RED JOHNSON AGAIN QUIZZED IN KIDNAPING

Sailor Led About the Lindbergh Estate to See How Much He Knows About Place.

Hopewell, N. J., March 19.—(AP)—Henry (Red) Johnson, sailor suitor of the kidnapped Lindbergh baby's nurse, was led about the Lindbergh estate by detectives today, to determine just how much he knew about the house and grounds.

He was not under arrest in connection with the kidnaping, police reiterated, but detectives wanted to learn how much he knew about the estate in their efforts to discover whether he might have been and unwitting aid to the kidnapers.

In the morning bulletin from the Lindbergh house it was said that Paul and Kate Engstberg, servants, who suddenly left their place of employment in Franklin Park the day after the kidnaping, had made very complete statements and had been complete to return to their new jobs in Admore, Pa.

"Most of the statements they have made have been checked and found correct," said Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police. "They are not being held in connection with the case."

Schwarzkopf said that when it was decided to bring Johnson to the estate last night he arrived tired and so was permitted to sleep before detectives began examining him.

"He is being questioned this morning," Schwarzkopf said. "His statement indicates that he had been to Hopewell several times and it is desired to take him over the ground to verify the statement. His status has not changed and he is still held on a detainer lodged against him by the immigration authorities."

Government Seeks To Seize Airplanes

Greensboro, March 19.—(AP)—Permission to seize an airplane because its occupants violated flying regulations and have failed to pay a fine imposed therefor is asked by the government in a petition now before Judge Johnson J. Hayes in federal district court here.

So far as could be learned, Judge Hayes' ruling in the case, whatever it may be, will set a precedent, as no record of another such case has been found.

The plane, now in the hands of Richard Nissen, of Winston-Salem, was owned, at the time of the transgression, by George Pope of Winston-Salem, and stood in the name of Zebb Grubb, of Lexington, the petition says.

The government claims Nissen and Pope took a ride Sept. 5, 1931, flew the plane without airman's certificates, flew it at less than 1,000 feet altitude over Winston-Salem, flew it acrobatically at 1,500 feet and had no parachutes, and that both were under the influence of intoxicants.

Woman is Freed in Murder Case

Smithfield, March 19.—(AP)—Mrs. Ivey Hinton Williams, charged with slaying her husband, Jesse J. Williams, chairman of Johnston County Democratic executive committee, received a directed verdict of acquittal yesterday after the State had presented its evidence in her trial.

Judge W. C. Harris announced at the close of State's evidence he would grant a motion for a non-suit, and after he had done so defense counsel contended Mrs. Williams was entitled to a directed verdict, since she had actually been brought to trial.

The case was based almost exclusively on the absence of powder burns about Williams' wound.

MODERN BLUEBEARD HANGED

Harry F. Powers died on the gallows at Moundsville, W. Va., pententary last night for the murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler-Lemke, "mail-order sweetheart." He is shown (center) leaving the courthouse under heavy guard after his arraignment at Clarksburg.

Man Arrested In Effort To Enter Nursery In N. J.

Highland Park, N. J., March 19.—(AP)—A man who attempted to climb up a ladder into the nursery at the home of J. Seward Johnson, wealthy surgical dressing manufacturer, early today was chased away after an exchange of shots. He was caught later in South Plainfield.

SEE BETTER DAYS AHEAD

Optimism Reigns As Kiwanians hold Regular Meeting At Fountain.

Times may be rather hard at this time, but better days are just around the corner, was the opinion expressed by speakers at the regular meeting of the Greenville Kiwanis club at Fountain last night. All were unanimous in believing they had Old Man Depression on the run and that he would soon be a thing of the past just like all similar periods of by-gone years.

The object of the meeting was to bring the two towns to a better understanding of problems affecting community life and to attempt to induce coordinated effort in this direction.

Kiwanians attended nearly one hundred per cent strong and several citizens of Fountain had been invited to take part in ammettes of the occasion. The program was in charge of President G. V. Smith and Rev. W. H. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian church. A delightful supper was served by the Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian church, and tables were decorated in keeping with St. Patrick's Day.

President Smith told of the purpose of the gathering and Rev. H. M. Wilson, introduced by Max Smith, delivered the address of welcome. Ralph Deal made the response in which he recounted the desire of Kiwanians to bring about closer contact between individuals as well as communities.

A program dealing with St. Patrick's Day was given.

Spring Due Sunday. New York, March 19.—(AP)—After 2:54 o'clock (Eastern Standard Time) tomorrow afternoon it may be said "it's spring."

The northbound sun crosses the equator at that hour, after which the trailing arbutus and the shrinking violets may begin blooming any time.

Hope Missing Explorer Still Alive In Jungles

Buenos Aires, March 19.—(AP)—Hope that Col. P. H. Fawcett, British explorer who has been missing in the Brazilian jungles for seven years and long ago given up for dead, might still be found alive by further night here today by Captain Luis Longobardi, Italian explorer who spent eight years in the Brazilian Mato Grosso section.

Captain Longobardi said he thought Colonel Fawcett was a prisoner of the Bororo Indians, 200 miles east of the Madeira river.

These Indians inhabit a swampy valley near the point where Stephen Rattin, a Swiss trapper, told Arthur Abbott, British consul at Rio de Janeiro, this week he talked with Colonel Fawcett last October 18.

SAY SURPLUS CROPS CAN BE SOLD ABROAD

Congressional Leaders Believe Satisfactory Credit Necessary in Campaign.

Washington, March 19.—(AP)—Virtually every bushel of wheat and every bale of cotton the Farm Board controls officials believe, could be sold to foreign governments if satisfactory credits were arranged.

That is why administration and congressional leaders are seeking to provide adequate financing thru use of a part of the $200,000,000 agricultural funds carried in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act.

Many foreign governments have made overtures to the board, but in most cases acceptable credit terms could not be reached. The board now is financially strapped and outside aid must be provided.

Chairman Stone of the board and others believe domestic markets would be strengthened materially if the burden of American crops surpluses could be lifted.

MASS KILLER IS EXECUTED

Harry F. Powers Dies on Gallows at W. Va. Prison for Slaying of Five Persons.

By L. R. LINDGREN (Associated Press Staff Writer) Moundsville, W. Va., March 19.—(AP)—Denying guilt in the hour of his death, Harry F. Powers, mass killer, died on the gallows last night for the murder of a "mail order" sweetheart.

He went to his death fearlessly—brazenly.

In life he was the "Bluebeard" who lured lonely women to death with ardent confessions of undying love and promises of lifelong happiness.

In death, he was revealed as a man of many moods, a man with a Jekyll-Hyde nature—a puzzle to psychiatrists and alienists.

After the trap had sprung, exacting society's toll for the murder of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler-Lemke of Northboro, Mass., divorcee, Dr. H. H. Hayes, a Clarksburg, W. Va., physician, disclosed he has Powers' written confession, admitting in detail the murder of five persons.

These five—Mrs. Lemke and Mrs. Asta Bulek Elcher and her three children of Park Ridge, Ill.—were killed and their bodies were buried in a narrow ditch near Powers' "Chamber of Horrors" garage on his wife's deserted farm in Sylvan Quiet Dell, near Clarksburg.

A short time after Powers' body was removed from the death chamber, an envelope addressed to Warden A. C. Scroggins was opened.

Therein was a letter in which the man about to die had protested his innocence. He assailed capital punishment, which he insisted fails to reduce the number of murder cases.

He walked, unassisted, with firm step to the gallows.

Asked if he had anything to say Powers replied "No" with an emphatic shake of his head.

Mrs. H. C. Venters Dead; Burial Here Sunday Afternoon

Mrs. H. C. Venters, 62, died at her home in Shelmerdine this morning at 10:30 o'clock. Although she had been in ill health for some time, her condition did not become critical until about four days ago when doctors despaired of saving her life.

Highway Death Rate Falls Off In This State

Raleigh, March 19.—(AP)—Fatalities from automobile accidents in North Carolina aggregated only 38 in February, the lowest figure in months, L. S. Harris, director of the motor vehicle bureau, reported today.

In addition to the 38 killed, there were 328 persons injured in 270 accidents reported during February. This compared with 55 killed and 370 injured in January.

GALE CLAIMS ANIMAL LIFE

Carcasses of Wild Ponies Are Washed Ashore on Carolina Coast.

Cape Hatteras, N. C., March 19.—(AP)—Carcasses of wild ponies strewn among the sand dunes bear mute testimony to the terrifying gale that pushed walls of ocean water over the North Carolina "Banks" last week.

Excitement and suffering in the wake of the storm which wrecked homes and wrought great damage to fishing nets and craft caused the "Banks" dwellers to overlook for the moment that death rode the roaring wind even through human life was spared.

Twelve carcasses were counted on Pea Island and many others were found along these narrow sand strips that parallel the North Carolina mainland and serve as buffers against the turbulent Atlantic.

Suffering and hardships imposed by contrary elements are not new to these hardy little steeps of the "Banks."

There is a legend that they are descendants of fine Arabian horses aboard a ship wrecked off Diamond Shoals generations ago. The story has it that some of the horses swam ashore and survived on the sand strips but found life hard.

Vegetation is scarce and the winters are often bitterly cold. Therefore, within the course of years, the proud Arabians degenerated into the shaggy, wiry ponies that now roam the sand dunes in droves.

PEACE MOVE GOES FORWARD

Japanese and Chinese Reported Making Progress in Newest Conference.

Shanghai, March 19.—(AP)—Japanese and Chinese authorities met in a new peace conference today at the British consulate and participants in the parleys said progress was being made.

Chinese officials' quarters at Nanking were reported hopeful over the situation and although the nature of their discussions was not known, Nelson T. Johnson, American minister to China, said the move for peace was progressing.

The ministers of the United States, Great Britain and France and the Italian charge d'affaires attended the conference. Quo Tai-Chi, Chinese vice-minister for foreign affairs, represented China and Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese minister to China, represented Japan.

In the meantime the Japanese armies shivered in the cold of a Chinese winter, envying those of their fellows who were lucky enough to be quartered on warm transports, bound back home to Japan.

Chinese officials at Nanking indicated the present parleys, preceded by Japanese troop withdrawals, would be followed by a more broad round table conference later, with the world powers sitting in to iron out the details of a permanent solution.

Summing up the movement of troops, Japanese headquarters said 55,000 troops arrived here during the time since the hostilities began and that about 20,000 were now being withdrawn.

The ninth division, Japanese officials said, will not be withdrawn, in spite of reports abroad that it would be replaced by the fortieth, a stronger division. A Japanese spokesman said the Japanese army has no fortieth division.

"Joys of the Big City" Los Angeles.—The joys of the big city spoiled his romance, Edward Halperin, film director, told a judge, he said his wife took a trip to New York, then came back and told him she couldn't be happy in her surroundings after tasting the excitement of cabarets and theatres.

VOLSTEAD NOT AFTER HONORS OF PRESIDENCY

Father of Prohibition Act Says He will Not Consider Reentering Politics.

Minneapolis, March 19.—(AP)—Andrew Volstead says he is proud of the law which made him famous but seeking the Presidency, to make certain that it will live on, would be distasteful to him.

Today a one-minute Presidential boom in his behalf was at, the victim of a direct statement from Volstead that no consideration would he consent to reenter politics even if the prohibition enforcement statute were at stake.

David L. McBride, of Minneapolis, superintendent of the Minnesota Anti-Saloon League, a friend of Volstead, started the boom. A minute later Volstead had spiked it.

McBride, taking cognizance of a verbal statement attributed to Secretary of War Hurley quoting him as expressing the opinion a "more liberal" stand on prohibition would be taken by the Republican (Continued on Page Four)

IRISH START REFORM PLAN

De Valera Puts Into Effect First of New Planks for Change in Government.

Dublin, Irish Free State, March 19.—(AP)—Eamon De Valera, new President of the Free State, had put into effect today the first of the planks of his announced platform of reform, by abolishing the public safety act of the Cosgrave regime.

The act, which included authorization for a secret military tribunal and virtual martial law in Ireland, was suspended last night by an order of President De Valera and the executive council.

Many prisoners who were convicted and sentenced under the act during the Cosgrave regime, an charges of plots to overthrow the government, were freed by De Valera, amid cheers from the crowds, shortly after he took office last week.

De Valera's move to effectuate the first of the four points on his announced program was almost simultaneous with a warning by Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer, that refusal to take the oath of allegiance to the king, or to discontinue Ireland's land annuity payments, two other points on De Valera's program, would cause the government "the gravest concern."

Such action, Mr. Chamberlain said in a speech at Manchester, "would undoubtedly revive the bitterness and differences (between Ireland and England) which it was hoped had been removed forever."

COTTON SPINNINGS

Washington, March 19.—(AP)—The cotton spinning industry was reported today by the Census Bureau to have operated during February at 92.5 per cent capacity, on a single shift basis, compared with 84.5 per cent during January this year and 87.2 per cent during February last year.

Spinning spindles in place February 29 totaled 32,323,310 of which 25,189,748 were active at some time during the month, with the average on a single shift basis, being 29,812,083 compared with 32,289,800; 25,013,750 and 27,289,811 for January this year and 33,225,144; 25,763,408 and 28,975,252 for February last year.

Plan Formed For Relief Of Nation's Rail System

Washington, March 19.—(AP)—Railway Credit Corporation, the President stated "recourse to the Reconstruction Corporation by the railroads will be much less than was originally thought."

Commenting upon the series of railway conferences, eliminated by one at the White House late yesterday with 15 outstanding railway chiefs, Mr. Hoover said "the coordination of programs and policies has been arrived at by the government and the railway agencies to effect" a meeting of the situation.

HARD FIGHT ON REVENUE BILL

House Leaders Fight Uphill Battle in Effort to Save Measure from Foes.

Washington, March 19.—(AP)—With broken ranks, the House leaders fought an uphill battle today to rescue the million dollar revenue bill from the determined and so far unsuccessful, attacks by foes of the sales tax.

The slow process of approving or amending each provision in the bill, line by line, was resumed by the House. At the start of the session only the first forty pages of (Continued on Page 4)

Police Make Radio Appeal to Prevent Mother Killing Herself and Daughter.

Los Angeles, March 19.—(AP)—Police of three counties have joined in an attempt to stay the hand of a woman who advised a Los Angeles officer she intended taking the lives of her daughter and herself.

Over the police radio, the Los Angeles officer pleaded last night with the mother, grief stricken over the loss of her husband and son, and facing poverty, to abandon her plan of death. Meanwhile, San Francisco and Santa Cruz officers sought the woman.

ABOUT TOWN

Every community should pull together for the best interest of the county at large, was the consensus of opinion at a meeting of the Kiwanis club at Fountain last night at which several Fountain people were present.

With everybody pulling together in behalf of the economic recovery of the district there is no reason in the world why conditions should not undergo a pronounced improvement in the near future, it was generally agreed.

This was the second Greenville organization that has met in Fountain within the last month, the Rotarians having met there several weeks ago.

The object of the out-of-town gatherings is to bring the people in closer contact with one another so that they may have more things in common to consider as they go about the business of improving the economic life of this, the greatest bright leaf producing county in the world.

Fountain is one of the most progressive small towns in the county and its people are constantly on the alert to do their bit toward increasing the opportunities for continued advancement.

Regardless of what else he may plant, the Pitt county grower has been called upon to give due attention to the cultivation of food crops during the coming season.

This suggestion was offered in the annual program of the Pitt County Department of Agriculture carried in the columns of this paper yesterday and the farmer that abides by it should come out much better at the end of the year.

The salvation of this great agricultural region this year was the bumper food crops produced in the various communities. Had it not been for this great surplus, it is impossible to estimate the suffering that would have resulted.

The beauty about planting of the things used at home is that growers have sufficient things to carry them through the year regardless of the way the main money crops sell. With existing low prices for cotton and tobacco the last two years, what in the world would have become of the thousands of tenant farmers had it not been for the bountiful food crops stored away by their landlords.

The Farm department realizes the importance of the food crop in the life of the community and it is for this reason it is attempting to attract more attention than anything the city has done in many a day.

Greenville's achievement in capturing the honor of the largest bright leaf tobacco market in the world is not only a source of much satisfaction to Pitt county people, but is drawing the attention of people in other sections.

The government figures have been published in hundreds of newspapers and periodicals throughout the country and people from other communities making their homes here have sent away newspaper clippings dealing with the accomplishment.

It is impossible to picture the far-reaching effects which the victory will have on the life of the city and community, but it may be said with a degree of certainty that it will attract more attention than anything the city has done in many a day.

Everybody will benefit because the town is largely dependent upon the expansion of the tobacco market and when that makes progress it is assured other forms of industry will go forward also.

Greenville tobaccoists have dreamed of becoming the largest market in the world for many a year and now they have realized it, they are just about the happiest set of people in the community.

Kitty Frew

By Jane Abbott

SYNOPSIS: A sudden proposal, hurried wedding, and brief honeymoon leave Kitty Frew bewildered living with her husband's parents, trying to learn sophistication overnight. Her husband, Garfield, refuses to work. His mother rents Kitty's lack of social placement, and Kitty runs away to Gar's half-brother and his friend Dorcas.

Chapter 16 WHILE KITTY WAITS

"You have to hang on to your self-respect or you're nowhere," Dorcas said finally, concisely. "Now it's up to you to see it through. But you don't have to plan anything tonight. Tomorrow will be time enough. Let's get to bed. I'll fix you on the couch here."

She sprang up and vigorously fell to work transforming the couch into a bed, folding covers, spreading sheets and blankets.

She tucked the covers about Kitty's shoulders and the touch of her hand was warming and reassuring. Like a weary child Kitty snuggled further down under the soft blankets. The embers of the fire made fingers of light across the darkened door. Through the half-open door of Dorcas' bedroom Kitty could see her moving back and forth. A blessed drowsiness enveloped her.

Tomorrow, they'd plan things out. Dorcas would help her. But tomorrow Gar would come for her, of course.

It was closing time at Stratton's department store, three weeks later. The last-minute shoppers had hurried off. The stock clerks were putting away the stock, working furiously against precious time.

No. 12 in the sportswear department was hanging tweed ensembles in a case. Her unaccustomed fingers made slow work of it and the other girls, folding sweaters and blouses, watched her and smiled slyly at one another. No. 12 was new and it was game to leave to a new one the job of hanging the suits away. It took longer.

A bright-eyed, blonde girl passing No. 12, hesitated. "Gee, don't bother so much. Lee's gone." She caught up an armful of the garments and swung them on to the bar of the case. "Rotten day, wasn't it?"

No. 12 knew Josie Price was trying to be friendly. Her tired face flushed gratefully. She agreed that it had been a rotten day.

"My feet used to hurt as if they had bolts on 'em. But you get used to it. Guess you get used to most anything unless it's Lee's tongue, after the ad bunch've taken her for a ride. Anyway, you don't have to mind that, do you? Didn't she take you into her office?"

Miss Lee, the head of the department, had taken No. 12 into her office while she checked over new stock. But just then No. 12 was too tired to wonder why Josie put the question, to read into it the jealousy with which each sales clerk observed any distinction paid to any one of them. No. 12 had not been at Stratton's long enough to lift her eyes toward the glamorous position of assistant buyer.

"Why, yes, she did," answered Kitty, tiredly.

"Oh, well, she's taken us all in, one time or another."

They took their wraps from their lockers. Josie jammed a tight little red hat down over her head, arranged crescents of blonde hair at each temple, applied powder to her nose and a dab of scarlet to her lips. She drew her coat tightly about her thin hips, holding it there with crossed arms.

"Taking the street car home?" Her eyes were pointed with curiosity.

"No. I walk home."

"Well, by my, Miss Brandon. See you tomorrow."

"Good night, Miss Price."

"Oh, make it Josie!" the friendly Josie called over a hunched shoulder.

Stratton's know No. 12 as Katherine Brandon. As she walked out into the chilled dusk, Kitty felt a little cheered by Josie's advances. Until today the girls in her department had let her alone. Her own fault, of course—she'd wanted to be friendly, but in her awkwardness she'd felt shy, and probably they'd taken that for standoffishness.

Josie was a leading spirit in the sportswear department. She was good-natured, sympathetic and ready with a joke, mimicked her customers when they departed, bantered with the floormen. Every morning she regaled her associates with her experiences of the evening before. Dates and boy-friends made the substance of her easy chatter. She was alert in her work, approaching shoppers with an attentiveness that held them and more often than not sold something to them. This and the fact that she had been in Stratton's for four years, beginning at the bundle desk gave her an unofficial seniority over the others. Kitty had recognized that seniority.

Thinking of Josie, she walked swiftly, liking the touch of the cool air against her tired face. Like Josie and the hundreds of others who had left Stratton's before her, she felt a sense of lightness with the day behind her. At this hour even the pain in her heart lifted a little.

Most of all she walked swiftly because she was going back to Ketchum street and Ketchum street meant to Dorcas' room with its lamp and its fire—Dorcas herself.

It had been three weeks since that night David had taken her to Dorcas, infinitely longer when she measured it in heartache. Gar had not tried to find her. He must know where she was—Dorcas knew and must have told him.

Dorcas had taken her to Stratton's. Dorcas knew the head of the personnel there. The wages Stratton's paid her gave her a meager independence. She was living in a small room on the same floor as Dorcas' apartment.

Kitty knew now that Dorcas owned the old house on Ketchum street. She knew that Mrs. Gentle to whom she paid her week's rent only acted as Dorcas' agent. David had told her about Mrs. Gentle. One day Dorcas had found her destitute, evicted with her two children from a basement apartment in the block and had taken her in.

"She can get on if someone just gives her a hand," David had quoted Dorcas as saying. And Mrs. Gentle, installed in the big kitchen of the old house, sleeping in what once was the dining room, had gotten on, just as Emil Schelling was getting on, Kitty herself.

Kitty had met others in Dorcas' apartment, to whom she knew Dorcas had given a hand. Young Mark Quinn who worked in a garage and wrote art classes at night, Leah Moore, a lawyer, thirty, cynical, brilliant of intellect, degrading sentiment, sneering at any ideals and yet somehow softening to humanness after an evening around Dorcas' fire; Max Ader, a sensitive-faced, dark-browed Jew, showing communism yet ardent himself. He was a violinist. It was Dorcas who had secured for him a place in the Palace Theatre orchestra. Perhaps Dorcas had helped them all, in one way or another, to regain their self-respect. In the ups and downs of everything each of them was doing, Dorcas showed a deep interest. But she would not tolerate whining. "Oh, stand up!" she'd cry impatiently at such times.

Kitty had heard her berate David. "You haven't done a bit of work today. I can tell by the hang of your head. Are you going to be content all your life with a column of dribble for the Times? Well, if you are, go on home." And David had gone, his face angry, slamming the door behind him.

Kitty had come to know, with some excitement, that David's work was the writing of a novel. But neither he nor Dorcas had talked about it except, now and then, to exchange some pertinent comment concerning it, or a question and a brief answer, or often, on Dorcas' part, a sharp rebuke. It seemed to be something between the two of them and Kitty sensed that Dorcas cared a great deal about it; she'd seen the look in her eyes when David went out, slamming the door behind him, a sorry, tender look.

Kitty, even in her most intimate moments with Dorcas never touched on her own discouragement. She could tell David how frightfully tired she got. And David said she could talk of Gar. David hadn't said anything about self-respect. David's sympathy was different from Dorcas'.

Four blocks from Stratton's was the Times building. As Kitty reached it David stepped from the wide entrance way and joined her, just as he met her nearly every evening, making the encounter seem to happen without planning. And always, on the instant of seeing him, tall and lanky, a little shabby, his hat poked down over his eyes, Kitty felt a little rush of gladness.

"Well, how did it go today?" "Oh, better." Her eyes clung to David's face. She slipped her hand through his arm.

"David, did you see him today?" "Hear anything?"

Where is Gar? In the next installment, on Monday, time is turned back to the day after Kitty's fight, and Pound breaks the news to Mrs. Frew.

Sentiment and Sentimentality George V. of England, once wrote: "Teach me to distinguish between sentiment and sentimentality, admiring the one and despising the other." And Dr. S. Parks Cadman recently defined sentiment as "that emotion displayed by men when affected by great ecstasy or sorrow"; he writes to the effect that "sentimentality is a mawkish "giving away" to maudlin sympathy and tears." Yet, who is to judge whether we are displaying sentiment or sentimentality? Of course, if a famous personage should come from a movie with bleary eyes and a red nose, exclaiming, "What acting! Such depth!"; all the sentimental world would uphold him in his "noble sentiment." And if a woman, when her husband dies, forbears to cry from the house-tops

Literary Club Meets.

Farmville, March 18.—Mrs. J. I. Morgan was hostess to the Farmville Literary Club on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, at her home on Church street, in which quantities of spring flowers were used with artistic effect.

Under the head of new business the milk campaign being waged throughout the state, was considered and the club voted to furnish milk for 2 school children for the remainder of the school term, and gave the privilege to Miss Tabitha DeVisconti, chairman of the Tuberculosis Fund, to act regarding a case brought to the attention of the club at this time.

The program was preceded by a study of correct pronunciation of words, conducted by the president, Miss Annie Perkins. The program under the topic of "The Westerner, Old and New," offered a variety in the interesting talks by Mrs. A. C. Hodges and Mrs. J. H. Harris; a review of "Lone Cowboy," the story of his own life, written by Will James, being given by the former and that of Plenty-Coup, chief of the Crow Indians, warrior and statesman by the latter.

After adjournment a salad course was served by the hostess assisted by her guests, Mrs. G. A. Rouse, Mrs. R. H. Knott, Mrs. G. M. Holden and Miss Edna Robinson.

Market Report

Cotton--Stocks--Grain

N. Y. COTTON

New York, March 19.—(AP)—Cotton opened easy today at a decline of 6 to 9 points on a renewal of yesterday's late selling movement and the weakness in cables. May sold at 6.56.

There was considerable covering and trade buying at the decline, but selling was active and more or less general. Evidently it included further liquidation as well as more active selling by the South and for European account. The decline extended to 8 3/4 for May and 7.04 for October, with the market showing net losses of about 8 to 11 points at the end of the first half hour.

Liverpool cables reported heavy general liquidation and said Manchester was unsettled with buyers cautious. The mount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance was estimated at 181,000 bales against 99,000 last year.

Futures closed very steady, 2 lower to 1 higher. Spot steady; midling 6.85.

GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, March 19.—(AP)—Fifty million dollars loss on farm produce in the hands of growers was estimated today as the result of this week's big fall in prices, including grains and cotton.

The extreme new drop in wheat values today was 3 1/2 cents a bushel, but the market scored a substantial recovery in the final hour. Best recoveries came after statements credited to Chairman Stone of the Federal Farm Board that his organization planned to sell its wheat only in noncompeting countries.

Wheat closed nervous 1 3/8 to 1 7/8 under yesterday's finish, corn 5/8 to 7/8 down, oats 1/8 to 1/2 off, and provisions showing 2 cents to 30 cents decline.

STOCK MARKET

New York, March 19.—(AP)—The stock market was caught between conflicting influences today and was unable to make headway in either direction.

The bitter fight in Congress over the tax measure, resulting in House approval of the old wartime surcharges on large incomes, brought considerable uneasiness to financial quarters. This was counterbalanced as a market factor, however, by President Hoover's reassuring statement on the railroads.

The market was inclined to heaviness at times, but there appeared to be enough week-end covering to absorb the selling, and most net changes were limited to small fractions. The market was barely steady at the close, with a few issues off a point or so, including U. S. Steel, American Telephone, International Harvester, Utilities Power and Light A, Santa Fe, Borden, and Lambert.

Kreuger & Toll was the outstanding feature of the session. News from Stockholm that the management had requested suspension of trading brought a flurry of selling, and the issue dropped to a low price of 1, and closed at 1 1/4, off 1-2. This issue traded in blocks of 5,000 to 50,000 shares, and accounted roughly for half the day's turnover in the stock market of around 80,000 shares.

The stock market held up relatively well, in the opinion of most brokerage quarters, in view of the slump in leading commodity markets following news of the Farm Board's plan to dispose of holdings abroad. Even the commodities met support, notably cotton which closed virtually unchanged, after an early sag.

The Kreuger & Toll situation was rather confusing. The request to suspend trading came at a time when Wall Street thought that the emergency was past. The stock exchange maintained complete silence on the matter, although it was intimated that some action might be taken next week.

Foreign exchanges were irregular, with fresh strength of the pound sterling notable. This currency ruled at 3.84 1/2 for cables, up about a cent. The Scandinavians were also firm.

VOLSTEAD IS NOT AFTER HONORS OF PRESIDENCY

The Minneapolis superintendent went on to say that prohibition groups could "muster a heavy vote," and mentioned Volstead as a candidate who would never waver in his support of prohibition.

Volstead, meanwhile, sat in his little office in the St. Paul federal building, poring over correspondence resting to his duties as legal adviser of the federal government's industrial alcohol permit division in Minnesota.

Then newspapermen telephoned him to ask if he would accept the nomination for President in event prohibitionists should offer it to him.

"I'm out of politics; I have been for some time and I intend to stay out," Volstead said. "I wouldn't be a candidate for President under any consideration, even as the representative of the drys."

Two important factors had entered the situation since the close of yesterday's session. Speaker Garner, issuing a statement appealing for passage of a revenue bill that would balance the 1933 budget, observed that at a time like this the actual method of raising the revenue became "inconsequential and insignificant," and that "how best to do it is debatable."

Anti-sales tax men pounced on the statement as a sign that the Democratic chieftain himself was ready to ditch the key point in the Ways and Means committee proposal. On the contrary, the measure's supporters contended he was emphasizing the unimportance—in relation to the budget crisis—of the issue which has whirled the House into glamorous dissention.

EXPECTS CHILD

(Continued from Page One) ficer Floyd Cullig has hoped Mrs. W. I. Brown would hear his radio plea. The story of Officer Cullig and the Brown family dates back to a day in February when the police received a letter, written by 12-year-old Harold Brown. It read: "Who is the police officer with the pleasant voice who always ends his calls with: 'That's all?' We are away up here near Boulder Creek in the Santa Cruz mountains, mother and my kid sister and I and we always feel safer when we hear him. I am only 12 years old, but my daddy is dead and I am all the man they have."

Cullig sent a picture of his family and himself to the lad. Yesterday he received a letter from Mrs. Brown, telling of the death of Harold. His only happiness, she wrote, was listening to his imaginary daddy—"Daddy Floyd." But poverty had come upon them and she was desperate. "I am taking my little girl, Dorothy Maybelle, to San Francisco Friday night. We will listen to you for the last time when and then we will end everything. Our bodies never will be washed up. Goodbye and God bless you."

MAN ARRESTED IN EFFORT TO ENTER NURSERY WINDOW

(Continued from Page One) and fled in an automobile. Later Johnson identified Malden as the man who held him up in the Johnson home last February 2 and escaped with about $3,000 in cash and jewelry. Johnson told police he was convinced the man who attempted to enter his nursery this morning sought to kidnap his youngest daughter.

Malden also was identified by F. M. Barr, who, with Mrs. Barr, was robbed of jewels valued at several thousand dollars early on the morning of January 6 at their home in Woodside Avenue, adjoining the Plainfield Country Club.
