VOTERS BEGIN REGISTERING

Registration Books for November Election Thrown Open at Court House.

Registration of voters for the presidential election in November got under way at the courthouse here today and persons who were not registered in the June primary were urged to get busy and register at once if they desire to express their opinion in the balloting for a president, members of Congress and other officers in the forthcoming election.

The registration books were opened at the courthouse this morning by Registrar Arthur Jones. The books will be open each Saturday for the next four weeks. The fifth Saturday has been set aside for challenges.

Persons who were not registered in the June and July primaries will be required to register if they expect to vote in November. This applies also to people who have become twenty-one years of age since the last primaries.

By reason of the interest being manifested in the fight for supremacy in the White House in the forthcoming battle of ballots, the largest registration of years is expected in this county. Women who never before went to the polls to express their sentiment regarding election of political officers will help swell the Pitt County vote this year it was believed by those who have watched the unusual activity among women engaged in the campaign.

W. E. Hooks, chairman of Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee, expressed opinion this week that the vote in Pitt County would be the heaviest in history by reason of the interest manifested in the battle for the presidency. The campaign which has just hit its stride in this county was expected to cause hundreds of people who did not vote in the primaries to go to the polls in November to have their say regarding the next occupant of the White House.

COREY FACES COURT ACTION

Senate Nominee For Pitt Charged With Requiring Fees Ex-Service Men Loans.

A. B. The charges were said to have been instituted by three or four colored men, one of whom is at present time serving a term on the county roads for larceny and another who was recently a defendant in Recorder's Court here. Corey, who has long been prominent in political activities of the county and acted as service officer of the American Legion here, declared the charges were without the slightest foundation. SYNOPSIS-Nan Wear's only aid in solving the mystery of her husband's disappearance...

Chapter 42
WAS JERVIS TWO-FACED?

The black curtain that had fallen between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning would be lifted; Nan was about to get a glimpse of what lay behind it...

Nan caught the tone of relief. Now why should Mrs. Mellish be relieved? She hadn't seen Jervis. Why should she be relieved about that? The next question was across her lips before she knew that she was going to ask it.

"Whom did you see?" Mrs. Mellish was so much startled that her hand closed on the linen handkerchief and crumpled its neat folds.

"I went up to my room, and I made my cup of tea," she said; but her voice had lost its balance; it hurried over one word, and dragged on another.

Nan strained for the tumb of the voice at the other end. At first she could hear nothing, as if the caller had become confused.

"This is Smithers' grocery," a voice began. "Your order was delayed."

Nan replaced the receiver wearily, caught up again her give and take with Mrs. Mellish. She must take hold of herself.

"There was a light—you say it! What else did you see?" "I couldn't hardly say." The words were almost inaudible.

"I'm afraid you must say what you saw." "Why didn't she want to? What was she hiding?" Mrs. Mellish rallied her dignity.

of the way. "You're sure you saw Miss Rosamund?" "Yes, ma'am." "It was no use—she couldn't go on. If there were more questions to be put, then someone else must put them—Ferdinand, or Mr. Page. She would have to send for Mr. Page tomorrow if there were still no news. Rosamund! Rosamund with the suit-case in her hand. She felt very sick and giddy, but she managed to get up and to speak steadily.

"Thank you, Mrs. Mellish. You won't speak of this to anyone?" Mrs. Mellish recovered her poise. "It's not by any wish of mine that I've spoke of it now," she said, and withdrew without haste, and with consciousness of high moral worth.

Everything had stopped when the door shut; no wit went on again with a little jerk, but slowly, unevenly, and as if it might stop again at any moment. The sense of strain and of expectation was gone.

Jervis had gone away with Rosamund. She felt humiliated into the very dust. They had gone away secretly, and Rosamund had lied to her. All the time she had talked about drowning and about Jervis getting cramp, she was lying. She had been in Jervis' room at three o'clock in the morning. She had stood in the door with his suit-case in her hand.

Nan was too numb to feel hurt. The thought of Rosamund was like a heavy weight that number her. Jervis had come into her room and been kind. Was he expecting Rosamund then? Was that why he was awake? Had he only been kind because she must not be awake? She must sleep and know nothing because Rosamund was coming?

Her mind filled with pictures? They came up like bubbles in dark water. She could see them coming, but she could not stop them. As each one reached the surface of her mind, it floated there, showed its iridescent color, and broke in a spray like tears.

"She saw herself and Rosamund side by side. Jervis loved Rosamund. She saw Jervis comforting her the curtain blowing in the draught from the open door—the door between his room and hers. He wouldn't have left it open if Rosamund had been there. She trembled against his shoulder and was comforted. The door was open and the curtain blew.

"She saw Rosamund with the suitcase in her hand. She saw other things. After a long time no more bubbles rose. Her mind was dark and empty. She went up to her room and at the first sound of her foot on the stair, there was Bran, keeping step with her. She locked the door upon them both; she locked the door into Jervis' room.

Then she undressed and lay down on her bed. A heavy weight of fatigue made all her limbs feel like lead. She lay down and covered herself with the sheet. With no interval at all, she dropped into the deepest depths of sleep.

Statement of the Ownership, Management, Circulation, Etc., Required by Act of Congress of August 24, 1912.

Of The Daily Reflector, published every evening except Sunday, at Greenville, North Carolina, for October 1, 1932. State of North Carolina County of Pitt. Before me, a Clerk of Superior Court, in and for the State and County aforesaid, personally appeared David J. Whichard, Jr., who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the owner and manager of the Daily Reflector, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management, circulation, etc. of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to-wit: That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, and business managers are: Publisher, D. J. Whichard, Jr., Greenville, N. C. Editor, D. J. Whichard, Jr., and H. B. Utey, Greenville, N. C. Business Managers, D. J. Whichard, Jr., S. L. Bridges, Greenville, N. C. That the owners are: D. J. Whichard, Jr., Greenville, N. C. and other mortgagors, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: Ludlow Typograph Co., Chicago, Ill. Mergenthaler Linotype Company, Brooklyn, N. Y. Hood Industrial Bank, Greenville, N. C. Greenville Bank & Trust Co., Greenville, N. C. Mrs. Hennie S. Whichard, Greenville, N. C. That the average number of copies of each issue of this publication sold or distributed, through the mails or otherwise, to paid subscribers during the six months preceding the date shown above is 2,321. (This information required from daily papers only.) DAVID J. WHICHARD, Jr., Owner. Sworn and subscribed before me this 7th day of October, 1932. J. F. HARRINGTON, C. S. Q.

When it was decided some time ago that Greenville would have a nine months school term, it was emphasized by the Board of Aldermen that it would be necessary for people to pay their taxes promptly to enable the city to accomplish this purpose. Mayor Finanigan again brought the question up at the regular meeting of the Aldermen Thursday night and urged the people to give more attention to paying taxes in the future and enable the city to take care of the extended school term.

The schools operated only eight and a half months last year because of reduced appropriations caused by poor tax collections, and if they are continued for the normal term this month the patrons must heed the appeal of the mayor pertaining to tax collections. This is a situation that confronts every man and woman in the city because the education of their children are at stake, and if they desire to do their part by running the school for nine months it is imperative for them to give this attention to settlement of taxes.

People who have been hoarding their money for the last few years evidently are convinced it will do more good in circulation than in hiding, judging by the September report of Greenville Banking and Trust Company showing an increase of $417,573.79 in deposits from June 30 to September 30th.

While the tobacco market has done much toward improving the financial condition of the community it is not believed it alone has caused the upward sweep of bank deposits. In fact, bankers expressed opinion that lots of money which had been hidden the last several years was being put back into the channels of trade, helping greatly to relieve the stringent financial situation.

Improvement of a similar nature is being experienced in many other parts of the country and the passing of another year should find the world financial condition in much better shape than formerly.

Greenville high football team is determined to make a better showing this year than last and is putting its best foot forward in the conference schedule.

The club was considerably handicapped by lack of material last year, but much development has been shown this season and Coach Porter is hopeful his boys will be able to make a much better showing. Greenville high has taken a high ranking in various fields of endeavor in recent years, especially in a scholastic way, and it is the hope of the youthful players they will be able to do something out of the ordinary in this particular field of sports.

The public has been urged to support the team in every way possible and inspire them to carry on to a greater achievement.

With improvement in the financial condition of the community, the Board of Aldermen has ordered the advertising of 1931 delinquent property taxes.

The councilmen declined to grant further postponement of advertising because of the constant deferment in the past. It is believed people are as able to pay now as they will be later and persons behind with payments are urged to look into the matter at once.

The largest sale of the season was recorded on the Greenville tobacco market last Saturday showing that people have faith in the ability of Greenville tobacco men to give them the best service to be obtained anywhere.

The market has again forged to the front from the standpoint of poundage and it is believed the end of the season will still find them in possession of the honor as the largest bright leaf tobacco market in the world.

The growth of the local market in last years is attributed largely to the desire of tobaccoists to give their patrons the best of service at all times. Increased facilities enable the market to handle 1,700,000 pounds of tobacco daily and this makes it possible for growers to dispose their offerings and return home the same day.

About NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 8.—The first bracing week-end when "typical" New Yorkers are at home, after a summer of escape from the city, casts an electric spell over Broadway.

The Times Square section is a seething knot of legs and wheels. The lights burn brighter and for the instant smiles reflect their brightness.

Play shops spill their prodigal patrons into the late resorts for still further recharging of the Broadway spirit.

Then, of course, the Sunday morning after. But a brasher Sunday afternoon and an active Sunday night, Broadway need not feel quite so sorry for itself now.

Stage Door Snapshots Let's stroll about and glimpse a few familiar figures at the stage doors.

We meet Sophie Tucker, just coming out of a movie house. Sophie has no use for that early to bed and early to rise business.

Lee Posner, rushing into the vaude center to talk contracts. Posner studied to be a rabbi. Now he's said to know more about the business end of Harlem night life than any other man.

Autograph hounds still hang around this other stage door over here, waiting for Helen Morgan, Norma Terris and the rest for the late Zigfeld's last army of stars.

Long-Haired Flippen When you misplace something in a night hunt, if Jay C. Flippen, of Arkansas, is around, some wisecracker invariably will say: "Look in Flippen's hair."

SUNDOWN STORIES

TOP-NOTCH THE ROOSTER

"Well, how are you this more-or-less fine day?" asked Willy Nilly of Top-Notch, the Rooster.

Top-Notch ran Puddle Muddle's store and was also a very prominent citizen of Puddle Muddle.

"Cock-a-doodle-do," said Top-Notch, the prominent citizen and store owner. "I'm well. In fact, I'm roosterishly well."

"Well, cock-a-doodle, a whole lunch is a whole lunch. That's simple. Half-a-lunch is when you have about half a meal before it's lunch time."

"Oh, I see," said Willy Nilly, "and so when I have a glass of milk during the morning I should call it a quarter-lunch?"

"Let's see," said Top-Notch. "Would a nice, heavy red-paint do? It would match the crown on my head and you could do me that honor!"

LARGEST LEAF SALES FRIDAY

(Continued from Page One) day morning. The price situation, it was revealed, displayed considerable strength in all grades, particularly on the better quality.

For the entire season, the report also indicated, the market has sold 14,344,706 pounds for $1,482,032.31.

Sales were light the first of the week because of the rainfall which visited this territory, but clearing skies the afternoon before enabled the market yesterday to handle the largest amount of tobacco of the season.

Numbers of people from a great distance sold tobacco here during the past week and were impressed with the speed made possible by the tremendous market facilities.

The date is indefinite as the principal speakers being sought are nationally known farm leaders who have not yet been able to set a date for a visit to the State.
