THREE ADMIT PART IN PLOT

Men Charged With Plan to Kidnap Millionaires and Hold Them for Ransom; Arrested as they Deposited forged Notes in Vault; Several Others Released.

Redland, Calif., Oct. 15.—(AP)—At least ten millionaires, winter residents of Southern California, were said here today to have been victims of a kidnaping plot which has resulted in the arrest of four men.

Three of those under arrest—Charles Lombard, William Snyder and Eddie Dow—were reported by officers to have confessed that they planned to hold for ransom Clarence White, multi-millionaire, of Cleveland, O., and Dr. G. L. Lombard (no relation to the arrested man) wealthy physician.

The name of the other victim of the plot was not revealed. Lombard, Snyder and two others were arrested yesterday at Lombard's home. Dr. Howard Odum Edits Lectures

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 15.—Howard W. Odum, Kenan professor of sociology and director of the Institute for research in social science in the University of North Carolina, has edited and prepared for publication a series of lectures taken from the lectures of the late Dr. Franklin Henry Giddings, noted sociologist of Columbia University. The book is entitled "Civilization and Society: An Account of the Development and Behavior of Human Society." It comes from the press of Henry Holt & Company.

The volume is offered chiefly for teaching purposes, but so full is it of well conceived recommendations and criticisms that it is believed the general reader will find it of immense value.

The material left by the author covers a wide range of material and includes a chapter on the evolution of society and a discussion of biological factors, as well as a description of the way in which social ideals develop.

Dr. Giddings describes the beginnings of democracy and deals with its relation to social control, arguing for an expression of liberties except in cases of war.

He asserts that "the political theorists who expect democracy to be saved by a growing deference of the multitude to the leadership of brains are themselves about as ignorant of the facts as the books that could be discovered in our remotest Main Street."

TELLS OF AID FOR THE POOR

K. T. Futrell Explains to Kiwanians What Government is Doing to Help Jobless.

The effort of the federal government to cooperate with the various communities of the nation in relieving suffering resulting from unemployment was outlined to the Kiwanis Club last night by K. T. Futrell, director of the Pitt County Department of Public Welfare, through which the government fund will be distributed.

The object of the program, the speaker told the Kiwanians, is to provide labor for unemployed people and enable them to furnish their families with the necessities of life during the cold winter months.

The government will distribute funds among the communities according to their needs. The needs were recently determined through a questionnaire sent out through state agencies and then returned to the government.

In a recent apportionment of the funds, Pitt county was appropriated $3,750. Mr. Futrell said and this was based upon a report filed with the government through local relief agencies cooperating with the department of welfare.

Three hundred million dollars will be spent by the government in this monumental attempt to relieve suffering resulting from lack of employment throughout the nation, and the funds devoted to any single community will be based upon actual needs and not population.

The government merely supplements local relief efforts, Mr. Futrell stated. All funds will be pooled with the county treasurer and will (Continued on Page Six)

Dad Knows Answer to Queries Of Promising Chicago Back

Note great kicking style of Pat Page, Jr., University of Chicago hallback. He learned a lot of that form from his dad, Pat, sr., assistant coach on the Midway.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—(AP)—For the second successive autumn an ambitious young man on the University of Chicago football team is being referred to his dad when troubled by some bit of gridiron startery.

Harlan Orville Page, jr. son of an all-around Maroon athlete ace of 1906-09, is one of the more dominant reasons for the optimism that unquestionably is more prevalent on the Midway this fall than for nearly a decade.

His father, "Pat" Page, is chief assistant to Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg. Stagg's younger son, Pat, quarterbacked the 1931 Maroon eleven.

So far as the record books show, this is the first time two representatives of second generation football have played under their coaching fathers at the same school in successive years.

New Costume's Chick on Street, Or at Dinner

By DIANA MERWIN (Associated Press Fashion Editor) Paris, Oct. 12.—(AP)—Three-way costumes, ready for street wear, tea or dinner, are the outstanding winter fashion offering for the "girl who goes about."

They are simple sleeveless frocks of dark wool or velvet having skirts six or seven inches from the ground, accompanied by removable under-blouses or bolero jackets, and topped by three-quarter length fur-trimmed coats.

When the entire costume is worn, it is suitable for the street, when the coat is removed it is ready for tea, and when the little blouse or bolero comes off the frock becomes a dinner gown.

One of these new three-way costumes has a sleeveless princess frock of sheer black wool, which is worn with a little puff-sleeved blouse of white crepe and a three-quarter length black wool coat colored in silver fox.

Others are made of velvet in henna, dark blue or brown, and accompanied by boleros and coats to match.

Dark velvet suits worn with light blouses promise to be another favorite costume this winter for tea-time and restaurant dinner wear.

Their jackets are hip-length or three-quarter length designs, richly trimmed with furs, while their blouses may be tucked-in models of lame, silver cloth or light hued crepes, or hip-length tunics of white satin.

One chic velvet ensemble is designed of black velvet with a jacket trimmed in black fox and a tuck-in blouse of tangerine and gold.

Heim designs this three-way costume to be worn with a three-quarter length coat on the street, with the white blouse, for tea-time and without it for dinner. It is made of black wool and dull white crepe.

SALE OF REAL ESTATE. Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in that certain Deed in Trust executed and delivered to J. B. James, Trustee, by Delia M. McGee, on the 8th day of June, 1927, which said Deed in Trust is duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Pitt County in Book T-16, page 272, default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured, the undersigned will offer for sale at public auction before the Court House in the Town of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, on Monday, November 14, 1932 at 12 o'clock noon the following described real estate, to-wit:

That certain house and lot, situate in the County of Pitt and in the Town of Greenville, being a part of Lot No. 47 in the plan of said Town; BEGINNING at the intersection of the paved sidewalk at the corner of Fifth and Greene Streets, and running westwardly with Fifth Street seventy-four (74) feet to the paved sidewalk on Greene Street; thence northwardly with Greene Street seventy-four (74) feet to the beginning, being the home of the late D. Success for the declarer came by giving Morse a trick and thereby making a valuable entry in the declarer's hand in order that a finesse could be taken against Morse. Here was the hand:

Cahill opened the bidding with two spades. An original bid of three no trump would be likely to prevent a slam contract in case south had some strength. East passed, and south bid two no trump, showing extreme weakness. West passed, and Cahill bid three no trump, which west doubled.

West opened the queen of hearts. North won the trick and led the ten of spades, which west took with the king. This play enabled the declarer to lead the spade seven to the north hand and take the ace of the south with the eight.

The success of which seemed to indicate probable possession of the diamond king, gave game to the declarer.

Had south been unable to put himself in his hand for finesse only two no trump would have been made, the eight certain tricks in the north hand. Eventually north would have extreme weakness. HOPE TO REOPEN FAYETTEVILLE BANK

Fayetteville, Oct. 15.—Stockholders of the Cumberland County National Bank yesterday afternoon approved with enthusiasm a plan whereby it is believed a new national bank can be opened to replace the Cumberland National, which closed its doors last January.

The proposition was made to the stockholders by C. W. Sandrock, well-known real estate and insurance man of Fayetteville, who with his associates proposes to supply $40,000 of the $110,000 of new money required by the Comptroller of the Currency before the proposed new bank can be chartered.

The stockholders are given the opportunity to subscribe the remaining $70,000, as the most interested persons.

The stockholders presented voted in approval of the plan and in favor of canvassing all the shareholders immediately. The plan under which Mr. Sandrock proposes to act has already been approved by the Comptroller of the Currency.

Senator Hiram Johnson's clear-cut statement that he cannot vote for President Hoover in the forthcoming election probably threw a bombshell into Republican camps in view of the prominence of the California Republican leader.

This is another indication that members of Mr. Hoover's own party are turning to the Democrats for leadership in the future, and it doesn't sound very good for the President's aspirations for re-election in November.

When men of Johnson's type begin falling out of the party ranks it is time for the President to sit up and really begin to take serious consideration of the political situation in this country.

If members of his own party will not support him it is difficult to understand how he expects supporters of other parties to fall in behind him.

Democrats rallied behind Hoover because of anti-Smith sentiment in 1928 but there will be no such dissension in the ranks this time, and between Republicans and the Democrats too, Roosevelt should go into the White House on one of the greatest majorities ever registered by a presidential candidate.

Two persons were killed and six injured in a series of automobile accidents in this highway patrol division during the month of September, it was revealed today in the report of patrol activities made public by Lieut. Lester Jones.

While the loss of life is not as heavy as the preceding month, it is sufficiently serious to cause people to give more attention to driving in the future.

Loss of life occurs in this district every month in spite of efforts of the highway patrol to reduce the toll. Their efforts are futile, however, if the public refuses to give due consideration to traffic laws regulating the operation of automobiles in this state.

Many of the deaths occur at railroad crossings. People fail to take due consideration of the importance of stopping as advised by signs at each crossing. They figure since they did not see trains on the line at some other time that they will not have to slow down for one now.

Eventually the train is there and happens to come along just in time to send the occupants of the car into eternity or to the hospital probably maimed for life.

Speed is the order of the day, but how much more important is the preservation of human life. Drivers accustomed to driving fast, should consider the people riding with them if not themselves and attempt to go at a rate of speed that would enable them to handle their car in case of emergency.

This has been the largest week of the season on the Greenville tobacco market and more tobacco was sold during the period than for the corresponding period last year.

This is something for tobaccoists to get up on their hind legs and crow about in face of the fifty per cent reduction of the crop of this territory. It shows that Greenville is drawing more tobacco from remote communities than any other year in history. It is also a good bet that the market will be the largest tobacco market established last season when Greenville sold more tobacco than any other market in the belt.

Nothing Venture

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH

SYNOPSIS: For the second time Nan dreams her missing husband, Jervis Weaver is lying on wet stones. She braves a fierce storm to look for him in the sinister house of Robert Leonard. In a cave almost beneath her feet lies Jervis, weak from exposure, shattered by the knowledge that Rosamund Carew, to whom he once was engaged, has given him food and at the same time asked a huge ransom from him.

Chapter 48

FERDINAND RETURNS

The storm howling about her ears, Nan half walked, half was thrown around the house. She tried the latch of the kitchen door. It gave. Standing in the black silence of the room, she was startled by the strident sound of a telephone bell. It was not in the kitchen; she groped toward the sound. She was in a passageway.

She looked behind her; the kitchen was in a yellow twilight that rapidly grew brighter. She found a door across the passage from the room in which the bell was ringing, and slipped through.

Nan saw Robert Leonard turn into the room across the passage, carefully carrying a kerosene lamp. The ringing stopped. Through the crack left between the door and the jamb Nan heard an angry ejaculation, an interchange of words. She had no picture of Rosamund, worried by the storm and the consequent high tide, urgently demanding that Leonard take Jervis up into the cellar.

Leonard said: "Don't be a fool, then 'Anything else?'" Nan waited for nothing more. She had seen a dim light in the kitchen—it came from an open door in a far corner. She slipped back down the passage, down the brick steps into the cellar. In the middle of the cellar was a barrel upon which stood a lighted candle, and in the corner there was the raised lid of a trap door.

The inner conviction that had brought Nan to this cellar did not desert her now. She took her flashlight from her pocket, and without hesitation plunged through the trap door. She was so weary from her battle with the storm that her hand shook a little. She walked rapidly down the slight slope; the path grew steeper, and she came to feel the nearing presence of the sea.

A sharp turn to the right, and Nan saw about five yards away, Jervis lying as she had seen him lie in her dream.

At the same moment Jervis opened his eyes and, pulling on the bar, sat up. He saw, not Rosamund, but one of those dreams which come out of the darkness and the silence. His wrist was bound to the bar with a handkerchief. He fumbled at the knot, and Nan went down on her knees and put her hands on his and held them fast.

He said, "Nan!" and she said, "Jervis!" and all at once it wasn't a dream any longer.

"Nan!" he said. "Nan!" And Nan put up her face, and he kissed her through the bars with a desperate straining towards life, and love, and happiness, and all those other every-day things which were in jeopardy.

Then the black swell lifted again and washed right over the sill. Nan caught at the padlock with both hands.

"It's no use," said Jervis—"he's taken the key." Then, quickly, "How did you come here?"

"I don't know," said Nan. "I came. I saw you in a dream." She added after a moment: "There's a storm."

"It's driving the tide. What is it—thunder, or wind?"

"Both."

"We must get out of here," said Jervis. "You must get out and get help. You're not shut in?"

"No."

"Then you must get hold of the chauffeur. Leonard's armed. Is he in the house?"

"Yes—telephoning. He came up out of the passage and left the door open."

"You must go."

She leaned towards him, and they kissed again.

He said: "I'll be all right—I can hold on to the bar." And then without a word she ran from him round the bend.

And she came to the steps which led to the straight paved end of the passage, she caught her breath in a gasp of relief. The trap was still open, and a faint candle-light shined.

Nan trembled. His arm was cold and stiff, but it held her close. "I loved you so much." "Then? You loved me then?" "Yes. And then when you came in that day and said that Rosamund had thrived on you I couldn't bear it."

"Nan—Nan I'm not worth it. I've been a beast to you. But I do love you now."

The cold wash of the water shook them. "Nan—" said Jervis. "You must not stay here."

Nan pressed closer. "Nan—darling—you mustn't. Go back up the passage. I may have to swim for it."

A sudden movement of the whole flood thrust Jervis hard against the bars and almost took Nan out of his arms. It dragged back again, and he was put to it to keep his feet.

"I can't go," said Nan. "I'm not afraid if you hold me."

That surging lift of the tide came again. They clung together, and felt their bars between them strain with the force of the water. And then with the backward pull something hard whipped about Nan's left ankle and clung there. She pulled herself free of Jervis and stopped down into the water.

And then she felt a chain. Her fingers closed on it, and she came up laughing and crying, and thus it lit the beam of the torch for Jervis to see. Eighteen inches of bright chain, and a small bright key.

"He dropped it with the lamp," said Jervis. He turned the key in the lock. The surge of water flung them forward with the gate; they splashed precariously to shallow water, to the dry passage. Nan had lost her torch, but they did not miss it. Their minds were illumined by something brighter than electricity.

It seemed a long time until they reached the trap. Jervis couldn't lift it.

"Have to wait for someone," said he, too happy to care. "Will anybody come?" asked Nan.

School News

Rotarians, Here's a Hand! The mutual understanding and friendliness which exists between the Greenville Rotary Club and the Greenville high school is very obvious. Every year the Rotarians seem to enjoy aiding and making happy members of our high school family. Each year the club fetes the high school athletes, and throughout the year boosts them in their undertakings. When cash has been needed, the club has responded generously. For all this the school feels deeply grateful, and those who most feel the influence of the club are doubly grateful.

The most recent cooperative effort on the part of the club is the announcement that a Junior Rotarian will be chosen from the senior class each month who will be guest of the club for a month. Qualifications of character, leadership and scholarship will be stressed in selecting delegates; and any boy chosen as Junior Rotarian may rightly feel proud. The association of youth with men of experience and understanding will be of inestimable value to the Junior Rotarians; and perhaps through the Junior Rotarian the club members will catch a ray of youthful enthusiasm and renew their efforts for a better community.

To Pilot Senior Class. On Monday and Tuesday at assembly period the senior class elected officers for this year.

Carl Joyner, popular senior, was chosen for president over his running mates George Willard and Baneroff Moseley. Recognized for his aggressive personality, Joyner is expected to carry the senior class to an ever increasing position of prominence in high school affairs, and will receive complete cooperation from faculty and class members.

For its vice-president, the class selected Naomi Gaskins who doubtless will prove as she has many times before, an asset in all projects before the class. For secretary and treasurer, the class made a wise choice in the selection of Lynette Dixon, a member who distinguished herself last year by her complete and whole-hearted cooperation in every class activity.

Post Graduate Work. For the first time in the history of the Greenville high school post graduate courses are being offered. This year three commercial subjects, typing, shorthand and accounting are being given by L. M. Cannon.

Classes for adults or graduates of the high school begin at 7:45 each morning and continue to 11:35. There is a class of typing from 3:30 to 4:30 each afternoon.

At the present about 45 students are enrolled for these classes, and already much progress has been made, according to the instructor.

These classes are possible through a federal enactment known as the Smith-Hughes bill according to which the federal, state and local authorities must contribute. Each student pays one dollar per month as tuition, which is to be applied to expenses of the courses, and not to the instructor's salary.

L. M. Cannon of Burlington, has charge of the entire commercial department, and the post graduate courses do not interfere with his undergraduate classes. Before coming to Greenville Mr. Cannon taught at Eion College, and conducted his own business school in Burlington. He has studied in his field at Rochester Business Institute, University of North Carolina and Columbia University; and is eminently qualified for his position.

tal fortunes are estimated at $300,000,000, have been invited to settle in Persia, the land of their forefathers. The invitation was issued under a scheme to set aside 1,000 square miles in Persia for the 100,000 Parsees, whose ancestors were driven from their homes 1,200 years ago. The Shah of Persia has endorsed the plan.

The vast fortunes of many of the Parsees living in India were made mainly in the cotton industry. Business circles in Persia believe that returning Parsees would invest money in Persian industries.

Greenville High School Plays New Bern to a Tie

Greenville High School's football team went to New Bern yesterday to play its fourth game of the season and when the whistle blew for the end of the game the score was 0-0. It was the fourth time that Greenville's opponents had failed to cross the Greenville goal line.

The game yesterday was supposed to be a tight one according to all pre-game dope and the result showed that the dopsters were not far from wrong. New Bern in scoring territory twice once on the four yard line, but each time the Greenville stalwarts rose up to throw back the New Bern runners. Twice Greenville was in scoring position and once, but for the error of the referee, would surely have scored. New Bern was in possession of the ball on their own 30-yard line fourth down and about nine to go. Dawson went back to kick and the whole Greenville line swarmed on him to block the kick. The ball hit a Greenville lineman and went straight up into the air. Joe Gaston gathered it in and headed for the goal. He succeeded in getting into the clear and was headed for a touchdown with no one near him when the referee blew the whistle to bring the ball back. He claimed that a blocked punt was dead where the kick was blocked. After much arguing he admitted that he had pulled a homer but nothing could be done about it at that time as the play could not be run over.

Most of the game was played in mid-field. Each team seemed to be able to run up first downs at will but when they got into scoring territory the opposing defense would stiffen and the ball would go over New Bern had the edge in first downs made but Greenville gained more yardage than did their opponents. Several times the Greenville line, Taylor and Hardee, got loose for long gains only to be brought down by the secondary when it looked as though they were in the clear. Taylor ran thirty yards around left end on a lateral pass play and later traveled 35 on a fake kick. Hardee started on a little jump around left end and that ended up 35 yards from where it started and MacAdams hit the line several times for gains of five to fifteen yards. The work of both lines was good with the work of Tom Wilson Greenville center, being especially outstanding. J. T. Wndham played a nice game at left end. Greenville will play its last home conference game of the season next Friday when they take on the ancient rivals from Washington. The Washington team has yet to win a game this season but all dope is thrown to the winds when Greenville and Washington meet. Greenville will be striving to get revenge for the defeats handed her by the Washington lads for the last three years and Washington will be trying to win its first game of the season.

Stock Market

Stocks New York, Oct. 15.—(AP)—Gains of the previous session were well maintained in a short session of the stock market today, but important impetus was lacking. The list worked higher in early trading, a number of shares going up a point or so. Losses of a fraction of a point were reduced in final trading, however. The final tone was steady, and a turnover of the few hours was one-half million dollars.

PLAN TO HELP PITT JOBLESS

and men to be used in the project were discussed at considerable length. (Continued from Page One) Only work of a public nature will be given consideration under the Federal plan and only people unable to provide for themselves in any other way will be given employment. Responsibility of organizing and directing the government work program is in the hands of the welfare department and all funds used in the public relief program in this county will be pooled and turned over to the county treasurer for distribution at the direction of the general relief committee.

Mr. Futrell told the officials that $3,750 had been apportioned by the government to Pitt County, but that the amount of money available was unlimited. The total amount received, he said, would depend mainly upon the seriousness of the situation here and the disposition of the public to supplement the Federal government's effort to aid the unemployed.

Mr. Futrell stated that the Public Welfare Board would appoint representatives in various parts of the county to help in lining up public work projects and carrying out the government program. The appropriations to the various sections of the county is not based on population, Mr. Futrell said, but upon the need of the people. Sections where the unemployment situation is extremely acute will be able to obtain more than those where conditions are not as severe. It was upon this assumption that he stated the amount to be obtained by this county was unlimited providing the Federal Government is convinced of the needs.

The officials evinced much interest in the undertaking and fired questions by the hundreds at the welfare director. They went home with a clear understanding of what was expected of them and with hope they would be able to care more completely of the needs of their respective sections through the work program to be inaugurated as soon as plans have been completed.

TELLS OF AID FOR THE POOR
(Continued from Page One) be paid out on demand of the general relief committee. Further requests for funds, it was stated, will be based on what we are doing ourselves, and an unlimited amount of money will be available if we "play ball" fairly with the government and convince the relief workers that our needs are severe and deserving of help.

The money derived from the public works program may be used for any kind of public work—providing of employment for the jobless. This plan opens up a way for providing for every kind of demand made upon the relief agencies from time to time as lack of work has brought about the unprecedented situation throughout the nation. Committees will be named in each community to cooperate with the welfare department in ascertaining the needs of the people and every effort will be made to provide sufficient work to take care of those unable to provide for themselves.

LEAF PRICES STRONG HERE
(Continued from Page One) the week-end tobacconists were anticipating heavier offerings the first week. Sales each day this week have been around the million pound mark with exception of a day or so when over a half million pounds of leaf was in evidence. One of the outstanding things in connection with the week's activities was the fact that more tobacco was handled than for the corresponding period last year. This was a fine record in the fact of the 50 per cent shortage of the crop in this belt and was looked upon with interest by members of the industry as well as the public generally.

Who is the better first baseman of the two, Bill Terry of the Giants or Lou Gehrig of the Yankees, taking no consideration their hitting as well as fielding ability? Inquires J. M. of New Haven. Personally, with the 1932 season freshest in mind, we would prefer Gehrig to Terry, although Jimmie Foxx would be our choice over either one, if the field is thrown open. Gehrig has the edge over his rival across the river, however, because of his greater durability and consistency, his longer range hitting of the type that more often breaks up the old ball game. In other words, Gehrig's lack of the defensive polish and speed that characterizes Terry's play is not sufficient to offset his bigger threat at the plate. The batting averages do not show an advantage for either but in the home run and runs-batted-in departments the big Yankee slugger has a decided margin.

DEVILS WILL MEET DEAKS COMING WEEK
Durham, N. C., Oct. 15.—Playing the last of three straight Southern Conference games today, the Blue Devils of Duke will re-enter North Carolina's Big Five race next week by meeting the Wake Forest Deacons at Duke stadium Friday. After putting themselves at the top of the State heap by defeating Davidson on successive Saturdays met V. M. I., Auburn and Maryland, conference foes. Coaches and followers of the Blue Devils are hoping that the coming week will bring the return of some of the players from the injured list. The Duke squad has been hard hit this fall by that route. At the present there are seven players unable to play, one of them out for the season, some out for two or three more weeks, and others who may get in shape for the game with the Deacons. Those who may return to action this week are Pop Werner, veteran guard; Marion Rickards, sophomore reserve tackle, and Marion Brumbach, the halfback flash of the 1932 freshman team. Werner was in the Auburn game for a few minutes and was slated to play some against Maryland today, working back into the run of things gradually. Brumbach, who has been in bad shape all season, may or may not be able to play this week. Rickards, injured about ten days ago, should be accessible this week. Joe Sink, veteran center, is lost for the season and Waite Hamrick, reserve pivot man, has a couple of weeks to remain on the list due to a bad knee. John Brownlee, star halfback who sustained a shoulder injury this week, is out for at least two weeks and possibly longer, and B. O. Cornlius, promising sophomore halfback, hurt the week after the opener with Davidson, has three or four more weeks on the sidelines with an ankle injury.
