Sailor Held in Spain For Part In Lindbergh Case

Man Giving Name As Gean Saul Arrested After "Talking Too Much in Saloon with Sailors"; Detectives Admit Man Knows Something About Abduction and Distribution of Ransom Money.

Seville, Spain, Oct. 26.—(AP)—At the request of the American vice consul here today, police detained a man who gave his name as Gean Saul, and arranged to send him to Madrid in connection with the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

The man was apprehended after the American consulate had received a note from two sailors who said they had talked with Saul in a saloon here and that he had seemed "to know too much about the kidnaping."

The vice consul asked the police to investigate the case, and it was discovered that the man's identification papers were incomplete. Police said he made contradictory statements about his nationality and declined to answer questions.

He declared he would answer no questions until he could face American police where he might expect squariness.

At the consulate it was said the man spoke with a heavy accent, and it was expected he is not an American. The name he gave police is probably an alias.

Detectives who questioned Saul admitted he knew something about the kidnaping and distribution of $50,000 ransom for the safe return of the Lindbergh baby.

The American consul attended the preliminary hearing, but announced he had withdrawn from the case and left it in the hands of the police, although he would file a report to the embassy at Madrid.

Late News Flashes

Banker Begins Prison Term

Raleigh, Oct. 26.—(AP)—J. Mack Rhodes, former president of the First National Bank of Henderson, this afternoon was admitted to the state prison here to begin serving a sentence of from 6 to 16 years for violation of the state banking laws.

Rhodes entered the prison about noon, being accompanied by Chief of Police Powell. Warden Honeycutt announced that several friends of Rhodes were also with him.

This afternoon Rhodes was to be put through regular prison routine, photographing and finger printing, and assigned to uniform and cell.

Due to the fact that several hundred prisoners are now in Central prison without duties, it will be sometime before the former banker is given a job, Honeycutt said.

Contest Lead Gradually Passing to Hard Workers

The real winners on November 12 in The Daily Reflector subscription drive are gradually showing their heels to the other contenders. At the outset of the eight weeks' drive many signified their intention of taking an active part, but not of an exceptionally large number who seemed interested in earning extra money this year, only fourteen in all made an initial subscription return, and so the first list of contestants entered for the paper's cash awards of $600, $300, $150, $100 and $50 showed fourteen active contestants all told.

Out of this number one decided to give up the ghost after working a few weeks, and judging from the renewals and new subscriptions being turned in from time to time to the campaign office for the enterprise a few others have about (Continued on Page Six)

JURY PROBES FLOGGINGS

Terrorists' Beating of Nineteen Persons in Florida Under Eye of the Law

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 26.—(AP)—A grand jury was called into session here today to investigate reported terrorists' floggings of nineteen persons during the last two weeks.

Fifteen witnesses, including two women victims, were summoned to appear for questioning. Preliminary hearing for the five men charged with assault in the case of Sally Derringer and daughter, Mrs. Ola Bell Tilstrap, originally set for today, was postponed until next week.

The presiding judge said the delay was requested by the sheriff's office to give more time to prove the charges in the case. The five men under arrest were pointed out by Mrs. Derringer and were later identified as members of a band that took them from their home and carried them to a wooded area on the outskirts of the city and flogged them with straps.

The men were released on bond of $1,000 each pending hearing.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Present Petition to President Hoover

Washington, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Immediate cash payment of the soldiers' bonus, enactment of legislation granting pensions to widows and orphans of the World War veterans and preservation of disability allowances were recommended to President Hoover today by veterans of Foreign Wars.

The appeal, conveying action taken in the thirty-third national encampment of the organization at Sacramento, Calif., last September, was taken to the White House by Admiral Robert Coontz, U. S. N., retired, new commander of the organization.

Action of the veterans opposed cancellation of foreign debts, urged strict enforcement of the law and said recommendations later would be made for improving veterans' rehabilitation and hospitalization.

DUNNS FAIL IN SUIT HERE

Greenville People Fail To Recover in Action Against Robersonville Man

R. W. Dunn and wife of Greenville, failed to recover in their $5,400 damage suit against W. H. Adkins of Robersonville, in the civil term of Superior Court yesterday.

After deliberating less than fifteen minutes the jury returned the verdict against the plaintiffs.

The Dunns were suing for the death of an occupant of their car and serious injuries to others when their car wrecked on the Bethel highway a short distance from Greenville sometime ago.

The Dunn car, according to evidence, attempting to pass another car driven by Mr. Adkins, left the road and turned over. Mrs. Dunn, who was driving, claimed Adkins pulled to the left and caused her car to wreck. Adkins contended the woman lost control of the machine and caused it to turn over.

The case was begun Monday and was completed shortly after the noon hour yesterday.

LIGHT LEAF SALES TODAY

Slightly Over Half Million Pounds of Tobacco Offered for Sale Today

Sales were lighter on the Greenville tobacco market today with indications that floors of all warehouses would be cleared during the early afternoon.

The light sale was attributed largely to cloudy weather which gave forth threat of rain that did not come until this morning.

Although sales were not as heavy yesterday as on the day before, the report of K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, showed the market sold 789,902 pounds of leaf for $101,798.61 at an average of $13.04 per hundred pounds.

It was estimated that there was around 600,000 pounds of leaf on the market today.

Due to increased offerings of inferior grades yesterday the price situation was not quite as high as the day before, although it ranged above those in evidence the first of the season.

If weather conditions should improve sales the last of the week (Continued on Page Six)

HIS WIFE TO TAKE STUMP

Governor Will Not Attend New York Meeting Because Of A Conference With Members of Legislature for Relief of Unemployment; Mrs. Roosevelt Will Make Speaking Tour in Behalf of Husband

New York, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, returned from his Southern campaign tour today and announced that he would not be able to attend a rally for him here tomorrow night given by the screen and stage division of the Democratic National Committee.

The Governor's special train pulled into the city about 6 o'clock this morning, but he did not leave for his town house until some time later.

In the meantime, he received a brief visit from his wife, who is herself starting out on a trip for the Democratic ticket today. Mrs. Roosevelt was stopped from approaching here husband's train by a station guard who did not recognize her. But after her identity was learned, she entered the train.

Several hundred persons were waiting at the train to see the Governor. When he passed through the station he was cheered wildly. He waved his battered campaign hat in response to the demonstration of his admirers.

Under the escort of motorcycle police he drove home for a brief rest, before making a visit to the National Campaign Headquarters for a conference with leaders.

He said that although he would not be able to attend the stage and screen committee's rally and dinner here tomorrow night, he would address the crowd from Albany over long distance telephone.

It was learned from a member of his party that he had cancelled the New York City engagement to take time for a conference with Democratic and Republican leaders of both Houses of the State Legislature concerning the proposed special legislation to relieve the distress among the unemployed.

The Campaign Puzzle

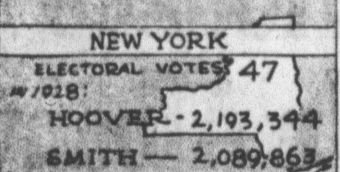

Study Past State-by-State Votes in Making Your Forecast

New York's Vote in 1928
Hoover 2,193,344; Smith 2,089,863

New York's huge block of electoral votes, increased this year from 45 to 47, has made it always a sought after state in every presidential election.

"Upstate" New York usually is regarded as strongly Republican and New York city as strongly Democratic. In the nine elections since Cleveland's in 1892, New York has voted for a Democratic presidential candidate but once, in 1912. The state administration has been Democratic since 1919, except in 1923 and 1924.

Continuance of prosperous conditions formed a major issue in the Hoover-Smith race of 1928 and the election was marked by the failure of New York city to give Smith a majority of the size expected.

In the gubernatorial election of 1930, Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected with 1,770,342 votes against 1,048,341 for Charles H. Tuttle his Republican opponent.

Democratic leaders said Roosevelt's appeal in "upstate" New York was responsible for his unusually large majority. Republican leaders laid it to a stay-at-home Republican vote cool towards Tuttle.

Economic issues have dominated the current campaign, with prohibition also a topic of major interest. Nomination of Herbert Lehman for governor with the backing of Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith was regarded as helping to solidify the Democratic party.

Arizona's Vote in 1928
Hoover 52,533; Smith 38,537

Arizona's first presidential vote after admission to statehood, in 1912 was given to Woodrow Wilson by a majority of less than 400 over his two opponents. Wilson won the state by 13,000 in 1916. In the three elections since then the state's vote has gone to the Republican candidates.

The majority given to Herbert Hoover in 1928 was the largest the state had yet given to any presidential candidate. Preservation of high copper prices, then near their all-time peak, formed the major issue of that campaign.

Henry F. Ashurst (D) was re-elected to the United States Senate for his fourth term in 1928 by a majority of more than 7,000. The state's other senator, Carl Hayden, also is a Democrat.

Arizona's state administrations usually have been Democratic, two of the state's three Republican governors were elected in the presidential years of 1920 and 1928. In 1930 the state returned to office Gov. George W. P. Hunt with 48,875 votes as against 46,231 for his Republican opponent.

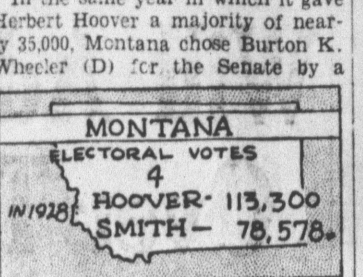

The rehabilitation of Arizona's dominant copper industry, prohibition, and the soldiers' bonus have been the issues attracting much attention in the current campaign.

Arizona this year has three electoral votes.

Montana's Vote in 1928
Hoover 113,300; Smith 78,578

Montana's political record shows no consistent tendency toward the presidential nominees of either party. Republican nominees have carried the state in the last three elections. Before that Montana had voted twice for Bryan and twice for Wilson, and for the Republican nominees in 1904 and 1908.

In the same year in which it gave Herbert Hoover a majority of nearly 35,000, Montana chose Burton K. Wheeler (D) for the Senate by a majority of more than 12,000. Two years later it re-elected Thomas J. Hunt with a majority of almost 40,000 votes.

John Erickson (D) was elected governor in 1928 with a majority of 33,000 votes and is a candidate this year to succeed himself.

Copper mining dominates many sections of Montana and the rehabilitation of this industry is uppermost in the minds of a large block of voters. Montana is also a leading wheat producing state, and the programs of the opposing candidates for the protection of agriculture have been a major issue.

Prohibition, though subordinated in campaign discussions to economic issues, has been a subject of keen interest. The state voted in 1928 to repeal its state enforcement act.

Montana has four electoral votes this year, the same number as before reapportionment.

"And here's something else. Notice that these long shreds are all cut the same width. It stands to reason they burn smoother and cooler.

Campaign CHEERLEADERS

(By The Associated Press)

Snappier of the Republican "cheer-leaders" is the debonair Secretary of War, Patrick J. Hurley.

Tall, smartly groomed and engaging, this cabinetier is a striking platform speaker. Wealthy, possessed of a distinguished war record and a talent for entertaining, he has risen high among the younger generation of Republican stalwarts.

Hurley's political fortunes are tied closely to those of his chief. Wholly a product of the Hoover administration in national politics, he has been one of its doughtiest champions.

When the Republican-Democratic "truce for the emergency period" was terminated last winter the 49-year-old Secretary of War was first to open fire on Democratic critics of the administration. The past summer he launched his campaign work in characteristic fashion by leasing an airplane for three months. He does considerable reading and writing aboard ship.

The Oklahoman is considered one of the chief Republican cannoners in the final battle for ballots. He is a "hit 'em hammer and tongs" campaigner who apprends enjoys exchanging oratorical wallops with the fiercest of the Democratic foemen.

candidate on his speaking tour of the West.

An authority on constitutional law he has been called a foremost senatorial cross-examiner of witnesses. He is, however, not of the high-powered orator type. He does not strive for rhetorical effect but sets up his arguments in the cogent manner of the seasoned court pleader.

It has been said that he is "the most solemn Irishman" in American political life.

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, whose task is to organize Republican women, is primarily the strategist who plans the political battle, rather than the verbal bomb-thrower at the front.

Most of her time is spent in executive work in the political nerve-center of her party, Republican headquarters in Chicago. But she occasionally dashes out to make an effectively-phrased stump speech.

Blond, blue-eyed and youthful-looking, Mrs. Yost is usually a surprise to an audience unprepared for a thorough grasp of the political scene from one who "seems so feminine."

For twenty years in the thick of what she terms "movements and causes," Mrs. Yost learned women and their interests by working with them. Much of that time she spent in the national capital, and she became an expert in the "key women" cut over the country.

Two years ago she took over the task of organizing the Republican women forces, as aid to her former college professor, Senator Simeon Pess, who had shortly before accepted chairmanship of the Republican National Committee.

Under Mrs. Yost's supervision, many Republican women's clubs have grown up.

Really women, as women, but with the same sort of facts-and-figures attack on the opposition that men politicians make, is the strategy of Nellie Tayloe Ross, vice-chairman of the Democratic party.

"It is entire probable that women will decide this election as they did the last one," Mrs. Ross tells her predominately feminine audiences in her stump speeches. "How tragic it would be if, in this greatest national emergency since they received the ballot, women being tried, should be found wanting."

Then she launches attacks on the opposing party and its program.

Shortly after the Democratic defeat in 1928, diminutive Mrs. Ross, former governor of Wyoming, was brought into Washington "to strengthen the woman-arm of the Democratic party," as she puts it.

The men leaders particularly wished her to win back the Democratic woman-vote which they believed was largely lost in 1928.

To her own party leaders she argued that to win woman-support they must give women a real place in party councils. She has traveled into every State since then, appealing to women voters.

Round Table Club Meeting.
The Round Table Club met on Tuesday, Oct. 25, at the home of Mrs. S. J. Everett on Dickinson avenue.

The president, Mrs. R. L. Smith, extended a welcome to Mrs. Howard McGinnis, a new member of the club; to Mesdames E. L. Hillman and Herbert ReBarker, club guests for the year; and to Misses Rose, Grigsby, Newell and Mrs. Katherine Thomas, guests for the afternoon.

After a short business session, Mrs. H. L. Carr told of the life of John D. Rockefeller—the man who started out fighting poverty, and whose son must now fight wealth. Though growing old, he says he is too busy trying to be useful to think of the end; and, as a result of his practical, simple mode of living, he will very likely live through his one hundredth birthday. He was trained in his youth to give even of the little that he had, and when confronted with the question "What to do with wealth?" he replied: "Cultivate a taste for giving." He has given more for philanthropy than any man living, and is not so much interested in the plan of his giving, as in the results in human benefits. He has applied the Golden Rule to all his problems, and believes that Christianity should be applied to all walks of life. The Rockefeller, father and son, are demonstrating to men and women of wealth that when their own needs and those of their families are met, there are needs of mankind to be considered.

At the end of this very interesting paper, the club members gave quotations on philanthropy. Mrs. Austin made an enthusiastic report of the district meeting of Federated Clubs held here last week.

The hostess, assisted by her young son and daughter, served a delightful salad course, bringing to a close one of the best meetings of the year.—Reported.

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York, Oct. 26.—Broadway's social season got under way with the opening of the Pierrette Dansante Club, which stages its swanky supper dances in one of Park Avenue's grand hotels.

Society has a headline representation at these Saturday night affairs, and some of the town's better known artists and writers mingle with the stage folk. The board of governors includes such names as Jeanne Aubert, Howard Chandler Christy, Walter P. Chrysler, Jr., Peggy Fears, Bert Lytell, Herbert Marshall, S. H. Rothafel, Lenore Ulric, and Mrs. Julius Walsh.

One sees all of these, and dozens of other glittering characters at the dances. There's always a sprinkling of debutantes on hand.

The inevitable star-gazers and autograph-hunters hang around the doors to watch the famous come and go.

On the opening night this awestruck assemblage was treated to the sight of one of the vivacious debbies sliding down the brass rail of the grand stairway, just inside the Park Avenue entrance, into the arms of her escort. Such fun!

Gritty Girl.
The road ahead looks rosy for Katherine Hepburn now, since the Broadway actress scored a Hollywood triumph in her picture with John Barrymore. But behind Miss Hepburn's screen and stage success is a story of heartbreak that only a very determined and talented young woman could have brought to such a happy sequence.

A Hartford, Conn., girl, she was graduated from Bryn Mawr and it seemed at first, was destined to step right into Broadway prominence. She had cut quite a figure in school dramatics, was possessed of undeniable beauty and an attractive personality. A Baltimore stock company manager, ambitious to make the Broadway grade himself, gave her a good part in a show he was bringing here.

Miss Hepburn played the part for one performance in a Great Neck tryout. "Amateur" was written all over her.

In the next three years she had a couple of understudy jobs, but waited in vain for an opportunity to play. When she landed roles in other productions, either she failed to make the grade herself or the show keeled over quickly.

Even in the show which finally brought her to the attention of Broadway, "The Warrior's Husband" of last season, she was dropped from the cast as unsatisfactory. But it so happened that the girl who took her place was less liked by the management. Production had to be rushed. There was no time to rehearse another newcomer, so Miss Hepburn was recalled.

All at once she found herself. When "The Warrior's Husband" opened she scored a personal hit. The mark of the amateur was gone.

Lucky Thirteen
Herman Shumlin, the producer, will tell you that 13 is his lucky number. By way of illustration, he offers the following facts:

He produced "The Last Mile" on a February 13.

Twelve persons in the cast had 13 letters in their names.

He bought "Grand Hotel" on a 13th.

It opened on a 13th.

There are 13 letters in his name.

He thinks 1930 was his luckiest year, and the digits added give 13.

"ONCE IN A BLUE MOON" HERE NEXT WEEK

About once in a Blue Moon, something queer, something phenomenal, something ridiculous or absurd—like the birth of Siamese twins—occurs to arouse widespread interest, and to be recalled as folk-lore years afterwards. So many of these outlandish freaks turn up along with the romance and drama in "Once in a Blue Moon" that the author, W. A. Royall, decided to name it "Once in a Blue Moon."

By the way, this is not the same year or so ago, with the same title. This is an entirely different production and will be presented here November 3 and 4 under the auspices of the Greenville Junior Woman's Club.

The action all takes place at a popular new club, where anything might happen. Where people gather to play, to have a good time, even infants just out of arms. On these stirring events, which happen but "Once in a Blue Moon," come to pass, there is a masquerade ball in progress. At the opening the club members have gathered to while away the moments, to talk and sing songs led by a harmonizing quartette and of course the chorus girls are there with the latest steps.

Then there's the main cast, and the masqueraders—but that's the surprise. Some prefer comedy and they will certainly find it. Others prefer something more serious and the drama. Some like colorful costumes, dancing, singing and music, which is generously present throughout the play. In fact "Once in a Blue Moon" promises to be one of the best entertainments produced here in years and remember—you haven't seen this play before.

MY BEAUTY HINT

(By Mae West)

Ten hours of fretful, jerky sleep will leave one tired and irritable, whereas six hours of completely relaxed sleep will bring refreshment.

To those persons who find it difficult to rest, an hour's walk just before retiring every night will work wonders. Another habit to form if you would become a sound sleeper is that of eating a light meal in the evening. Heavy food is a great sleep-chaser, I find.

A cup of warm milk, a warm bath, a bit of reading before turning off the light, are other suggestions for insomnia victims.

There will be no prayer meeting at Immanuel Baptist Church tonight. Our people will meet with the other citizens at the Methodist Church, where we are to hear Mr. George Burnett, state secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, who is the guest of Greenville Ministerial Association. We request all our people to be present. The Anti-Saloon League is the voice of the Protestant church in the matter of prohibition, and can be trusted to deal honestly with the question.

U. D. C. To Meet Tomorrow.

The George B. Singletary chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will meet tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon at 3:30 with Mrs. J. H. Blount and East Ninth street.

Mr. Brown In Duke Hospital.

Friends of Wiley Brown will regret to learn that he is quite ill in Duke Hospital, Durham, where he underwent an operation yesterday.

Mrs. Brown and other members of the family are with him.

The Sans Souci Club Meets.

The Sans Souci Book Club met with Mrs. Key Brown on Tuesday, October 25. The home was beautifully decorated with fall flowers while suggestions of Halloween made us aware of the approaching season.

Our president, Mrs. Blount, appointed Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Ragsdale to co-operate with a committee from the Woman's Club in replacing our mile of tree on the Sally Southall Cotten Drive.

After the exchange of books Mrs. J. H. Waldrop gave as the best article of the month, "How I Shall Vote," from the October Forum. This consisted of short articles by some of the best known men and women in the United States today, giving their reasons for voting as they expect to vote. These frank expressions proved very interesting.

The subject of the program for the afternoon was "America Of Today." This was ably presented in a talk by Dr. ReBarker of the college. He spoke interestingly of America's outstanding position among nations of the world today. A delicious salad course was served by Mrs. Brown, assisted by Miss Purvis.

Guests of the club for the afternoon were Mrs. James Brown of Baltimore, Mrs. H. L. Rivers and Mrs. Roland King.—Reported.

End Of Century Club Meets.

The End of the Century Club held a very delightful meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. L. Little on Fifth street.

Mrs. J. L. Fleming, the president, presided over a short business session and the books were distributed. The program was then turned over to Mrs. M. K. Fort who gave a most interesting paper on "Carillons." She told of how these huge bells were manufactured and how they vary in size and tone, the largest weighing about five tons. The smallest carillon consists of twenty-three bells and the largest of seventy-two bells, the latter being in Riverside Church in New York City.

The carillon itself dates back four hundred years while the chimes are known to have been used eleven hundred years ago. The largest foundries in the United States are in Troy, N. Y., and Baltimore. The work of making them is a tireless and most painstaking undertaking. They are made of copper and brass. The volume depends upon the size and weight.

The first carillon in this country was erected in 1922 and there about two hundred in the world today.

In closing, Mrs. Fort mentioned several of the largest ones in our own country. The largest is the one in Riverside Church in New York. This was presented by John D. Rockefeller Jr., as a memorial to his mother. Another was presented to the State of Florida by Edward Bok and consists of sixty-one bells. This is a most beautiful tower made of pink marble and can be heard for miles around. There is a lovely carillon in Richmond, Va., built as a memorial to her world war heroes. Still another and closer home is the one at Duke University which consists of fifty bells, the largest weighing eleven thousand pounds.

After this most interesting paper which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, Mrs. Little, assisted by Mrs. C. A. Bowen, served a delicious salad course.

The meeting on November 8th will be with Mrs. M. K. Fort.—Reported.

Return From Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Moyer and Mrs. George F. Hadley have returned from Richmond, Va., where Mr. Moyer has been in St. Luke's Hospital.

His many friends will be glad to learn that he is improving.

ABOUT TOWN

Governor Roosevelt was given a rousing welcome on his visit to Raleigh yesterday.

Ten thousand people standing in a drizzling rain showed the New York governor they are behind him solidly for the election of President in the November election.

Roosevelt knows the people of this state are friendly toward him and he also knows that thousands of other people in various parts of the country look upon him favorably.

The governor predicted that the country would go Democratic by one of the largest votes in history. He said that not only Democrats but Republicans would fall in line with the Democrats because they realize there will be no prosperity without a change of parties.

Tobacco sales continued heavy on the Greenville tobacco market, showing conclusively that farmers of this great bright leaf believe they are able to find the best facilities in the country on this market. Greenville's growth as a tobacco center has been steady over a period of many years and in spite of the shortage of the crop this season there is every reason to believe the distinction of the world's largest bright leaf market will be maintained.

Greenville tobaccoists are constantly striving to give the best to be had in the way of prices and service and this is largely responsible for the recognition the market has received from growers in all parts of the country.

Voters who did not vote in the June primary and who have become twenty-one years of age since that time have been asked to register this week and prepare themselves for the great battle of ballots less than two weeks off.

Everybody should take advantage of the privilege of expressing their sentiment at the polls, and it is hoped those who have not registered will get busy and do so at once.

W. E. Hooks, chairman of the county Democratic Executive Committee, has called for whole-hearted support at the polls and this cannot be given if everybody doesn't register and be prepared to express a preference for the various candidates seeking office.

It was fitting and proper that the Pitt County Bar should pay tribute to the three members who died sometime ago in exercises at the noon recess of court today.

These men, Col. F. O. James, Col. Harry Skinner and Sam T. Carson, played an important part in the life of the community, and it was proper the organization which they represented should honor them in exercises of this kind.

Col. Skinner, who died a few years ago, represented the county in many capacities and did his bit toward improving the life of the community and nation.

Col. James served the city, county and state in many fields, and his service in behalf of improvement of the government gave him a prominent place in the life of this state.

Sam Carson was a leader of young members of the Democratic party and did much in crystallizing sentiment in behalf of the organization. Men of this type always leave an indelible imprint on the life of the community in which they live, and each will be remembered indefinitely for their service to the people.

Pay your taxes and help the schools run the extended term in the city and county, is the appeal which officials have sent out from time to time the last several months.

The city council on the eve of the opening of city schools impressed upon the people the necessity of prompt payment of taxes if the schools are to run nine months this year.

This leaves the question of the length of the school term entirely in the hands of the taxpayers, and

A PATH TO PARADISE

SYNOPSIS: When Santa Dawn tells Dicky, her fiance, that she has decided to follow Clive, her sweet heart of long standing, to Europe and marry him, Dicky "comforts" her. She marries Dicky, but on the way to Havana Dicky drinks too much, and calls her "Lou-Lou." The truth about Dicky's past suddenly dawns upon Santa—too late. Many things have made the situation what it is, chiefly her mother's jealousy of Clive, which prompted her to keep Santa in an artificial European atmosphere until she became an accomplished heart-breaker. For Clive had been the son of Eric Dawn's first love, who jilted him before his marriage to Santa's mother.

Chapter 9

THE WRONG CHOICE

Nine o'clock on a November morning—a chill Chicago sky. Marriage wasn't all that it was cracked up to be. Feeling little and pulseless Santa stood gazing down from her apartment at the pigmy stream of automobiles racing far below along Lake Shore Drive. At nineteen, surly, she had the right to be happy. All those people down there, were they happy?

Behind her Ann, the cheerful dumpy maid she employed, announced. "Breakfast ready." Madam. Santa flinched. It hurt to be addressed as madam. Her idea of heaven was to find herself again a fluffy debutante. Dick's friends wore moustaches and were as ancient as her father; their wives had reached the trying-to-be-young stage. To have no one else with whom to associate when you yourself were really young, was pathetic.

A discreet cough brought her back to the present.

"I heard you the first time, Ann." Turning from the window, she faced into the tastefully furnished room. If making a home held a husband's affections, she'd done her best. And she'd cost him nothing. An estate which netted her fifteen thousand a year had been Grandfather Summers' wedding present. Dicky ought to be grateful. This was the one morning of all mornings to have shown his gratitude.

She pulled herself together. Why not make another try? She would promise, if he'd promise. That his mood might be receptive she must appear conciliatory. Transferring the breakfast to a tray, she carried it to his bedside.

"Morning, Dicky!" He rolled over and yawned. "What time is it? Goodness, you're up bright and early!" "Isn't early, Dicky. All the future U. S. Presidents have been in their offices for half an hour."

"Never yearned to be President. Wouldn't accept it if they offered it me." He raised himself on his elbow. "Don't distress yourself; they won't." "How about a kiss?" he invited her.

She smiled. "So you have remembered?" He ruffled his blond hair. "Remembered what?" Her smile faded. "You haven't." She poured his coffee, sugared and milked it.

"I could throw it at you." She spoke crossly. "What to do with him? After his least pardonable follies he always greeted her with this blissful air of innocence. He had no memory for yesterdays—made her feel that her grievances were imaginary.

"What's up? You're disappointed." "Not at all." She shrugged away. "It only happens that today is the first anniversary of our wedding." "That so?" He helped himself from a dish to disguise his confusion. "What's this—bacon?"

"Our first year together is ended," she persisted. "Has it satisfied you?" "Let's leave post-mortems to coroners," he grinned. "I'm not satisfied," her voice pursued him.

"That's not odd. Who is?" He assumed the light comedy manner of a bachelor uncle. "Given the choice, do you suppose anyone would go through the ceremony twice—that's to say with the same person?"

"You mean that we've made a mess of things. If the fault's mine, tell me." "It's the first time you've owned that you could have a fault, Santa. Your parents taught you to believe that you were perfect."

"As your women friends taught you. But this pot calling the kettle black sets us nowhere. Can't we do better?" "Depends on you." "All right then," she made a weary gesture. "You're the one who's perfect. What's my failing that most annoys you?"

"Most?" he pondered. "That you are a drill-sergeant—seem convinced you were born to run me." It is hoped they will get busy and settle up as early as possible and make it possible for the schools to run the extended term. The same applies to the county school system.

"But Dicky," she protested in patient denial. "I don't want to run you. If I drag you from your bed and try to spur your ambition, it's because I share your fortunes. I'd give anything to have a husband on whom I could depend."

"You've said it." He pointed an accusing finger. "You don't trust me."

"O. Dicky, must I tell you that again? You're irresponsible as a mischievous boy. What happened last night was an example. You take me to a dance and then vanish. A couple I hardly know feel sorry for me and bring me home. You return by yourself hours later. How you'd spent your time was obvious."

"Last night was an exception," he avoided her eyes.

"They're all exceptions," she accused him. "You're becoming a booze-hound. The habit's growing. Nice people steer clear of you."

He sat up with as much dignity as a man in pajamas can muster.

"So that's your opinion of me on our first anniversary!" "Which you didn't remember," she challenged. "Rubbish!" he coaxed. "We don't get along too badly."

She perched herself on the foot of the bed. "An older woman might have handled you, Dicky. There's fourteen years between us. We belong to different generations."

Any reference to his age irritated him. "Handled! There you go. Can't you get it into your head that a man detests to be managed? And the difference in our ages was your reason for accepting me. You were sick of boys; a man of the world could make allowances."

She nodded. "But I didn't realize that men of the world make allowances in order to be excused. I've been excusing you since the third night of our honeymoon."

"The trouble between us," he blustered, "is that you have money at a moment when I haven't." "I knew that was coming." Her face darkened. "You paid for the honeymoon; since then I've paid for everything."

"My bad luck," he countered. "Was I to blame that my real estate venture went bust? I certainly did you royally so long as I had money."

"And yourself as well. Your money lasted as long as our honeymoon." "Everything depends on the interpretation," he sneered. "It does." She continued relentlessly. "You've never played the game by me. If you had, I'd stake you with my last dollar. But from the first day you misrepresented yourself. You didn't lie outright; but you implied by your extravagance that you were prosperous."

"So I shall be when the old man dies." "But you're not and you weren't when we became engaged. You must have known that your real estate development was on the rocks. A short life and a merry one was your polly; so you grabbed me as a life-saver."

His face quivered. "There was only one reason—that I loved you." "You've a quaint idea of love," she retorted. "Your love wasn't like mine. Mine was new; yours was shop-soiled. At home I was treated as innocent. You've thought it clever to treat me as a blackguard."

"Lord, Santa, you're bitter! You were the one who didn't want me to be questioned. In your heart you doubted me and yet you were afraid of losing me." She stared at him forlornly. "I'd started get dressed," he ended the discussion.

She sat still as a statue when he'd gone. Ten years from now, unless she did something drastic, he'd be just as unconvinced by her arguments. Somehow she must save him if she were to leave him, she might frighten him. Suddenly, in an appalling flash of insight, she realized that her physical longing was to get away from him. Acting on the impulse, with no thought of consequences, she tiptoed to their bedroom and began to pack.

As she finished strapping her suitcase, she looked up to find Ann, dumpy and cheerful, smiling in on her. "Tell Mr. Dak I'll be away for a few days." She spoke breathlessly. "And if you ask my opinion, which you haven't," Ann grinned broadly.

"I think you're doing the right thing, Madam." (Copyright 1931-1932, Coningsby Dawson)

It's a curious return to the family roof-tree that Santa makes, tomorrow.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?

DUKE DEVILS SAW WOOD AND SAY NOTHING

Durham, Oct. 26.—Coach Wallace Wade and his Blue Devils of Duke are "sawin' wood and sayin' nothin'" this week as they prepare for their game in Knoxville Saturday with the highly rated and powerful Tennessee Vols.

They are planning new things to use against the Vols in a game which they will enter decidedly as the underdogs but in which they hope to "fire the shot heard round the world."

The game should be a great battle. Tennessee will offer a set of backs who have not been stopped in any game this season; so will Duke. The Vols will present a hard charging, hard tackling line whose powerful teams bewildered; Duke a line that only the Auburn Plainsmen have been able to score on this fall.

While there will be many individual battles in the contest, probably the headliner of these will be the duel for ground gaining honors between Beattie Feathers of the Vols and Nick Laney of the Devils, two of the south's outstanding half-backs. Both are the main ball carrying stars of their teams and both are triple threats. Neither has been "bottled up" by an opposing team this fall.

Another will be in the line between Freddie Crawford of the Blue Devils and Captain Malcolm Aiken of the Vols. Crawford is recognized as probably the greatest tackle in the south this season while the Vol leader has been the mainstay of his line. Aiken plays right tackle for the Vols and Crawford left for the Blue Devils so it will be a personal affair for them.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

Selected on the basis of the vote of major league baseball writers on the 1932 most valuable player contest, here's how an all-star team would take form:

Pitchers—Warneke, Cubs, and Gomez, Yankees.
Catcher—Ferrell, Browns.
First base—Fox, Athletics.
Second base—Lazzeri, Yankees.
Shortstop—Cronin, Senators.
Third base—Traynor, Pirates.
Right field—Klein, Phillies.
Center field—Manush, Senators.

The only differences between this and the line-up we posted earlier in the debate involved our preference for Dickey of the Yankees behind the bat, Averill of the Indians in center field, and Gehring of the Tigers at second base. In each instance a lively argument can be conducted.

"Just Practicing"
It seems a red-headed lineman of Southern Methodist's team was romping around the Syracuse premises, blocking everything within reach and generally having a very good time for himself as the Mustangs galloped over the Orange football outfit. He seemed to be roaming all over the field.

On one play this youngster came charging through, half-blocked an opposing player and had so much momentum that he also hit the umpire. Big Tom Thorp, and brought that ex-Columbia guard forcibly to the turf.

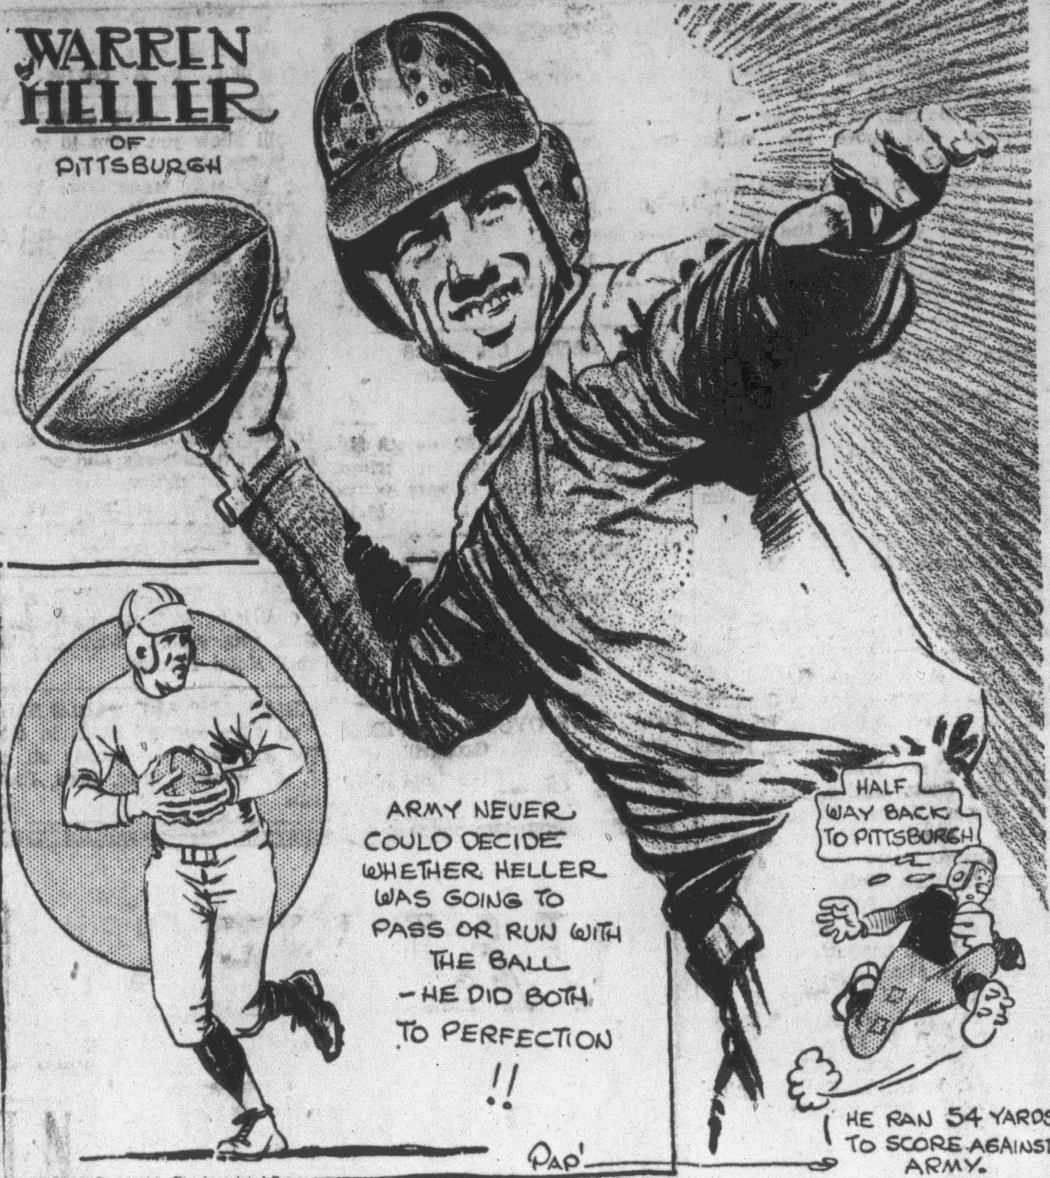

With a glare in his generally smiling countenance, Thorp pulled himself to his feet, looked the boy over and demanded to know what his idea was in being so reckless.
"I'm sorry, mister," replied the youngster. "I was just practicin'."

Gambled and Lost
The Alabama-Tennessee game furnished an example of where quicker thinking might have reversed the result. Tennessee won the game, 7 to 3, scoring a touchdown in the last period after a hurried and ineffective punt by John Cain, Alabama fullback, from behind his own goal line.

The pass from center to Cain was low and struck him in the knee. The ball was soaking wet and the field a sea of mud. Cain, in a tough spot, chose to punt, but the ball caromed off to one side and went out of bounds on Alabama's 12-yard line, from where the Vols rushed over a touchdown. Had Cain grounded the ball for an intentional safety, Alabama would have kept the lead, 3 to 2, and with a better chance to kick out of danger, might have won.

A national stadium designed to seat 150,000 and costing $2,000,000 soon is to be built at Buenos Aires, sanction having been granted by the Argentine congress.

Although Minnesota athletics teams still are called "the Swedes of the North," only one Swedish player, a sophomore, is listed as a regular on this year's football eleven.

U. N. C. TO USE YOUNG BACKS AGAINST STATE

Chapel Hill, Oct. 26.—Making free use of the young backs who supplied such real scoring punch and victory spirit in the closing minutes of the Tech game, Coach Chuck Collins is rebuilding the re-fortifying the Carolina football squad all along the line, and the Tar Heels are working their hardest with every heart set on winning from State here Saturday.

The Wolfpack approached this game last year in much the same position as the Tar Heels are facing it this season. Their brilliant late rally didn't quite let them overtake the Tar Heels who won 18-15, but the Wolves did take out of that game a self confidence and assurance which made them unbeatable at Duke and which turned them overnight into one of the strongest teams and the most feared foes in the state.

The tables turned this year, the Tar Heels will be fighting their hearts out on Saturday to turn just such a trick, and they know full well that what they have to do is to shake the jinx and the blues hovering around them. For Carolina tied Wake Forest 9-0 just as State did and has just as many stars and just as strong a team on paper. The Tar Heels figure they have made their mistakes, but they have also been victims of a hard schedule and lots of bad luck. They think they've lost enough games already. Now they're out to execute the turn about face State achieved last year. And the game they play with State Saturday may be something of a classic as a result.

Bring Your Tobacco On

Government Report just published shows GREENVILLE continues to be the World's Largest Bright Tobacco Market.

Greenville is also leading in prices paid for every grade of tobacco. Never before have the other markets tried so hard to induce and persuade growers in our territory to sell with them. Some of them are so desperate as to offer any kind of inducements, even going so far as to offer to haul their tobacco free.

We believe the farmers of Pitt county will stand by their market, which has proven to be the best and largest bright tobacco market in the state.

Grade carefully, keep your tobacco dry and "drive in" early in order to avoid any rush.

New York Cotton

New York, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady seven to nine points higher on steeper Liverpool cables and heavy rains in the central belt.

Offerings from the South were light at the opening, but the advance to 8.26 for December and 6.47 for May were realized on liquidation.

The market was steady at the end of the first half hour, and off three to four points from the daily high. December worked off to 6.17 and May to 6.42, or back to nearly yesterday's closing quotations.

The market was quiet at midday at net advances of five points.

Stock Market

New York, Oct. 26.—(AP)—The stock market was unable to work any sustained bullish enthusiasm today.

United States Steel's dividend boosted prices of a number of the leaders one to five points, but gains were soon lost and net declines were numerous by mid-day, although the list stiffened somewhat in the afternoon.

Early gains of one and a half in Union Pacific and two points in Chesapeake and Ohio were soon converted into losses. American Telephone, Allied Chemical and others moved up a point early but later showed losses of two points.

National Biscuit was again under pressure, selling off two points. U. S. Steel, American Tobacco B and several others lost a point or so.

The market's late tone was firm. The day's turnover approximated 700,000 shares.

"if Al Smith makes two more speeches for Roosevelt, then Pres. Hoover stands a better chance of being re-elected."

He said he thought Roosevelt might be praying, "Deliver me from my friends; I can take care of my enemies."

Negro Gets Reprieve.
Raleigh, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Harvey Wallace sentenced to be electrocuted for the murder of N. H. Perry, Cumcock storekeeper, was granted a reprieve in order that he may be used to testify in the trial of two alleged accomplices.

The reprieve will expire December 16. Wallace confessed his guilt, Solicitor Clawson Williams wrote Governor Gardner, and will be used as a prosecution witness against Edwin White and Charlie Myers.

The three negroes were charged the murder of Perry and Tom Bale in an attempted holdup of Perry's store.

Jeweler Killed in Fight.
Greenwood, Miss., Oct. 26.—(AP)—George W. Littlefield, jeweler, was killed and H. E. Kitchel, prominent citizen, was wounded slightly in a gun duel on the streets here today.

They met, quarreled a few minutes and started shooting. Littlefield was felled in the street. The other man was slightly injured.

Hand Directors Meet.
Winston-Salem, Oct. 26.—(AP)—Directors of the Fourth District Home Loan Bank met here today to formulate bylaws and to give into effect a matter of how loans are to be made.

USE OF WOOD FOR FUEL URGED AS AID TO FARMER.
Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Use of wood instead of coal for fuel in schools and other public buildings is urged by the North Carolina Department of Conservation and Development as an aid to farmers.

Adoption of such a practice, the department pointed out, will not only make possible economies in necessary expenses but will furnish additional markets for wood for the farmer and landowner and additional sources of income for some of the State's unemployed.

Wood for fuel can be obtained, the department said, without creating an additional drain on the forests. Windfall and woodlands may even be benefited by thinking.

noir, Beaufort, Green, Nash and Edgecombe counties were expected to attend.

The committee on arrangements is making preparations for a giant Hoover car parade which will be headed by a brass band of considerable note. W. E. Hooks, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee, stated today Hoover cars of every imaginable description, will be seen in the pageant which will wind over the principal streets of the city during the day.

Although complete plans had not been worked out, Mr. Hooks said indications were that the largest crowd ever to attend a political gathering in this section of the State would be on hand to help give the Governor a great welcome to the capital of Pitt and the largest bright leaf tobacco market in the world.

It will be the fourth rally of county Democrats since the beginning of the Presidential campaign, and is expected to result in dissemination of information which will be of great help to people in deciding their stand in the next election.

The visit of Governor Gardner will be the first since his campaign for Governor over two years ago and people who have never heard him speak were expected to augment the hundreds attending the celebration.

given up. One has found full time employment, another's mother is dangerously sick and others for one reason or another forced to slow up in their efforts to win a prize or a cash commission on November 12th.

However, some few of the candidates are still carrying on and these no doubt will be the big winners. Like every other endeavor of this sort where competition is keen some few carry on to the bitter end while others with less determination or who for no fault of their own are obliged to slow up in their efforts.

But each publication of the list of contestants and their standings shows some slight change going on. Right now the standings show five contestants in the selected class with 125,000 votes cast. This is by no means complete and full standing. The idea is simply to add 25,000 votes to each previous standing. Those candidates who have the votes in reserve can keep up with the leaders while the others with less votes have their full standings showing.

The standings for this date are as follows: Mrs. Richard Williams 125,000; Miss Lill Wilson, 125,000; Miss Mary James Lipscomb 125,000; Mrs. R. C. Abbe 125,000 and Miss Grace Gaston 125,000. All these candidates are from Greenville. Although the subscriptions being sent in are coming from various sections. Others falling below the 125,000 figure include Mrs. W. W. Phelps with 124,000, Miss Charlotte

Thyson of Route 6 also with 124,000, Miss Virginia Turnage, Ayden, 68,000, Mrs. C. B. Williams, Winterville, 61,800; Mrs. P. J. Diener, Greenville, 5,600; Miss Mary Lee Elks, Grimsland, 3,600, and Mrs. Guy Sulton, Route 6, 2,800 votes.

Next list of publication will be on Friday. On Saturday of this week another decrease in votes given on paid renewals and new subscriptions will go into force. All possible orders should be turned in this week by candidates and their friends so that each subscription may receive the maximum in votes.

Hog Cholera Control Campaign.
The fall campaign for the control of hog cholera closed last week. A total of 5,885 hogs were vaccinated for 361 different farmers. There has been very little hog cholera in the county for the past twelve months. In fact, with more than five thousand additional hogs being vaccinated each year it is practically impossible to have an outbreak of cholera in this county. A few scattered cases here and there will occur, but do not spread over the community due to the fact that a large number of farmers in each section follow the practice of immunizing hogs against cholera.

The suit grew out of a note issued after foreclosure of a mortgage. The mortgage for $4,500 brought only $1,500 and the plaintiff asked for difference between the original value and the amount derived from the foreclosure.

Many other cases are on the calendar for the remainder of the week and it was expected the majority would be disposed of by adjournment.

dition of national prohibition the advocates of liquor have done all in their power to break down the law for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, and are seeking to nullify and modify it so as to re-establish the legal sale of intoxicating liquors.

"The liquor interests have never obeyed any law that sought in any way to regulate their nefarious business. They have never willingly accepted any limitation placed upon them for the protection and welfare of the community as a whole. It is not within the ingenuity of the human mind to devise a liquor law that will be satisfactory to the liquor interests. There has never been a law placed on the statute books of any nation with reference to liquor that the liquor forces will not undertake to break it down, to violate it, to undermine it, and to corrupt the officials charged with its enforcement. They fought local option; they fought the county unit; they fought Statewide, and they fought national prohibition. And now twelve years later the liquor forces are at our doors boasting of their contempt for the fundamental law of our land and trying to bluff the American people with threats of civil war if they are not permitted to have their way.

"In behalf of the moral welfare of our community, our State, our nation, we again call upon Christian citizens to unite their strength to maintain those bulwarks which shall protect the home and the general happiness of the people. "Come, You are invited."
