Chinese Army Is Still Falling Back Under Heavy Japanese Assault

TO ESTABLISH NEW DEFENSE

Japanese Claim Near Out as Famous Chinese Army Retreats, Closely Pressed by Powerful War Machine of Japan; Chinese Claim They are Retreating to Protect Communications

By MORRIS J. HARRIS

(Copyright, 1932, Associated Press) Shanghai, Thursday, March 3.—The Japanese advance all along the Chapel-Woosung battle line today had almost pushed the Chinese back to the 121-2 mile line set by the recent Japanese ultimatum. Woosung alone held out against the relentless march of the big war machine.

The attackers had reached their objectives at various points early today. With Chenju, former headquarters of General Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the front line army defenders, already in the Japanese hands, the advancing left wing moved forward toward Nanzhang, 20 miles west of Chenju, 20 miles west of Chenju along the railroad.

The Japanese claimed that the Chinese soldiers, unable to stand any longer the terrible force of their artillery, aerial and naval attacks, broke their lines and beat the retreat.

Chinese military officials, however, said it was a "tactical retreat" and that they planned to establish new defense lines at Nanzhang, ten miles west and renew the fight there.

They were falling back, they said, to protect their communications which were endangered by the landing of a large force of Japanese troops at Liuhio, 20 miles up the Yangtze river.

Although it was impossible to determine the number of Chinese troops participating in the retreat, observers here estimated there were 50,000 of them. There were additional Chinese troops two miles west but these were not falling back, the Chinese said.

The Japanese, freshened by the addition of thousands of reinforcements during the last two or three days, followed up their advantage closely. From Liuhio, on the southern bank of the Yangtze, the Japanese line formed a giant, are bulging westward and ending in the vicinity of Chapel, adjacent to the Shanghai international settlement. This long line, a polished modern war machine crept slowly westward tonight on the heels of the Chinese.

The Japanese airplanes continued to speed the retreating Chinese as did the infantrymen and the machine gunners, but the artillery remained behind.

Chapel, which has been reduced to a mass of wreckage since the hostilities began was deserted by the Chinese by six o'clock tonight. A number of huge fires roared in the battered city destroying whatever was left. The Chinese rear guard kept up a running fire with the Japanese as the army withdrew. Soldiers and civilians alike jammed the borders of the international settlement along Soochow creek in the first crush of the retreat but the mass of humanity soon dwindled and disappeared westward.

Following the departure of the Chinese, the hostilities which have threatened the five weeks died down considerably. Some observers predicted the retreat would bring an end to the fighting but the Chinese insisted that the battle would be renewed.

The Japanese said they captured a large Chinese field arsenal at Tsukiang.

Reports that the Chinese troops were looting and burning as they

Lindbergh Baby Like His Father

Hopewell, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., looks like his father. He is a cherubic, 20-month-old tot, with blue eyes, curly blonde hair, fair complexion. Kidnappers Seek One of Largest Fortunes In N. J.

New York, March 2.—(AP)—The fortune on which the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby apparently seek to lay hands constitutes one of the largest in New Jersey.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are believed in aviation circles here to be worth between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 while the fortune which the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, a former Morgan partner, left to Mrs. Lindbergh's mother has been popularly estimated at nearly $19,000,000.

Col. Lindbergh was a poor boy when he hopped off in a borrowed plane for Paris in a flight that made him the world's foremost birdman. Fortune smiled.

He got the $25,000 Orteig prize for the flight and the St. Louis group which backed his venture gave him the "Spirit of St. Louis"

Hopewell, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—To the kidnapper of the Lindbergh baby: Here is a heart-broken appeal direct from the mother of the child you stole.

Asheville, March 2.—(AP)—Light rains in western North Carolina mountains worked slowly toward forest fires spread over a front of more than 100 miles today while bloodhounds on the trails of alleged incendiaries lost the scent.

MAN JAILED FOR ASSAULT

Portuguese Given Life Imprisonment For Attack on Woman at Honolulu.

Honolulu, March 2.—(AP)—Quick retribution followed the latest and boldest of the assaults upon women of Oahu Island, which have brought men to talk of violence and women to live in fear.

Nine hours after he assaulted the Japanese mother of four children, John Fernandez, 21-year-old Portuguese, was taken last yesterday to Oahu prison to serve a life sentence.

Hope that death would be the penalty was expressed by the victim, Mrs. Miwa Watanabe, stocky 35-year-old woman who came to court carrying her four months old baby.

Circuit Judge Albert M. Cristy explained he interpreted the law as making life imprisonment the maximum, that the death penalty had not been asked, and that such speedy punishment should be a deterrent to that type of crime.

The attack was the second in four days. Police described it as the boldest of the series which began with the assault upon the wife of a naval officer.

MANY THEFT CASES HEARD

Several Whiskey Indictments Also Disposed of in Regular County Court.

Larceny and whiskey cases held the spotlight in the regular weekly session of County court which convened yesterday morning and continued its sitting today.

The majority of defendants were colored, and virtually all of them either found their way to the county roads or were released on payment of cost.

It was the first sitting of the court in two weeks, the regular session being abandoned last week on account of the civil term of Pitt County Superior court.

Geneva Roach and Jesse Clark, colored, charged with immoral relations, were released upon payment of cost and ordered to marry.

Larry Pollard, colored, charged with selling whiskey, was sent to the roads for three months.

John Wesley, colored, larceny of chickens, was sentenced to three months.

DR. PEACOCK SPEAKS HERE

Tarboro Minister Was Principal Speaker at Banquet of C. J. Ellen Bible Class.

Hustling is one of the greatest of American vices, Dr. J. L. Peacock pastor of the First Baptist church of Tarboro, declared in delivering the principal address at a banquet given by C. J. Ellen Bible Class of Memorial Baptist church in the church building on Green street last night.

The world is in such a terrific hurry hunting for money and pleasure, the speaker asserted, that it has forgotten the main issues of life—the things that go into making the foundation of the modern home.

He described the unceasing quest for money alone of the greatest evils of the present day. Riches are all right, he pointed out, but they should not be the consuming ambition of mankind, causing people to forget the intrinsic value of life as expressed through teaching.

Abduction of Baby Is Reenacted By Police

By FRANCIS A. JAMISON

(Copyright, 1932, by Associated Press) Hopewell, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—The "world's most famous baby," infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, was in the hands of kidnapers today and puzzled police reenacted the crime as part of their frantic efforts to solve the mystery.

Using the same makeshift ladder by means of which the kidnapers band, believed to include a woman, stole through a window of the isolated Lindbergh house last night to snatch the sleeping child. Detectives sought to determine exactly how the kidnaping was accomplished.

Though they made no statement it was believed the investigators, by reconstructing the actual crime as nearly as they could, hoped to come upon some clue to lead them through the maze of conjecture and despair surrounding the whole case.

Last night while Col. Lindbergh tramped the fields and surrounding woods in tireless search for his missing boy, and Mrs. Lindbergh sobbed in the house, refusing to rest, police made a thorough search of house and grounds.

They raised a ladder of their own and studied minutely the sill nudged by stealthy boots and the warped shutter which would not close when the baby was put to bed and so left easy entrance to the kidnapers.

This morning however, while scores of police and private citizens carried on the search away from the house, detectives began following the course of the criminals as exactly as possible.

Taking the rough improvised ladder found about 100 yards from the house, they raised it to the nursery window and climbed its uneven steps. Standing on a rickety upper crosspiece, just as the lurking criminal must have

LINDY READY TO PAY PRICE

Child Spirited From Its Nursery Last Night While Suffering From Severe Cold; Note Pinned to the Window Sill Threatens Harm to Child if Ransom is Not Paid; Hundreds of Police Engage in Search

Newark, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—A post-card was mailed to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh from here today reading: "Babe safe. Instructions later. Act accordingly."

The card was picked up in the room collections from a box at the corner of Plane and Central avenues in the heart of the city. It was reported by a distributor in the post office, who removed it from the mail and reported its contents. The message on the card was printed.

The finding of the card strengthened the belief of authorities that an abandoned sedan found nearby today in Hillsdale, a suburb, may have been used by the kidnapers in their flight from the Lindbergh home.

The car, unlighted, the bearings of its motor burned out from lack of oil, was found in a field near the Newark line, the street it with in a few blocks of a detour in route 29, which runs directly to Somerville, linking there with route 21, a straight road to Princeton.

The car bore license plates "New York 3K-35-29" and was reported stolen yesterday afternoon from Brooklyn by the owner S. Mandell.

Although police had examined the car for finger prints, they immediately began going over it again.

By ROBERT J. CAVAGNARO (Copyright, 1932 By The Associated Press)

Hopewell, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—Ransom has been demanded for the Lindbergh baby, kidnaped from its nursery last night, and Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh is willing to pay if he can get the infant safely back to its mother's arms.

It was learned shortly before noon today a note found pinned to the sill of the window through which the baby was taken from its sick bed by the kidnapers made a definite ransom demand.

It also threatened harm to the child if the money was not paid, if the contents of the note was divulged, or if the method of payment suggested in the note was revealed.

So threatening was the note that for hours its very existence was denied by police investigating the crime.

It was finally determined with absolute definiteness, however, that the ransom demand had been made and that Col. Lindbergh had decided to meet any demand if by so doing he could get his baby back.

No one would say how large the demand was but a report that it was $50,000 went unchallenged by sources close to the Lindbergh family and to the widespread search.

It was impossible to gain any information as to what instructions may have been contained in the ransom note or to find out just what steps Col. Lindbergh was taking to follow those instructions.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who is reported to be expecting another baby in the spring, was inconsolable today and aside from the grief at having the baby kidnaped she was made additionally anxious because of its (Continued on Page Six)

ABOUT TOWN

Saturday will be observed as "Bundle Day" by the Salvation Army of Greenville and the public will be called upon to give freely to the cause.
The object of "Bundle Day" is to provide clothing for the needy, and everybody has been asked to go through his wardrobe and prepare a bundle for the occasion.
The Boy Scouts, always displaying an inclination to render service to the community, will assist Salvation Army workers in collecting the bundles Saturday morning and not a single house will be missed in the extensive canvass.
It is impossible to estimate the service the Salvation Army is rendering to the poor of the hundreds of communities throughout the nation at this time, and the public should show a keen appreciation of the activity by contributing as freely as it can.

The condition of the poor is worse at this time probably than it has been in years, and only through relief efforts of this kind can the situation be improved.
Don't delay the matter, but go through your wardrobe at once and get your bundles in readiness for the collectors.

A few days ago a youth fifteen years of age was captured at a whiskey still in this county, and instead of being sentenced to prison as is customary in a case of this kind, he was soundly spanked and returned home.
The officers dealt as leniently as possible with the boy because of his tender years, and if he takes advantage of the lesson learned in this single instance, he will not only go back home but attempt to lead a life of righteousness in future years.

A second offense of the kind would mean that the courts would be forced to deal more drastically, and the future of the lad would be blasted probably forever by the stigma attached to the crime and the subsequent prison term.
Under the influence of proper environment there is no reason in the world why that boy should not be able to carve out a useful career for himself, and it should be the duty of those he comes in contact with to lend him all possible encouragement.
It was not a criminal tendency that caused him to be at the still when the officers raided, but that thing we call contact—or being thrown with the wrong company.
Several instances of young men participating in the illicit whiskey traffic have occurred in recent years and it has furnished a new problem for the enforcement officers and the courts alike.
The first brush with the law in the majority of cases has had a salutary effect on the youngsters, and it is believed by one school of thought that the majority find their way back to the high road of servicable public life.

The House agricultural committee has approved a senate bill to release 40,000,000 bushels of government wheat to the Red Cross for distribution among the needy.
Whether the measure will receive favorable action during the remainder of its legislative course remains to be seen, but it is evidently the belief of the majority of congressmen that it would do much toward improving conditions among the poor.
The measure would not only contribute to the happiness of the needy but would relieve the grain market of some of the congestion which has held sway the last several years. It would prove costly to the government, but not more so than finding itself face to face with the problem of increasing appropriations for relief.
It was suggested a year or so ago that the government wheat be dumped into the ocean to relieve the market, but this was so ridiculous that it received only passing attention. Little good would eventuate from such action, but giving to the Red Cross for distribution would help the far-reaching relief program underway in all parts of SYNOPSIS: "Dickey still cares for me?" Hope Ross asks her former father-in-law, Hickey Dale. She has sailed on the same boat, hoping to meet Dickey. Hope has just learned that her father deceived her when he had her marriage annulled, and that Dickey was prevented by Mr. Ross from reaching her.

Chapter 33
SOMETHING BLUE
Hickey laughed. A crooked, broken laugh.
"Your picture is still in his watch case," he said slowly. "Go ask him to show it to you."
For one second Hope stood poised. Then forgetting Sassy, and forgetting Hickey, she turned and raced out of the room.

Hope was on a wild-eyed stargaze. All over the boat, from bar to saloon, up and out on the decks, without hat or cape, fighting her way through the wind from one end of the ship to the other. And finding him, eventually in a forbidden spot, which meant that she had to climb chains and railings to get up to the bridge where Dickey stood with the captain.
"Dickey," she cried. "What time is it? Tell me, honey, what time is it?"
They brought her, still demanding the time, down to the captain's suite.
"No. By your watch, Dickey," she insisted. "I must know the time by your watch."
Dickey went gray around the lips and turned to the captain.
"I don't think Miss Ross is well," he stammered.
"I understand," nodded the captain. But he didn't quite. Until much later that evening.

For Dickey and Hope, with so much to say, so many questions to be answered, so many questions that didn't need answering any more, suddenly found that hardly a spot on that huge vessel was sacred to lovers.
Meanwhile, Judy, in spite of Tom's white-faced annoyance, was searching grimly for Hope, sending the Carters in one direction, and any steward within sight to search out every known corner. And when at last Hope rushed up to Judy and nearly knocked her over with hugs and kisses and breathless explanations, Judy almost fainted with relief.
Quite unplanned and unexpected was the round-up in Hickey's suite. Nobody knew just who made the suggestion that they get married then and there by the captain. But Dickey leaped at the idea, his eyes lighting up in that old blue spark, and a broad shy grin gratefully hiding the scar of stitches on his jaw.
"Will you, Hope? Will you marry me—right now?"
Hope tried to say yes. She really did try. But her face wrinkled up into a childish pucker and she nodded her head instead, gulping back her happiness.
After that, there was a general mad-house. Everyone had a suggestion, everyone a gift, everyone was talking at once.
Not even to change her black velvet, would Dickey permit Hope to leave his side.
"Listen, cricket," he said with that memorably bossy air of his. "Last time you married me just as you were. This time you're going to do the same. That's orders baby!"
The old pet name, the old ring in his voice, and Hope was glad of the confusion that prevented the need of answering. For suddenly through her tired, happy, confused mind, there rose a picture of her old home in Westchester, of the brook that ran beneath her window, and the weeping willows that bent in the breezes—of the times that Dickey would call for her in a monstrous atrocity of a roadster, and of that long ride from the Country Club to the Justice of the Peace—where she had found neither justice nor peace.
"Something blue! You-all must be the nation."

The Japanese government has definitely said it is ready to accept the League of Nations proposal for cessation of hostilities looking to complete establishment of peace.
That the Chinese will do likewise is the belief of men high in the official life of the nation.
This is the nearest approach to effecting ultimate peace so far accomplished and if representatives of the two powers will go to the Shanghai conference ready to do their part, there is no reason on earth why the deadly conflict should not be definitely ended.
Japan has simulated all along that she did not understand why other nations criticized her action in China, but the Japanese are a wily, evasive people and must realize they are in the wrong without attempting to test the credulity of other powers.
To inflict such inexpressible horror and suffering upon the Chinese people at a time when they are beginning to recover from devastating floods a few years ago has displayed a spirit of inhumanity almost staggering to present-day civilization, and it is impossible for anybody to arouse any sympathy for a nation guilty of such a crime.
Japan should remember the sympathy and kindness shown her in the wake of a destructive earthquake not so long ago, and attempt to show the world she is appreciative of the spirit by discontinuing her work of destruction and annihilation among a people who have already suffered unspeakably as result of economic and elemental disturbances.

of the Bible.

The banquet was held for the purpose of stimulating more interest and enthusiasm in the work of the class and was largely attended. W. W. Lee was toastmaster and impressed upon his hearers the importance of the undiminished enthusiasm in the cause of the class. He expressed appreciation of the interest displayed in the rally and asked that this continue throughout the year.

N. C. Brooks, president, extended a cordial welcome on behalf of the class, and invited the members to give united support to the effort to increase attendance and interest in the work of the organization.

J. H. Boyd paid a glowing tribute to the life and work of the late Dr. C. J. Elen in whose honor the class was named. The speaker said Dr. Elen gave his best in the upbuilding of the class which he taught for so many years, and also to activities having as their purpose the development of community life.

He described Dr. Elen as a patriot, not only in the great conflict which virtually all nations of the world in a deadly embrace, but in the great fight to increase to expansion of the Kingdom of God. He expressed the hope that the high ideals and aspirations expressed through the life of the late teacher would forever prove an inspiration to the class, causing its members to reach out and grasp the higher standards of life.

Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of Memorial Baptist church, said he hoped the inspiration of the gathering would have a far-reaching effect on the life of the class and cause its members to reconsecrate themselves to the great cause to which they had committed themselves.

Dr. Peacock spoke on the subject of "Neglectfully Idle." It was a masterful exposition of the modern tendency to forget the real values of life in the wild chase for money and happiness.

In spite of the unprecedented period of unemployment which the nation is passing through at this time, he declared there was a great army of people neglectfully idle, giving their time and attention to things that do not go for constructive citizenship.

"The man that does not work should not eat," he declared, as he drove home the thought that the person not willing to work for his living simply retards the progress of civilization through the stultification of ambition in others as well as himself.

The first duty of man, he asserted, is to seek God, giving time to the creation of constructive home environments and improvement of his community. Clean politics and clean living are essential to well balanced government, he pointed out as he called on his hearers to clean up every phase of activity and give it the spiritual value so necessary to high type of life.

LINDY SHOWS STEELY CALM

Famous Flier Displays Nerve that Aided Him in Rocket Rise to Fame.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—The steely calm that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh displayed in his rocket rise to fame did not desert him in the most harrowing experience of his career.

Tight-lipped as ever on subjects touching his private life, his rumpled hair and grim face were the only indications of his feelings as he tramped about his estate, flashlight in hand, inspecting the footprints of the escaped kidnapers of his son, and searching the muddy mountain for other clues.

When a reporter asked him for a statement, he turned to Major Schefer of the state police, who had ordered all available troopers in the district to report to the Lindbergh home.

"I prefer that you answer all questions," the world's most famous aviator said. "You know all about it."

"If you would excuse me," he added to the reporter, "I would rather turn everything over to the state police. I am sure you will understand."

His leather jacket and gray trousers, were mud-flaked, showing that his frantic search had been extensive.

Mrs. Lindbergh, who is believed to expect another child in May, was in seclusion. Fears were expressed that the blow would endanger her health.

FOREST FIRES STILL RAGING
lized to beat back the fires from their homes if the residences became endangered.

Blazes on the Catawba river in the Linville section were under control today while some others lessened their vigor.

In McDowell county 3,000 acres were reported ablaze, fought by 100 men under the direction of W. K. Becher, district forester, while federal rangers were organizing fighters to combat flames which endangered portions of Pisgah National forest.

These forces were reported meeting with success, but news of more recent outbreaks came from other points.

Sylvia dispatches said fires were spreading in the Perry Knob area and around High Rock mountain in the Plott balsams.

Several hundred acres were burned over in Sherwood forest to the south of Canton, before the blaze was reported controlled by fighters operating under the State Forestry service.

From Hot Springs, near the Tennessee line, came word of eight fires, three of which were on Big Laurel Creek, one at Walnut Gap, two at Pine Creek, one on Dog Branch and one on Spring Creek.

Flames in Polk county, near the South Carolina line, were threatening the Slick Rock estate of the late Otto C. Blannard, of New York. Described as the worst blaze in years, the flames had covered 1,000 acres and were still spreading.

The old Skyuka hotel on Tryon mountain was barely saved by the firefighters, and two outbuildings of the Rich Haven estate on Tryon mountain were burned, but fighters turned the flames from the residential structure.

The flames early today were pushing close to Ben Craigen, estate of Dr. C. B. Reed, of Chicago, on White Oak mountain.

Twelve fires of large proportions were burning between Murphy and Copper Hill, Tenn., and Murphy dispatches said a crew of men was combating flames between Hanging Dog Creek and Tellico River, northwest of town.

Another large fire was reported on Pine Log mountain, near the Georgia state line.

Clay county, especially the Tussee section, was being swept by several different fires.

In the Goose Creek section of McDowell county, several homes were saved only by desperate efforts of fighters.

Bloodhounds were taken to the starting points of blazes around Old Fort when officers expressed the belief they were of incendiary origin.

stood last night before he slid into the dark room to lay hands on the helpless and sick infant.

Inspector Francis Kelly made a microscopic examination of sill and shutter.

Kelly is finger print expert attached to the Morristown police station. After descending he declined to tell reporters if he had found anything of value but a shake of his head to a superior officer was interpreted as indicating that his hunt had been fruitless.

The ladder was left leaning against the window, like a crooked finger pointing at the scene of the shameful crime. Occasionally one detective or another, moving slowly as though in concentrated thought, would climb laboriously to the top, pause for a momentary scrutiny, and then climb carefully into the nursery.

The search for the flier's son was extended into the air today. Authorities asked the Ludington Air Lines for a plane and a big tri-motored ship was immediately dispatched from Newark airport with Fred Davis, a veteran pilot, at the controls.

'COL. DEMPSEY' GETS HIS PAPERS

He hasn't grown any handle-bar mustache yet or bought a Kentucky sombrero, but Jack Dempsey, ex-heavyweight champion nevertheless, is a full-fledged "colonel" of the Blue Grass state. Here he is shown getting his certificate of appointment to the staff of Gov. Ruby Laffoon (left).

Col. Lindbergh's comrades of the air also found it impossible to stand idle while tragedy hung over him. The quiet birdmen, a secret flying organization of which Col. Lindbergh is a member, organized a search party, with headquarters at Newark, the New York City municipal airport, and the aviation country club at Hicksville, Long Island. Plans were made to send a score of planes, some of them under control of world famous aviators, hurtling over the dense woodland of Soudland Mountain in an effort to ferret out the hideaway of the kidnapers.

FEDERAL MEN WILL ASSIST STATE POLICE
Customs and immigration authorities at the nation's borders also were ordered to keep a strict watch.

The kidnaping stirred the capital from President Hoover down.

The kidnaping aroused indignation in congressional circles, where Col. Lindbergh has many friends, and gave great impetus to the movement for federal legislation.

Senator Bingham (R., Conn.) said the deed brought the "kidnaping racket" to public attention as never before and indicated he would favor legislation to curb it.

Senator Patterson (R., Mo.) declared he would press for immediate action on his bill to make kidnaping across interstate lines a federal crime to be penalized by death.

This bill has been favorably reported by a sub-committee headed by Senator Waterman (R., Colo.)

While the attorney general said there was no indication thus far that the Lindbergh case is within federal jurisdiction, he disclosed plans to keep close tab upon developments on "the chance that the perpetrators of this crime in this or some other activity may have touched federal authority."

Trenton, N. J., March 2.—(AP)—Governor A. Harry Moore and Republican legislative leaders, after conferring by telephone with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, today announced plans had been abandoned to offer a reward for the apprehension of the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby.

Colonel Lindbergh, officials said, asked that such action be deferred for the time being while initial efforts to capture the abductors were being made.

All plans for issuance of a proclamation and tentative legislative action to increase the proposed reward from $10,000 to $25,000 were held in abeyance.

Police officials arriving for a conference with the governor to organize activities to apprehend the kidnapers and recover the baby included Thomas Wolfe, chief of police of Jersey City; Police Inspectors Harry Walsh and Charles Wilson and Police Captain Henry Gaupier and Patrick Brady, all of Jersey City, and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police.

Arrangements were made to keep in touch with Colonel Lindbergh during the conference.

Democrats Will Meet at Raleigh on 16th of June

Raleigh, March 2.—(AP)—The biennial state convention of the Democratic party will be held here on June 16, it was decided by the executive committee here last night.

Precinct meetings will be held June 4—the date of the primary—and county conventions June 11.

The vote for convention place was Raleigh 91, Charlotte 17, and Sanford 2.

Prior to the vote Senator Josiah W. Bailey delivered an address predicting the defeat of President Hoover and calling for the "most unified Democracy in this state and nation which we have seen in two decades."

Mrs. Palmer Jerman, of Raleigh, National Democratic committee woman, predicted sweeping Democratic victories in the approaching elections.

Forest Ablaze Near Leland
Leland, N. C., March 2.—(AP)—One of the largest forest fires in recent months burned in Brunswick county today near here between State highways 20 and 30.

The flames, whipped by a strong wind yesterday, swept over more than $1,000 acres and E. V. Evans, Brunswick bridge storekeeper, said the fire had been under way three or four days.

Firefighters attempted to stop the march of the flames which licked up dry forest and brush and a guard at its borders was being maintained. Only a few people live in the vicinity.

DEMOCRATIC ROAD FUND BILL GIVEN APPROVAL
Washington, March 2.—(AP)—Increased by $3,500,000 and providing that states may fix minimum wages, the Democratic emergency road fund was approved today by the Senate postoffice committee. It now totals $136,000,000.

Raleigh. — Lena Mae Williams, 4, Earl 2, and Willie, one year old, children of Will Williams and his wife Rebecca, were burned to death when fire destroyed their home at Method.

Mount Pleasant — Approximately $10,000 damage was done here by fire which destroyed the Foll building in the business district here.

Lincolnton. — Police recovered the 500-pound safe stolen from the Seaboard freight station here. The thieves had battered it open to find it contained only $5.95.

Seeks Divorce

Mary Mulhern Pickford is shown in her hotel suite reading over the divorce complaint she plans to file against Jack Pickford of the movies after a property settlement has been made.

Washington, March 2.—(AP)—While saying "nothing can be done now to bring the Lindbergh kidnaping case under federal jurisdiction," Chairman Summers of the House Judiciary committee planned today to ask permission for the committee to sit during the afternoon session of the House to consider the Cochran bill for a federal curb on "kidnap racketeers."

Summers said he was not going to be "panicked" because of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby. "I had already set committee consideration of the bill for this week, and will take it up today if possible. I shall ask the speaker's permission to sit during the session to that end. Summers said. The meeting, if allowed, will be in executive session.

Women Voters Try for Jury
Chapel Hill, March 2.—(AP)—The North Carolina League of Women voters, in session here, decided to institute a test case to determine the rights of women to serve on juries in the state without a constitutional amendment.

All officers were re-elected. They are Miss Elsie Riddick, Raleigh, president; Mrs. H. E. Sewell, Charlotte, first vice-president; Mrs. E. R. Mosser, Chapel Hill, second vice-president; Mrs. Mary O. Cowper, Durham, treasurer; Mrs. C. W. Tillet, Charlotte, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Reverdy Miller, Charlotte, recording secretary.

The league heard addresses by Dr. Della Dixon Carroll, of Raleigh; Dean M. T. Van Hecke, of the University law school, and Dr. Christopher Roberts, of Duke University.

High Court Hears Luke Lea Appeal

Raleigh, March 2.—(AP)—An inquisitive North Carolina Supreme court today heard defense counsel argue that Luke Lea, Nashville, Tenn., publisher, financier and politician, Luke Lea Jr., and Wallace B. Davis of Asheville, were unjustly convicted in Buncombe Superior Court of conspiracy to defraud and of misappropriation of the funds of the Central Bank and Trust Company of Asheville.

Davis was president of the bank, which closed late in 1930 holding notes signed by the Lea group, amounting $800,000 and records of the issuance of cashier's checks and certificates of deposit to Lea, Sr., amounting $400,000.

The justices of the court became inquisitive when R. R. Williams of Asheville, who opened the argument for the defense, listed the transactions between the Central Bank and Luke Lea, Sr. as legitimate operations by which Davis sought to save the Central Bank from failure.

Plan to Curb the Kidnap Racket
Washington, March 2.—(AP)—While saying "nothing can be done now to bring the Lindbergh kidnaping case under federal jurisdiction," Chairman Summers of the House Judiciary committee planned today to ask permission for the committee to sit during the afternoon session of the House to consider the Cochran bill for a federal curb on "kidnap racketeers."

Kitty Frew

By Jane Abbott

Chapter 1 MARRY IN HASTE

It seemed to Kitty Frew that the wheels of the train under her were whirling along her spine. The world outside the car window rushed by in a blur. She felt a little giddy. She wished Gar would waken to talk to her, to tell her that his family would adore her.

But her young husband of a week was deep in sleep, sprawled in the Pullman chair next to her, unconscious of her growing panic. He was a good-looking young husband even so sprawled, and under other circumstances only to look at him would have made Kitty supremely happy and oblivious to everything except her pride and possession. But not now, not with the train carrying her nearer and nearer to Winton and Gar's family.

They couldn't know much about her. She remembered that Gar had written them little more than that he was married. "I'm not much on letters, Kit," he explained. "They'll adore you, sweet. How could they help it?"

And when he said things like that, with his arms close around her, she could believe him. He'd made her believe other things too. That they'd been waiting for one another since the beginning of time, that it was the simple working of Destiny that had brought him to visit Phil Corey in Bridgewater after graduation, when he'd stood the old boy off for so long—Destiny had been keeping her there for him, a precious one-hundred-and-ten pound bundle of woman, with hair that looked like honey and a freckled nose and eyes that were bluer than the bluest eyes he'd ever seen.

"Let's drive over to Albany and tie up, Kit."

But Kitty wouldn't think she was married if it weren't in church, her own church, before old Dr. Harwood, with her father and mother there, with Sally Withers standing up with her.

Gar had yielded that much if she'd marry him at once. John Brandon, Kitty's father, had accepted Garfield Frew because the Corey's sponsored him. His family, Gar had explained, were on the ocean homeward bound from Europe; when they got back to Winton they'd be frightfully busy with everything and they'd be glad he hadn't waited. His father'd been counting on his taking a position in his office as soon as he'd finished college. And now, of course, he'd do that.

Mary Brandon, Kitty's mother, had seen their love a beautiful thing. Kitty was just the age she had been when she married John Brandon.

Children, she thought of Gar and Kitty as dear children.

During that week of their honeymoon, spent in an unfrequented place in the Adirondacks, Kitty had had no room in her consciousness for anyone but Gar. But now, going to them, she saw his family a part of their future with which to reckon.

That she might give them reality she brought her mind, now, to what Gar had told her of his people. His mother was frightfully busy, running committees and things like that, tremendously efficient, that sort. "Stunning looking and looks half her age."

His father, Gar had said, worked like the devil; he was a director in almost every concern of any importance in Winton; he hated the social racket.

Gar had a sister, two years older than he was. Carol was a good sort when she wasn't running after some queer fad or other.

"While I'm laying bare the hard facts of my family, Mrs. Frew, I must tell you that I have a half-brother. Back in his obscure youth Dad married unwisely and David is the hard fruit of that union. I'm not at all hot about him. He doesn't live at home, prefers a mousy apartment, where what he does is nobody's business—not that we are interested in the least."

Kitty had not been interested then, and now she did not think of David.

"What if they didn't adore her, that mother and father and sister of Gar? The possibility was so frightening that she felt an imperative need of Gar's reassurance. She reached out her hand and locked it around his foot where it rested on the edge of her chair.

And as she did so she heard a faint laugh from across the aisle. She withdrew her hand hastily, flushing, startled, startled because until that moment she had not been conscious of any fellow traveler. Turning her confused glance toward the opposite chair, she saw another girl's eyes slip away from hers with a little start-wise tilt while her lips held their amused smile.

Kitty surveyed the other girl with an unhappy fascination. "She's lovely," she thought, giving full measure of tribute to the stranger's perfectly molded profile of nose and chin and slender throat. She appraised the other's clothes with a new dismay; in comparison with them her own traveling suit, her brimmed hat, her patent leather pumps, in all of which units this moment she had taken complete satisfaction, looked cheap, unstylish.

Her touch on his foot had wakened Gar. He roused sleepily. "Gosh, Kit, how long have I been sunk? Where are we?" He straightened and under pretense of looking out of the window kissed her ear. "Have you been lonely, sweet?" He stretched luxuriously, his eyes feasting on Kitty's flushing face. Then he turned slowly to look about him, his glance traveling gradually to the opposite chair, stopping short there, while an exclamation of astonishment and delight escaped his lips. He sprang to his feet and held out his hands. "Why, Marge Crosby! When did you get on?"

The girl put both her hands in Gar's. She left them there, as she answered. "At Rochester. While you were sleeping, I didn't want to disturb you." Her eyes went past him to Kitty and back again to his face, while the faintest questioning, half-amused, half incredulous, curled her lips.

Gar had seen her look at Kitty. "Marge, I want you to meet my wife," he colored a little, laughed. "It's no joke. I'm married—been married a whole week. We're going home now."

The girl gave the slightest nod toward Kitty. She feigned astonishment and hurt, sinking back in her chair with a deep, reproachful, upward look in her eyes for Gar.

"Gar, where, when—how?"

"Oh, up in Bridgewater—ever hear of the place? Phil Corey lives there. You've met him at college. Guess we cheated the society sheet. They'd give a good account of our wedding. Simple stuff, all right, preacher one of these hick dominies, wheezy organ, flowers out of my father-in-law's garden, picked by the bride and groom. Won't Red and the rest of the bunch get a great laugh out of it? But, believe me, he'll find Kitty a peach—"

Gar's tone was warm with feeling, but he was looking at Margery Crosby, not at Kitty. And Kitty had not heard his tribute. She was confused with shame for Gar. How could he speak so flippantly of that moment that had been so solemn, so beautiful for both of them—just to make this girl laugh?

But Gar was finishing with fatuous ardor: "I want you and Kit to be friends, Marge. You can line her up with the bunch."

"We will be friends, of course," Marge smiled sweetly at Kitty. "I'll do my best with the others though you must realize, Gar, this is going to be a blow to them. Naturally we've thought we would have your undivided attention for a while."

"What's new in the crowd, Marge?"

"Oh, nothing startling, in the light of what you've done. Pete Elliot had his license taken away again; imprisonment for his next offense."

Kitty was scarcely heeding what they were saying, but she was deeply aware of a new tone in Gar's voice, a delighted eagerness, as if this encounter with Margery Crosby and the news she could give him of his crowd was a big part of his homecoming, in which she, a stranger, had no share.

The train had slowed down. "We're in," Gar exclaimed. With Marge on his one side and Kitty on the other he steered them through the confusion of the station. He put Margery into a big limousine that was waiting for her. She leaned toward the open window of the door and lifted her hand in a casual farewell.

"Thanks, Gar. Give me a ring soon, won't you?"

Gar promised. He stood for a moment surveying the street. "I don't see the family crate waiting anywhere! Well, we'll take a taxi. It's home for us, Mrs. Frew!"

And, though he bent a warm, adoring smile on her, though he drew her arm closer in his Kitty felt cold and frightened.

Market Report

Cotton--Stocks--Grain

N. Y. COTTON

New York, March 2.—(AP)—Cotton opened steady today at an advance of 1 to 4 points on trade buying and covering. Offerings were comparatively light. May sold at 6.99.

The selling of yesterday and Monday seemed to have improved the market's technical position. There appeared to be some foreign and domestic trade buying and there may have been some covering or rebuying by recent sellers on the opening action of the stock market. At any rate, prices held steady after the call with May advancing to 7.03 and October to 7.40, or about five to seven points above yesterday's closing quotations by the end of the first half hour.

Liverpool cables report an inactive market there was a better business in cotton cloths with over buying for the British home trade in Manchester.

GRAIN MARKET

BY JOHN BOUGHAN
Chicago, March 2.—(AP)—Increased activity of wheat trade sent hand in hand today with higher prices.

Unfavorable crop developments regarding domestic winter wheat over parts of the southwest acted as a stimulant. There were complaints of lack of moisture in western Kansas, western Nebraska, and Colorado.

May and September wheat was sought by houses with foreign connections. Wheat closed firm, 11-2 over Saturday's finish. Corn 1-4 to 1-2 up, oats unchanged to 3-8 higher, and provisions varying from cents decline to an equal advance.

STOCK MARKET

New York, March 2.—(AP)—The stock market appeared to be viewing the outlook a little more cheerfully today, although its hopes, as expressed in brokerage quarters, were modest.

The midweek business statistics, while devoid of anything of a particularly conclusive nature, were slightly more encouraging, and conditions abroad, with the British Treasury preparing to pay off $150,000,000 of its American private bank credit, seemed to be distinctly better.

There was a slow advance in share prices, with several groups participating, but tobacco, chemicals, utilities and miscellaneous industrials making the best progress. Shares up 1 to 2 points by early afternoon included American Tobacco, B. American Telephone, Liggett & Myers, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, U. S. Steel, Eastman, Case, Westinghouse, Gillette, Paramount, Loew's, Radio, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Dupont, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Can, Woolworth and Electric Autolite. Motors and oils were sluggish.

A further reduction in the Bank of England's discount rate was widely forecast in international banking circles, and a reduction in the Reichbank rate, with renewal of the $100,000,000 central banking credit, was regarded as likely.

Bankers expected the British $150,000,000 payment would have a further easing effect upon the New York money market, although rates were steady today. Also it was felt some quarters that the projected withdrawal of foreign exchange regulations in England might result in more buying of American securities.

Stocks received strong support in the afternoon trading and leading issues pushed up 2 to 6 points. Transactions exceeded 1,500,000 shares, the largest volume in about two weeks.

HOPES TO GET HORNSBY'S JOB

Billy Hornsby, who came up to the Chicago Cubs from Louisville last summer, is expected to clinch the second base job this year. Peculiarly enough, Manager Rogers Hornsby, who is a second baseman himself, hopes Billy can handle it alone, for Hornsby has other things to attend to.

U. N. C. FAILS BEFORE THE GA. BULLDOGS

BY GLENN RAMSEY
Atlanta, March 2.—(AP)—Georgia, heralded as the south's "big shot" in football only to meet defeat in mid-season, has evened the score by winning the southern conference basketball championship.

It was the mighty waves of Tulane that booted the Georgians from their grip on the perch but it was North Carolina University that was grounded under the onslaught of the Southern Bulldogs last night in basketball, 23 to 21.

By another queer turn, that athletics seem to take, Catfish Smith captain of the winning Georgia basketball outfit, didn't make the all-southern pick in the tournament 7 months ago as an all-American selection on the defeated gridiron machine.

This year's tournament was one of upsets with the sports groaning each time a favorite fell. And despite their own losses in previous seasons, Georgia was still an outsider in the final go.

North Carolina, which had the upper hand in a game which then the Georgia boys appeared to these along the sidelines, but that was rugged enough with their spectacular scoring from dramatic angles to be up to face Georgia for a jubilee.

It was the everlastingly-stippled of the Bulldogs that carried them through. Both teams had an ace on the bench most of the time. St. Land, Georgia's all-southern center and Weathers, Carolina's all-southern forward, both were forced out while the contest was raging furiously.

But the fighting hearts of these two stars were still with them and in the closing minutes of the struggle the opposing coaches permitted them to return. Georgia, however, was equal to the necessary last field goal and another great tournament ended.

It took Georgia eight long years and many heartaches to realize a championship dream. It was before, back in 1927, did the Bulldogs reach the finals, did they before a mightier Vanderbilt. They have played in the semi-finals five times.

Carolina, which had the upper hand in 1924-25 to carry the championship to the Old North State, lacked something of that in those quarters to effect another victory last night.

Heretofore the Tar Heels were masters at the art of forcing opponents to take chance shots far from the goal and seldom permitted them to be taken away from them in their own territory. Last night it was different, the visiting Georgians waded through their defense and frequently in unexpected short Carolina passes under the Tar Heel goal.

Georgia played the floor better than their more polished foe. Good shooting honors were about even, the score shows, but both teams missed often on the easy ones.

It was tough for the Carolinians because of the loss of Weathers at a crucial moment. The flashy forward collapsed near his own bench and was of little use when he returned for a few moments before the final gun. Edwards, big Tar Heel center, was also out when Moren and Young tossed the field goals that meant a Georgia victory.

STRICT DIET. It was feared that exposure to the cold and damp night air in scanty clothing and lack of its carefully prepared and selected food might have serious effect on the child's health even though it was unharmed by the kidnapers themselves.

Added excitement was caused in the district this morning when the fire siren blew and it was reported that the blaze was in the Lindbergh home. It was soon determined however, that the apparatus had been called to extinguish a chimney which had caught fire in a house in this village, several miles from the isolated Lindbergh home.

Police spread today through the wild country surrounding the Lindbergh estate, up over Saurland hill and into the dense tangle around Devil's cave and roaring rocks, an isolated region which rumor says is stalked by numerous moonshiners.

Close watch was kept at eastern airports but nothing was expected from this as no one believed the kidnapers would be so foolhardy as to attempt to secure transportation on a transport plane while the whole country was looking for the missing child.

Mrs. Dwight Morrow, the baby's grandmother, remained at her home in Englewood, after first news of the kidnaping came to her over the telephone in the sobbing voice of the child's mother. It was believed she would come here during the day.

In the early hours of this morning a truck driver, arriving at Philadelphia, reported that he had seen a baby doll lying in a bundle on the highway a mile and a half from the Lindbergh place. State police, who immediately searched the entire area, reported they were unable to find any such bundle.

Police had not intended to reveal their discovery that one of the kidnapers was a woman but after the information had been inadvertently revealed, they celebrated somewhat. They said the clear mark of a woman's shoe had been distinguished among the formless prints of a man or men's stockings feet.

Major Charles Schoeffel of the state police, said the tracks of the kidnapers started from the west side of the Lindbergh home and were traced a distance of two miles. There were several crossroads, he said, where a car might have picked them up but he would not say if tracks of a car that might have been used had been found. All roads were so cut up by the visiting automobiles after the alarm was spread that it was impossible to distinguish tire marks.

The police flashed the alarm of the kidnaping over their state-wide automatic printer. Princeton police reported that a few hours before the kidnaping took place, two men in a dark sedan stopped a highway worker and inquired directions to the Lindbergh home.

The kidnaping was discovered at 10 p. m. The baby's nurse, Betty God, had put him to bed at 7:30. When she returned to the nursery there was only a heap of disordered blankets in the crib. She rushed screaming downstairs to the dining room, and told the colonel and his wife, eating a late dinner, what had happened.

Col. Lindbergh immediately telephoned the state police and the news of the kidnaping was broadcast to police in New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania.

The first newspaper man to reach the Lindbergh residence was an Associated Press reporter, who found the colonel, bareheaded as usual, nervously pacing the grounds, while the state and local police and detectives went over the estate with flashlights.

The house, ablaze with lights, was silhouetted against the foreboding background of the wooded Saurland hills.

Col. Lindbergh refused to make any statement. His butler, Ollie Wheatley, who hovered anxiously near his master, likewise nervously declined to have anything to say. Mrs. Wheatley, the butler's wife, who was the fifth adult in the house when the kidnaping was staged, likewise would not talk.

The only statement Col. Lindbergh made was: "I prefer that major Schoeffel answer all questions. He knows all about it. I would rather turn everything over to the state police. I am sure you will understand."

The search of the ground of the estate yielded a scant handful of clues to the kidnapers, who had worked with such quiet, and stealthily ditched that the five adults in the house were never aware of what was happening in the nursery upstairs.

The nursery, which is filled with every device for childish pleasure, is situated in the right-hand corner of the second floor front, and faces on the private roadway. The open window through which the kidnapers entered is 30 feet from the ground.

A cordon of police was thrown about the Lindbergh estate early today to keep out the hundreds of private cars which sped there after hearing of the kidnaping. Roads for miles around were snarled in a hopeless traffic jam.

Police have discovered no fingerprints in the nursery. The ledge of the nursery window by which the kidnaper entered was covered with dirt, evidently from the man's feet.
