervision at all.

Reynolds' assignment to right field will mean the benching of S. M. Rice, long an outstanding star with Washington.

Heine Manush is regarded as a fixture in left and there are few better hitting and fielding gardeners than Sam West.

One infield position is unsettled. Johnson has said that Joe Judge, veteran first baseman, and Joe Kuhel, who had the job most of last year after Judge was stricken with appendicitis, will fight it out.

There is little chance that Kerr will supplant Buddy Meyer, who developed into one of the league's best second basemen last year. The ex-Chicago infielder will probably be demoted to utility duty.

Joe Cronin wasn't as sensational last year as he was the year before but he is still the best shortstop in the American league. Dependable Ossie Bluege, at third, apparently has nothing to fear.

To take the places of Hadley and Jones, the club is depending upon Monte Weaver, Baltimore right hander, and Lynn Griffith, West-ern Association left hander.

Carl Fisher, fast ball left hander, had a fairly good season last year—his first as a regular—and may come through. Bobo Burke, slim left hander, pitched a no-hit game against the Red Sox last year but he is an in-and-outer.

Snow Hill, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The National Bank of Snow Hill and the National Bank of LaGrange did not open for business today.

D. S. Hardison of Snow Hill, was president of both banks.

The National Bank of Snow Hill was capitalized at $50,000 and listed its assets at $200,000. The National Bank of LaGrange was capitalized at $25,000 and listed its assets at $100,000.

Raleigh, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The state banking department was notified today that the reorganized Merchants and Farmers Bank of Gaysburg had closed again.

The reorganized institution, of which J. B. Collier was president, had total resources of $7,937.96. The bank which in succeeded had deposits of $20,019.03 which were to be left in the bank until January 1, 1932.

ONE CHANGE IN STAGE IS SET FOR ANNUAL 'ROSE' GAME

Washington, Dec. 31.—(AP)—After years of search the Washington baseball club believes it has found the right hand hitting outfielder whose clouting will mean the difference between a pennant winner and just a good spring contender.

He is Carl Reynolds, late with the White Sox. From present indications he will be the only change in the Nationals' lineup when Manager Walter Johnson hands it to the umpire on opening day.

In exchange for Reynolds and Johnny Kerr, infielder, the Washington club gave two veteran pitchers, Ivin Hadley and "Sad" Sam Jones, and threw in Jack Hayes, infielder.

Reynolds' assignment to right field will mean the benching of S. M. Rice, long an outstanding star with Washington.
