American Property Is Menaced as Japs Begin New Drive In Manchuria

U. S. SEEKING PROTECTION

Consulate Officials Ask That Japs Use Every Precaution Not To Inflict Damage On American Property In Districts Affected In New Attack on 30,000 Bandits; Missionaries Forced to Remain at Their Posts

Mukden, Manchuria, Oct. 10.—Determined to obliterate insurgents and rebels operating in southern Manchuria, the Japanese army today launched an offensive drive on a wide front against 30,000 bandits have challenged the authority of the Tokyo government.

In this new campaign there appeared to be a menace to American interest in Manchuria, and American consulate officials informed the Japanese that great care be exercised in the use of bombing planes so that American-owned property would not be affected.

All American buildings will fly American flag as a means of protecting property from the attack. Missionaries in the affected zone cannot abandon their posts even under fire as they have explicit instructions to remain at their posts in time of danger for the purpose of performing the functions of the church.

Simultaneously with the drive beginning today, the Japs prepare to attack Su Ting-Wuen's forces near Kstshlar. The town of Pihard has already been taken from the rebels, but the whole area along the Chinese Eastern Railway, between Harbin and Moachili, is in a ferment and is making travel extremely hazardous.

Albert Spalding To Give Concert at the University

Chapel Hill, Oct. 10.—The early biography of so many great musicians which reads, "He was born of poor parents and struggled through his student days," is not literally true of Albert Spalding, the world-famous violinist who will appear here on Tuesday night, October 18, in Memorial Hall, under the auspices of the University Student Entertainment Committee.

Mr. Spalding was born in Chicago and inherited much of his musical genius from his mother who was for a long time a soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Theodore Thomas. At seven he began playing the violin and later his principal teachers were Chiti, the famous Florentine master in Paris.

When he was graduated from the Bologna Conservatory at fourteen he received the highest honors ever accorded anyone since Mozart, and made his professional debut in Paris with Adelina Patti at the Chalet. His American debut was made at Carnegie Hall, New York, as soloist with the New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch, conductor, with which organization he appeared afterwards over forty times.

NINETEEN DIE AT COAL MINE

Elevator Cage Falls To Bottom Of Shaft In England; One Escapes

Leigh, England, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Nineteen miners were drowned at the Plank Colliery near here today when the elevator cage carrying a number of workmen fell to the bottom of the mine shaft.

The cage fell into the bottom of the sumo hole which was full of water. The accident occurred this morning as a shift went down to relieve a night force.

The elevator started down the shaft and when something went wrong the cage dropped.

Rescuers, accompanied by physicians, went through another mine shaft and extricated the bodies. Artificial respiration was administered to the men but without success. One of the twenty men in the cage escaped by forcing the door open and jumping when the cage was in motion.

BUNDLE DAY HERE OCT. 15

Boy Scouts Prepare to Do Their Part To Help Needy People Of Community

Saturday, October 15 the Boy Scouts of Greenville will be very much in evidence doing a community good turn. Each troop will celebrate their annual charity bundle day in collecting clothing for the needy. Last year the Scouts of East Carolina Council gathered thousands of garments in their home cities and towns; these were turned over to the welfare associations to be distributed during the winter.

This year the need is imperative, especially children's clothing and shoes. The people of Greenville are asked to get together every garment it is possible for them to give to this worthy cause, and have it ready to deliver to the Scout who calls at their home Saturday, Oct. 15.

If they plan to be away from home during the day, they are requested to wrap the garments in paper packages and leave them on the front porch with a tag addressed to Boy Scouts. The Scout can then pick them up as they work that street.

One of the remarkable things of the 1931 charity bundle day was the absence of ragged garments, those unfit for year. It is hoped the campaign for clothing this year will net garments which are usable from every home.

It was one of many group meetings set for today and tomorrow as a preliminary to the annual meeting of the general session which was addressed by President Hoover last week.

Mr. Smith said in his discussion of public utilities that the administrative forces for control of such evils which have afflicted the country the last several days should attempt to give full publicity to their operations.

He declared the business of a public utility should be done in the open even to the extent of getting approval of the public authorities of the nation.

Coburg Plans Bridal Fetes For Sweden's Future Queen

Coburg, Germany, Oct. 7.—(AP)—This ancient city of 25,000 is concentrating its energies upon plans for October 20 when Princess Sibylle of Sax-Coburg-Gotha is to wed Prince Gustav Adolf, her presumptive to the throne of Sweden.

A joint committee of steel helmeters and nazis has cooperated with the marshal of the ducal court in mapping welcomes to King Gustav V of Sweden, grandfather of the bridegroom; the Prince of Wales and 50 other royal guests.

Two of these guests, Ferdinand, ex-king of Bulgaria, and Grand Duke Cyril, pretender to the Russian throne, reside there.

The local police will post a guard of honor at Coburg castle, high above the city, where the wedding breakfast will be given.

The night before the rites, the populace will demonstrate its affection for the princess. A torchlight procession will wind its way to a large meadow where the wedding company will be entertained by a male chorus, a speech by the burgomaster, athletics and fireworks.

The marriage ceremony has been set for 11:30 a. m. at the Protestant City Church of St. Moritz. The bridal procession will approach it through the sloping gardens of the castle and between lines of civic societies. At the church portals members of a ladies patriotic society of which the bride is a member, will shower the couple with flowers.

As the young people exchange rings, a salute of 25 guns will boom. Then as they emerge from the church, every bell in the city will peal a greeting.

Brussels Campus Likes Prof. Piccard; He Can Give a Joke and Take It Too

Brussels, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Professor Auguste Piccard, the hero of the stratosphere, is one man.

The modest ambidextrous professor who teaches physics at the University of Brussels, is another.

The young professors at the school call him "Auguste." He is one of the most popular figures on the campus.

With his seemingly endless legs, his scholar's head screwed on a cygnet neck emerging from an over-ample collar and his lank body, he has provided easy material for student fun. And especially so on the night of the annual revue when the faculty is a broad target for satire. But the good-tempered scientist, whose contortions during his lectures have won him the campus nickname of "Snakeman," is the first to laugh at his own caricaturing and highly enjoys the revues.

Freshmen, sighting him for the first time, cannot help being disturbed by his antics before his blackboard, one of his long legs held in the air, his two hands simultaneously writing signs and numbers, or musing a head covered with abundant and rebellious curls.

The seniors hold him in high esteem. He never falls with his experiments, but he usually starts with this phrase: "This experiment seldom succeeds."

Good natured, nevertheless, he is a hard examiner and likes trap questions. Frequently he mixes in a hoax, like this one:

Question: "There are two lions in a cage. One is thirteen, the other four. The distance between them is eight yards. Halfway between the

His answer: "Nothing. Lions do not like potatoes."

Moselle Canal Will Expedite The Movement of Coal Into Lorraine

Metz, France, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A 100-year-old dream of a man-built waterway has just been realized in this iron producing region of France and has given it hopes of becoming an industrial counterpart of the German Ruhr.

The achievement is the $9,600,000 Moselle canal, partially financed with German reparations. President Albert Lebrun and Premier Edouard Herriot have hailed it as the "iron canal" of France.

See Business Help

Its potentialities, scarcely conceivable to the Duke of Lorraine who first suggested its need to make the upper reaches of the Moselle River navigable in 1751, are of such magnitude that French officials hope they will be noticeable in relief of the economic situation.

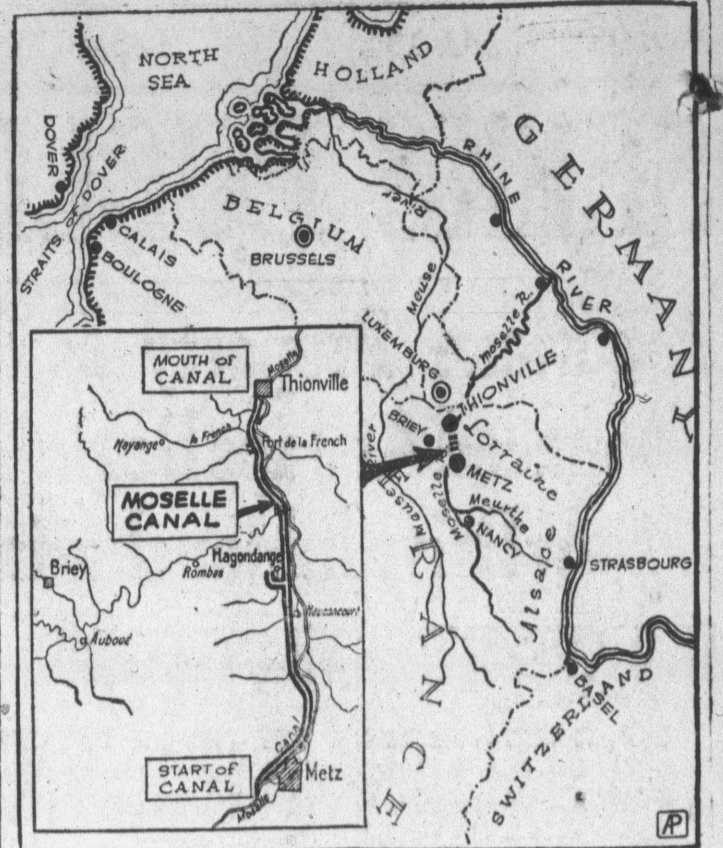

The canal, opening the Lorraine metallurgical industry to water transportation, naturally is expected to cheapen the production of iron and steel at home. But it has a wider, international aspect.

French industrialists believe it will facilitate the exchange of raw materials between Lorraine and Westphalia, which includes the great German industrial section of the Ruhr.

Will Aid Exports

Furthermore, the canal is intended to start Lorraine minerals from the valleys of the Moselle and Orne Rivers on the way to England and Belgium, as well as into the interior of France.

Edouard Daladier, Minister of Public Works, has estimated that the waterway, by providing cheaper transportation, will save almost $1 a ton in the price of coal brought into the Lorraine section. Such a saving would mean approximately $720,000 a year to the French metallurgical industry.

The canal's construction was proposed in modern times shortly before the War of 1870 in which Germany gained control of Lorraine. That blocked the scheme.

After the World War and the Treaty of Versailles returned Lorraine to France, the industrial interests of the Moselle valley pressed the scheme again, and in 1928 the French government authorized the canal's construction. It was begun the next year and now barges laden with products are passing through it.

The canal is nearly nineteen miles long and runs from Metz to Thionville, center of the Lorraine metal industry. It is large enough for barges of 300 tons burden, and its locks are operated by electric power.

Indiana Back Deserts Stage To Play in Football Drama

Back to his first love, football Tom Jones, Indiana U. grid aspirant, is back in school after five years of appearing before the foot-light's. He's a quarterback.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 7.—(AP)—Graduation from the role of football hero to the stage or movies is a story often told before.

But it is left to Tom Jones to gridiron.

Five years ago Jones was a sensation as a quarterback on Indiana University's freshman football team.

The Indiana coaches rubbed their hands in anticipation of what would happen to foes of the Crimson the next fall when Jones became eligible for the varsity.

They were doomed to disappointment in the spring of 1928 Tom "went musical." He was starred in the university's lavish stage production "Jordan River Revue."

Success was followed by romance, a romance that culminated in his marriage to his leading lady, Rosamond Rissler.

Together they entered the theatrical profession.

But Jones decided to return to Indiana to finish both his education and his promising football career. He is back in school now.

It has taken a lot of work, but months of hard physical training have put him in fine condition. The freshman of 1927 is down to 180 pounds, which is anything but heavy for his height of more than six feet.

He wants to win the regular quarterback post on and in early practice has received much attention from Coach E. C. Hayes.

He may be a decisive factor in Indiana's success or failure this season.

Georgia County Cans Surplus Food With Steam Roller, Seized Stills

Lawrenceville, Ga., Oct. 6.—(AP)—A discarded steam roller and several confiscated moonshine stills were put to use here to save 60,000 cans of fruit and vegetables that otherwise might have gone to waste.

It was a three-way cooperative project that enabled this Georgia county to see the possibilities in its surplus garden and orchard products—a project in which the farmers, the extension service of the state college of agriculture and an Atlanta business house participated.

Many farm families in Gwinnett county have well stocked pantries, the state college has another successful experiment for its record books and the needy of Atlanta will receive a supply of wholesome food as a result of the project.

County Farm Agent A. G. Robinson and W. C. Britt, a teacher of vocational agriculture, thought up the idea of saving the surplus fruit and vegetables in the county, but found needed funds unavailable.

An old warehouse in Lawrenceville was offered for use as a building, but canning equipment was expensive. Then a discarded steam roller was found that could be used to generate steam. A judge of the circuit court arranged for use of "one discarded copped stills as boilers. The State College of Agriculture furnished other equipment.

An Atlanta business house agreed to furnish 60,000 cans on a 50-50 basis. The firm also agreed to distribute its share of the canned products to needy families of Atlanta during the winter.

Officials of the State College said approximately 1,600 farm families in Gwinnett county contributed labor and materials. Under strictly an

Many poor families in Georgia will have food this winter, thanks to an old steam roller and some confiscated moonshine stills. scientifically sound, said J. Campbell, director of extension work at State College.

"The quality of the materials employed, the economical use of them in the plan of handling and the volume handled proved the idea agricultural-ly sound," said J. Campbell.

You might think that a two-fisted fellow like the steel jack in the picture would like his tobacco strong. Not at all.

He wants his cigarettes mild and that's why he picks Chesterfields.

Mildness doesn't mean a smoke that's weak or flat or insipid or anything like that. In fact it's just the reverse. Two-fisted fellows as well as anyone else—men and women—want a cigarette that's mild... one that satisfies—and that's Chesterfield.

We believe that every smoker is looking for a cigarette without any "bite" or bitterness, and a cigarette that has a pleasing taste—and that's Chesterfield.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN URGED TO REGISTER

For the purpose of getting out the women's vote in Pitt county for the Democratic nominees in the coming election, every precinct has been thoroughly organized and women workers appointed to canvass each section to see that all are registered.

Women are especially interested in voting for Roosevelt because the life partnership of Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt symbolize all that is finest in American home life. It is therefore, natural that Roosevelt should interpret the needs of today in terms of the needs of the American home and family.

Democrats have a clear platform and honest candidates. They are not attempting to mislead the people on any issue. Roosevelt is a leader whose principles do not shift with every political wind. He will not evade any political national issue. He serves no special interest, he fears no powerful politicians.

The women know too, that the Democratic party has been the chief medium through which women have made effective their efforts to translate into laws their interest in social welfare. We might further add that the child is the first victim of depression. The Democratic platform's constructive economic policies foster the child's welfare. Its traditional enlightened foreign policies protect him from the menace of war. Its pledge for lower tariffs will renew the faith and friendship of other nations.

We welcome a new leadership, courageous and able to bring us to better times ahead. Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Vice Democratic Chairman Pitt County.

M. G. MANN EXPLAINS GOVERNMENT OFFER

Smithfield, Oct. 10.—Explaining the new cotton collateral plan whereby cotton will be accepted from North Carolina producers at 91-2 cents per pound as collateral on government seed loans, M. G. Mann of Raleigh, secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Cotton Growers' Co-operative Association, addressed a meeting of Johnston county farmers in the court house here Saturday afternoon. Mr. Mann discussed the government regulations which specify that all cotton accepted as collateral must be graded by Federal licensed classifiers and stored in government bonded warehouses. He also pointed out that premiums will be allowed on better than middling 7-8 cotton and these, he said, will bring the collateral value of a lot of cotton in this state to 10 cents per pound or more.

OCRACOKE RECALLS WRECK OF "HOME"

Ocracoke, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Ninety-five years ago the steam-packet "Home" wrecked on Ocracoke beach and 80 persons were drowned. Only 43, two of whom were women, survived the wreck. Most everyone here has forgotten details of the wreck which used to be told from father to son, yet to all the wreck of the "steambot Home" is known as the worst that ever occurred on this island, which in the days before modern steamships saw from five to 30 shipwrecks each year.

The "Home" was a passenger ship operating between New York and Charleston, S. C. She sprung a leak on Wimple shoals off Oregon inlet and sank in the breakers off this island on October 9, 1837.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 10.—A champion of the hobo is another of those rarities in which Hollywood is not lacking. Prescott Chaplin, artist and writer, is a sort of hobo himself and is as proficient in the art of "inexpensive traveling"—which is an elegant term for "going on the bum"—as he is with paint-brush or typewriter or in the fashioning of the wood-cuts which gave him his introduction to Hollywood.

Chaplin, a colorful local character, will tell you that one of the greatest myths is that tramps never work. "When you see the hands of most of them you'll find big callouses on the palms—and they don't come entirely from snagging rides on trains," he says. "And your typical hobo never is the professional beggar."

Sharing the Profits. The hobo code includes, according to Chaplin the philanthropic idea that any of their number who gets a job—becomes a "live one"—is the term—may be approached freely for a share of the profits. "It isn't a loan, and the tramp doesn't regard it as one. He'll never think about paying it back. But he'll pass it on to some other crony, if he can, whenever he gets a few dimes in his own pocket."

Chaplin plans to go East soon—in the same fashion he has done most of his wandering. He is making a little money now writing for pictures, but doesn't expect to have any when he feels more home on a box-car. From him I learn also that five or ten dollars is considered a "good road stake" for such a trans-continental journey.

Fifi's Different. Fifi Dorsay differs from most freelance players in that she does not mind telling the world she is "seemingly dying to get back under contract" and is sorry she ever left the sheltering wings of Fox where she was introduced to the screen. Fifi asked for release from Fox when salary discussion time came around and went into vaudeville. She came home some time ago to make an independent picture, "The Girl From Calgary," and now looking forward, repentant and hopeful, with a special eye on "What Price Glory?" If it is made, she may get the role of Charmaine.

GLOVES ARE STRESSED IN WINTER STYLES

Paris, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Gloves are important in the fall and winter style picture. They are longer, designed in unusual fabrics and colors, and often trimmed. Where trimming is used it is concentrated on the cuffs, however, hands remaining severely plain.

Fur cuffs to match the collars of the ensembles with which they are worn are shown by many houses, while others use cuff trimmings of curled silk fringe resembling feathers. Plain suede or antelope gauntlet gloves reaching halfway to the elbow are seen in black, brown, gray and such unusual tints as mulberry red and blue green.

Nothing Venture

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH

SYNOPSIS: Exhaustion overtakes Nan Wear after she forces Mrs. Mellish, her housekeeper, to reveal that she saw Rosamund leave Jervis' room at 3 o'clock the morning Jervis disappeared. Rosamund, Nan feels sure, is leagued with Robert Leonard against her husband, although once engaged to him. Perhaps Jervis is still in love with Rosamund. Has he gone with her?

Chapter 43
HORRIBLE AWAKENING

Jervis Wear opened his eyes. He might as well have kept them shut, because he could see nothing. An even blackness with no shading in it confronted him. He dropped his lids and slipped back into a vague half-consciousness.

Presently he moved, threw out an arm, and groaned. The sound of this groan was the first to reach his ears since he had heard Rosamund move beside him in the dark just before he leaned forward to put on the lights of her car.

He heard his own groan, and opened his eyes again. He was still in the dark. But where was Rosamund, and where was the car?

He sat up and felt his head. There was a lump on the back of it like a tennis ball. His right leg felt numb. He put down one hand gropingly, and touched stone. The damp cold of it roused him. He moved his leg. It was not injured; it was only numb.

He scrambled up, and the darkness filled with rockets and pin wheels. He had to sit down again. His mind cleared momentarily. Only a moment ago he had heard Rosamund move beside him in the darkness. He had leaned forward, and someone had knocked him out.

Who? That was the question. And why?

He felt about him again. . . . Stone. . . . He got over on to his hands and knees and felt farther afield. One groping hand passed toughened ridges and came down into a slimy hollow; the other, feeling ahead, went over a rounded edge and found nothing beyond it.

For a moment Jervis stayed like that, his left hand slipping, and his right over the edge of an unknown drop. Then a sharp splinter of rock cut his knee, and half involuntarily he drew himself back into a sitting position. What place was this? A dark place, and damp with the passage of water.

With his mind awakened to this, his ears caught a sound which had not meant anything until now, when he became aware that it had been present all the time. It was the sound of water of the sea.

Everything stood still in his mind for a moment. Then he heard the sea again. His hand went down and touched the damp stone. He put a finger to his mouth, and found it salt. The sound of the sea—and rock with a salt dampness upon it. . . . The sea had been over this stone, and not so long ago.

He began to feel in his pocket for matches. There was a box in his blazer pocket. He opened it gingerly and found two matches. Perhaps his hand hook; perhaps the first match was rotten. It left a luminous streak upon the roughened side of the box, and went out. There was one match left. He struck it quickly, and it caught, the soft damp wood sizzling as the yellow flame took hold.

He saw black rock—a drop to what he thought was water—and end bars. The match burnt his fingers and he dropped it on the wet stone.

Jervis came with a tremendous mental shock to the realization of where he was. There was only one place with a barred exit to the sea, and that was Old Foxy Fixon's Cellar? How in the world had he got into Old Foxy Fixon's Cellar? Why, there weren't half a dozen people who knew of its existence—Basher—possibly Janet Tetterley. Who else? Himself, of course—and Rosamund. The dark cave filled with pictures, Rosamund on a visit at fourteen—and the very low tide which had sent them exploring along the foot of the cliff. That was when they had found Old Foxy's Cellar. At first it looked like any other little cave; but it went on, got larger, and ended for them, in a sort of iron portullich with a gate in the middle of it, a gate that could not be opened.

They had been very nearly drowned by the tide, but Basher had come to their rescue and made them promise to hold their tongues about the cave. He showed them the handward entrance and explained that Foxy had used the place to store his smuggled goods; had put up the bars to keep out prying customers.

Jervis sat with his palms cold on the wet stone and recalled Basher taking them into Foxy's kitchen and down brick steps to a cellar that was surprisingly dry and warm—Basher moving a barrel and raising up a tremendous trap door by the ring in it—himself and Rosamund peering into the black uncertainties below.

Well, he was in Old Foxy's Cellar—and what about it? It became blindingly obvious that it was Robert Leonard who had put him there, and that Rosamund had shown him the way. The question was: What did they want? And the answer came pat in Ferdinand's words—Nan's words: "Who gets Wear and the money if anything happens to you?"

Rosamund sat it. And Rosamund knew about the cellar.

That cold snarl stripped him hard.

ABOUT TOWN

The Democratic rally staged in Ayden last Saturday was a very creditable affair. It indicated what people of the thriving little town are capable of doing when they start out to do something in a big way.

In addition to the splendid address by Judge J. Crawford Biggs, the three thousand or more people attending the celebration witnessed one of the greatest Hoover cart parades ever staged in this part of the country. Two hundred carts, bearing various inscriptions took part in the pageant.

The rally was the first of the kind held in this county in connection with the campaign looking to the presidential election in November and undoubtedly resulted in the bringing of many people to the Democratic fold.

Pitt county has always rallied to support of the Democratic cause and that the greatest vote in history will be piled up here is the opinion of those in close touch with the political situation.

Tobacco prices advanced sharply on the Greenville tobacco market last week and the closing day of the week saw the largest sale of the season.

Greenville is forever striving to render the highest type of service to the thousands of people who sell their crop here each year and this season is no exception. Facilities of the market are so great that it is possible for people coming from remote parts of the state to sell their offerings and return home the same day.

Greenville won recognition as the largest bright leaf tobacco market in the world last year and indications at this time are that the honor will be maintained. The market's leading all others of the belt at this time and is expected to stay in the forefront the rest of the season.

Tremendous crowds have visited Greenville each Saturday the last two weeks and indications are that they are spending much more money than formerly with the merchants.

This has resulted in improvement of the general business life of the city and if it continues the winter will find everybody in better financial condition than when they began.

Conditions like a whole lot be normal, but they are much better than last year when low prices of principal crops aggravated the economic situation and the majority of people feel much better about the future outlook.

It is going to take some time to recover from the period of depression but we are gradually forging our way around the corner and if nothing happens the next year or so will see us out under clear skies with the clouds behind us.

Registrars on books for the forthcoming election were thrown open at the court house here last Saturday and will remain open for four weeks.

People who did not register in the June primary should do so at once and be in readiness to cast their ballot for the men of the choice when the day of election rolls around.

The Republican party has proved conclusively that it is unable to bring back the period of prosperity enjoyed several years ago, and the Democrats are hopeful they will be given a chance to better conditions.

The trend of public opinion in all sections of the country seems to be very much in favor of changing parties and giving Governor Franklin Roosevelt the opportunity of showing what he is capable of doing to improve business.

People are tired of the way Republicans have run things the last several years and it isn't surprising to hear that every state of the west is lining up solidly behind the Democratic cause.

Nebraska's political record is one of contrasts. The state was a center of the populist movement in the nineties, and was the home of William Jennings Bryan, to whom it gave its vote in each of his three campaigns. In 1912 and 1916 the state voted for Wilson. In the last three presidential campaigns it has voted Republican.

Alfred E. Smith in the 1928 campaign had the endorsement of Geo. W. Norris, incumbent Republican, to whom the voters have given strong and consistent support. Smith's prohibition views formed a major issue of that campaign.

Senator Norris was re-elected in 1930 over the opposition of some of the regular Republican leaders, defeating former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock (D). In the same year Charles W. Bryan (D) brother of "The Commoner," defeated Arthur J. Weaver (R) 22,151 to 215,615.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, in his present campaign, has the support of Senator Norris.

Economic issues have dominated the current campaign, with interest particularly keen in the farm relief programs of the two candidates. Prohibition planks of the two parties also have been kept in the foreground.

Nebraska has 7 electoral votes this year. It had eight in 1928.

Ohio's Vote in 1928
 Hoover 1,627,546; Smith 864,210

Ohio usually has been counted as "normally" a Republican state in presidential elections. Except for its votes for Woodrow Wilson in 1912 and 1916, the state has supported Republican candidates consistently since 1890.

Prohibition and prosperity were major issues in the 1928 race.

Economic conditions were a major issue in the state elections of 1930 in which George White, dry Democrat, won the governorship from Governor Meyers Y. Cover, dry Republican, and Robert Bulkey wet Democrat, won the senatorship from Roscoe McCullough, dry Republican.

Some observers hailed the result as "an upset." Others pointed out that Ohio has elected Republican governors only four times since 1900.

HINTS TO THE FARMERS

(Stokes Vocational Agr. Dept.)

The sweet potato crop is one that is often lost during the winter season because of negligence or carelessness that could be very easily avoided.

The crop should be harvested when mature but before the vines are killed by frost. If the vines are killed by an unexpected frost they should be cut from the stems immediately and the potatoes harvested as soon as possible. Potatoes do not keep well after the vines have been killed by frost. This, of course, is contrary to a very prevalent idea. Experiments have proven this idea to be misleading.

A test for maturity can be made by breaking the potatoes in two pieces. If mature, little sap will be seen and it will soon turn white and dry. If immature the sap will be more plentiful and the potatoes will turn green and black spotted.

If possible the potatoes should be harvested when the soil is dry. Also they should be harvested in such way as to prevent bruising. If the potatoes are bruised they are much harder to keep.

The moisture should be reduced in the sweet potatoes to increase their keeping qualities during the winter season. A temperature of from 80 to 85 degrees (F) should be maintained for about two weeks. When sprouts begin to appear the potatoes are cured. Curing houses are better for curing wet tobacco barns may be used. If tobacco barns are used they should be made tight except for a little ventilation. Boards placed on the tied poles will give room for a good supply of potatoes.

Every community should have a Grange. The Grange is a social organization among the farmers which includes the women, boys and girls. With the many problems that the farmers have to face they would be better able to meet them through an organization of this kind. The educational and social advantages of the Grange are unlimited. The political and economical influences of the Grange is unlimited.

Now is the time to prepare to plant small grains for winter cover crops, grazing and for spring grain and hay crops. We have been blessed with such an ideal season at the right time of the year to plant such crops.

Can Jervis hold out against the odds that threaten his life?

MARKET REPORT

Prices Continue Highest of Season

Greenville is leading all Eastern Carolina markets in pounds sold and prices paid for every grade of tobacco. Competition has never been keener, and some of the markets are so desperate the warehouses are offering to haul your tobacco free with their trucks, if you will only take it to their warehouses. Every thinking farmer knows that this practice of hauling tobacco free is dangerous and that by doing so, they cannot get what rightfully belongs to them. There is bound to be trickery when one offers something for nothing. We are asking you not to be misled by these markets in this way. Look them all over and you will be convinced Greenville is higher on very grade, and the place to sell your tobacco for more money. If they haul your tobacco free, whether you know it or not, you yourself are paying the bill, and paying dearly.

It is very important that you keep your tobacco dry. Many farmers are tying their tips without grading. Let us urge that you separate your green, black and reddish-brown leaves from your bright tobacco, and market it in the best possible condition.

Now that most of the cotton is picked, attention will be turned to marketing the tobacco. A great deal of tobacco reaches the market after sale time. Let us suggest that you bring it in earlier in order to avoid any rush.

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York, Oct. 10.—(AP)—No statistics are in reach on how many pounds of any particular food New York consumes in a year. But I'd bet my bottom dollar on this: measured by yards, spaghetti would outdistance all the other foods put together.

If all the strands of a year's supply of spaghetti could be laid end to end, the distance total would sound something like the mileage to the sun.

It is the principal substance of many a poor New York family. Yet it is held in high esteem by epicures and several of the city's restaurants have a wide fame for their expert preparation of the dish.

Here a man is honored if he sustains the boast of being a great spaghetti eater. One restaurant south of Washington Square puts on an occasional spaghetti eating contest and the winner is held something of a hero in Little Italy.

To soil the strands deftly about your fork and then get the whole ball into your mouth without a slip is properly applauded as an art hereabouts. This is one of the happiest of my accomplishments and waiters in Italian restaurants who behold my skill (ahem!) invariably express their appreciation in more assiduous service.

Counterfeit Scare.
Much as people are supposed to need money these days, small shops steadily turn down $10 and $20 bills offered by strangers making minor purchases. Some won't even cash a five spot. All because of the flood of counterfeit bills loosed here recently.

In out of the way sections, it is next to impossible to get a package of cigarettes at night if you have only a large bill in your pocket and no sales person knows you.

The irritating answer always is the same: "Sorry, haven't the change."

Election Horns Ready.
"Make your reservation now for election night," advises an announcement from one of the night spots. "We plan to revive the old time spirit of the occasion. We'll have a horn or a hammer for you, according to whether you want to blow or knock about the outcome."
I've got my own party, thank you and nothing but horns.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, Oct. 10.—(AP)—When Comptroller General J. R. McCarl told Secretary Stimson recently that American delegates to the Geneva disarmament conference must travel on an American ship, there was nothing to do but obey.

No matter whether it's a cabinet officer or government clerk, when McCarl makes a decision involving expenditures that's all there is to it. For he carries the most absolute authority in his field of anyone in Washington, except the President.

Congress made his authority as absolute as possible, and he is responsible to no one but that body. Appointed in 1921 by President Harding, he is to stay in office until 1936. After that he is out, for he can't be reappointed.

Talks to Parents

THE WIDOWED MOTHER

By Alice Judson Peale

The mother who faces the world alone with her children is in a peculiarly trying position.

The loss of her husband not only makes things difficult for her from a practical point of view, but also in a more subtle psychological sense. Her children are, as she says, all that she has. She lives for them.

Especially if she is not financially secure and must make all sorts of sacrifices for them does the tie tend to bind both mother and children with a suffocating closeness. The mother has no choice, but to dedicate herself solely to the business of keeping the home together and she demands in return a compensatingly great devotion.

Such a mother often is proud of the fact that her children are unhappy if she must be away from them. One such mother, unbelievable as it may seem, refused to allow her little boy to be sent to a kindergarten in spite of the fact that his going would have made it possible for her appreciably to eke out their slender income.

"Billy would die of loneliness for me," she said. "He's so attached I couldn't bear to let him be away from me every day. No, we'll just have to get along as best we can."

There is something dangerously unwholesome in the falseness and self-indulgent sentimentality of this attitude. It prepares the way, of course, for later difficulties.

Then, when it is too late to teach independence, the mother wonders what she has done to deserve children who are unable to share the heavy responsibilities which she now feels that she has carried alone long enough.

auditor to see that the government pays just what it owes and not a cent more; to see that any overpayments are refunded and to make sure that the appropriations are properly and legally spent.

It is the latter that gives him much of his authority in dictating to cabinet officers and the like.

McCarl, however, is little of the dictator personally. Clean shaven, under the average height, even tempered and mild of manner, he is the type that can fight and smile at the same time. He is a thorough student of the job, arrives at his office early in the morning and is one of the last to leave at night.

He is never too busy, however, to sit down and talk things over with a visitor.

From Nebraska

Senator Norris of Nebraska, brought McCarl to Washington as his secretary years ago. He and the senator live in the same town of McCook.

Then barely out of his twenties, he took an immediate interest in the doings of Congress. He was so well posted that the Republicans chose him as secretary of the national congressional committee. He was one of the directing heads in the victorious Republican Congressional fight of 1920.

The next year Congress passed the budget law and Harding named him the first comptroller general.

Everything was startlingly quiet as they reached Flotilla Botilla's house.

"We'd better all stay outside until Willy Nilly tells us what to do," Rip, the dog, suggested.

So Rip, Mr. and Mrs. Quacko Duck, the Quackers of Quackerville, Old Toad, Mother Toad, roodies and the others sat in front of Flotilla Botilla's house, while Willy Nilly went inside.

He went up the stairs, led by Flotilla Botilla's mother, who was trembling all over, and thence into Flotilla Botilla's room.

"So you're not feeling quite so well this more-or-less fine day," began Willy Nilly, but he couldn't finish speaking.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 10.—(AP)—Lawrence Kreher is 57 years old, but remains Cleveland's ace pedestrian. He walks from his home to downtown, a distance of twenty miles for the round trip, three and four times a week and, each evening goes for a "stroll" of three or four miles.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

If and when they are brought to winter, whether in Miami in the winter or the Madison Square Garden Bowl next spring, the two Maxes of the heavyweight division, Schmeling of Germany and Baer of California, should furnish one of the best slugfests parties we have seen in many a moon.

It seems questionable whether Max Baer has improved as consistently and effectively as Max Schmeling within the past year and a half but the rancid Californians certainly has fought his way back to a contending position.

Baer was just a big good-natured clown, with a round-house wallop from the hips, when he first came to the big town. He spent more time thinking about his haberdashery, his high-powered cars and good times than he did about his fistie technique.

The story of Baer's eccentricities outside the ring made good copy, for a while, but his equally erratic work in the ring soon led the customers as well as the experts somewhat cold. Whether influenced by necessity or read ambition, he apparently has settled down to some earnest scrapping.

Until someone comes along, however, to prove otherwise, the conclusion is the best heavyweight in the ring today. He lost the world championship to Jack Sharkey on a highly questionable decision.

Even the pro-Sharkey element conceded Schmeling was on the upgrade and Sharkey decidedly on the down. The mark of superiority in the German's favor should be even more decisive in another year, during which Sharkey will have no immediate action whatever.

Football Again

College football, moving back into the spotlight after a slow and somewhat colorless start, is up against the necessity of "building up" an almost complete new cast of satellites this season.

In every section, outstanding players of the last two or three years, who consistently grabbed the headlines, have disappeared into the ranks of the coaches, the movies, stars or the struggling young business men. A small percentage will try to keep their fame alive on the professional gridirons.

This may be quite satisfactory to the deflationists but it doesn't help the graduate managers and publicity men trying to stimulate box-office business.

It takes more than a few broken-field dashes to find replacements for players like Albie Booth, Barry Wood, Marjorie Schwartz, Ernie Pinckert, Jerry Dalrymple, "Catsfish" Smith, Bill Moton, and Gene McEved.

Retner Still Around

Ernest "Pug" Retner of Northwestern is the only member of the 1931 All-American backfield east still in the collegiate gridiron picture this fall.

The wildcat star figures to be one of the hardest men to stop around the Big Ten whirl but until the Michigan game he was kept pretty much under wraps by Head Coach Dick Hanley. He was spent into the last stages of the opening game with Missouri and exhibited enough stuff to satisfy the critics in Chicago that he's just as formidable an all-around threat as he was last year.

AYDEN RALLY SPEAKERS SEE DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS

ed out into a discussion of national affairs. He gave an interesting resume of the Republican administration and Republican promises. He termed the Federal Farm Loan Board "one of the greatest curses with which agriculture ever has been confronted," and he called attention to the fact that the Board had spent "millions of dollars in stocks and wild speculation." The Republican tariff policy, he said, had done more to retard recovery than any other act that ever had been passed in the history of the nation. Under the Republican administration there were more bank failures in one week than during the entire eight years of Wilson's administration.

Congressman Warren made mention of the fact that no agricultural production was bringing the cost of production when placed on the market, that over twelve million people were out of work, that foreign bonds had gone down to nothing and that the stock market had completely collapsed. "And," he shouted, "despite all these things, the Republican party has the audacity to ask the support of the American people again at the forthcoming election."

Judge Biggs was the next speaker. He, too, paid a tribute to Mr. Ehringhaus, followed by the complimentary references to Congressman Warren and Bob Reynolds. He brought forward an interesting account of the life of Franklin D. Roosevelt and confidently predicted his election this fall. With reference to Republican promises for help and relief, Judge Biggs said that the relief had been extended to big business but that no attention had been paid to the little man. His discussion of the Democratic administration in North Carolina included an endorsement of the road bill, removing most of the tax for school purposes and other measures of economy. He urged the election of the entire Democratic ticket, from President to constable.

Then came Larry I. Moore, of New Bern, president of the Tax Relief Association, who discussed briefly some of the problems which would confront the next session of the North Carolina Legislature. He congratulated Pitt County in having selected such able legislators as Edwards, Flanagan and Corey. His explanation of certain details in connection with tax reform was unusually interesting and he had the attention of the crowd. E. G. Flanagan was the last speaker on the program, promising his constituents the same conscientious advocacy of legislation in behalf of their interests that he had stood for in the past.

PLACE ORDER FOR BARLEY

The field crop committee is urging the seeding of barley as a substitute for corn in feeding hogs. The barley will be ready for hogging down or harvesting next May and will be in time to supplement this year's corn crop. Barley should be seeded at the rate of two bushels per acre in a well prepared seed bed on our heavier soils. In addition to being a supplement for grain feed, barley will furnish good grazing through the winter and spring months. It also affords the farmer an opportunity to seed this land to lespedeza in the spring which will not interfere with using the barley as a pasture or in hogging down grain. If the grain is hogged down, the lespedeza will furnish a good crop of hay in the fall or pasture, whichever the farmer prefers. If the farmer desires after the lespedeza hay is harvested, he can sow the same land to yellow blooming sweet clover, which furnishes a good winter growth and is ready to turn under for soil building purposes in the spring in time to be followed with a corn crop. Farmers who follow this practice will find that they can increase their corn yield 15 to 20 bushels per acre without the use of fertilizer.

State Fair

This is State Fair week and farmers who are in a position to go I am sure will profit by attending the fair and observing the exhibits on display. The fair is a state institution and is not operated for the purpose of making money. However, a small admission fee is charged to help defray the expense of same.

Curb Market

The growers on the curb market are still able in spite of the drought to offer the buying trade of Greenville a large variety of fresh vegetables. The market has been the means of encouraging farmers to grow fall gardens or the year round garden as nearly as possible to be grown under our climatic conditions.

To date, with prices 20 per cent lower than they were last year, the market has sold $6,668.99. The total sales last year were $6,401.67, which gives an increase to date over last year's total sales of $264.32.

This year's total sales should amount to more than $8,000. The building is now heated for the comfort of both those who buy and sell.

The growers on the market appreciate the patronage of the people and are endeavoring to improve their offerings each sales day so that each customer can buy their entire requirements for the family food budget.

The market provides a cash income each week for farmers, which is spent with Greenville merchants.

Potato Baskets

The Pitt County Mutual Exchange will place an order this week for sweet potato baskets, which are used in the housing and curing of sweet potatoes as well as for shipping to other markets. Last year the exchange shipped five carloads of potatoes to northern markets and it is expected that this will be exceeded this year by some four or five cars.

Farmers who grew potatoes last year have increased their acreage somewhat and additional growers are making arrangements for curing potatoes. E. R. Dudley equipped a tobacco barn last week for curing potatoes and several other farmers are planning to do the same.

Farmers who are to cure potatoes should secure from the county agent's office directions for operating curing houses, and if they have a surplus to market, they should list their offerings with the Mutual Exchange for winter and spring months.

with the golden weed when five sales got under way this morning.

Prices were described as showing strength comparing favorably with Friday when the trend took a pronounced upward turn, especially on the improved qualities.

Farmers from far off communities were again in evidence here this morning, showing that Greenville probably is attracting growers from a greater radius than ever before. Five sales running at the same time enable growers from a long distance to sell their offerings and return home the same day.

Block sales are very infrequent here because of the enormous facilities for handling the weed, and although slight blocks have occurred once or twice this year, they were of an inconsequential nature and were cleared away in comparatively short time the following morning.

The Carolina line has been going great all year, and Phipps, Daniel, Groom, Chandler and other of the backs looked so much better against Tennessee Saturday that the Tar Heels have well-grounded expectations of finding their scoring punch against Georgia.

The Carolina-Georgia rivalry dates back to 1895. Georgia has been the master in late years, but the Tar Heels dominated the rivalry in the early days and held seven victories to Georgia's five and 228 points to Georgia's 132.

TAR HEELS PREPARE FOR GEORGIA TILT

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 10.—The forthcoming resumption of the ancient and spirited Carolina-Georgia football rivalry at Athens Saturday has the Blue and White squad all on edge.

The Tar Heels were hardly expected to achieve their comeback against Tennessee's Conference favorites, but they will begin their work for Georgia this afternoon with real vim and vigor.

The fact is that the Tar Heels think this ought to be their year as they regard the game with Georgia, which upset Carolina's great team of 1929 by 19 to 12 and beat Tar Heels again in 1930 and 1931, and which has been a particular thorn in Carolina's flesh for three years now.

The two teams have been fighting much the same hard luck this year. B. P. T upset Georgia 7 to 6, while Wake Forest did the same to Carolina 6 to 0.

Georgia is admittedly bigger and more powerful, although greener, than last year, but the Bulldogs unfortunately met Tulane's Conference favorites in their second game.

Carolina led Wake Forest first downs 12 to 0 and Vanderbilt 19 to 7, but Wake Forest tied them 0 to 0 and Vanderbilt's surprise aerial attack best them 39 to 7.

The Tar Heels think they'll have a chance to turn the tables on the Bulldogs Saturday, but they also know it will take form and effort and determination plus.

That's because Georgia's young line is due to find itself Saturday while Buster Metz is due to be among eligibles again, and little Hener Key is sure to be setting the dizzy pace he set in Kenan Stadium last year.

The Tar Heels also expect to be
