Bonus Forces Engage In Stormy Session At Huge Gathering At Uniontown

DIRECT FIRE AT WALTERS

Effort to Re-elect Former National Commander Draws Fire Works From Many Sources; Proposal Considered To Extend Membership To Non-Service Members; 21-Point Policy Before Convention

Uniontown, Pa., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Out of a stormy all-night session a committee carried today before the national convention of American bonus forces a proposal that non-service men be extended membership.

The suggestion was discussed for hours last night behind closed doors as committees tugged with drafts of the constitution and by-laws. Today's 21-point policy will be laid before the delegation for adoption.

The new B. E. F. committee suggested that the movement be nationwide and strictly non-partisan, but extremely active in behalf of the interest of those favorable to B. E. F. policies.

The principles projected will be for the relief of unemployed veterans throughout the country.

Much of the feeling aroused by yesterday's dramatic outburst over the proposal for re-election of former Commander Walters was still in evidence today.

Launch First State Institute of Government

Raleigh, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The first county chapter of the Institute of Government, organized at a meeting of representative citizens of the state last May at the University of North Carolina, will be launched here Friday.

Sponsors of the Wake county organization will aid in the establishment of similar chapters in other governmental units of the state. A half dozen are expected to be organized by November 1.

Says N. C. Apple Growers Should Get Good Prices

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 5.—(AP)—North Carolina apple growers should obtain satisfactory prices for their product this season as the crop is generally under normal, M. E. Gardner, head of the Department of Horticulture at N. C. State College, said today.

Over most of the apple country conditions were very adverse last spring and there has been insufficient rainfall over most of the region during the summer.

Gardner said his office had received a greater than usual number of inquiries from buyers in the last few days wanting to know the names of growers who had apples for sale.

Some of these requests, he said, were from large buyers of other States.

One Killed In Strike Disorder

Canby, Minn., Oct. 5.—(AP)—The fatality in the Minnesota farm holiday strike movement occurred today when Nordhal Peterson, 36-year-old farmer, was shot and killed by an unidentified person.

JAP FORCES ROUT CHINESE

Entire Army Of Gen. Li-Hi Chiang Killed In Engagement In Nonni River Section

Chancho, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Japanese troops operating in the Nonni section of the northern Manchurian valley were reported today to have wiped out the Chinese forces commanded by Li-Hi Chiang.

Chinese prisoners were reported to have escaped, but it was believed Li-Hi Chiang was killed in the engagement.

LEAF SALES LIGHT HERE

Half Million Pounds Offered for Sale On the Greenville Market Today.

Rainfall prevailing in this section of the country caused light sales on the local tobacco market yesterday and today.

The official report of sales made public today by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, showed the market sold yesterday 392,516 pounds of leaf for $40,789.34 at an average of $10.39 per hundred pounds.

Although the general average was not as high as the day before this was said to have resulted from increased offerings of inferior grades. Prices for better grades remained firm.

With about a half million pounds of leaf on the floors of the various warehouses today, it was believed sales would be completed by the early afternoon when warehouse floors will be cleared for probably heavier sales tomorrow.

Improved weather following the rain two weeks ago caused the marketing of tobacco to hit full stride and the local market registered several million pound days since that time.

Farmers are able to give more attention to the marketing of their crop now because the major part of the cotton picking program has been completed and more time can be given to grading of the bright leaf.

Calls for Bank Reports

Raleigh, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Gurney P. Hood today issued a call for the condition of all State banks as of the close of business Friday, September 30.

CONNOR SAYS EUROPE LOOKS TO AMERICA

University Professor Tells of Economic and Political Conditions Abroad.

Chapel Hill, Oct. 5.—The nations of Europe are looking to America to end the depression, according to R. D. W. Connor, head of the history department in the University of North Carolina, who gave some of his impressions in an interview with a reporter for the Daily Tar Heel, student newspaper at the university.

Professor Connor, who recently returned to Chapel Hill after spending a year in Europe in travel and research on the Kenan Foundation reports that in observing economic and political conditions in the Old World he discovered a strong interest in current events in America.

Europe is particularly interested in prohibition and the tariff question, he said.

Professor Connor spent a large portion of his time in the British Museum in search of historical data on the American Revolution.

Happening to be in England during the general elections at the time that the Labor government was superseded by the new National faction, Prof. Connor had ample time to observe the British political situation.

Although he thinks the English system of holding elections and campaigns is very efficient, he does not feel it would be any more desirable than that of America. There was no lack of the usual campaign "hoop" he implied.

"Labor parties spared no violence in breaking up political meetings not in sympathy with their ideas" he said. He was impressed with "the rapid increase of crime in England," the criminal element, which had limited itself to the Limehouse district, seemed to be stepping out more into the open by using automobiles in plying their trade, although "taking 'em for a ride" had not yet appeared as Americans know it.

NEW MENACE IN PORTO RICO

Disease Stalks in Path of Recent Hurricane Which Killed Many People

San Juan, Porto Rico, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Disease stalking in the path of the recent hurricane has raised a new menace in several districts of this country.

Doctors reported malaria and influenza spreading in LaQuila and other territories causing fear of an epidemic of typhoid.

Anti-typhoid inoculations have already begun and 50,000 tubes of serum have been ordered.

MOYE ELECTED BANK CASHIER

Greenville Man Chosen Cashier of Hood System Industrial Bank Here.

Joe Moyer was elected cashier of the Hood System Industrial Bank at a special meeting of the board of directors last night and entered upon his duties this morning.

He succeeds W. C. Braswell, who was removed following the alleged discovery of a shortage of $3,500 in his accounts. The shortage was revealed in a concise statement issued by the board of directors yesterday.

Mr. Moyer is the son of J. R. Moyer and has been connected with the banking business in this city and New York for a number of years. He is a member of one of the oldest and most socially prominent families of the community, and enters upon his duties with a splendid record of service to his credit.

Business Improvement Reported In The U. S.

Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Moderate improvement in business activities in August marked the rapid gain in the textile industry, it was reported today by the Commerce Department's October survey of business conditions.

Summarizing the business situation, the Department said "a number of major indicators moved up to more than the usual amount."

It continued: "The movement has been generated largely by the demand of the consumer's for goods as reported on page six."

AGED MINISTER DIES SUDDENLY

Funeral Services For Rev. W. L. Bilbro are Conducted from the Baptist Church.

Rev. W. L. Bilbro, Baptist minister who filled many pastorates in this part of the State, died suddenly yesterday afternoon while sitting in the Eldridge Drug Company on Dickinson Avenue in the western part of the city.

Mr. Bilbro had stopped at the store to converse with some friends when he was suddenly stricken with a heart attack and died almost instantly.

Funeral services were conducted from Immanuel Baptist Church this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock by Rev. W. H. Covert, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Kennedy, Baptist minister, of Ayden. The body was taken to Maysville for burial. (Continued on page six)

Pitt Defers Advertising 1931 Taxes Until Nov. 7

The Board of County Commissioners, meeting in special session at the courthouse here yesterday afternoon, postponed the advertising of 1931 taxes until November 7.

The question was to have come up for consideration at the regular meeting of the board the day before but was deferred because of the press of other business.

Extension of the time for settlement of delinquent taxes was granted in order to give taxpayers more time in which to realize from improvement of the economic condition in this community caused by the opening of the tobacco market and (Continued on Page Six)

ORDER PROBE NEW TYPE SHIP

Washington, D. C., Oct. 5.—(AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered an investigation of the legality of the latest type of American transportation. It issued an order for the study of a freight transportation company which tomorrow will begin transportation of an entire train by ship from New York to Havana.

Sea-Train, Incorporated, has built two ships capable of carrying one hundred cars each. The cars are placed in the hold and carried to their destination without being unscathed at a lower rate of cost of operation as compared with railroads and ordinary steamship lines.

COUNTY COURT STILL AT WORK

Only Few Cases Of a Heavy Docket Completed in Yesterday's Session.

About a half dozen cases were disposed of in the weekly session of county court here yesterday and work was continued today in the hope of clearing the docket of the thirty-odd cases awaiting consideration.

The heavy docket was caused by inability of the court to meet last week while civil court was in progress, but if work continues with usual speed today it was hoped to (Continued on Page Six)

FOIL EFFORT TO BREAK JAIL

Plans of White Prisoners to Escape from County Bastile Nipped in Bud.

An attempt of white occupants to break out of the county jail was nipped in the bud yesterday by Sheriff Whitehurst when he discovered a ventilator in the white compartment virtually sawed out and ready for wholesale delivery.

Although the sheriff was unable to lay a charge of attempted jail break to any of the occupants, he was keeping a keen lookout today for a backstab and other implements used in the escape plans.

A search was instituted for the saw immediately upon discovery of the plan, but it had evidently been secretly spirited away by the "liberty plotters" and could not be found.

An iron worker was sent to the jail this morning to repair the damage to the ventilator and so securely reinforce it that it would be a matter of impossibility for escape to be (Continued on Page Six)

Greensboro, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Officers and members of the North Carolina Grange began a two-day session here today with Lewis Tabbot, of Columbia, S. C., national master, presiding.

About three hundred members, including men and women, were present as the session got under way with a roll call of delegates, welcome address and the response.

The afternoon session will be marked by an address by W. A. Scott, of Haw River.

Committee reports, a memorial service and address will conclude the meeting.

Baltimore, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Rep. J. Charles Linthicum of Maryland, chairman of the House committee on foreign affairs, died here today.

Baltimore, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Representative J. Charles Linthicum, senior member of the Democratic party in the United States Congress, was in a serious condition today at the Maryland General Hospital, and physicians held little hope for his recovery.

He was taken to the hospital September 23 suffering from a carbuncle on the neck.

Mrs. Bettie E. Moseley, 85, died shortly after the noon hour today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Brown, on the western end of Dickinson Avenue.

Funeral services will be conducted from her late home tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock by Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and interment will be made in Kingston.

Mrs. Moseley was a native of Green county, but had been making (Continued on page six)

Urges Hunters To Play Fair

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 5.—(AP)—With the first of the hunting seasons already open and major seasons to follow within a few weeks, State conservation officials today urged all that go afield assume this "rule of sportsmen" if they would perpetuate their sport.

One of the most important steps in the State's game program, Col. J. W. Harrison, director said, is the development and maintenance of a "feeling of good will between hunters and farmers. The future of hunting depends to a large extent upon the farmer-sportsmen relationship."

Hunters were requested to observe property rights by obtaining permission before entering land belonging to another.

Caution was also urged to prevent the destruction of property and the breaking down of fences and accidental killing of livestock.

CUT COST OF HATCHERIES

Conservation Department Announces a 7 Per Cent Cut in Fisheries' Expenses.

Raleigh, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Reduction of the number of state fish hatchery employes by dispensing with the services of Guy G. Wallace of Roaring Gap, has cut the operating expenses of the entire inland fisheries division by approximately seven per cent, J. S. Hargett, assistant director of the Department of Conservation and Department said today.

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York, Oct. 5.—(AP)—There has been no depression in the society marriage market, Marie Courdet Brenning insists.

She speaks with some authority. During the past two and a half years, in business for herself, she has attended to the details of more than 530 marriages, many of them involving families of high prominence. For a couple of years before that she did the same work for two Fifth avenue "class" stores.

In the past year, her best, she decreed the spending of all money for a $20,000 wedding. This was her most expensive one.

Miss Brenning's business is to shop for the bride's trousseau, the ceremonial decorations, all incidentals and even the church and preacher in readiness. She will go further; supervise the clothing of the ushers, advise the groom and buy the honeymoon tickets.

One of her clients married a man who lives in California. Miss Brenning personally picked out a nice looking freight car to take all the wedding presents to the coast.

She profits on commissions from the shops. The people who employ her services pay her nothing.

Miss Brenning was born to the manner of society, daughter of an Austrian baron. Six years ago she found herself in financial straits. She went to work as an $18 a week sales girl. Before long she originated the bridal department for her store.

Her present activities are carried on in a swanky gray and green terrace establishment on Fifty-seventh street. Helen Anderson, a charming New England girl, is her assistant.

But not all of Miss Brenning's clients are of society, and not all of her weddings run into the thousands of dollars. She gives careful attention to the girl who has only a couple of hundred dollars behind her and has found that this, too, can prove profitable.

Cinderella Story.

A dreamy-eyed little stenographer bounced into the office, only to be awed by what she discovered. The girl began to weep with humiliation; said she had only $250 to spend on her trousseau and was afraid she had come to the wrong place.

Miss Brenning reassured her, and got together the very neatest outfit possible for the money. The steno was profuse in her gratitude, went her way with her man and Miss Brenning thought nothing more about it.

Not long thereafter Miss Brenning had a call from a down-town business man. He said her services had been described to him in such glowing terms that he wanted her to handle his daughter's wedding.

The poor little girl was the very rich man's stenographer, as the story book would put it. The $250 client's enthusiasm was responsible for Miss Brenning getting commissions on an $11,000 expenditure.

Versatile Leslie Howard

Leslie Howard, the actor, has a broad education in the arts. Not an uncommon thing, but still worth speaking of. He draws passably well, is fond of good music and does some writing. He is skilled in the use of the camera, and is a linguist. Speaks French, German and English as it is spoken over there. Was born in England.

He says he isn't so fond of acting and would rather do something else—preferably writing. His friends advise him to stick to acting, pointing out that four New York critics have called him the best actor on the American stage.

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE

Viewing the campaign in its larger, long-time aspects, the student of politics will be much interested in some remarks made by the Hon. James A. Farley as he arrived, flushed and smiling, at the New York terminus of his swing through the West.

"There is now in process of creation a great liberal party, made up of persons of all shades of political belief," said the Democratic National Chairman. "We are making political history these days under the leadership of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Of course substantially the same thing has been said on numerous other occasions when nothing came of it. But in this instance the Democratic chairman cited chapter and verse to show on what his expectations were based; and whether his conclusions were justified or not, he at least was describing a set of circumstances full of dramatic interest.

Making Political History

If for no other reason than the gigantic scale on which it was projected, the Democratic effort to break across party lines has made political history.

Governor Roosevelt allotted three full weeks to his Western trip at a crowded period of the campaign, and in every speech he invited insurgent Republicans to his standard.

In California he praised publicly the insurgent Republican Senator, Hiram Johnson, and was answered by a statement of appreciation in which Johnson contrasted Roosevelt with Hoover.

In New Mexico he invited to the platform with him the Republican, insurgent Senator, Bronson Cutting. In Nebraska he was introduced by the insurgent Republican Senator, George W. Norris, and the expressions of regard and confidence were mutual.

During most of this time Chairman Farley let other problems accumulate on his desk in New York, while he joined in the Western Western quest. It was at the conclusion of an extraordinary series of conferences that the chairman returned Eastward announcing that birth of "a great liberal party" was at hand.

G. O. P. Side of It

One of those who promptly predicted that nothing would come of it all was the Hon. Everett Sanders, Republican National Chairman.

On the day Farley returned, Sanders gave out his own version of what was taking place in the West. His philosophy was in interesting contrast to that of the Democratic chairman, for he clung tenaciously to the tenet that Republicans will be Republicans on election day.

"They are forgetting how terribly Republican those States really are," said Sanders.

Time and election returns will tell who is correct, but regardless of the outcome, history will record for 1932 the most far-flung attempt of contemporary times to realize the old dream of political realignment.

Depends on Circumstances

As to the future course of the experiment, everything must depend on circumstances.

If Governor Roosevelt is defeated, will he or anyone else be able soon to attain the goal of "liberal party" leadership which Farley now thinks is so near?

If Governor Roosevelt is elected, will he be able to consolidate into a permanent working organization the various elements which helped to bring him victory?

These are questions which belong to the next immediate phase of the evolution of party politics.

PHYSICALLY FIT AVIATORS FOUND SAFEST PILOTS

Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Fliers who are physically normal are found by the government to be the safest pilots.

Analyzing 4,227 airplane accidents the medical section of the Commerce Department's aeronautics branch concluded that physically defective fliers contributed 40 per cent more accidents than could be expected for their number.

It was found that 11.9 per cent of licensed pilots of all grades are physically defective and 88.1 per cent are physically normal. The former were responsible for 17 per cent of all accidents.

MARKET REPORT

Sell Your Tobacco in Greenville

Greenville is leading all Eastern Carolina markets in pounds sold and prices paid for every grade of tobacco. Competition has never been keener, and some of the markets are so desperate the warehouses are offering to haul your tobacco free with their trucks, if you will only take it to their warehouses. Every thinking farmer knows that this practice of hauling tobacco free is dangerous and that by doing so, they cannot get what rightfully belongs to them. There is bound to be trickery when one offers something for nothing. We are asking you not to be misled by these markets in this way. Look them all over and you will be convinced Greenville is higher on every grade, and the place to sell your tobacco for more money. If they haul your tobacco free, whether you know it or not, you yourself are paying the bill, and paying dearly.

It is very important that you keep your tobacco dry during this soft weather. Many farmers are tying their tips without grading. Let us urge that you separate your green, black and reddish-brown leaves from your bright tobacco, and market it in the best possible condition.

Now that most of the cotton is picked, attention will be turned to marketing the tobacco. A great deal of tobacco reaches the market after sale time. Let us suggest that you bring it in earlier in order to avoid any rush.

JOHNSTON—McGINNIS Ceremony On Tuesday Was Quiet Event.

Miss Alma Christine McGinnis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Justus McGinnis, yesterday became the bride of James McGowan Johnston, second son of Mrs. Franklin Vines Johnston and the late Mr. Johnston, in the presence of the immediate families. The ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock before an altar, banked with call lilies and ferns, in the bride's home on East Eighth street, by the Rev. E. W. Hillman, pastor of the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

Later in the day, Mr. Johnston and his bride left for New York City, where they will make their home.

The bride's gown was of French blue transparent velvet. Featuring empire lines, the model had large puffed sleeves ending at the elbow. She carried Biarritz roses and lilies-of-the-valley. For traveling she wore a wood's green suit, trimmed with gray fox fur, with accessories in green suede.

The bride is a graduate of the Peabody Demonstration School, on exclusive secondary school of Nashville, Tenn., and East Carolina Teachers College. Mr. Johnston is a graduate of the Greenville high school, and for two years was a special student at the Phoenix Art Institute in New York City. He is a free lance commercial artist.

Mrs. Warren Club Hostess.
Yesterday afternoon at her home on West Fourth street, Mrs. B. S. Warren was hostess at a delightful meeting of her bridge club.

The home was very attractive with a variety of colorful fall flowers.

For high score, Mrs. H. L. Hodges was given a compact. Mrs. Florence Markel of Richmond, Va., was remembered with bridge cards.

The hostess served a delectable salad course with coffee.

FREE-CUT SYSTEM DISCONTINUED AT COLLEGE
The "free-cut" system has been discontinued at East Carolina Teachers College and there will be no more excused absences.

President Wright made the following announcement in chapel on Tuesday morning, October 4:

"At a recent meeting of the faculty it was decided not to continue the system of excused absences from classes. The system was being abused by the students to the extent that the faculty deemed it wise to take this action.

"Students who miss class work for any cause, sickness, or absence from the campus, will see their teachers and arrange for making up the work lost by said absence. This does not change any other rule of the college. For example, week-end permits will be given in the future as they have been heretofore."

In the past, students were excused from a certain number of class-cuts each term. In the chapel talk, President Wright pointed out that a number of other colleges which had had the same system of "free cuts" had abandoned the practice and returned to what is usually called the "no-cut" system, as it has been found that the tendency is for students to abuse the privilege by making a practice of taking the maximum number allowed.

In making this change there will be no real hardship imposed upon the students when there is genuine necessity for absence or some excellent reason. For most of the years in the history of the college this matter was handled satisfactorily, but as the new system was being used in many colleges, it was tried out here, and has merely not been as satisfactory in the actual working out as the former system.

PRAYER SERVICE AT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Hints on Contract Bridge Up-to-Date

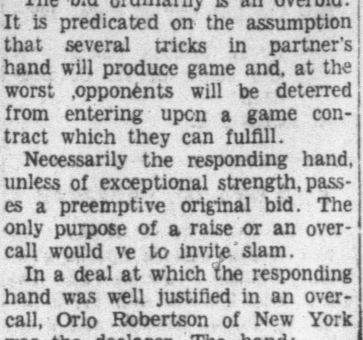

By TOM O'NEIL

It takes a hand of great strength to overcall or raise a partner's preemptive game bid. Usually such an original bid is made on a hand of great length in one suit, a hand which would be useless with any other suit as trump or at no trump.

The bid ordinarily is an overbid. It is predicated on the assumption that several tricks in partner's hand will produce game and, at the worst, opponents will be deterred from entering upon a game contract which they can fulfill.

Necessarily the responding hand, unless of exceptional strength, passes a preemptive original bid. The only purpose of a raise or an overcall would be to invite slam.

In a deal at which the responding hand was well justified in an overcall, Orlo Robertson of New York was the declarer. The hand:

Robertson opened the auction with an offer of four hearts. West passed and north bid four no trump. North had a biddable club suit, but mention of it would hardly please the general strength of the hand other than in hearts.

In addition it would have taken five clubs to overcall, East passed, and south, certain of no losses in hearts because of the seven tops, went to six hearts.

The slam can be made easily on any opening. A slam also is possible in no trump, but the count would not be so large in view of the heart honors. In addition a no trump slam bid would have a plunge in contrast to reasonable certainty about hearts.

Praises Work of University

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 5.—"North Carolina has made more progress in the last twenty-five years than any other Southern State, and I believe 60 to 70 per cent of that progress has been due to the University of North Carolina," Ellory Sedwick, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, said in an interview after spending a week in the village.

Mr. Sedwick came to Chapel Hill to enter a son, Cabot Sedwick, in the University. He came to stay just a couple of days. Instead he stayed a week and expressed the desire to stay much longer.

"I like the atmosphere of Chapel Hill, its wholesome university community," he said before leaving yesterday. "It has the simplicity and naturalness of Amherst."

Mr. Sedwick wanted it understood that he was breaking a tradition in

KOCH TELLS OF PLAYMAKERS GROWTH IN 15-YEAR PERIOD

SSC Chapel ar hrdiau ardu auau Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 5.—The trials and struggles that have brought the Carolina Playmakers from oblivion to the pinnacle of fame were described here last night by the Playmaker chief, Prof. Frederick H. Koch, who gave an illustrated lecture to acquaint the newcomers at the University with the work of the Playmakers.

"I thought I was through with pioneering when I left North Dakota to come to Chapel Hill fifteen years ago," Professor Koch said. He then described the meagre dramatic facilities he found here.

One play a year was presented. A mad-for-the-minute platform in Gerrard Hall, extending out over the front seats, curtained off by some flimsy cloth on a wire, served for the acting stage. Actors made up in the Y. M. C. A. and entered the stage through a window.

Isn't it about time you had some Good clothes?

It was fun for a while to wear your old clothes, but honestly now, aren't you sick to death of them? Aren't you longing to go out and spend some real money—on something good? Once you've known the feel of frocks that really fit you, once you've cared whether hems were rolled by hand or sewn by machine, once you've worn and loved beautiful fabrics—can you ever really give them up? These things are in the blood—generations of training have taught you to prize them—can they be so lightly cast aside? Of course not. Of course not.

So we say "Obey that impulse. Go on a Quality spree!" Spend more than you have in months, and less than you will ever again in your lifetime (in all probability) on the GOOD THINGS you crave. We know you want them and we have them here for you.

ABOUT TOWN

The failure of the attempt to end the mill strike at Rockingham is to be deplored with representatives of various business of the city behind the peace movement something of a favorable nature may be expected soon.

A serious situation has arisen from the walkout of workers several weeks ago and unless an agreement is reached in the near future it is impossible to contemplate the seriousness of the condition growing out of idleness of the workers. The time for strikes is over. Mill owners should realize the fact as well as the strikers who are doing everything in their power to effect a settlement. However, they insist that they be given living wages and probably will cling to this stand until they are satisfied they are getting a square deal.

Additional cloth has been received in this city for use among the poor school children during the winter months. The cloth will be made into garments for the children by the various relief agencies of the county and should do much toward relieving the general attendance of county schools during the winter. The cloth is being distributed through the local organization of the Red Cross and is one of the far-reaching attempts being made by that organization to improve conditions among the poor at that season of the year when suffering is most pronounced.

This movement, in addition to the regular relief activities, should do much to improve the situation in this county during the winter and will relieve much of the suffering prevailing among people not touched directly by relief committees last year.

Greenville continues to lead other markets of the bright leaf belt from the standpoint of poundage, and it is the hope of those engaged in the industry that the splendid record may be maintained during the rest of the season.

Pitt county has for a long time been the largest producer of bright leaf of any county in the world, and while the crop is reduced practically fifty per cent this year it is believed the market will be able to keep pace with other sales centers where the same situation prevails. Continued expansion in market facilities has enabled the marketmen to speed up sales until they are able to handle 1,500,000 pounds of tobacco daily, enabling the farmer to sell his offerings and return home the same day. This service is far superior to that of the smaller markets and has been a contributing factor in the market's steady climb to the highest position in the bright leaf belt.

This is Fire Prevention Week in North Carolina and the governor has joined the leaders in the fire prevention movement to awaken the people to the importance of doing their bit toward relieving the heavy toll taken by the fire demon each year.

While Greenville has not been affected by any fire of note this year, it suffered tremendously last year. The loss last year was several times that of the season before because of the fact that fire destroyed two large warehouses greatly increasing the annual loss. Firemen are forever on the alert to cut down damage by fire but their efforts go for nothing if the people they are employed to serve do not help them by conforming to certain precautions as prescribed by fire prevention organizations.

This is a week of the utmost importance to the people of the city and community and it is hoped they will do their best to help the firemen in their effort to save life and property.

This is the season of the year when everybody is training his attention to the buying of goods for the winter, and it is hoped they will give due attention to the home mer-

Nothing Venture

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH

SYNOPSIS: Nan Weare, terror-stricken at the possibility that Jervis, her missing husband, has met foul play, begs help from his former fiancée, Rosamund Carew Rosamund contemptuously denies Nan. All trails have petered out, yet Jervis' friend Ferdinand Francis and Nan doggedly continue their investigation.

Chapter 39

MORE ABOUT ALIBIS

"Well?" said Ferdinand as they turned out of the gate.

"I don't know," said Nan. "Don't talk to me for a little." They drove in silence along the cliff road. It was very hot, but there was a breeze from the sea. When they turned inland, they lost it.

"What don't you know?" said Ferdinand after a while. "In my opinion it's always better to tell what you know, because that's the sort of stuff that's likely to go sour on you."

"I'm going to tell you, said Nan. "I'm only sorting it out."

"Well, I like to know things—and when there isn't anything to know, I'm good at guessing. Did you get anything out of the beautiful lady? Is she still taking too much?"

"Yes, she is."

"Now that's very interesting. I'd like to know what she talked about."

"She tried to make me angry," said Nan. "She tried to make me jealous. And then she tried to frighten me."

"That's not very original. Will you tell me what she said?"

Nan looked at the dusty hedge-row sliding past. A little straggle had caught on the lowest branch of an overhanging thorn-tree. The shining stalks held the sun as Rosamund's hair had held it.

"What she said doesn't matter. She wanted to make me think that there was—someone Jervis might be with." She paused, and added: "Some woman. I told her she did not believe what she was trying to make me believe."

"Then, I think, she was angry—but I'm not sure if she was really angry. She turned right round and tried to make me believe that Jervis was drowned."

"What did she say?" said Ferdinand quickly.

Nan forced her voice. "She said he'd had—cramp. She said he'd had it—when he was bathing—with her. She said—she'd had to help him in."

"I wish she'd said it to me!"

"Why?" said Nan.

"So I could tell whether she was lying. I've had a lot of practice telling whether people are lying."

"Oh, it wasn't true," said Nan. "Sure?"

She gave a half impatient nod.

"Yes—quite sure. I'm not worried about that—I'm worried about why she said it—I'm worried about why she said any of it."

Ferdinand looked at her.

"You're frightened to death. Can't you tell me about it?"

He had slowed the car to a bare ten miles an hour. She put her hand to her cheek and pressed it there.

"If she knows—anything—" She paused.

"Yes!" said Ferdinand encouragingly.

"She might—want—" She stopped, flung her hand down in her lap, and said in a choked voice, "I can't!"

"Try!"

"If they—if she—knew—where he was—" She broke off again. "They might want him to do something—they might let him go if he gave them enough money—but if he wouldn't—they could say—they had always thought—he was—drowned."

She faced round on Ferdinand and said passionately: "I'm wicked to think a thing like that! Tell me I'm wicked, P. F. Tell me it couldn't be true!"

"Now when you say 'they?'" said Ferdinand.

"Leonard," said Nan—"Robert Leonard and Rosamund."

"Robert has got a topping alibi. It's a good seven miles from Croyston to Weare, and his car was in Jeremiah Brown's garage with the cylinder head off. I like to know about things, so I collected that."

"He could hire a car."

"Not in Croyston."

"He might have borrowed one," said Nan.

"Whom would he borrow it from? Who's he going to give himself away to by borrowing their car to do the meanest sort of criminal job?"

"Rosamund," said Nan.

Ferdinand darted a sideways glance at her. He saw a pale, composed profile, lips colorless but firm, hands folded. He nodded. The car was moving slowly between the high banks of a lane.

"She certainly was alone in the house—Tetterleys away, servants in a separate wing. But then, I did a bit of searching round when you were paying your call. I had a nice talk with the second chauffeur. I said I thought I'd seen Miss Rosamund's car in Croyston. Tuesday night, and he said she hadn't been out. He struck to that, and what's more, he said he could prove it. "For one thing, he'd cleaned the car that afternoon, and it certainly hadn't been out in the dust; and for another, he'd filled it up with oil and gasoline, and next day when Miss Carew went out he had a look at the gauge, and full up she was."

"Perhaps he wasn't telling the truth," said Nan.

"In my opinion he was."

"It isn't difficult to fill up again," said Nan—"and I expect Rosamund knows how to clean in a car. Don't you see—" she lifted one hand and struck the other with it—"don't you see that that clean car and that full gasoline tank were her alibi? You haven't got an alibi for Tuesday night, and neither have I. Why have she and Robert Leonard got such beautiful alibis?"

Ferdinand drove on without speaking.

"You think she got Jervis to come away with her?"

"I don't know. She could have brought Robert Leonard from Croyston."

"And when she'd brought him what was he going to do? Jervis didn't like either of them well enough to go promenadeing around with them in the middle of the night. No—that's something I don't see."

"He's gone," said Nan. "Someone got him to go."

Ferdinand did not answer this at all. In spite of himself he was thinking of a warm, dark sea, with the moon going down in the west and the first gold flame of the dawn brightening the east. He could see the water and a black moving speck which was Jervis' head. And then the speck was gone, and he could only see the wide grey sweep of the water.

The day dragged on its way, and with every hour it grew hotter. By 5 o'clock the sun had almost disappeared behind a thick haze. It was as if the very fierceness and heat of its burning had sent out a shrouding veil of smoke. Under it the sea was oily and lead-colored.

Ferdinand had gone into Croyston. He had made up his mind that if Jervis had neither written nor returned by next morning, ethey must go to the police. Beneath the surface of his thoughts there floated an uneasy doubt as to whether they had not already delayed too long.

Nan stayed in the house. She had the feeling that something might happen at any moment. Impossible to move from the spot which might be the scene of this happening.

She staved in the library. There was a telephone there, and she was waiting for the bell to ring. It might ring now, while she was over by the window, or now when she had turned and almost reached the door. A few quick steps would bring her close enough to snatch up the receiver, and then she would hear Jervis' voice.

She never got beyond that first, sound of his voice. He had not to explain why he had gone away; he had only to be there—a living voice. It did not matter at all what the voice said—no, it didn't matter at all.

She paced the room with an even step. One might not have guessed, watching her, that every step, every moment ticked out by the clock on the mantel, was torture to her.

For Nan, way inside herself, knew Jervis would have returned if he could.

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 5.—(AP)—There is little rhyme or reason in the story of Preston S. Foster's evolution from a lad of many jobs into a screen actor, unless you consider a grand opera complex its motivating impulse.

Openings for grand opera not being too common vegetables in the garden of everyday opportunity, Foster did considerable drifting and was almost "fired into pictures."

Office in the course of his perambulatory employments, he was given letters of introduction to Broadway producers by a film friend who had aroused his enthusiasm for movies.

"I just never got around to using them," he says—which is explanation enough.

Looking back over his career he can tell you about the job in a phonograph company at Camden, N. J., where he packed small models in excelsior and quit because the dust got into his nostrils, doing no good to his voice or his operatic ambitions. The next four years he spent in a shipbuilding concern in the same town, leaving by request, for some reason he now has forgotten.

Back in his home town of Pittman, N. J., he joined the choir, which was more like what he wanted to do, but not enough like it. He thought he might like to try the show business, so left for New York.

A $30-a-week job in a male quartet in one show failed to satisfy him and he went to Philadelphia, worked at soliciting ads for a newspaper, became an automobile salesman, started a novelty advertising firm of his own which folded in six weeks, drove a motor bus for a month, sold pianos, went back to a newspaper to sell advertising only to be fired for non-production.

Broke, Preston went back to Pittman and worked in a cold storage plant, moving 300-pound cakes of ice. He saved enough to get back to Philadelphia and his old advertising job, and made good. He kept on studying music and sang over the first radio station in Philadelphia, and before long was in the chorus in grand opera.

Turkish tobacco sometimes runs hundreds of little leaves to the pound. In cigarettes it is used much as seasoning is in food, for flavor and better taste.

You know that seasoning has to be used right... just enough of it, not too much.

Chesterfield puts in just the right amount of Turkish tobacco—the best kinds—Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun. These are not merely blended, but cross-blended with ripe, mellow Domestic tobaccos.

Enough Turkish, not too much—that's one reason why Chesterfields taste better—why they have a delicacy of aroma you do not find in other cigarettes.

UNIVERSITY OF N. C. BOASTS OF TACKLE POWER

Chapel Hill, Oct. 3.—(AP)—The continued good work of Jim Tatum and Bill Collins has supplied extra reserve strength at tackle to a Carolina line that has proved itself quite adequate in two previous games, but the fact remains that the Tar Heel forwards will have a tough job in Knoxville Saturday when they set out to stop Beatty Feathers, Breezy Wynn, Harvey Robinson, Deke Brackett and Tennessee's other big guns.

These veteran-stars shelled Mississippi's lines for a 33-0 victory last Saturday, and the Tar Heels remember enough from last year's 7-0 loss to Tennessee to know how they can all run and block, and how Feathers and Robinson can pass and punt.

ATTRACTIONS FOR FOOTBALL GAME, AYDEN

Ayden, Oct. 5.—Besides the thrills that will be provided when the Ayden "tornadoes" meet the Beaufort "Sea Dogs" here Saturday afternoon, special attractions will be in vogue.

The local athletic association will have a unique Hoover Cart in the parade which is scheduled to take place at 11 a. m.

The Greenville band will furnish music during the game, which is expected to attract 1,000 or more ardent gridiron fans.

SPORT SLANTS
By ALAN GOULD

Old Man Stag leads his Chicago Maroons back East early this October for a visit to his alma mater, Yale, in return for the 27-0 trouncing that little Albie Booth helped administer to them last season at the Midway.

The dean of American football coaches, or at least the co-dean if he may be obliged to share the distinction with Pop Warner, has been a long time moving his boys back among the top-flight teams on the basis of performances.

They may have been getting a lot out of the game, benefiting themselves for the future and all that sort of thing, but they have not been scoring many touchdowns since John Thomas and "Five Yards" McCarty left Chicago.

There were sufficient signs of an upward trend for the Maroon last fall, however, to justify the hope of making a much better showing against the Elis this year.

Chicago was strong enough at the close of the 1931 campaign to beat Illinois and lose a couple of top-notch decisions to the powerful Purdue and Wisconsin outfits.

The Old Man can "take it," so far as Yale is concerned, if necessary, but he would like nothing better than to direct a winning team in the bowl at New Haven.

Knowing this, "his boys" will be primed to give the Elis everything they can produce in the way of gridiron stunts.

Grefe Iowa State Hope Iowa State's football comeback under the coaching of George Veenker, credited with checking the Cyclones' two-year losing streak in 1929-1930, depends considerably upon the ability of Dick Grefe to shake himself loose for the sort of runs that made his a conspicuous Big Six star last season.

Grefe is captain and quarterback of the team this year. He does the passing as well as most of the ball-lugging. Last fall he gained more ground than any other Big Six back in conference games.

He should be aided this season by the blocking of Ivan Imeson, former fullback who was out with a broken leg last year. Ed Schafroth, 185-pound halfback, according to the early season reports from Ames.

Iowa State takes on Nebraska and Kansas for its first two conference games, October 8 and 15, by way of losing no time getting into the thick of the conference scramble.

Depression Bright Note Bob Zuppke, beginning his 20th season as coach of the Illini, with a long record of championships won, is satisfied that the 1932 boys are eager to do their part toward restoring the erstwhile gridiron glories.

GRID SEASON TO OPEN HERE NEXT FRIDAY

Friday afternoon will mark the opening of the local football season of 1932. In that day the two high school teams of Greenville and Wilson will clash on the Third Street School grounds at 3:30 o'clock.

Unless the game should happen to end in a tie, it will mark the first defeat of the season for either team. Wilson has won the one game it played, defeating Washington by a 28 to 0 score, and Greenville has won its two previous encounters, defeating LaGrange by a 6 to 0 count and Kinston by a 13 to 4 score.

Neither team has been scored on this season. These two teams will be pretty evenly matched. Wilson will present to the approval of Greenville fans one big, fast back who ran wild against Washington. This boy, Bunn Hearne, Jr., is the son of Bunn Hearne, baseball coach at Carolina and former major league pitcher. Greenville will probably be outweighed, but hopes to make up for any deficiency in weight by the use of superior speed.

The local backfield is well balanced, and the line has only had three first downs made against it in two games, two of these coming after penalties.

The prices for this game are sure enough depression prices. Ten cents will admit any school child and twenty-five cents will be charged for adult tickets.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The recent death of John Sharp Williams, venerable statesman of Mississippi, perhaps moved the capital as much as it did his home state.

"The hill" never tired of hearing about Williams or recalling the days he was in Washington, although he quit the Senate in disgust to retire to his home in Yazoo City.

Senator Stephens of Mississippi, once told the Senate that never a day passed that some senator or visitor to Washington sought him out and asked about Williams. For more than 30 years the Mississippian was a powerful figure in the national life of this country. But it was after he made his now famous statement that he would rather be a hound dog baying at the moon than to continue in the Senate and went back home to "grow old gracefully" that he is perhaps best remembered.

State Liked Him They used to have a saying down in Yazoo county that John Sharp Williams was prized more than the postoffice, the courthouse—or the Mississippi river. All over the state he was a man marked for special affection.

But he wanted only to be let alone. It was seldom that he broke his silence. When he left the Senate he said that he would make no public speeches, but usually he was the first man on the invitation list when Mississippians started something, whether it was a political rally or a public improvement project.

He retained much of his old wit and satire to the last. His reply once to an admirer's praise of him as one of the foremost characters in American public life for the past 50 years was: "No, you're wrong. I'm not a great man. As I grow older I become more and more convinced that I am like a case of near beer—something like the real article, but lacking in the kick."

DIXIE FRESHMAN GIRDLER TOO BIG FOR MOLESKINS

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 5.—(AP)—North Carolina State College has a football player too big for his pants. M. Zari, 235-pound, six-foot seven inch freshman tackle candidate reported for the team, but had to begin practice in sweat pants, for there was not football equipment at the college large enough for him.

Bill Holmes, 19-year-old Shamrock, Texas, golfer, is the new holder of the Caprock golf title.

The Campaign Puzzle

Study Past State-by-State Votes in Making Your Forecasts

Editor's Note—This is one of a series of articles showing how the states voted in the 1928 presidential election and point out developments since.

New Hampshire's Vote in 1928: Hoover 115,404; Smith 80,715

New Hampshire's record of Republican regularity has been broken but twice since 1876, the state giving its electoral votes to Woodrow Wilson in 1912 and 1916. This Republican tradition was maintained in the state elections of 1930, when Gov. John G. Winant (R) was renominated in defiance of the state custom of limiting governors to one term, and re-elected by 20,000 majority. He was renominated for a third term in the recent primaries. Campaign activity this year has been intensified by the results of the state elections in Maine early in September, which spurred Republican efforts to maintain the state's normal tendency while encouraging Democrats with a hope that this tendency might be overcome.

The campaign for the national tickets this year is interwoven with the senatorial candidacies. Senator George H. Moses (R), an administration stalwart, is opposed by former Gov. Fred H. Brown (D) who was a leader in Roosevelt's campaign for convention delegates in 1932.

Michigan's Vote in 1928: Hoover 965,396; Smith 396,762

Michigan has cast its vote for every Republican candidate for the presidency since John C. Fremont in 1856, with the exception of 1911, when it gave its vote to Theodore Roosevelt, progressive.

Prohibition has been an issue of major interest in the current campaign, and the state is to vote November 8 on a proposed constitutional amendment which would wipe out existing bone-dry legislation.

In the primaries this year more than 300,000 votes were cast for the Democratic candidates for governor. This was more than 40 per cent of the total cast in both primaries and was hailed by Democrats as an encouraging sign. Republicans, however, held that a contest for the gubernatorial nomination had not brought out the Democrats full party strength. Michigan has 19 electoral votes this year, instead of its former 15.

Alabama's Vote in 1928: Smith 127,796; Hoover 120,725

Alabama, which had been counted with the "solid south" since reconstruction days, remained in the democratic ranks in 1928 by the narrow margin of 7,000 votes.

Senator Heflin was barred from the party primary in 1930 for his activities in support of Herbert Hoover and as a candidate for reelection on an independent ticket (opposing John H. Bankhead, who defeated by a majority of 50,033. Heflin charged election frauds. His contest was defeated in the Senate. The prohibition planks of the two major parties again form a major issue in this year's campaign, Alabama long having been considered among the staunchest of dry states. Interest in this issue, however, seems to be equalled by interest in the opposing programs for dealing with the country's economic situation.

Carolina Fullback Made Three Tackles in a Row

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 5.—Norman McCaskill, Carolina's under-study fullback, may see a lot more action in the Tennessee game at Knoxville Saturday. When Carolina made its great goal line stand last week and Vandy had to take three shots to make the last two yards, McCaskill was backing up the Carolina line and was in on three tackles in a row. He has real potentialities as a line-driver too, and Carolina will need both a driver and a fine defensive fullback against the mighty Vols.

Duluth Shorten School Year

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Teachers and employees in Duluth public schools have been given graduated salary reductions approximating 25 per cent, saying more than $300,000 for the year, while the school term has been shortened to 36 instead of 38 weeks.

Fight Fire in River

Rome, Ga., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Rome firemen had the unusual experience of being called to extinguish a fire in the middle of the Oostanula river. Dry weather and low water had allowed a pile of driftwood to accumulate against a bridge. It caught fire and threatened to destroy the bridge.

CUT COST OF HATCHERIES

(Continued from Page One) Contrasted with a saving of $60 a year, which Hargett said was claimed by some sources as the economy affected by the release, the conservation official said the expenditure of the division will be reduced $1,800 annually by dispensing with Wallace's services.

County Court at Work

(Continued from Page One) complete the major part of the docket by nightfall. The majority of the cases consist of charges of violation of the prohibition law, larceny, worthless checks and a few infractions of the traffic laws.

Mrs. Buck's "Sons"

The second panel of the trilogy begun by Pearl S. Buck in "The Good Earth" now stands finished in her "Sons." The beauty of Mrs. Buck's style, and the serenity and intelligence of her literary bearing are enough to make the book notable if it contributed nothing to our understanding of the Orient and the Orientals.

Foil Effort to Break Jail

(Continued from Page One) made in that direction. Use of hacksaws has become very popular with inmates of the county jail in recent years, and numbers have escaped over intervening periods of several months. Several negroes escaped last year, but the majority were rounded up and sent back for a longer period of incarceration.

Daniel and Phipps Lead U. N. C. Open Field Runners

Chapel Hill, Oct. 5.—Coach Collins at Carolina has rated Johnny Daniel and Johnny Phipps the best open field runners on the squad as of the present date, and all indications are that the Tennessee secondary will see a lot of these boys out at Knoxville Saturday. Phipps is also a passer, and Daniel a fine receiver, as witness the Vanderbilt game last week, when the Carolina streak of lightning took four heaves in a row from some 70 yards although he was only in the game a few minutes.

Kentucky Has Low Tax Rate

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 5.—(AP)—Governor Luby Laffoon, of Kentucky, has compiled statistics showing his State's average tax rate is the lowest in the Union. The average rate in the State for State and local purposes is $1.55 on $100 of property at its taxable value.

Late News Flashes

(Continued from Page One) will secure the bank. The corporation was authorized to secure a charter under the name of the Wayne Bank Holding Corporation. As soon as the charter arrives, stockholders will be called to organize and decide whether it will be a state or national bank.

25 Hurt in New York

New York, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Twenty-five persons were injured here today when two crowded street cars of the Fifth Avenue system collided in the Bronx.

Old Belt Prices About Normal

Winston-Salem, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Prices on old belt markets were about normal, but the breaks fell off on a depressed market. About 1,000,000 pounds of leaf were on the floors here, and it was indicated the average of $14.13 of yesterday would be maintained.

Graham Pleads for Education

Greensboro, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, the chief speaker on the Founders' Day program today, made a plea for cooperation of the three universities, where students can obtain balanced ideas.

Commission Opens Hearings

Raleigh, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The Industrial commission, with Chairman Matt Allen doing the questioning of witnesses in the attempt to bring that insurance companies be allowed compensation, was under way today. W. C. Southard, manager of the North Carolina Workmen's Compensation organ-

Replies to Hoover's Address

Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—In reply to Pres. Hoover's Iowa address, Speaker Garner today issued a statement which said: "If we judge the promises made in the light which they are made, either his sincerity or his ability to make measures is seriously open to question."

"Pres. Hoover's statement that he is using his office to prevail upon land mortgage companies and other companies, to which the government has loaned millions, not to foreclose mortgages on farms is inconsistency that characterizes the administration."

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Cotton opened steady with receipt of Liverpool cables. Unfavorable conditions in weekly weather report contributed to increase December to 7.21 with the general list selling about easy. At the end of the first half hour December was active. Prices worked lower later in the day, December declined to 30 points under the morning.

Stock Market

New York, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The stock market broke away from its trading reign today with a short, but successful flurry. Extreme losses of two to six points were evidenced among some leaders but these recovered fractions during the afternoon. The market showed little vitality. Rails were heavy, with extreme losses of two to six points with such issues as Union Pacific and Santa Fe. Farm implements and utilities were also depressed. Case jumped about six points and then lost about four more in the afternoon.
