CHANCELLOR BRUENING AND HIS CABINET RESIGN

HIGH FINALS TO COME TO END TONIGHT

Rev. W. A. Ryan Delivers Sermon Before Graduating Class Last Night.

Urging his hearers to find the true values of life and then to go out into the world and use them in behalf of improvement of mankind, Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street, Christian church, delivered the annual sermon before the graduating class of Greenville High School in the High School auditorium last night.

The service, one of the most inspirational in years, was attended by a crowd that packed the building to capacity. All churches of the city abandoned regular evening services on account of the commencement exercises and virtually all denominations were well represented in the large assemblage.

Commencement season, which opened last Thursday night with class day exercises at the Country Club, will come to a conclusion tonight with awarding of diplomas and the literary address by Dr. Malcolm McDermott, of the law department of Duke University, in the campus building of East Carolina Teachers College.

This morning at 9 o'clock in the high school auditorium seventh grade students were received into the high school. The exercises were marked by a delightful musical program under direction of Miss Ona Shindler, director of public school music, and Miss Eugenia Thomas, of the college music faculty. Another feature was the rendition of two numbers by the elementary school orchestra of fifty pieces under direction of Prof. Eugene Robeson.

Dr. Robt. H. Wright, president of East Carolina Teachers' College, addressed the incoming students, declaring that the city was spending huge sums of money for their education because it had faith in their ability to make the best of the opportunity. He urged his hearers to do their best and attempt to make the most of their advantages.

Last Friday evening the music class of Miss Eva Hodges gave a recital in the high school auditorium. The recital was largely attended and accurately portrayed the progress made in this field of music during the session.

J. H. Rose, superintendent of the city schools, presided over the service last night. The professional was played by the high school orchestra under direction of Prof. Robeson, followed by congregation singing of the hymn, "O, Worship the King."

The high school mixed chorus rendered "The Lord is My Shepherd," and responsive reading was conducted by Prof. Rose.

Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of the Presbyterian church made the opening prayer and conducted the Scripture reading. Miss Lucy James, one of the 79 young people to graduate from the school this year, delightfully rendered a solo number, "Teach Me to Pray."

Another number, "Gloria in Excelsis," by Mozart, followed the sermon, and the service closed with doxology and benediction by the speaker.

Mr. Ryan spoke on the subject, "You and Your World." His text was taken from the first verse of the fourth chapter of John, "Prove the spirits whether they be of God." Declaring that experience is valuable unless it teaches something worth having or being or doing, the speaker impressed upon the graduates the importance of their making the best of their contacts with life by seeing that they count for something, something that will help make the world a better and more beautiful place to live.

"You go out to discover your world," he said. "But you say, 'There is no longer any world to discover. The old frontiers have been crossed, boundaries have been marked; the seas have been charted and the land explored and mapped. From east to west and from pole to pole the earth is known and catalogued like so many specimens in a museum.'"

"It is not here that the greatest discoveries have been made," he declared.

CITY OBSERVES MEMORIAL DAY

Streets are Decorated With Flags and Post Office and Banks Closed for the Day.

With the American flag flying at half mast from flagpoles along the principal business streets, Greenville today joined the rest of the nation in observance of national Memorial Day.

Although banks and the postoffice were closed, business continued as usual and there were no exercises commemorating the occasion.

Members of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion visited the graves of departed veterans in various sections of the county yesterday afternoon and placed flowers on the last resting places of the dead heroes.

Poppies were sold under auspices of the Legion Auxiliary last Saturday. Scores of young women participated in the sales, and hundreds of the tiny flowers were sold to people desiring to perpetuate the memory of the fallen veterans and at the same time help disabled veterans and their families.

The day was observed by the closing of public buildings in other towns of the county, and exercises in keeping with the occasion were held.

PUT BRAKES ON RENO DIVORCES

Judges Call Halt To Those Attempting to Slip Through Court in One Day.

Reno, Nevada, May 30.—(AP)—Reno's judges have put the brakes on divorce seekers who attempt to slip through court in one day.

The "slow-down" order was issued in a joint statement by Judges B. F. Currier and Thomas F. Moran which announced the sun must set at least once between filing of suit and granting of decree. The judges declared the rule would not be waived under any consideration.

It was explained the rule was decided upon to eliminate "confusion" resulting from one-day procedure which the statement said frequently was a "nuisance." It will be effective Tuesday.

Court attaches, especially those employed in the clerk's office, welcomed the rule. They pointed out the granting of decrees immediately after suits were filed often ran things ahead of clerical ability to keep up with the procedure. And to add to the "confusion," the clerk's office was also the place where marriage licenses were not infrequently issued to parties who had filed suit, obtained a divorce and announced intention of trying again with a new mate, all in the course of half an hour.

BORAH TALKS WITH HOOVER

Prohibition Plank Is Discussed at Conference at the White House Today.

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—President Hoover today had the subject of the prohibition plank in the Republican platform up again in a discussion with Senator Borah, of Idaho.

Their talk was during and after breakfast at the White House. Borah, the leading campaigner for Hoover in 1928 and author of the dry plank in the party's platform that year, indicated after the parley that no change was contemplated in his plan to remain away from this year's national convention.

The Idahoan has drafted a prohibition plank but he is carefully guarding its text. This is the second time within ten days that Mr. Hoover has called him in.

Charges of Incendiarism and Dry Law Violation to Come Up Wednesday.

Charges of incendiarism and violation of the prohibition law, brought against G. H. Ballard, local contractor, here Friday night, were continued until Wednesday in the regular session of police court here this morning.

The action was taken on a request by Ballard's lawyers who stated that it would be impossible for the defendant to appear for trial before the designated date.

Ballard was arrested Saturday morning at 4 o'clock following a fire at the home of a neighbor, Will Carraway. Evidence was obtained, police said, which they believed would definitely connect Ballard with the fire.

Several gallons of wine were said to have been found by police in Ballard's home in a search immediately following the blaze. (Continued on Page Four)

LINDBERGH'S AT ENGLEWOOD

Sourland Estate Of Famous Flier Deserted Except For Household Staff.

Hopewell, N. J., May 30.—(AP)—Except for the household staff, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's Sourland mountain home was without occupants today.

The Lindberghs are staying at Englewood, N. J., with Mrs. Lindbergh's mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow. They will divide their time this summer between Englewood and the Morrow country place at North Haven, Maine.

State police telephones and teletype machines set up hurriedly on March 2, the day after the kidnapping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., in the Lindbergh garage, have been removed to the police training school at Wilburth, not far from Trenton.

The investigation of the kidnapping and murder continued although Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, officer in command, said there were no new developments.

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—Leaders of government observed Memorial day with the work demanded by extraordinary problems now besetting the nation.

While on the Arlington hills across the Potomac from Washington, and elsewhere through the country, warrior graves were decorated with flag and flower by remembering Pilgrims, President Hoover at his desk maintained watch on affairs of state.

While the words of patriotic orators rang out before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and echoed amid marble shafts and headstones, the Senate dealt in stern debate with the living and burdensome question of high taxation.

NAT BROWNE TO TRY AGAIN

Bromley Off on Flight from New York To California; Hausner Ready to Fly.

(By The Associated Press) The solitary skies smiled a dare today to two Texas rangers of the air.

Nat Browne, Texas cowboy turned flier, had an eye on the prize money that will go to the man who makes a successful flight from this country to Japan before June 1. He started yesterday from Seattle but was forced back when his oil line went bad. He was in the air about 71-2 hours.

Harold Bromley, another Texas with long distance flying ambitions had a long day's trans-continental flight ahead of him: from New York to Burbank, Calif. He took off in his oil burning, orange winged plane at 4:01 a. m. EST, from Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn.

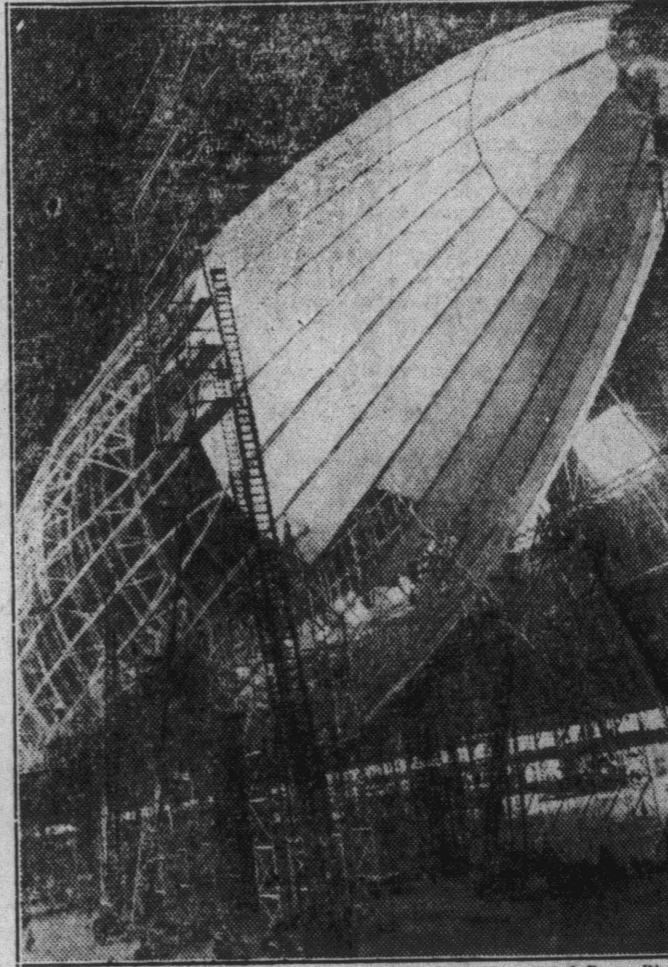

Also at Floyd Bennett Field was the plans of Stanislaus Hausner, amateur flier who was forced to turn back last week after starting a trans-Atlantic flight to London and Iceland. Hausner plans to try it again tomorrow.

In a daring take-off at dawn yesterday, Browne twice sacrificed gasoline to clear wires, brush and trees. The big plane skimmed over the brush and wires but grazed a tree. Undaunted, the New York aviator kept on until an oil line broke over Vancouver island and sprayed hot oil in his face and eyes, temporarily blinding him.

On his way back again he narrowly escaped death as he valved most of his load of gasoline and fought to gain altitude.

Today, Browne planned to get into the air with a "reasonable load." He placed this at about 500 (Continued on Page Four)

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—While the nation honored its soldier dead, a group of 300 who served in "17 and '18, some in khaki, some in overalls, stood in the sunshine today and renewed their vow they would stay here until Congress pays their bonus.

Their leader, Walter W. Waters, shouted to the first morning "assembly" of the Pacific Coast war veterans who arrived yesterday: "If anyone asks you why we are here, you tell them that all other methods having failed, we chose this (Continued on Page Four)

PUSH PLAN FOR HALF HOLIDAY

Petitions Seek Closing of Business Houses on Wednesday During Summer.

A movement was under way here today to bring about the closing of stores and business houses at the noon hour on Wednesdays during the month of June.

A petition was being circulated among business men this morning, and this will continue its rounds until all persons have been given an opportunity to sign.

The plan has been observed here for several years as a means of giving employees sufficient recreation during the hot summer months.

The majority of stores have joined the movement each year and it was expected the closing this year would be as general as any other season.

The closing enables employees and the business men themselves to visit resorts or give attention to other forms of diversion and hundreds took advantage of the opportunity in recent years.

It is one of the most direct ways, promoters say, to keep employees in good physical condition and arms them against the rush of the fall and winter months.

Textile Strikers Return to Work in S. Carolina

Columbia, S. C., May 30.—(AP)—Ending a two month's strike, textile workers went back to their jobs today at the Bath plant of the Loring Mills, in Aiken county. Chas. H. Gerald was told by George A. Franklin, manager of the three mills which had been shut down. Factories at Langley and Clearwater are to resume operations also, he said. The mills are operated by the Merchants & Manufacturers Corporation of New York.

Announcement was made May 17 of acceptance by the strikers of the terms of the owners. Between 1,500 and 2,000 workers were affected by the strike.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY HINDENBURG

Believed President Of Germany Leans Towards Nationalist as Cabinet Head.

Berlin, May 30.—(AP)—Chancellor Heinrich Brüning and the members of his cabinet resigned today and the resignations were accepted by President Paul von Hindenburg.

The stern, hard-fisted chancellor, combination of soldier and student, who in the little more than two years he has been in office has guided the German republic through unprecedented storms and a financial near collapse, finally lost an uphill fight against growing nationalism and dissatisfaction with government by emergency decrees.

He was forced at last to make way for a cabinet in which conservatives are likely to predominate and which, in turn, probably soon will have to give way to one dominated by the phenomenally rising national Socialist of the young Fascist leader, Adolf Hitler, who romped away with the recent state diet elections.

As far as the mind of President von Hindenburg was known today, he leans toward the appointment of a new chancellor from the Nationalist ranks, a cabinet whose first duty it will be to weather the coming Lausanne conference on war debts and reparations.

After the election of the delegation from Lausanne, the new cabinet will have to face the Reichstag, which will probably be dissolved after which new elections would have to be held which might well sweep Hitler into power.

President von Hindenburg announced that he intended to follow regular parliamentary procedure in forming a new cabinet. This means that he will first summon Paul Loebe, speaker of the Reichstag, and then in turn the leaders of the various parties in the order of their present Reichstag strength.

It was semi-officially announced that no personal differences existed between the President and Dr. Brüning and that the old Reichstag would write the retiring chancellor a letter expressing his appreciation and affection.

During his stay in East Prussia, from which he just returned, the President was so beset by friends who supported him in 1925 and who objected to the cabinet's plans for dividing Junker's estates to make room for small farms, that he felt he could not sign emergency decrees making those plans effective.

It also was reported that he objected to provisions in proposed emergency decrees which would have provided for further sacrifices in the form of "tax on persons employed" on the part of German's vast army of government job-holders.

Jacobs said he was badly injured by Lowry and two of his brothers. Pairer Jacobs, a brother of John, and his wife, Mae Jacobs, are held in accessories.

Rep. Abernethy Reported Better

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—Rep. Charles L. Abernethy, of North Carolina, was reported today by Dr. George W. Calver, capitol physician, to be improving from illness due to overwork.

He has returned to his hotel residence here after spending a period at Cape Lookout. N. C. Dr. Calver said he would be able to resume his duties at the capitol within a few days.

YOU CAN'T MARRY

By Julia Cleft-Addams

SYNOPSIS: Dr. Tallas is trying to blackmail George Townsend into a business secret. He knows that she is married to Eddie Townsend, though to keep her belief that Jenny is Mrs. Townsend. Garth Aveney, chum, from discharging her, she Matching's nephew, believes Jenny is married.

Chapter 37
WEDDING PRESENTS
"Water!" called Georgie. She shut the bag with a snap and straightened. A man nearby looked at her admiringly, at her high color and her bright, amber-gleaming eyes. She wondered what he would think if he knew that it was anger that made her look her best—not the petty anger of the last few days but that deep, proud, cold scorn that is like a sword.

"Water!" Then, as he came hurrying to the table: "Get me a taxi. And my bill." She added to Tallas without looking at him—"When we get to Rochester Gate, you shall see Mr. Matching alone, be sure of that. I shall interfere in any way. And I'll tell my cousin what you said about her manners; it will amuse her."

Even without looking at him she sensed his stupefaction. His color was leaden and his mouth slack with the shock.

"You must have been very sure that you would succeed," she said, almost idly. "I can't imagine why. Perhaps you've never known what it is to keep a job by sheer hard work—win it and hold it and love it!" She threw back her head and laughed. "Why, you poor fool, if I were a thousand times as selfish and greedy and ambitious as I am—a million times—a million, million times—I wouldn't break faith with my job!"

By a flicker in his gaze, she knew that someone was standing at her elbow. She thought it was the waiter and held out her hand for her bill. But—

"Wondered if there were any kind of difficulty, anywhere?" murmured the cool voice of Garth Aveney.

She swung round in her chair and looked up at him. He was always hard to read, but she was sure that he had not heard any part of the conversation. It was only that he had sensed trouble between her and the man who had half-risen from his chair on the opposite side of the table.

She laughed again. She had suddenly realized that there would be no need for Tallas to go to Rochester Gate.

"This gentleman," she said to Aveney, "has been trying to blackmail me because he has discovered that it was I and not my cousin Jenny who married Eddie Townsend last Saturday. He was threatening to go straight to Mr. Matching but it isn't necessary—is it?—now that you are here. I mean you can accept my resignation from the job here and now can't you? And of course, I'll see the Old Man tomorrow, after you have broken it to him. But I'm pretty certain that, secretly, he has known about it all the time."

"Look here," began Tallas, getting nimbly to his feet. "There's no need whatever for anyone to make a scene—"

The rest of the pronouncement was smothered in the scene that immediately ensued; for one man cannot throw another out of a city grill-room without making some slight commotion, some passing disturbance of the furniture and fitting. Still, Georgie was obliged to admit that the thing was neatly done. One moment Tallas was swaying at the table and the next, he was not near the table at all. And the rest of his exit was to match.

She sat quietly while she waited for Aveney to come back to her. She felt no emotion. She said to herself—"I have lost my job!" but not the same year.

The same applies to diphtheria and smallpox. The situation in all fields is better than it has been in years, but the people should not relax their effort to improve their condition.

"Happy, my girl?" In the circle of Eddie's arms Georgie stirred.

"Yes, I'm happy." She moved so that she could see the dreary outlook from the room in which they stood. "And I'm going to stay happy," she added, half to herself.

It didn't seem to mean anything. Probably the full pain of it would be with her by late morning. At the moment, she minded more the peering curiosity of the other diners. The man who had glanced so admiringly was getting off the chair he had mounted for a better view.

"And now," remarked Aveney, reappearing, quite collectively, at her side, "perhaps you'll just say it all at least twice more. I was never quick in the uptake. Especially the bit about—Jenny."

"Oh!" whispered Georgie.

It was as though a mist had cleared away between her and Garth Aveney. Behind his lazy courtesy, she had glimpsed something that she recognized as a deep, vital demand. In his eyes was a light that had been in Eddie's eyes—once. Before she had spilt love by pricing it so highly; before she had spilt marriage by haggling over it; before she had chosen clothes and glitter and good times instead of the little house, where she would make the curtains and Eddie would mow the lawn. . . . She dragged herself to her feet. She was trembling.

"Go and ask Jenny," she commanded. "She's at home, quite alone. She'll tell you—all you want to know. You see, I've got to go and find Eddie. Oh, how I wish I knew exactly where he is!"

"He's at the airfield," he got a mechanic's job there," said Aveney, after a staring pause. "I was talking to him only this afternoon and he said he'd be on overtime tonight. But look here, about your job, my uncle—"

"I've lost it. There are no two ways about that. And now I want to go and tell Eddie so. I can't talk to you about anything tonight."

self. "Let's go house-hunting, my dear."

"In a minute. Tell me again what the Old Man said when you rang him up last night on the phone!"

"He said—'A week off? For a honeymoon? Didn't I tell you never to let me hear of your getting married. Revell? Well, I can't break my rule, is that clear? You'll have to resign. No, no, you can't resign. No one else can ever hear what I say. I'll have to resign myself, and you can work for me privately and Matching House can mind its own business for once! Anyway, I guessed it was you Townsend married!'"

"And you said—"

"And I said—I would have liked it, sir, but I don't think it's fair to my husband. He doesn't want me to work after I'm married. And then he said he'd given me three years' salary for a wedding present. . . . So now we can go out into the sunshine, Ed, and you won't trouble about the traffic at all! Because now that I'm perfectly happy, you simply must be perfectly well!"

He looked at her, adoration in his eyes. And she stood there, tall and splendid and gallant, refusing to remember or to regret. All that she had held so high was thrust behind her for ever—albeit was poverty and love. A golden girl! (Copyright, Julia Cleft-Addams) THE END.

Gambler's Throw

Chapter 1
A GIRL AND A MACHINE GUN
Had Jerry Calhoun's old roadster not run out of gas that dark night on the Merrick road, the most astonishing mystery of the decade might have remained unsolved for years.

Men and women of wealth might have continued to surround themselves with armed guards whenever they ventured into the streets. The mysterious disappearances of prominent men and women might have continued; Nancy Wentworth that wholly adorable little musical comedy star, might still be mourned by Broadway theatregoers, while Jerry himself—but we had better begin at the beginning.

Everything had gone wrong at the field that afternoon. The decrepit biplane in which Jerry took venturesome passengers into the air at a dollar a minute had, like the traditional one horses hay, gone to pieces all at once. The engine missed on one entire bank of cylinders. The control wires leading to the flippers developed frayed spots. The oil pump ceased to function.

So, with this and that, it was well after midnight before Jerry and his helper succeeded in getting the plane in fit condition to stagger into the air the following morning. Then every bone had muscle aching with weariness, the pilot cranked up his 12-year-old roadster, ricocheted out of the field gate and, cut-out wide open, hurtled across Long Island toward New York, twenty miles away.

Midway between two sprawling hamlets on the Merrick road his roaring engine popped, gasped and stopped. The flyer cursed long and wholeheartedly. No need to look in the gas tank. He knew it was dry. Sheer carelessness, which must be paid for by a five mile walk back to the nearest all night filling station.

He had walked a hundred yards or so when he heard the vibration of humming motors. He looked back. Far down the road were the beady white eyes of two approaching cars. Standing still, he held up his hand, realizing that the chances of being picked up at this time of night were something less than slim. More than one good Samaritan had been robbed on highways in just such a manner.

He was gradually bathed in the blue-white incandescence of headlights. There was a sither of tires as a heavy limousine, its motor purring rhythmically, coasted to a stop. The second car swung into the center of the road and roared past.

A dome light in the rear compartment cast its warm glow upon a girl, wrapped in a flame colored evening cloak, who peered at the figure in the obscurity of the outer darkness. For a moment Jerry's heart thumped. He recognized her at once. It was Nancy Wentworth, the most beautiful and talented young star in the musical comedy firmament. He had seen her twice and in picture a thousand times, since that memorable first night two years ago when she had taken Broadway by storm.

"I'm sorry to have troubled you" he bowed, "but I ran out of gas back there. I'd be mighty grateful for a life to the nearest filling station."

Miss Wentworth surveyed him carefully. Reassured by his lean, tanned face and by the twinkle in his gray eyes, she unlatched the door and motioned for him to enter.

"Stop at the first gas station, Anthony," she called through the open partition. The chauffeur nodded, clicked the gears. The car swam ahead. It came to Jerry's mind that the girl lived somewhere out this way, commuting to and from the theatre in her big foreign car.

"Guess I'll run out of gas about this time every night," he grinned, glancing at her cameo-like profile, with its firm chin, its perfect mouth and its slightly and saucily upturned little nose.

Once again those wide brown eyes, as clear and level as a boy's flickered over him impersonally, as though to classify him among the various kinds of men who essayed wisecracks on short acquaintance. His towled hair was short and wavy. There was a faint smudge on his left cheek bone. His body, lounging easily in the thick upholstery, was rangy and broad shouldered, tapering to the waist like that of a boxer. His hands, large and capable looking, had been scoured with sand soap and water, but still bore traces of hours spent on balky machinery. No need to fear this man.

"I'd advise you to keep an extra can or two of gas hidden somewhere along the road," she retorted.

The limousine swayed suddenly. A sedan parked by the roadside with all lights extinguished, had suddenly appeared in the white beam of the headlights. It turned squarely across the highway and remained there, blocking the entire width of the concrete. The chauffeur, throwing his full weight on the brakes, brought the limousine to a screeching stop a scant half dozen feet away.

The doors of the darkened sedan swung open. Five men spilled out, a strangely cumbersome rifle. "A machine gun!" Jerry explained. He reached for the switch and snapped off the dome light. Just as his other hand touched the door latch, a powerful flashlight was focused full upon the chauffeur. Miss Wentworth and himself.

"Come on, get out there!" came a harsh voice.

A hot surge of rage swept over Jerry like a flash of fever. After two years of fighting and flying in the hell-swept skies of France to be lined up on a peaceful American road like a silly, cowardly sap!

He was reckless and violent by nature, but knowing the deadly prowess of a machine gun, he steeled himself to quiet. He stepped out of the car and helped the girl to descend. What a sport she was! As cool as if she were taking her first bow of the evening. Her wonderful eyes held no hint of laughter now. They were scornfully unafraid as he tried to look through the dazzling rays of the searchlight into the blackness which concealed the armed men.

Hands, silver white in the cone of brilliance, seized her and whisked her into darkness. A scream broke off in a whistling sob. Jerry.

Mere kidnapping tomorrow—and Jerry is tormented by a desire for revenge and for Nancy's rescue.

I am a candidate for Solicitor of the Recorder's Court. The duties of Solicitor, the prosecution of the criminal court docket, require a lawyer of some experience in the practice of law. I have had almost six years of experience in the practice of law.

Upon the resignation of Wm. S. Tyson as Solicitor, on February 1 of this year, out of seven applicants before the Board of Commissioners, I was unanimously appointed to fill out his unexpired term. I stand upon the record during the four months I have been Solicitor. If my conduct of the office during the four months I have served has been satisfactory, I earnestly solicit nomination and election for a full term.

If nominated and elected, I promise to continue to vigorously prosecute all cases on the docket, with fairness to all and partiality to none, and to so conduct the office as to merit the confidence thus placed in me.

I shall greatly appreciate your vote and your support.

ABOUT TOWN

Farmville people are to be congratulated upon the celebration staged last Friday in connection with observance of the town's 60th birthday anniversary.

The program was fully in keeping with the significance of the occasion and the hundreds of people who attended appreciated the spirit of cordiality in evidence on every side.

Farmville has a long record of achievement of which its people should be justly proud. It is one of the most progressive and thriving towns of the county, and has set a pace in the field of industry others have found it difficult to keep up with.

It has a long line of distinguished ancestors who figured prominently in the early life of the community and it was largely through their vision and foresight that the town now enjoys such distinction among progressive communities of the state.

Greenville is proud of the achievement of her sister city and hopes each year will witness progress as definite and uninterrupted as years of the past.

Greenville people bought generously of poppies offered for sale here last Saturday by the Auxiliary of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion. The sale of the flowers ushered in the annual observance of Memorial Day, an occasion set aside for honoring the World War dead.

Yesterday Legionnaires visited graves of their dead buddies in different sections of the county and placed wreaths on their last resting place as evidence of appreciation of their sacrifices for humanity.

Memorial Day is a day of utmost significance to the American people as it brings back to them a fresh reminder of the cost of war, and a firm determination that there will be no more fearful carnages if they can prevent it.

It is to be hoped this spirit will be engendered in the hearts of the people of all nations, for them and them alone will the principle for which our heroes died be fully realized.

Next Saturday Pitt county people will go to the polls to nominate candidates for various county offices, and it is hoped they will pause to consider the importance of their vote and let commonsense instead of sentiment guide them in the selection of their favorites.

Too much sentiment has marked elections in years gone by and conditions have brought us face to face with the fact that we must vote for the men we believe fully qualified and capable of handling the duties of the offices to which they aspire.

Pitt county has been as fortunate in elections as any other section of the state, and probably more so, but this should not cause us to relax our efforts to put into office the best representatives of the people to be obtained.

The ballot is a powerful force for public good when properly used, but it becomes a menace to progress when improperly handled. The people are urged to carefully consider the list of candidates appearing to office in the forthcoming contest and then see that they vote only for those representing the best in a spiritual, mental and physical way.

This is the season of typhoid fever and health authorities are urging the people to take every safeguard against the illness.

By attention to the kind of water we drink, sanitation and vaccination, the health department is of the opinion that fever should be held in check throughout the summer months.

In fact, if proper precautions should be taken each year by everybody the fever would almost entirely disappear in the course of a few years. This kind of illness has been reduced to no little extent in Pitt county and each year has shown a pronounced decrease. It is hoped to set an entirely new rec-lead or two pounds of calcium arsenate with 50 pounds of corn meal and dropping what you can hold of this mixture between the index finger and the thumb into the bud early in the morning when the bud is open the bud worm will feed on the meal and poison and cease to do damage to the tobacco plant.

Surveys in several Pitt county tobacco fields reveals that fields have as high 90 per cent infestations. The remedy is inexpensive and easily applied, and if used by all our farmers will prevent hundreds of thousands of dollars in loss in this section.

RACE GROWS MORE TENSE IN PIEDMONT

Charlotte, May 30.—(AP)—With six teams all within three games of the first place Winston-Salem Twins and several of them much closer, the Piedmont League today entered a week in which anything can happen to the club standings.

With High Point out of the running for the time being, the others set their eyes on the upper rungs of the ladder.

Charlotte was in good position to do some advancing, with a full week at home, including four games with Durham, in a slump last week and four more with Wilmington, likewise in a terrific slump, with a two-game series with Greensboro sandwiched in between.

Charlotte and Asheville led the league in almost every department last week. The Tourists won 5 to 1—scored 46 runs to 34 for their opponents, batted .378 and made but eight errors for a fielding average of .966. The Hornets won five and lost three, scored 51 runs against 32 for their opponents, batted .303 and led the league with a fielding average of .977 and 28 extra base hits—22 doubles, two triples and four home runs.

Winston-Salem won four out of six, but fell off badly in every department except fielding. Raleigh, winning half of its six games, was the only club between Asheville and Charlotte to reach the 300 mark in hitting. Greensboro won half of its six games and Wilmington won only two out of seven.

Everybody was scheduled to play doubleheaders today, Memorial Day.

Raleigh went to Wilmington, the Tourists to Greensboro and High Point to Winston-Salem, with Durham in Charlotte.

DAZZY VANCE FINALLY WINS A BALL GAME

By HERBERT W. BARKER Dazzy Vance finally has won himself a ball game from the Boston Braves, perhaps because Bill McChmie so far forgot himself as to start someone besides young Bob Brown against the veteran speedball artist of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The dazzer, beaten twice by the Braves with Brown pitching against him, finally broke the spell yesterday, winning a 3-2 decision.

After Bill Hallahan had pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-0 shutout victory in the opener, the Cincinnati Reds came back to win the nightcap, 3-2, the winning runs coming across in the 11th on two singles and a sacrifice.

In the American League the New York Yankees stretched their lead to three games by beating Washington, 11-8 as Babe Ruth hit his 14th home run.

Bob Welland outpitched three rivals as the Boston Red Sox whipped the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-1, in the first game but Rube Walberg shut them out with four hits in the second, 3-0.

Bill Dickey, Yankees—clouted triple and three singles, drove in four runs and scored two against Senators.

Meharder, Indians—stopped the Browns with seven hits to win 2-1.

John Moore, Cubs, and Glenn Spencer, Pirates—former collected four hits included two doubles in first game; latter held Cubs to six hits and blanked them in second.

Les Mallon and Don Hurst, Phillies—hit home runs to aid in defeat of Giants.

Dazzy Vance, Dodgers—held the Braves to three hits, fanned nine, and won, 3-2.

BORAH TALKS WITH HOOVER

(Continued from Page One) Ballard is also being held on a charge of the promiscuous firing of firearms. The charge was brought against him early last week, after a neighbor chased the defendant and fired a gun several times at his home.

Ballard has been more or less in the limelight because of his connection with the sensational highway robbery case involving his wife over a year ago. The case is still pending in Superior Court.

MAJORITY OF SENATORS PLEDGE THEMSELVES TO VOTE AGAINST SALES TAX

Lafayette said 16 Republicans signed his petition while Harrison reported 35 Democrats pledged in opposition.

A little earlier, the Senate had rejected a House tax of one fourth of one per cent on stock transfers.

Washington, May 30.—(AP)—The Senate upheld its finance committee today in eliminating the controversial House provision for a minimum tax rate of one-fourth of one per cent on stock transfers.

The minimum levy was then completely eliminated, leaving a flat tax of four cents a share on stocks.

Senator Reed (R., Pa.) advocate of the disputed 1.75 per cent manufacturer's sales tax, blocked the attempt of Senator Harrison (D., Miss.) for a vote of three o'clock.

Republican leaders advised the President at last night's White House conference on strategy that they felt the best way of spending the bill just now would be to leave the situation in their hand.

Meanwhile, scattered through the capital are other former soldiers from far and near whose numbers police estimate to be 1,000.

Police and veterans cooperated today in arranging for an indefinite stay. Army kitchens, sleeping barracks and other equipment were requisitioned.

No effort will be made to lobby in Congressional corridors until Thursday, Waters said. By then he hopes to have his charges made more presentable.

Waters read a letter from Representative Patman (D., Texas) bonus sponsor, commending their orderly conduct.

Absence of any plan for formal participation in the day's exercises by the President was unprecedented.

Charlotte, May 30.—(AP)—North Carolinians joined with the nation today in observing National Memorial Day.

It was a legal holiday, but many public offices remained open, although banks were closed.

PRICE, PRICE, PRICE has been the cry with many stores for nearly three years. Which will it be? Price, with little thought of quality... or quality at prices for the thrifty women, who want full measure for their invested dollar, are glad to pay.

We chose the second alternative as the ONLY sound method of store conduct. MCKAY'S has for many years stood for QUALITY merchandise, HONEST prices, TRUTHFUL advertising and we are continuing to follow these same sound principles.

We feel that present conditions offer the greatest opportunity in the history of merchandising... serving you with the same high quality merchandise as in the past, at today's new lower prices.

See this space again in Wednesday's paper. You will find our prices as low as elsewhere on quality merchandise.
