SCHOOL HEADS DEFY STATE BOARD EDICT

Charlotte School Officials Determined To Provide Extra Money for Schools

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Charlotte school officials announced today what promises to be another series of legal battles of the school authorities from various sections of the State against the State Equalization Board.

Defying the State Board's effort to force a reduction in charter districts, and upholding its right to grant increases, the city school board has refused to accept the $40,000 ordered by the State and caused the city council to authorize inclusion of the extra expense in its budget.

A resolution adopted called on the city to appropriate necessary funds for operation of the schools regardless of action taken by the Equalization Board.

INSTANTLY KILLED AS AUTO OVERTURNS

Ridgely, Oct. 11.—Jesse Ward, 25-year-old farmer of the Groome's school section about six miles east of Ridgely, met his death Saturday evening when the Ford touring car which he was driving overturned and pinned him underneath.

Ward and two other men were riding on the Locust Hill road about six o'clock Saturday evening when their car ran off the road and overturned at a point about twelve miles east of town. The other two men were thrown out and clear of the car and what injuries they sustained were of no consequence.

The weight of the car injured the driver's chest and head, causing concussion of the brain and killing him almost instantly.

MAD DOG IS SLAIN HERE

Six Year Old Child Bitten And Several Others Attacked By Animal Before Slain

After biting a six-year-old child and snapping at several others, a mad dog was slain by police near the cotton mill this morning.

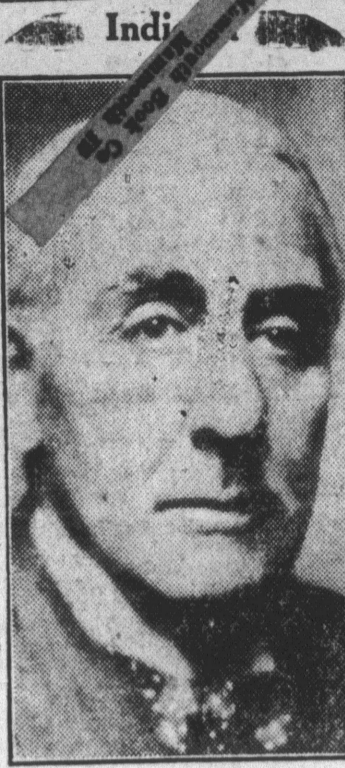

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Collier, who reside on Dickinson avenue near the city limits, was bitten by the dog as he played on the front porch. Several other children of the neighborhood were snapped at as the dog ran wildly down the street, foaming at the mouth.

A city mail carrier named Stocks was attacked by the dog but was saved from injury when the animal bit his teeth into the mail bag.

The Collier child was bitten on the hand. He was immediately rushed to a physician where the Pasteur treatment for rabies was administered.

Police, who were notified after the child had been bitten, chased the dog to the cotton mill territory where the animal was shot six times before being killed. All six bullets hit the mark. It was said, but the dog never emitted a whimper.

Following the slaying of the animal, police warned people to be on their guard against mad dogs. A law requires that all dogs appearing on the street be in leash, and it was said the legislation would be fully enforced.

HOLD MAN IN WIFE'S DEATH

Marshall, N. C., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Le Franks, Laurel Fork farmer, who was arrested here in connection with the fatal shooting of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Alonzo Franks, eighteen, expectant mother, was removed to the Buncombe County jail early today when officers were said to have feared violence. Sheriff Burnette carried Franks to the jail at Asheville as a crowd of seventy-five residents of the Laurel Fork section gathered about the jail.

Mrs. Franks, mother of two children, was shot in the forehead when, officers said, she and Franks met in the road near the home of their grandfather, W. B. James, near here.

Officers said Franks attempted to shoot himself after shooting the woman.

Witnesses were said to have told the sheriff that Franks was seen in the section about noon Monday, and officers immediately started an investigation.

HOEY SCORES NEWELL STAND

Wants to Know Why Dry Candidate Is Voting for a Wet President.

Sylva, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Clyde R. Hoey brought his speaking tour in the interest of the Democratic party to the western part of the State and Sylva today, when he attacked the Republican party on its prohibition platform.

He discussed state and national issues in general, and then said: "The Republican party is appealing to the wets and the dries in this campaign, but unfortunately it cannot fool the prohibitionists this year as it did in 1928."

"In North Carolina the Republicans are seeking to divide the Democratic vote on the dry issue, and the Republican candidate, Jake Newell, is appealing to dry Democrats to abandon their party and vote for him because Bob Reynolds is wet," he said.

"A complete answer to this is that Mr. Newell is unwilling to follow his own logic. He is a dry and believes a dry ought not support a wet candidate, and yet he is going to vote for a wet President. Why doesn't he vote for the prohibition candidate for President?"

Jeness Briley was held in connection with the case but denied he had anything to do with the whiskey.

Plan to Test Mountain Spuds In This Section

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Plans whereby growers of certified seed Irish potatoes in the mountains of Western North Carolina may sell their product to growers of the early commercial crop in Eastern Carolina have been worked out. H. R. Niswonger, extension horticulturist at N. C. State College, said today.

Recently potato growers of the eastern counties met with those of Ashe and Alleghany counties at the farm of W. L. Dent, near Jefferson, and perfected the idea.

J. T. Albright, of Calypso, in the eastern potato section gave an order for one hundred bushels of mountain-grown Irish cobbler seed to be tested on his Duplin County farm next spring. He plans to use the seed in a test which will compare them with seed grown in Mine. He invited the western farmers, to attend his potato digging.

Niswonger said that due to favorable railroad and truck line rates, Eastern Carolina Irish potato growers may soon be able to obtain their supply of certified seed in the mountains of this State and thus keep at much North Carolina money at home. At present only a limited amount of seed potatoes are being produced in the State, with nearly all being used by Tar Heel planters.

He said virtually every voter in the dry forces would vote for Jake Newell, Republican candidate for the Senate.

COQUE FEATHER WRAPS SUIT THE MILDER DAYS

U.N.C. MAKES SHIFTS FOR GA. ATTACK

Chapel Hill, Oct. 11.—Carolina's big problem prior to its game at Georgia Saturday is to figure out a way to play Stuart Chandler, both as defensive fullback and defensive quarterback. Head Coach Collins said today:

Coach Collins may have spoken kindly, but he also uttered much wisdom. Shifted abruptly from quarterback, Chandler was the only Carolina fullback who showed much success backing up the line in the Tennessee game. He is also the Tar Heels' most dependable safety man and is likewise needed there.

All this is very complimentary to the old reliable of the Carolina backfield corps but not very pleasing to Coach Collins and the Tar Heel backers.

Young Charlie Woolen's much improved work at quarter plus the fine punting he turned in in the Tennessee game made Coach Collins send him to quarter and keep Chandler at full in today's practice.

Carolina will also pay much attention to further polishing the superior aerial attack it flashed to score on Tennessee. Tom White will be out for several weeks yet, but Johnny Phipps did some splendid passing in the Tennessee game, and the Tar Heels have found a little sophomore named Joe Burnett, who seems to be catching everything that comes his way, and who may see much service from now on.

DEVILS TO USE ALL POWER IN GAME WITH MD.

Durham, Oct. 11.—With Nick Laney, the flashy triple-threat halfback, in the lineup again, and Robert "Our Bob" Cox firmly established as a line crashing expert, the Blue Devils of Duke will be able to muster full offensive strength against Maryland at Duke stadium Saturday afternoon.

The absence of Laney from the team in the game with Auburn was felt by the Blue Devils. It was thought during the week previous to the contest that he might be able to play but the severe charley-horse he sustained in Duke's great triumph over V. M. I. in which he was the outstanding star, forced him to stay on the sidelines Saturday save for a few minutes in each half.

Sophomore Fullback Cox appears to be another of the great line-crashers Duke has put out in the past few years. He seems to have all the side stepping and "hole-conscious" ability of the brilliant Jan Jankowski of the 1927 and 1928 teams and also the drive of that cracking fullback of the past three years, Kid Brewer.

After a great showing against Davidson in the opener, Cox went into the V. M. I. game and drove through their line for a touchdown and then last Saturday against Auburn gained more ground from the line of scrimmage than any other back on the field, including the wonderful Hitchcock and the speedy Kimbrell. He is expected to be one of the greatest backs in Duke's history.

SPORT SLANTS

From the remarks tossed off by the bystanders, there seems some incredulity over the eagerness of Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, to waive aside all thoughts of financial profit in preference to seeing his maulers beat the National League opposition to a pulp in a minimum of world's series competition.

Let it be said at the outset, of course, that no major league club owner would so much as lift a finger or make a suggestion to his players toward prolonging the world's series, for profitable purposes, whether or not these other magnates genuinely felt as does Colonel Ruppert.

The night before the final game at Chicago, I happened to join a discussion in which the matter was put directly to the Yankee Colonel. "I would give anything," he replied, "to win that game tomorrow and make it four straight again. It would be a wonderful achievement for my club. I am in baseball to have a winning team, and they can't win by too much or too often to suit me."

To appreciate Ruppert's attitude, you have to have his background and—quite so—his wealth. The Colonel has always been a sportsman of the top rank. The late Snapper Garrison rode his horses away back in the Mauve Decade. Yearning for another sporting interest and hobby, Ruppert found an outlet in baseball.

To the ball club the Colonel applied the soundest business methods he knew, selecting executives like Ed Barrow and Miller Huggins, in whom he placed the utmost confidence and gave free rein. He has now transferred his managerial confidence to Joe McCarthy, who undoubtedly will get a long-term contract this winter.

"Produce a winner." That summarized the Colonel's principal instructions. He is not especially interested in the technique, or the business office details beyond so vital a matter as signing contracts with Babe Ruth. He is satisfied so long as the results gratify his ambition to have nothing but the best.

Mack Keeps Earnshaw

Connie Mack's declaration that he contemplates no further dismantling of his Athletics, at least until after 1933, ends the talk that George Livingston Earnshaw would do his pitching elsewhere next season.

The understanding among baseball insiders during the world's series was that Mack offered Earnshaw to the White Sox in exchange for Ted Lyons and had been turned down. Mack, it was said, was highly dissatisfied with Earnshaw's lack of condition at the start of the past season and replaced part of the blame for the poor start of the Athletics on the inability of the famous right-hander to produce.

It was also suggested that the ease with which the Yankees clubbed Earnshaw influenced Mack to consider parting with the former Swarthmore star.

Youngster Team

The Athletics, outside of their battery veterans, will have an almost completely new and youthful cast next season.

Mack's plans call for Finney, Cramer and Coleman, all freshmen or sophomores, in the outfield.

Around the inner works, if Max Bishop is permanently displaced, the graybeard will be the 25-year-old Maryland mauler, Jimmie Fox, supported by Dib Williams at second base, Eric McNair at shortstop and Frank Higgins on third base.

Quickly Gained 19 Pounds

One man in Montreal, Canada, stated in his letter that he considered IROGEN entirely responsible for saving his business and his home. He had, he said, been hardly able to work for a year and a half because of weakness. Had dropped from 205 pounds to 181 pounds in weight. IROGEN was mailed to him by a New York friend. Five weeks later he wrote the letter shown in which he stated he had gained 19 pounds with full return of normal health and digestive and other ingredients of recognized therapeutic value.

The Company's representatives further explained that these tests were made prior to taking over proprietorship of the IROGEN prescription to authenticate the remarkable results of the company's own investigation.

Since the introduction of this famous formula thousands of letters from grateful users have been received from men and women in all walks of life. The letters shown the reporters were from widely separated parts of the country. There is a case of a woman in Alabama who had been reduced to but a shadow of her former self through hard work, worry and nervous shock. IROGEN restored her vivacious, happy spirit,

Washington, N. C., farmer wrote: "Doctors said I hadn't long to live. I was skin and bones, couldn't eat or sleep. IROGEN restored me to complete health in three months."

How to Obtain Irogen

This famous formula may now be obtained in both liquid and tablet form. It is sold under the guarantee that if you do not feel simply delighted with the marked improvement in your health, your money will be cheerfully refunded by any druggist in America. If your druggist's supply is exhausted when you call, he will obtain it at once from his jobber.

In tablet form it is distinguished by the name of VIROGEN.

YOUNG WOMAN GAINS 17 POUNDS

SOLID FLESH AND NEW STRENGTH

Irogen Builds Weight Often in Three Weeks. Guaranteed Results—or You Pay Nothing.

I GAINED 17 pounds while taking IROGEN. Before taking it, I was just plain "skinny," also weak and sickly. I was let off at the office. I was terribly discouraged until I tried IROGEN. Three bottles have brought me better health and a better job and I think the increased weight has improved my appearance."—Thelma Kepler, Indianapolis.

"Skinny" Girls Gain Weight

Though IROGEN has been prescribed for many years by a famous New York hospital physician only recently has it been offered through druggists.

Like a battery is re-charged—so IROGEN "re-charges" your life-blood, builds it up into a rich, red stream that feeds precious nourishment to every gland, nerve and muscle in your body. Vital mineral elements such as iron, peptonate, calcium, organic phosphorus, nutritious malt, valuable digestive and other famed tonic aids are compounded in a great scientific laboratory to complete the IROGEN formula.

Clears the Complexion

Think of sharp, scrawny limbs rounded into graceful feminine curves. Pale, sallow skin, becoming pink and satiny smooth. Tired, wornout feeling vanished. Oodles of new pep that makes you popular and admired.

Only IROGEN can give you these things for its principle of "re-charging" the blood has proven its merits in thousands of hard, stubborn cases.

For Men, Too

IROGEN is for thin, tired, weakly men, as well as women. IROGEN

PALE, anemic skin, according to the best informed physicians, is the unfailing sign of weak blood. It is nature's danger signal of a pending disease, a warning which, if not heeded may prove disastrous, for it is conclusive evidence of a weakened condition of the blood, which renders the system powerless to resist disease.

IROGEN, the new discovery, is now known to supply the elements which Nature requires for the regeneration of the blood. Within a week IROGEN begins to restore the rosy color to the cheeks and lips; and the system begins to feel the vitalizing effect of enriched blood. Weariness, fatigue and lassitude gradually disappear and the natural strength and endurance of the system return. Every nerve and organ feels and shows the regeneration of the blood, and the evidence of weakness are gradually replaced by the symptoms of vigorous health, strength and endurance.

One man in Montreal, Canada, stated in his letter that he considered IROGEN entirely responsible for saving his business and his home. He had, he said, been hardly able to work for a year and a half because of weakness. Had dropped from 205 pounds to 181 pounds in weight. IROGEN was mailed to him by a New York friend. Five weeks later he wrote the letter shown in which he stated he had gained 19 pounds with full return of normal health and digestive and other ingredients of recognized therapeutic value.

PALE, anemic skin, according to the best informed physicians, is the unfailing sign of weak blood. It is nature's danger signal of a pending disease, a warning which, if not heeded may prove disastrous, for it is conclusive evidence of a weakened condition of the blood, which renders the system powerless to resist disease.

IROGEN, the new discovery, is now known to supply the elements which Nature requires for the regeneration of the blood. Junior Woman's Club Meets.
The Junior Woman's Club held one of the most enthusiastic meetings at the Woman's Club building Friday afternoon with Mrs. H. R. Goodall, Mrs. Francis Bowen and Miss Frances Norman at the hostesses.

Dink James was the speaker of the afternoon. He spoke on the subject of "Women's Place in Politics" which was excellent. He called attention to the original ideas of Democracy on which our government was founded. How we Democrats should look back at the past records of our government and realize the importance of women voting. He said it was the duty of every woman to vote and study the political problems of our country.

The business part of the program was called to order by the president Mrs. W. P. Young. Mrs. Young welcomed the new members to the club who were Mrs. R. E. Daughtridge, Mrs. C. E. Oakley, Mrs. Ralph Pendergraft, Mrs. James Bowers, Mrs. Roy Campbell, Miss Evelyn Wright, Mrs. Dink James, Mrs. Garland Woodard, Mrs. E. W. Morgan and Mrs. Jack Edwards. Miss Roselle Moore of Whitakers was a guest of the club for the afternoon.

Miss Helen Gray Jones who was chairman of the "Dance Revue" sponsored by the club, reminded the club members to buy tickets for the club meeting. Mrs. Norman Winslow, Mrs. Jesse Moye and Miss Jesse Moye, the committee to confer with the senior club about extending the time of the dances, gave a report. It was voted on by the club to have this same committee confer with them again since this matter was not settled. The club will sponsor "Once in a Blue Moon" October 20 and 21, and this was brought to the attention of the club members.

Mrs. Young appointed a committee to sell drinks at the district meeting of the Federation to be held here on October 25. Miss Mary Wright and Mrs. Norman Winslow were appointed to serve on this committee. Miss Margaret Fleming and Mrs. Jesse Moye are to assist the Woman's Club in serving the luncheon which will be served at that time.

The most important business was the point system which was submitted by Miss Clara Moye, chairman. Mrs. Marvin Sugg and Miss Rose Hadley, a committee appointed by the president at an executive board meeting. The idea of the point system is to require each club member to be responsible for so much work during the year. If any member fails to make the required number of points during the year her name would be dropped from the club roll at the end of the year. The club voted to accept this system.

Miss Bessie Brown, accompanied by Mrs. Elizabeth Andrews Hinds, gave two beautiful solo numbers. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.—Reported.

Mann to Explain Loans to Growers

Details of a plan just announced in Washington under which the government will accept cotton from North Carolina producers at 9 1-2 cents per pound as collateral on their seed loans will be explained by M. G. Mann, secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Cotton Growers' Co-operative Association, at a special meeting of Pitt County borrowers in the court house here Wednesday morning, October 19, at 10:30 o'clock.

Invitations urging them to attend have been mailed to all seed loan borrowers and to all co-operative members in the county, according to C. C. Hilton, local representative of the co-operative, who said a record crowd is expected. John T. Thorne, of Farmville, is co-operative director of this district, and during the 1931-1932 season was president of the board.

The meeting to be held here is one of a series of 36 the co-operative is holding in the main cotton growing counties of the State to familiarize borrowers with the cotton collateralization plan.

"Taken full advantage of, this liberal plan will mean the release of approximately $1,500,000 in this State which farmers can use to pay on indebtedness or to buy the necessities of life," Mr. Mann said recently.

Mr. Mann will go from here to Snow Hill where at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon he will address a similar meeting of Greene County growers.

ELEVEN DIVORCES GRANTED IN ONE DAY

Henderson, Oct. 11.—Eleven divorces were granted in Vance Superior Court in the less than two hours of the morning session when the civil docket was taken up today. Judge W. C. Harris, of Raleigh, is presiding. One of the divorces granted was to a colored plaintiff, all the others being white people.

In addition to those granted, there were several others on the calendar, and were either continued or carried over to a later day during the present term for one reason or another. The divorce mill's grinding today turned out perhaps the largest number of decrees for separation of married couples in the history of the county for any one day.

TO OPEN BIDS OCTOBER 15 ON DREDGING WORK

Wilmington, Oct. 11.—Bids for the first dredging contracts on the South Carolina portion of the Cape Fear-Winyah Bay link of intra-coastal waterway system will be opened at the office of Major Van B. Wilkes, Charleston district army engineer, at Charleston, on October 15.

The South Carolina link lies between Little River and Winyah Bay and is thirty-five miles in length. The first bids sought on this part of the project are for the removal of 6,000,000 cubic yards of material, about half of the total amount. Three million yards will be dredged at the southern end, the remaining three million in the north. The canal will be dug to a depth of ten feet.

Anyone interested in entering Mrs. Closs Hearn's art class, please communicate with her at once.—(Adv.)

SUNDOWN STORIES

FLOTILLA BOTILLA'S FEVER
By Mary Graham Bonner
Flotilla Botilla looked so sick that Willy Nilly was frightened into silence. Her face ooked burning hot and she tossed her head from side to side crying.

"Willy Nilly will pour water over me. He won't let me stay on fire. Oh, send for Fudde Muddle's Fire Department. Quacko will tell the Toad firemen how to work, but Willy Nilly will tell them all. Can't some one send for Willy Nilly?"

"I'm here, Flotilla Botilla," said Willy Nilly very gently. "There, there, Flotilla, Willy Nily is here, and a our friends have come. You'll be all right."

Willy Nilly's face was creased with worry—his little bit of a nose could hardly be noticed. He had never seen Flotilla Botilla look so ill. She was such a healthy child. But now her hair around her forehead was damp, her cheeks flaming bright and she did not know what she was saying.

Willy Lilly, however, wasn't the only one worried. All of Flotilla Botilla's friends were, too, and they felt very sorry for her.

"She came back with her clothes soaking wet after the heavy rain the other day," Flotilla Botilla's mother explained in a whisper. "She said it was her fault—that she had sat around in wet clothes and hadn't changed them right away."

"That's just like Flotilla Botilla," Willy Nilly whispered. "She came to help me because my roof leaked and she was soaked when she arrived. She didn't want to blame anyone but herself."

"And now the fever makes her think she is on fire! Poor Flotilla Botilla. But we'll make you well. We'll cool that fever." She seemed quieter for a moment—but only a moment.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
Hollywood, Oct. 11.—(AP)—A fair-sized section of studio ground now is being transformed into English soil—a portion of dear old London, to be exact—with hines, streets and public park, and a reproduction of Trafalgar square, monument and all.

It is on tremendous scale, and will be used in the filming of the much anticipated "Cavalcade," on which expense is not being spared. However, not all the cost of the set which is considerable even though constructed with much front and no back in the Hollywood tradition, will come out of the paltry million dollars set aside for the production.

Swapping Sets, Too.
Sets like this have multiple lives, because other studios requiring London backgrounds will be glad to pay for their own use, and each rental is credited against the original cost, which thus is divided among many productions. In time, because London will always be London, the set will pay for itself—just as the big ocean liner on the same lot has returned its cost and more enough more to construct a newer fashioned successor.

That transplanted section of New York truly justifies itself. You've seen it countless times.

Well Known Cast.
The all-English cast they've collected for this "Cavalcade" by the way, will not be entirely unknown to American audiences. Clive Brook of course has been in Hollywood so long he is one of the town's best known players.

Diana Wynyard, who has her big chance in this, will have been seen in "Rasputin" before "Cavalcade" is completed and already she has played in New York and on tour in "The Devil Passes."

About 31,000 fires in New York City last year took a toll of 122 lives, including those of six firemen.

WANT ADS PAY

New Bern, Oct. 11.—Twenty-five men, formerly unemployed, are working each day at Union Point here, getting the property there in readiness for the development and beautification plans drafted by the Federal Parks Commission. It has been learned, from Mrs. Ben E. Moore, president of the Woman's Club, which is co-operating with the city aldermen for the purpose of making a public park of the site.

The welfare department of the county has sent the unemployed workers there in return for pay for their efforts, chiefly in free food and other supplies. They are reported to be much interested individually in the project and putting forth earnest work. In direct charge is C. D. Lancaster, chairman of the parks committee of the board of aldermen.

Boy Discoverer of Planet Pluto Is 'Freshie' Now

Lawrence, Kas., Oct. 11.—(AP)—It isn't every university or college that can boast of a student preparing to major in astronomy who already has the discovery of a planet to his credit.

In fact the only such institution at present is at the University of Kansas, where Clyde Tombaugh, the Burdette, Kas., youth who first sighted Pluto, is a freshman.

Tombaugh modestly insists he is "just another freshman," but he may have a hard time convincing hero-worshipping collegians at Kansas. They remember that he is the youth who peered through the giant telescope in Lowell observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., in February, 1930, and distinguished among the myriad stars a hitherto unclassified light, that of a new planet.

Tombaugh is unassuming about that discovery. He points out that science had reckoned there should be a planet at about the place in the sky where Pluto was sighted.

He happened to see it first. Before he is permitted to venture into the active study of astronomy at Kansas, Tombaugh will have to complete required courses, the same as any other student.

He plans to take physical education work, follow sports closely and include in his university life a share of social activities.

REACH COMPROMISE IN $100,000 DAMAGE SUIT

Washington, N. C., Oct. 11.—A compromise settlement in the suit of the estate of Beverly G. Moss vs. the receivers of the Seaboard Air Line Railway company as the result of an accident in Aberdeen in which Mr. Moss met his death, was made public today.

Mr. Moss was killed in Aberdeen when his car was struck by a Seaboard locomotive nearly a year ago. The estate was suing for $100,000 based on Mr. Moss' earning power and life expectancy.

The exact amount of the compromise has not been made public, but is understood that it was for a much smaller amount than was sued for.

Swiftly the tides of fashion change in this fast-moving world of ours, and strangely enough our yesterdays often as not, appear again as smart to-morrows. That's what has happened to us this fall—Victorian fashions, discarded years ago along with horseless carriages and maidenly mannerisms, have cropped out again to become big news to the world of fashion. So now we talk about leg o' mutton sleeves, jabots, and high necklines and we get just as excited over them as did our grandmothers, way back when Victoria reigned.

ABOUT TOWN

Farmers of Pitt county are forever striving to improve their condition by trying out new experiments in diversification. The past has proven that too much dependence cannot be placed in money crops alone, and the growers are branching out trying to find crops they may fall back upon if the principal crops fail.

Diversification was given consideration years ago but not until the severe price decline two years ago did the growers really seriously turn their attention to other crops.

The planting of crops in the late fall has added greatly to the annual revenue of the community, and as the farmers become more proficient in this field their earnings should show a pronounced increase.

Pocketbooks have been boosted by the raising of chickens and hogs also and this industry will undoubtedly show pronounced increase in future years also with the cultivation of other crops.

Financial independence of the farmer has been a matter of discussion for years but nothing definite has been done to reach this goal until attention was turned to extra sources of revenue such as provided in the new industries.

Boy Scouts of Greenville are going to do their bit toward improving the condition of the poor next Saturday when they observe annual "Bundle Day."

On this day the Scouts go from house to house throughout the community and collect bundles which residents desire to contribute to their cause. Last year the whole district raised thousands of garments for people unable to care for themselves and they will do the same this year.

The Scouts are always trying to put in a good turn for people suffering from unusual financial conditions and they are to be highly commended. These youths are being trained for a life of service and that after all is the most anybody gets out of existence.

Because of the popular belief that the prohibition law will be repealed by the next Congress, violations of the prohibition law are becoming more flagrant in many parts of the country.

Persons who believe the time is not far distant when they will be able to dispense liquors in public places have already joined the violators and made application for license to operate liquor houses if the law is changed.

Nothing Venture
 By PATRICIA WENTWORTH

SYNOPSIS: As a fruitless search for him goes on almost over his head, Jervis Weare comes to himself in a forgotten cave used years before by smugglers. He realizes with terror that soon the sea will rise above where he lies; that great iron bars are between him and safety. Now he realizes ruefully that Rosamund Carew and Robert Leonard brought him here—and that his wife Nan had warned him against them.

A VISITOR APPEARS

Jervis did not know how long he had been listening to the tide. There had been a moment of horrid panic when he knew that the tide was coming in.

It had been high tide last night—Tuesday night—at 9 o'clock. It would be high tide, and spring tide, at ten minutes past eight on Wednesday morning. That made low tide, at ten minutes past eight on Wednesday morning. That made low tide just after two. It must have been somewhere about three o'clock when he was knocked out. It was very difficult to gauge time, and he had no watch. He regretted his watch, with its luminous dial.

Well, if it was one o'clock or thereabouts, the tide had turned two hours before, and had another three hours to go. The question was—how far up was it going to come? He was on the landward side of the bars in the inner cave. Where did Foxy store his kegs? He didn't know. He left them banging about in the tide-water.

A little careful exploration showed him that he was on a raised ledge about six feet by eight. On one side it was bounded by a slippery tilted boulder of unknown height, and on the other three sides by an equally unknown drop. He couldn't climb the boulder; it was water-worn and as slippery as glass. Water-worn—and that tide was coming in.

There must be some ledge to which he could climb. . . . The thought of the passage came into his mind. Leonard must have brought him here by the passage. Then there must be a way down into the cave—and not too hard a way, because Leonard couldn't have carried him down much of a slope. He wondered if there were steps cut in the wall.

He must wait until there was enough water to float him, and then swim round the cage feeling for a foot-hold. His head was better now, but he felt terribly thirsty. The lapping of the water suggested a long cool drink. His thirst became intense. Thirst, and the lapping of the tide.

"I should hate that death banded my eyes, and forebore and crept past."

Where did that come from? He didn't know. He must have read it. And there was something farther on about the "black minute." Black minute—black eternity—the lapping, rising water. If he could only see. . . .

With the word in his mind, he saw.

A harsh dragging, grating sound made a confusion among the echoes of the cave, and cutting through the black darkness and the confusion, came a white and brilliant shaft of light.

Jervis looked up at it, tingling with a sense of shock. Light—a level ray of it overhead.

It sprang out of the darkness into which he was staring, and he saw black scarred rock all wet and shining, with fissures that ran moisture.

Someone had come down the passage from Old Foxy's house and was standing in the mouth of it with a powerful electric torch in his hand. Then suddenly the beam swung down and hit him in the face. He threw up his arm involuntarily, as if to ward a blow; and from the black mouth of the passage Robert Leonard laughed.

"So you've come to have you?"

"Take that damned light off me!" said Jervis furiously.

He felt it go, and then flick back and catch him blinking.

Robert Leonard laughed again.

"Not looking quite your best—are you? Like a wash and brush up? Oh, I see you've had the wash. What about a drink? You've got a bit of a head, haven't you?" As he spoke he swung the light to and fro.

Jervis steadied himself against the intermittent dazzle, and got what he could from it. Only a four foot drop from where he was to pool level. There were two pools, one running right back to the wall of the cave, and another between him and the iron bars.

The tide was right up to the bars now, and the step was hidden. The passage from Foxy's house had been behind him. The beam cut down from it at an angle and swung to and fro. There must be a fairly foot-worthy path between the edge of the pool and the tilted boulder, because Leonard must have brought him that way.

The cave was about twenty feet across, and his rock a ledge on the side of the middle—say eight feet from the wall where the passage came out.

The light swung in. He saw that there was just such a narrow path as he had guessed at. The ray poured down almost vertically for a moment, and then cut right across the cave and made a steady circle on the dripping wall. Jervis guessed that the torch had been set down.

"I've come to talk business," said Robert Leonard.

Jervis spoke to him for the first

MORAL INSTRUCTION
 By Alice Judson Peale

Edith was so careless that she left in her mathematics copy-book the sheets which she had torn from the copy-book of her elder sister upon which two years earlier had been solved the same problems.

The teacher drew Edith's attention to the oversight, saying: "You see you are more honest than you want to be. A part of you had to confess in spite of you."

The teacher then turned to the class, before which the little episode had taken place and pointed out to them that when we do wrong there always is some part of us that wants to confess. Sometimes it bothers us so much that we go straight and tell on ourselves.

More often though we do not have quite this much courage. Then our conscience which is at work without our knowing it, makes us betray ourselves in some way, so that when everything at last comes out we will be free of our feeling of guilt.

The teacher's purpose in this talk was to attempt to give his charges some insight into their own problems.

If the child realizes he cannot do wrong without paying for it, even if "Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the noted artist, Karl Godwin... inspired by the fierce and brilliant assault by Clive and a handful of followers, outnumbered 20 to 1 by savage hordes of bloodthirsty natives at the Battle of Plassey—the birth of the British Indian Empire—as described in the famous Henty book, "With Clive in India."

The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES
New York, Oct. 11.—Quite a lot of affectionate fuss is made over the police department's horses. And no wonder.

These sleek, graceful animals do much toward making New York's mounted patrol the "finest in the world." Their street behavior could well serve as a model for a lot of people.

They know their beats as well as the men who ride them. They know at what time and at what point along the block the man will come out with a lump of sugar or a piece of apple. They are gentle with children and elderly women who are over-demonstrative and tolerant of the sidewalk groups who stare and chuck. The education of a police horse is painstaking and thorough. He is acquainted with the smell of powder, the sound of shot and the sight of fire. He and his rider must know all about each other, and the horse is taught what to do when he is left without the rider. It is to the credit of the mounted division that the men take such pride in their charges. The men beam their satisfaction when their horses are admired.

Shying in the street might prove fatal to the horses. They are broken to traffic so carefully that the noisy onrush of cars doesn't phase them. And a grand sight it is, to see a mountie rush his steed through a maze of motors, to bawl out some driver who has parked wrong.

Gotham Glimpses

That section of Manhattan which has the prettiest backyards is unromantically called Turtle Bay, in the upper East Side Forties.

Turtle Bay's street fronts are not so impressive. Some of the old residences (most of them converted into apartment houses) presents a mournful and uninviting view to the passerby. Their walls rise from the sidewalks, with no space for greenery or flowers up forward.

But the fair side gardens in the rear usually are well kept and treasured by the jammed-up city dwellers. Here and there you'll find one dressed up elaborately, with fountain and ornamental what-nots—a surprising contrast to the front.

The backyards of Turtle Bay especially are esteemed by those who keep cats and dogs. The feline neighbors assemble on the fences for choral practice every night and the pups go wild.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, Oct. 11.—(AP)—President Hoover again has shown that it is among children and the sees of his own childhood that the intimately personal and human side of his life finds expression.

On his recent trip to Iowa this fact was strikingly brought out. The President did more to "humanize" himself on that trip perhaps than has been done since he entered the White House. It is no secret in Washington that attempts to portray this side of Mr. Hoover have not been encouraged by him.

He shrinks from that sort of thing naturally. He feels that his private life is his own.

But on his way to Des Moines and in the Iowa capital itself he seemed to have forgotten his aversion to such things when he realized that he was back where he was reared.

Memories

At West Liberty when he was greeted by his boyhood school teacher, memories of the days when he was in the third grade flooded his mind.

"No speed will ever seem to great as sliding down hill on one's tummy," he reminisced.

"No sport will ever equal the mud-lined swimming hole."

"No food will ever taste so good as the family supper of those days."

He began his speech in Des Moines by recalling the period of depression in his childhood days when the sole resources of joy at Christmas "were popcorn balls, sorghum and hickory nuts; when for a flock of disappointed children there were no store toys, no store clothes...because of hard times."

Children Interest Him.

The President always has shown a tenderness and affection when talking of children and the problems of childhood.

Some of the most intimate stories written about the President cen-

Baby Role Irks Patricia Ellis; Grown-Up Film Parts Her Goal

Patricia Ellis is only 17 and she may look young, but she's an experienced actress and she wants people to consider her grown-up, something they don't seem to do now. She wants to do comedy and character parts in the movies if she can get people to quit thinking of her as a youngster.

Hollywood Oct. 11.—(AP)—Patricia Ellis is getting good and tired of being "taken for a baby."

The 17-year-old daughter of Alexander Leftwich, New York musical show producer, Patricia has had acting experience that overshadows that of most of the screen novices now under contract to the studios.

She undersold all her father's leading women in the last few years, assisted him with lighting and costuming and knows stage production too.

She is slim, blond and blue-eyed, and attractive enough to be on the preferred list of those at her studio, being trained for stardom. But she says her worst misfortune is that she still is "taken for a baby."

"I can't help my face," she says. "I'll look five years old until the day I die, I suppose. But I've had more acting experience than most girls my age, and it seems a little silly to still be considered a youngster."

ter around this subject.

His invitation to young Bryan Untied, the Colorado schoolboy hero of the blizzard that almost wiped out a bus load of children, to visit the White House is one example.

BANDAGES FOR FOOTBALL PLAYERS ARE BIG ITEM

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Now that the football season is started there should be a seasonal demand for hospital supplies.

Tucker P. Smith who heads the locker room training staff at Ohio State University, offers a few statistics to give an idea of how much it costs to keep the players bandaged up.

Ohio State players, he says, use almost 10,000 yards of adhesive tape in a season, and a like amount of gauze bandage.

One hundred pounds of cotton is a reasonable requirement in a season and about five gallons of rubber oil usually is consumed.

A ten yard roll of tape is good for about three ankles and about six miles of it serve for a season.

WASHINGTON U. ORGANIZES FOOTBALL "KNOT-HOLE GANG"

St. Louis, Oct. 11.—(AP)—A "knot-hole gang" of boys under 15 who will be admitted to Washington University home games free has been formed by Jimmy Conzelman, new head football coach. Previously boys were charged 25 cents admission.

The Campaign Puzzle

Study Past State-by-State Votes in Making Your Forecasts

Arkansas Vote in 1928
Smith 119,196; Hoover 77,751
Arkansas has never left the "solid South" voting for every Democratic presidential candidate since reconstruction days.

The state has nine electoral votes.

The vote received by Herbert Hoover was the largest the state ever had given to a Republican candidate, although Warren G. Harding received 71,117 votes in 1920.

The prohibition issue was outstanding in the 1928 campaign, and an anti-Smith faction, within the Democratic party was active in the state, which usually has voted for Senator Joseph P. Robinson of Arkansas was the Democratic candidate for vice-president that year.

In the state elections of 1930 Harvey Parnell (D) was elected governor by a vote of approximately five to one over J. O. Livesey (R). In the same year Senator Robinson was re-elected without opposition.

The planks of the two parties dealing with prohibition have been the subject of most of the discussion in the current campaign. Economic programs, particularly with regard to farm relief, have been another major topic.

Arkansas requires no registration of voters. Poll tax payments in 1928 numbered 368,000. Payments in 1932 totaled 330,000.

Maryland's Vote in 1928
Hoover 301,479; Smith 223,626

In the nine elections since 1892, Maryland has voted twice for the Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1912 and 1916. The Republican majorities in 1901 and 1908 were less than 1,000 out of total votes of more than 200,000. Republican majorities in the last three elections have been substantial.

The Republican tendency shown in the presidential record has not held in state elections, and Maryland has had but two Republican governors since Civil War days. In 1928 when Herbert Hoover received a majority of 77,853 for the presidency, the state elected four Democratic representatives out of six.

In the state elections of 1930 Albert C. Ritchie (D) was elected governor with 283,639 votes as against 216,894 for William F. Broening (R). The campaign in that year involved no national issues and the personal popularity of Ritchie generally was credited with influencing the size of his majority.

Maryland long has been regarded as a stronghold of wet strength. Maryland has eight electoral votes this year, the same number that it had before redistricting.

Nevada's Vote in 1928
Hoover 18,320; Smith 14,090

Nevada has voted for the Republican candidates in the last three presidential elections. Before that it had voted twice for Wilson and three times for Bryan. In 1904 it voted for Theodore Roosevelt.

Prohibition and continuance of prosperity formed the major issues in the 1928 campaign, and Alfred E. Smith's repeal stand was credited with much responsibility for his showing. Nevada has been predominantly wet. In the senatorial campaign of that year Senator Key Pittman (D) received a majority of 6,101.

Campaigns in the state elections of 1930 were fought out on local issues only and Republicans won most of the offices. F. B. Balzar (R) was elected governor with 18,442 votes against 16,192 for C. L. Richards (D).

Registration figures for this year's primaries showed increases for both parties as compared with 1928. Republican registrations increased from 19,386 in 1928 to 21,873 in 1932. Democratic registrations rose in the same period from 15,082 to 22,539.

Economic questions, particularly as they affect silver mining and livestock raising, have been in the foreground in the present campaign.

party—with a few honorable exceptions—and the only reason the Republican party in North Carolina declared in favor of prohibition four years ago was because Al Smith converted them. It was purely a political conversion and the party will backslide just as soon as the campaign is over.

pounds of leaf for $151,462.73 with a general price average of $12.42 per hundred pounds.

The price situation was described as particularly strong on all grades and especially the improved types which were very much in demand and the object of spirited bidding.

There was over 700,000 pounds of leaf on the warehouse floors today, but it was believed work would be completed during the later afternoon.

Fair weather over the week-end enabled farmers to give more attention than usual to the preparation of tobacco for marketing and this was largely responsible for the large amount of weed on the floors yesterday and today and at conclusion of the week's activities last Friday.

Defense counsel appealed to the North Carolina Supreme Court affirmed the convictions and refused to reconsider this decision. A second appeal in behalf of the defendants is now pending before the state tribunal, but the court has under advisement a state motion for dismissal.

A state brief opposing a writ of certiorari to bring the case of Davis convicted individually on a charge of making and publishing a false report on the condition of the Central Bank, which he headed as president, also has been filed with the high court.

Luke Lea, Nashville, Tenn., publisher and financier, was the central figure in the Asheville trials during the summer of 1931. He is former United States senator and during the world war gained wide notice with a plot to "kidnap" Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. He was a colonel in the American expeditionary forces.

Opposing the petition in the Leas-Davis case, the state contends:

1. No constitutional right was denied the petitioners and no federal question was presented for the jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court.
2. Due notice was given the defendants and opportunity to be heard.
3. Buncombe County Superior Court, at which they were tried, was a properly organized court and had jurisdiction under the laws and the constitution of North Carolina.

Fair weather over the week-end enabled farmers to give more attention than usual to the preparation of tobacco for marketing and this was largely responsible for the large amount of weed on the floors yesterday and today and at conclusion of the week's activities last Friday.

that the real strategy of a campaign develops. What happens in the open usually is the product of many earnest hours of information and advice of the most confidential character, of discussions and disputes which often rise to the level of high drama.

It should not be assumed that any great party organization directs its fire point-blank at the enemy. It may send speakers, as a matter of form, into territory it does not dream of capturing. It may, and frequently does, make pretended thrusts to deceive the other side. But back of it all is a central plan of campaign which directs itself ceaselessly toward the concentration of the real effort against those sectors which appear most vulnerable.

Politicians in general regard secrecy as a prime requirement. Often the real intent is not disclosed until the very last weeks of the campaign, when presumably it is too late for the opposition to do anything about it.

Yast Army At Work

The preparation and execution of such a plan on a national scale naturally requires a vast army of workers, ramifying even the most remote precincts.

The sinews of the campaign are information and money; and in the collection of each, many hands are enlisted. Just now, in these swift weeks of October, the quest for the two essentials is at its height.

Party workers not only conduct confidential work as to the intention of the voters, but they try to ascertain on what issues decisions are being reached in this locality and that. The results, consolidated county by county, and then state by state, give national party headquarters dependable data on which to judge how and into what quarter the major attack should be directed.

So far as money is concerned, it is the usual practice to assign fixed quotas to states and sub-divisions of states and to hold local leaders responsible, on pain of incurring great displeasure at headquarters, for the collection of these amounts.

These operations reach their peak in October because of a long prevalent belief among politicians that in that month public opinion becomes "set"; that polls taken then are likely to show the settled judgment of the voters, and that money can most easily be collected then, under the pressure of the final appeal to popular enthusiasm.

New York Cotton
New York, Oct. 11.—Cotton futures opened steady 7 to 9 points on Liverpool cables indicating increased trade.

After selling up to 6.60 for December fluctuations were narrow and irregular. Little Southern selling was noted, however and offerings were taken on price stretch with March holding steady with an advance of 10 to 12 points.

Prices later rose to about 13 to 18 points on active months with December selling at 6.70 at midday. The market closed quiet.

Stock Market
New York, Oct. 11.—The stock market recovered today after a sweeping recession of the week. Selling appeared to have spent its force at the opening as prices recovered 1 to 4 points.

During the early trading a number of issues slipped back a point or two, but soon recovered. Such issues as American Telephone, Union Pacific, American Tobacco B, Case and others rose about 3 to 4.

United States Steel lost part of a 2 point rise. Miscellaneous issues up a point or two included American Gas, Dupont, Northern Pacific and Consolidated Gas.
