BERLIN APPROVES HOOVER'S 'ARMS' STATEMENT

Gov. Roosevelt Turns His Attention To Care Of New York's Jobless

TALKS WITH STATE SOLONS

Conference with Republican Legislators and Relief Leaders Held Today; Plan to Change Law Regarding Handling of Indigent Question in That State.

Albany, Oct. 27.—(AP)—With most of his Presidential campaigning behind him, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, today turned his attention to the serious problems of State—the care of New York's thousands of unemployed next winter.

The Democratic standard-bearer ended an eight-day trip into the Middle West and South last night when he motored to the Hudson River home from New York where he left his special train yesterday morning. He left Albany October 18.

Today his chief engagement was with Republican leaders of the State Legislature and members of the unemployment relief commission who are attempting to effect a change in the law governing the State's aid to the poor.

Try to Increase Profit in Game

Raleigh, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Game is one farm crop of which there is no present or prospective over-product on and is a resource from which North Carolina farmers can realize a substantial return, officials of the State Department of Conservation and Development asserted today in pointing out opportunity in the field.

Success of the game conservation movement, it was pointed out, depends largely upon policies of management put into effect by the land owners and those in charge of land.

A step toward bringing more game management into effect for an increase in useful wildlife for the benefit of the state the farmer and sportsman officials said was the 1931 law allowing establishment of privately owned public hunting grounds.

The amendment to the game law it was said, recognizes the interest of the landowner or lessee in wild life and stimulates efforts to increase the supply. It also makes possible the farmer obtaining revenue for his efforts to multiply the game.

TWO BOUND OVER IN AUTOMOBILE FATALITY

Henderson, Oct. 26.—H. H. Abbott and Roy Overton, drivers of two automobiles in collision two miles east of the city on a Sunday afternoon last summer, were at liberty today under $500 bonds each for their appearance in Vance Superior court at the January, 1933, term. The two men were given a hearing before Recorder T. S. Kirtland yesterday on charges growing out of the crash, the preliminary trial lasting until well into the afternoon before the recorder ruled that there was probable cause and bound them over to the higher court on charges of manslaughter.

James Abbott, who was riding in H. H. Abbott's automobile, died weeks ago of injuries he received in the collision.

Malone to Speak

DAVIS BEGINS PRISON TERM

Former Asheville Financier Starts Serving 9 to 16 Year Sentence at Raleigh.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Wallace B. Davis, former Asheville financial leader, this morning became State convict "27531," and started serving a sentence aggregating nine to sixteen years for violation of the State banking laws.

Davis, diminutive and of middle age, was admitted to the prison before 11 o'clock. He was received by Warden Honeycutt after kissing his wife good-bye on the prison ground outside the warden's office.

He was accompanied by General Albert Cox, of Raleigh, counsel for Luke Lea and son, Luke Lea, Jr., in their case in which they face prison terms for conviction of conspiracy with Davis to violate the State banking laws.

Wearing an overcoat and accompanied by a friend, Mr. Thayer, carrying a battered suitcase, Davis entered the warden's office and sat down while the warden handed receipt for his commitment to a deputy.

"We are sorry we can't make you grow taller, but hope to make you grow broader."

Thayer, a friend of the Davis family, said: "Regardless of who else you have in here, you have no finer man than Davis and if I had to follow a man hoping to 'go no there,' I would just as soon follow him, for I know him well."

BACK FROM HEALTH MEET

Dr. R. S. McGeachy Returns from Public Health Convention at Washington.

Dr. R. S. McGeachy, director of the Pitt County Department of Health, has returned from Washington City where he attended the annual convention of the United States Public Health Association. Although the four-day session does not come to an end until today, Dr. McGeachy was forced to return home on account of urgent business matters.

He described the session as one of the greatest of his kind probably ever held. Public health workers from every section of the country were present and many of the most prominent members of the profession were on the program.

There was so much going on at the same time, Dr. McGeachy said, that it was impossible to see and hear it all, so it was necessary to pick out the most important and attend that.

The health officer said public health agencies are preparing to wage the greatest fight against sickness and disease the world has ever seen and that coming generations (Continued on Page Six)

Late News Flashes

Find Way Out of Swamp
South Mills, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Tired, ragged and cold, five men fought their way from the depths of Dismal Swamp today after being lost since yesterday.

The men, Sam Sayer, Moses White and three negroes, also employees of the Copper-Smith & Company, were experienced workmen and had intended going only a short way. They entered the swamp without food or compasses. Soon after beginning work they lost their way. Finally they found an opening and their way to safety.

DRY LEADER SPEAKS HERE

George J. Burnett, Anti-Saloon Head in this State, Talks on Dry Law.

George J. Burnett, superintendent of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, spoke at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church here last night on the subject of "Law Enforcement," and especially as it applies to the prohibition law. About two hundred people heard the address.

Holding up the dangers confronting the nation through efforts to bring back legalized sale of whiskey, the speaker called upon his hearers to consider the menace from the true light and to use their influence for the best interests of themselves and their fellowman.

Rev. W. S. Harden, president of the Greenville Ministerial Association, under whose auspices the speaking was held, presided. A brief song service was led by Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, host to the meeting.

Rev. W. H. Covert, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, presented Mr. Burnett, who in turn presented Rev. C. H. Cashwell, district superintendent of the league for Eastern Carolina.

Mr. Cashwell discussed briefly the purposes of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League under its new organization. He defined the league as being "the churches of North Carolina in action against the liquor forces of the nation." Mr. Cashwell then gave an outline of the present policy of the league in its work. The league will endeavor to put a field manager into each of the three federal districts of the state to supplement the work of the superintendent. This man will go to the churches, the schools and points of rally to present information concerning law observance and law enforcement. A second thing that is being done is the securing of three moving picture equipments by which an educational campaign can be conducted against liquor and to show the evil effects of alcohol. ### MISSING GIRL IS LOCATED Mother Held for Kidnapping Her Child from Guardian At Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Mrs. Ruth Borman, 17-year-old mother, was found at a residence in New Hall, Los Angeles suburb, today with her three-year-old daughter, Dorothy Ruth Buchanan, who was kidnaped yesterday from the home of her guardian, Mrs. Violet Buchanan, Los Angeles resident.

The mother and the child were located after police had questioned M. E. Warner, 24, friend of Mrs. Borman, who told authorities he had driven her to Mrs. Buchanan's where he entered the nursery and took the child.

Warner supplied police with the New Hall address where he had driven the woman.

The trip was taken to the San Fernando police station and offices began taking statements.

Mrs. Buchanan was given guardianship rights after taking the child into her home shortly after birth. She attempted to adopt the child but met interference from the mother.

The service was largely attended by members of the bar, relatives of those honored and friends from various sections of county and State.

Those honored were Col. Harry Skinner, Col. F. G. James, and S. T. Carson.

The speakers were F. C. Harding, Judge Albion Dunn, Louis Gaylord, Judge Francis Winston and Attorney Meekins, of Windsor, and Julius Brown.

Mr. Harding, eulogizing Colonel Skinner, who died several years ago, after a brilliant career as a member of the bar and in the field of politics, painted him as one of the most prominent citizens produced in this part of the country.

"Colonel Skinner," he said, "for many years was probably the best known lawyer in North Carolina and was often referred to as North Carolina's 'silver-tongued orator.' He was indeed one of the State's best orators by reason of his eloquence, the beauty of his diction and the forcefulness of his logic. He was an able advocate, a wise counselor, a loyal friend and an affectionate husband and father.

"His brilliant and eventful career is over and he now rests in peaceful (Continued on Page Six)

SEVERAL HELD FOR RIOTING

Fourteen College Students Siege a New York Court Following Disorders.

New York, Oct. 27.—(AP)—A siege of the white way's famous night court by seven hundred and fifty college students ended today in suspended sentences for fourteen boys and co-ed; seized while charging police reserves.

Free-for-all fistfights featured the demonstration in front of the building which forced Magistrate Dryer to suspend court because all policemen were outside trying to quell the students.

The demonstration grew out of a protest meeting of students who demanded "free speech" and reinstatement of Okley Johnson, who was dropped from the faculty of the college of the City of New York.

Students' supporters claimed Johnson was dismissed because of charges that he was a Communist sympathizer but college officials denied this and said the extra instructor was dropped because of a reduction of the school's budget.

TO BE TALKED IN COMMONS

British Officials Think America's Threat to "Arm Full Strength if Present Negotiations for Disarmament Fail" is Meant for Other Nations; Germany Thinks of Aloofness Policy As Similar to That of Her Own.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—(AP)—President Hoover's assertion that the United States would build her fleet to full strength if present negotiations for reduction of armament fail, has found warm approval in official circles here, a government spokesman said today. "The President's strong words cannot but forcibly remind those who declined to disarm and live up to their promise given when the Versailles treaty was signed," the spokesman said.

Mr. Hoover's policy is in direct line with Germany's present policy of aloofness from the Geneva conference. But our aloofness does not mean we are disinterested in disarmament proposals. It is a practical measure of reminding other nations of their duties.

He said he hoped the President's statement would result in a better understanding of the position.

London, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Government officials today withheld comment on President Hoover's declaration that the American fleet would arm full strength if present disarmament negotiations fail.

It was thought the statement would be taken up in the House of Commons and its import fully discussed.

In some quarters it was thought President Hoover had directed the statement at other countries.

AYDEN PUBLIC WELFARE BOARD MEETS

Ayden, Oct. 27.—The Public Welfare Board met Tuesday night at Rev. E. D. Dodd's office to elect officers, appoint committees and discuss plans for carrying out the federal and local relief program for the relief of the unemployed and to meet charity needs during the fall and winter.

The following officers were elected: T. G. Worthington, chairman, and Rev. E. D. Dodd, executive secretary.

A committee was appointed to handle the work relief program: J. R. Turnage, chairman; Dr. G. G. Dixon and Clyde Tyndall.

The funds to be supplied by the government are to be used only to give work to the unemployed and the ratio of the amount to be received will depend on local contributions.

The churches of the city and other civic organizations have promised to co-operate in carrying out the relief plans.

The Welfare Board did a wonderful work last year especially during the winter months in giving work and supplies to the needy and milk and light lunches to undernourished school children. Rev. E. D. Dodd, who proved to be such an efficient administrator of funds and supplies last year, has again been drafted for the same position and we feel confident that all real need will be promptly met.

A New Hope For America

By JESSIE WOODROW SAYER

There is a new feeling of hope in the air. The apathy, the sense of helplessness, which has hung over us these three years and more is lifting. For we have now a leader who knows what he wants to accomplish and is not afraid to act, and a new fighting spirit among the electorate, a willingness to unite and work that give earnest indeed of a New Deal for this poor bogged country of ours. During the past twelve years the government of the United States has been largely directed by men who were looking backwards, who did not even see the essential facts of the present day economic, political and financial world or, if they did see them, had not the dynamic power or enthusiasm to break through barriers and get constructive projects carried through. Many times friends have urged with Republican leaders in Washington during these years that they have always summed up their talk in some such words as these: "He said: 'Yes, it ought to be done—but these are the difficulties.'" Thank heaven, Democrats focus their hearts and brains on the things that ought to be done. Difficulties are challenges to us, not alibis! And with Democrats I include all those by whatever name they call themselves who put the whole country first and not any section or group or special interest in it, all people who are not afraid to do their own thinking and also are willing and anxious to work together and vote together for the things that 'ought to be done.'

The simple A B C fact of the world today is that every nation has the power by selfish nationalistic action to harm every other nation, including ourselves. Each can cripple the trade, create unemployment, break down the gold standard, even embroil in war its neighbor far and near. We are at the mercy of each other. But no one nation can dominate the others and make them behave, for no one nation can have armies and navies bigger than all the rest put together. Possibly a group of nations could, for a time, but that means alliances, offensive and defensive, to which no one in America would want us to belong.

Because Republican leaders have failed to see this and to act accordingly they have increased our tariffs, injured the financial system of the world, and made the payment of the war debts practically impossible. The results of this policy have been increased trade, heavier taxes, failure to help the farmer and greatly increased unemployment and misery. Depression is not an inscrutable act of God, it is the result of the blindness and ignorance of men and women and of misguided action by governments, and to its full share, and it is a large share, of that ignorance and misguided action the Republican administration of our government must plead guilty. We have in Governor Roosevelt a man who sees the world as it is and not through a dim mist of wishful thinking. He can be trusted fearlessly and intelligently to square our action with the facts. His vitality and energy are amazing and beyond the average. The illness about which the Republicans talk so much has left him stronger in general health than before. I know from personal experience how that can be, because I have been through the same illness and made a like recovery. There is no one in America more fit physically and, mentally and spiritually than he to carry on the great tasks before him. So with a leader like Governor Roosevelt and a party whose record of achievement when it was in power thrills us still after these twelve dull years and a people determined to attack the problems which face us realistically, there is indeed prospect of better times soon to come.

Welfare Board to Meet Tonight

The Board of Public Welfare will meet at the Public Library tonight at 7 o'clock instead of at the courthouse.

At the meeting tonight the chairman of the local committees from the several communities in the local committees from the several communities in the county will be present to get further informed toward working out their work relief program with the supplement given us by the Federal Government toward meeting our relief and unemployment needs. It is important that the general public understand that the relief program as it relates to work projects is for the purpose of meeting the needs of the people and not just to get some work project done. If a community has a work project that will use ten or more men for a considerable period of time, such work projects will be taken up as men in that respective community need the work. At the meeting tonight it is expected to clarify some misunderstandings as to the real purpose of the work relief program for the several communities.

Big Horse Show Feature of Fair

One of the features of the free fair being held at the fair grounds in the western part of the city this week is a free horse show. Purchased horses from the R. D. Penny stables at High Point are presented in free acts in front of the grandstand during the day, and have attracted considerable attention from lovers of fine horses.

The horses have been showing all over the country, and have won much recognition for their capability and intelligence.

"Midnight Frolic" champion saddle horse, has won 297 blue ribbons at various shows throughout the nation and has ever been defeated in actual competition.

He is considered the champion high jumping horse, having a record of six feet and seven inches. He also puts on a leap frog act while carrying weight of 159 pounds.

All horses seen in the free acts are pedigreed bluebloods from Virginia and Kentucky, and are among the finest stables in the country.

The horse show is in charge of M. J. Freeman.

New York Hard Hitter Gainesville, Fla., Oct. 27.—The way Charlie Stelz, New York sophomore, has been playing in early games indicates he may be the hardest hitting fulback to grace the University of Florida football roster in many years.

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Pat folks should take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it's the SAFE, harmless way to reduce as tens of thousands of men and women know.

For your health's sake ask for and get Kruschen at Pitt Drug Co., or any drug store—the cost for a bottle that lasts 4 weeks is but a trifle and if after the first bottle you are not joyfully satisfied with results—money back.—(Adv.)

THE BROKEN TOADSTER

By Mary Graham Bonner

Old Toad had fallen over as the two front wheels came off while the Toad roadster-toadster was being pulled. But he sat up again on the seat of the car which had been made of moss.

"Can't you put the wheels on again?" asked Old Toad, who looked very pitiful as he tried to keep his balance with the car tilted forward.

"Oh, dear," said Willy Nilly. "I have been away from my work much longer than I should be. Luckily it has been clear weather of late, but when it starts to rain you know what will happen if I don't give my roof a heavy coat of paint and fill in the cracks with putty."

"You can't leave me like this!" exclaimed Old Toad, and a tear trickled down from each of his two blinking eyes. "You see the Toads didn't put the wheels on as securely as they should have. You're the only one who will do it right."

"I've no more backbone than a leaf when the wind starts to blow it," Willy Nilly said, "but I suppose I'd better help put the wheels back on. You can't go anywhere this way."

Old Toad now sat on the ground and all the others waddled and hopped around giving directions to Willy Nilly, who commenced working over the car.

In a very short time he had the wheels back in place and was starting away to attend to his own work.

"You try it now, Toodles," said Old Toad, who felt quite weary with the excitement of the celebration and the ride and the accident. "I simply must take a short rest."

So Toodles got behind the wheel, squatting on the moss seat, and put his foot on the start seat.

Tomorrow—"The High Wind."

ABOUT TOWN

Bishop Mouzon of the Methodist Church has come in for considerable criticism for his denunciation of the activities of the American Legion and bonus seekers.

In an address at Richmond, which caused the Legion forces of that section to launch a vigorous campaign of protest, the bishop described former soldiers and sailors as "beggars and robbers."

This is a strong term to use for men who sacrificed so much in the World War—men who were willing to give their lives if necessary to achieve the great end of this government.

Nobody will try to uphold the march on the capital city, but when men are starving by the millions as they are doing in this country, the position which the bonus-seekers have taken may be more easily condoned.

Bishop Mouzon evidently can't get down on the plane with these starving millions. Were he thrown into the streets, jobless and hungry, with crying children and women depending upon him for support, it is no matter of considerable speculation what he would do.

The great trouble of the leading men of this nation today is their inability to fully appreciate the economic situation affecting what is popularly known as "the common people."

As a representative of one of the greatest religious bodies in the country, Bishop Mouzon should be one of the last to take such an unchristian attitude. Starving men and women are not easily reasoned with and when we use force to crush their weakened bodies under foot, we are committing one of the most heinous crimes known to mankind.

The bonus is being sought as a means of relieving the unemployed, hungry men who sacrificed so much in behalf of civilization in the greatest carnage in the world's history, and no man who is enjoying all the comforts which life affords has the right to stand in a public place and condemn them for trying to save themselves and their hungry wives and children from destitution and death.

The Greenville curb market continues to grow and prosper in the face of one of the most unusual financial situations the country has ever known.

The report issued yesterday by E. F. Arnold, who assists in the operation of the market, showed that over $7,000 had been collected during the year.

This is no small sum of money and as it goes to the farmers who offer their products for sale on the market from day to day it is easy to surmise that the extra source of revenue is playing a vital part in the solution of the financial problems.

In addition to offering a source of distribution for the products of the farm, the market also affords a splendid opportunity for city people to obtain fresh products of the farm at the time.

The market is becoming an institution in which both city people and those of the farms are interested and it is destined to assume even greater importance in years to come.

The Red Cross will conduct its annual roll call in Greenville the week of November 11th and people will be called upon to again join the organization and in that way contribute to the great relief program which it has undertaken in every community of the nation.

The organization has recently distributed considerable government flour and thousands of yards of cloth to be used in carrying relief to the poor during the winter. The cloth is being made into clothes for poor school children and those who have been staying out of school because of lack of clothing will be able to continue their education.

The Red Cross is constantly striving to improve conditions in all parts of the world and people who

A PATH TO PARADISE

by Coningsby DAWSON

SYNOPSIS: November came, and with it Santa's first wedding anniversary—and disillusionment. Dicky was fanned as a husband; she leaves him for her parents' home. And Clive who loved her so dearly is still in Europe, she supposes. The failure that is her past besets Santa the training from her jealous mother which made her a Europeanized flirt, the vacillation that led her to take Dickey—instead of Clive, her debacle with Dicky. Curiously enough, it was the fact that Clive's mother had killed Santa's father, long ago, that had set in motion all these cross currents. His wife never forgave him his first love. Santa is glad—no one knows she has left Dicky.

Chapter 10

"CLIVE'S DUE FOR DINNER"

Having obtained money at her bank, she drove straight to the Union Station. There was no express to New York till early afternoon. She killed time by inspecting shops in the station. Her mind was in a flutter. She had the feeling that if anyone addressed her she would faint.

Yet the reflection that greeted her in the polished surface of windows was that of a composed young lady neatly tailored and provocative. There was nothing to hint that she was married—let alone that she was a runaway.

As the hour drew nearer for departure, suspense mounted. A fugitive, she waited for the platform-tude. Santa; but I'm not so sure of Clive. It's my belief he has never recovered from you."

Mrs. Dawn glanced at her daughter. Had she detected a suspicious eagerness? The girl's hands betrayed her, clasped till the gloves were strained to bursting. Her mother captured one of them.

"Darling, I can't tell you how Daddy and I have worried over you. You've returned so unexpectedly. Are you sure you're happy?"

"Average, Mummy. As happy as I deserve to be—at least, so my husband tells me. But what's this mystery about Clive?"

"Only that he's acted so strangely—utterly ignored your father, despite the fact that he's his guardian. He slipped off to Europe without notifying anyone save you. During the fourteen months that he's been absent, there's been never a line. Yet he telephoned us within twelve hours of landing."

"Perhaps he doesn't know that I'm married. Or, if he does, he hopes to hear that I'm divorced."

Her mother swung round in consternation.

"You're not deceiving me, Santa. Since you've left us we've heard rumors that Dicky's never been quite steady."

"As steady as most husbands, Mummy. I didn't choose him, neither did you, for his steadiness. We chose him because he was sporting."

"I don't think I choose him," her mother faltered.

"But you did, Mummy."

In the long familiar avenue, dimly lighted and wintry with bare trees, the car was halting. Mrs. Dawn seized the final moment, facing her daughter in stark sincerity.

"If I did, please don't say it to your father. He blames me for your marriage. Do help the dinner to pass off pleasantly."

"I'll do my best."

The moment she had crossed the threshold she tumbled into her father's arms.

"My little girl! How's the world been treating you?"

Brilliant-eyed, laughing up at him, she flung back her furs. She could feel his fear for her. He held her tightly, fondling her, telling her in dumb language that he was there to protect her.

"Why, you dear silly," she chaffed him, a sob in her throat, "I do believe you're examining me for bruises."

"You're looking prettier and younger than ever, Santa."

"And now, Daddy," she coaxed "let me run and dress."

"Has your mother told you about Clive?"

"Isn't it jolly?" she flung back. "A regular family party."

In her room—the one in which she had drunk and preened to catch a husband—she rehearsed her new part like an actress. She was about to meet the man she had killed. Only she and he would know how really, and she alone knew what dire consequences to herself.

Of his end of the disaster she was ignorant. She had allowed him der and a dab of rouge had won a verdict.

Talks to Parents

INSIGHT HELPS By Alice Judson Peale

A two-year-old boy returned home from a few weeks' visit at his aunt's to find that a baby sister had arrived in his absence. He was genuinely delighted until he saw her in his mother's arms. Then he burst into bitter tears.

For more than a week, despite the fact that mother showed him every tenderness and played much with him, he was deeply unhappy. Then he became quieter, contenting himself with hovering over his mother as she held the baby and now and then murmuring to himself: "Bobby mustn't hit little sister—no, mustn't!"

After a time this phase too passed and he became apparently wholeheartedly fond of the baby who at first had caused him so much grief.

Only one difficulty remained. Bobby when visiting or traveling always was loath to return home. Each time it required great tact and persuasion to get him to go back. And each time after his return he behaved in a most unkind way to the little sister with whom he had now become such good friends.

For three years this difficulty persisted. One day when the children asked for astory, mother undertook to tell them in full detail just what had happened the day Bobby first saw his little sister. Both children listened with absorption.

Shortly after, Bobby went to visit another boy, and coming home early joined his mother and sister, who were in the garden. Instead of greeting them in a surly manner as he did usually when he returned home, he walked up to his sister kissed her in the cheek and laughed in a happy manner.

Giving the child insight into such disappointments frequently frees him from the conflicts they engender.

work in informal conversations with European leaders upon which, it is hoped, will rest a substantial agreement later on.

Davis, a native of Tennessee and who still has many traits of the south about him, long has been an important figure in American diplomacy.

His rise in the Wilson administration was rapid. He became assistant secretary of the treasury and then under-secretary of state.

gate to open and was among the first to scramble aboard the train, nor did she feel safe till the wheels until next morning. Now Santa's were turning.

At last she belonged to herself. A year ago the luxury of belonging to herself had spelled boredom. She buried her nose in a novel, of which she read scarcely a line. She was dramatizing her own story—tossing with the idea of belonging to herself forever.

The exultation of escape lasted problem was the extent to which to take her parents into her confidence. She decided to proceed with caution and to rely on the fib of the moment.

From the station she telephoned. "Hello, Mummy! Santa speaking. No, not in Chicago; I'm in New York to do my Christmas shopping. Stay with you! Of course. You're driving in. Five 1-2's lunch together at the Plaza."

To make her invention seem plausible she went to lunch strung with packages. Across the table, Mrs. Dawn made polite inquiries as regards her son-in-law.

"He'll miss you."

"I expect he will."

"And you'll miss him."

"Why shouldn't I?"

In the car as they were driving back, her mother remarked approvingly of nothing. "Clive's due to dinner tonight."

Santa gasped.

"I thought he was in Europe."

"So did we till he telephoned. Had we known that you were to be with us we'd have postponed him."

Grabbing her runaway nerves Santa feigned nonchalance.

"Don't see why."

"I'm afraid a meeting between you may prove embarrassing."

"Nonsense, Mummy. A girl does not have to avoid a man because he was once in love with her."

"You're taking the sensible attitude."

The most important address of Governor Gardner's campaign of the state will be delivered in Greenville November 1st, according to information sent out by the State Democratic headquarters.

The speech will be the highlight of the Democratic rally and Hoover cart parade to be staged here and people from several surrounding counties are expected to attend.

The governor is throwing his weight behind the drive for the presidency and the information he will impart to his hearers here will give them a more intimate glimpse of his administration as well as the Democratic effort to snatch control of government from the Republican party in the next election.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE BLACK PANTHER "Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the great animal painter, Paul Bransom... inspired by the natural ferocity of "Bagheera," the black panther in the famous "Jungle Book." "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

WOLF PACK GETS READY FOR HEELS

Raleigh, Oct. 27.—With the praise of their coaches ringing in their ears for their 17-6 Southern Conference win over Florida last Saturday, the Wolves of State College have begun looking at Carolina while rehearsing a few of their own for the conference and Big Five tilt with the Tar Heels Saturday at Chapel Hill.

Riding along with Auburn, Virginia Poly, South Carolina and Louisiana State on the Southern Conference's undefeated wave, State is doped to take the Heels Saturday who have yet to win a 1932 game.

In knocking off a tough and rugged Gator eleven, the Wolfpack gave State College fans visions of a West Raleigh team finishing the season undefeated. The Wolves have four games remaining on their schedule. If they clear the Carolina hurdle Saturday, Davidson, Duke and South Carolina—three tough foes, are still in the path.

Coach Clipper Smith said of the Florida scrap: "The boys played a wonderful game. They were in there every minute—fighting and playing head-up football." The coach said of the coming game with the Tar Heels: "Saturday's game with Carolina will be tough. Several of our best men were injured Saturday and probably will not be at their best. Carolina is a hard team to beat and stronger than this fall's scores would indicate."

Yesterday's work was light in the Tech camp, but today the heavy drills start and will not end until Friday. Coach Smith expects to throw in a couple of scrimmages this week.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

It's just another way of opening up one of the big annual disputes, but here are our nominations for the Sullivan Memorial Medal, awarded by the Amateur Athletic Union to the year's outstanding amateur athlete:

- (1) H. Ellsworth Vines, of Pasadena, world's tennis champion.
- (2) William A. Carr, of Pennsylvania and Arkansas, world's 400-meter champion.

(3) James Aloysius Bausch, of Kansas, world's decathlon champion. The performances of all three have helped make 1932 one of the most spectacular seasons from the American viewpoint.

There may be some squawks that Vines, by leaving college temporarily for tennis and campaigning from Paris to Australia, has not quite furnished the ideal example of the amateur athlete, but there can be no escape from his brilliance or his influence in applying the pulmotor to the American game. As the first U. S. racquet-wielder to reach the topmost heights since Big Bill Tilden quit the amateur ranks, Vines stands out among the brightest stars of the year.

Carr a Whiz
Little Bill Carr's trio of conquests over Big Ben Eastman on the coast, all in world record time, represented as fine an achievement as the American tracks have ever seen. The red and blue flier developed and sustained a class that few suspected he possessed this spring.

"Parring Jim" Bausch turned in one of the greatest of all Olympic performances when he outlasted the mighty Finns in a record-shattering two-day battle for all-around athletic honors. No competitive sport ever flamed higher than this Kansan's will-to-win, when it came down to the toughest stages of the grind.

If you turn to the feminine side of the argument, of course, there is the remarkable Babe Drikson, who did everything but swim and climb the flagpole in the Olympics. It is difficult to leave the Texas girl out of the top three. There ought to be a separate and distinct award for her all-around prowess.

Likes "Dead Ball" Rule
Bill Langford's summation of the case concerning the most widely discussed change in the current football rules is worth repeating:

"Eventually the dead ball rule will be one of the most popular among coaches and officials. It is difficult to teach boys who have been learning just the opposite all their lives not to struggle and fight for the last possible inch on a football field. But that inclination has been the cause of a great many injuries in the past.

"It cost Yale the services of Albie Booth in the Army game last year."

Albert Lowrey, University of Michigan cheer leader, injured his right knee while exhorting his team to beat Nebraska and had to be carried from the field.

For the first time in history, an English girls' cricket team will visit Australia in 1934 to play for the feminine "ashes."

CAROLINA HAS TAKEN MOST STATE GAMES

Chapel Hill, Oct. 27.—The Carolina-State football rivalry, which will be resumed in Kenan Stadium here Saturday at 2:30 o'clock, shows 23 games over the 38 years since 1894, with Carolina holding 17 victories and State 3, and with three games tied.

Carolina teams held an overwhelming lead during the early years, but the rivalry has been close and spirited since the war.

After a slow beginning the State team got its self-confidence and its start when it played Carolina to a 16-15 last year. This year's game finds the tables turned, Carolina having made the poor beginning and being out to upset and get its start at State's expense.

The game should be something approaching a classic. Both teams were tied by Wake Forest 0-0, and stack up approximately even on paper. State has the victory psychology after an undefeated season to date, but Carolina is out to make the fight State made in last year's game, and that can't mean anything but a great battle.

LITTLE COLLEGE'S VICTORY SPELLED FAME FOR METCALF

Oberlin, O., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Oberlin 7; Ohio State 6.

That was the score back in 1921 which emblazoned Thomas Nelson Metcalf's name in football's hall of fame and started him on the path that has led to the post of director of athletics succeeding Amos Alonzo Stagg at Chicago University.

Oberlin, coached by Metcalf, was a small school. Ohio State was a prospective Big Ten champion. The Oberlin eleven was supposed to put up a good "practice game" for the big machine down State.

Instead, the game was one of those surprising upsets in which the underdog not only won but showed a clear superiority. Oberlin went on to finish the season undefeated.

Metcalf played on Oberlin's football team at end, but was too light to do much damage. He was better at track, being the first man west of the Alleghenies to run two miles in less than ten minutes.

After graduation he was an assistant coach at Oberlin two years and head coach one year, then went to Columbia for his doctor's degree, where he became coach and led Columbia through an undefeated season in 1915.

Metcalf was back at Oberlin from 1919 to 1922, letting other teams, including Cornell and Ohio State, defeat his proteges but three times in four years. Two years at the University of Minnesota as head of physical education were followed by eight years of similar work at Iowa.

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, Oct. 26.—(AP)—There is a colony of "beards" down by the railroad tracks in Los Angeles which now helps Hollywood in one of its once difficult casting problems.

There was a time when a call for 10, 20 or 30 "beards" meant a city-wide quest, the corralling of any passer-by whose face boasted a fairly respectable thatch. There were, of course, men who shied from the razor as a matter of business principle, to be ready for movie work in an emergency.

The rise of front parlor society drama sent down the market value of beards, however, and when a picture required any unusual number of "beards" there was the hurried expedition to the highways and byways in search of bewhiskered talent.

No more. That colony down by the railroad tracks provides "beards" of all varieties and lengths. Once a eucalyptus-studded hillside, it now is adorned with scrubby shacks occupied by men who have little else to do except watch their whiskers grow.

Mike Slesber a studio character who knows the "beards" by intimate acquaintance—and in fact in his long career in pictures often has had opportunity to serve as one on two weeks' notice—inform me of the comparatively simple procedure of signing up a group of "beards" for picture work.

Mike steered the casting office down there when they wanted an unusual assortment—500 I believe for Ruth Chatterton's "Common Ground" and the results were amazing.

According to Mike, one simply approaches the hillside and whistles—there being no telephones—and shouts "beards! beards!" and they come running out of their shacks, ready and eager for service.

GEORGIA TECH END FINDS STRIDE IN SENIOR YEAR

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 27.—(AP)—Jerry Goldsmith, Georgia Tech's star end, apparently is coming into his own on the gridiron after a two-year handicap of injuries.

Playing his senior year, Goldsmith is developing into one of the best ends in Dixie and experts already are pointing him out as All-Southern material.

A leg injury kept him from playing his sophomore year, and last season just as he was going good he suffered a broken jaw in the game against Florida. He practiced two weeks for the post-season game with California with his jaws wired together.

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York, Oct. 27.—An elderly people who have lived in one of the fine old houses on St. Stephen Island for forty years could not take their annual trip abroad this year—for the well-known reasons.

Loath to spend their allotted vacation period doing routine things, they hit upon the idea of "doing" New York.

It occurred to them that they never had really seen Manhattan.

They bought several guide books and settled themselves in a delightful French hotel on lower Fifth Avenue. For the following weeks they saw the New York they had missed for forty years—its foreign quarters, museums, art galleries, and historic spots. They took a boat trip up the Hudson. They rode the rubber-neck wagons. They even went to the aquarium—did everything, in fact, that not one New Yorker in a hundred bothers about doing.

Their verdict is that New York is the most interesting city on earth, and they have seen just about all of them. So the old gentleman told me.

Success Story

Frances Maddux, one of society's pets among the town's entertainers, commands a sizable salary today. Yet it was a very few years ago that she arrived in New York with a bare $7 in cash and nothing else except a lot of ambition and talent.

When she lived in Hollywood, Miss Maddux made a living by teaching music to the children of screen stars. A woman of wealth wanted her as a companion on a trip, so Miss Maddux got as far as Washington with her.

There she turned thumbs down on further traveling and borrowed railroad fare to New York. Luckily, it was not long before she got a job as an accompanist at $35 a week.

With a good background and a likeable personality, she soon was getting "in" with the right people—meeting them at parties where she sang for the guests.

One night Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt heard her, and asked her to sing at one of her parties.

"Fearfully, I told her my fee would be $200," Miss Maddux recalls. "I felt as if I were asking for a fortune then."

The figure was quite all right with Mrs. Vanderbilt, however. And that engagement started Miss Maddux on a career which has put her among the top-notchers.

Pinning One On Woods
Sam Shipman tells about the first time he crashed the private office of Producer Al Woods to show him a play script.

Shipman had tried vainly, for a long time, to get to Woods. One pin from his brother, Louis, and went back to the Wood's waiting-room. The manager passed through and his eye fell on the stone.

"That's a swell pin you got there, kid," Woods joshed.

"And I've got a swell script to show you, too," Shipman blurted. So he got into Wood's sanctum.

In there, Shipman, boldly jovial, remarked: "If you take the script I'll give you the pin."

"If I take the script," Woods shot back, "I'll give you two pins. If I don't, you can have the script back and I'll keep the pin."

Woods did keep the pin long enough to worry young Shipman.

The Campaign Puzzle

Study Past State-by-State Votes in Making Your Forecasts

Wyoming's Vote in 1928
Hoover 52,748; Smith 29,299
Wyoming's electoral votes were cast for William Jennings Bryan in his first campaign and for Woodrow Wilson in 1912 and 1916. In the seven other elections from 1892 to 1928 its record has caused the state to be regarded as normally Republican.

Wyoming gave its votes to Herbert Hoover in 1928 after a campaign in which the prohibition views of the opposing candidates and their programs for the safeguarding of agriculture had been issues of major importance.

In the same year in which it gave its vote to Hoover, Wyoming elected a Democrat, John B. Kendrick to the United States Senate by a vote of 49,092 to 37,075.

In the off-year elections of 1930, Wyoming chose a Republican for its second senator, giving Robert B. Carey 43,713 votes against the Democratic opponent.

In the same year Frank Emerson (R) was elected governor by a majority of less than 1,500 votes. Upon Emerson's death he was succeeded by A. M. Clark, secretary of state, also a Republican.

Wyoming's interest in the present election has centered primarily upon the programs of the two parties for the rehabilitation of the agricultural and stock raising industries.

Wyoming has 3 electoral votes.

Minnesota's Vote in 1928
Hoover 560,977; Smith 396,451
Minnesota has been regarded as one of the staunchest of Republican states but one break in 60 years. In 1912 Minnesota gave its votes to Theodore Roosevelt, progressive.

The rise of the Farmer-Labor party in recent years has injected a new element into the state political situation, and observers this year are attempting to weight its influence in the national election.

Floyd B. Olson, Farmer-Laborite was elected governor in 1930 with 473,154 votes against 289,528 for the Republican and 29,109 for the Democratic candidate. Olson's candidacy had the support of many Democrats.

In the same year Thomas D. Schall (R) was re-elected to the United States Senate with 293,626 votes against 282,018 for Elmer

The Farmer-Labor party took no official part in the presidential election of 1928. Governor Olson this year has voiced a personal preference for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Economy in government expenditures has been a dominant issue in the current campaign, with prohibition also winning much attention in popular districts.

Minnesota's electoral vote is reduced by reapportionment this year from 12 to 11.

Colorado's Vote in 1928
Hoover 253,872; Smith 133,131
Colorado which cast its vote three times for William Jennings Bryan and twice for Woodrow Wilson, has voted for Republican candidates in the last three presidential elections.

Alfred E. Smith's views on prohibition were a major topic of discussion in the campaign of 1928. Two years earlier the voters of the state had defeated a proposal for repeal of the state enforcement act in the same year in which it gave Herbert Hoover a majority of 120,000 Colorado re-elected Gov. W. H. Adams (D) with an unprecedented majority.

In the state elections of 1930 Governor Adams was re-elected for a third term with a majority of 72,000 and E. P. Costigan (D) was elected to the United States Senate with a majority of 42,000.

The primaries of last September brought three out of every four of the state's registered voters to the polls. In the Democratic primary 124,639 votes were cast and in the Republican 113,258.

Colorado's huge mining industry has caused voters to study with unusual interest all pronouncements in the current campaign having to do with silver. Proposals affecting the state's best sugar industry also have received close attention.

Colorado has six electoral votes.

Late News Flashes

The Carolina Light & Power Co., serving the cities of Asheville and Raleigh, and two hundred smaller communities, offered an alternate proposal. One would provide a flat charge of $1.00, or 6 cents per kwh. for the first twenty hours.

The other would provide a charge of $1.00 for houses with five rooms or less, and a charge of 10c per kwh. for each additional room above five.

Although the proposal of Tidewater Power Company, of Wilmington, which serves the seaport city and a number of smaller communities in the coastal section had not been submitted when the committee recessed, officials of that company said a reduction of 6 per cent would be proposed.

It was pointed out that the Tidewater company reduced its rates 10 per cent about a year ago.

London Jobless Riot
London, Oct. 27.—(AP)—Rioting unemployed, yelling defiance at the police, participated in the most serious disturbances today that London has seen in years.

Fifty thousand people massed inside Hyde Park and at the several entrances as a column of several thousand jobless marched in for a demonstration in protest against administration of the dole.

In the great Cumberland Square opposite Marble Arch, on Edgware Road, bricks were thrown through a postoffice window. Mounted police charged the mob which fell back, cursing and booing.

The police retired and the crowd swept in again upon them. The mob surged in again and again as stones and mud were thrown. Several were injured and taken away in ambulances.

The marchers moved away singing and shouting, but under heavy police guard.

Arrest Forgery Ringleader
Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 27.—(AP)—The department of detective agents said today Leon Carr, alias Carlisle, who was arrested in New York last night, is the "master mind" in the one hundred and thirty thousand dollar Almour's Securities swindle.

He is wanted here as the ringleader in a gigantic forgery scheme, department agents said, by which Almour's Securities, head by Alfred Dupont, was mulched of large sums. Richard Cailman, member of the gang, was arrested at the Barnett National Bank last May when he attempted to cash a check for $8,000 on Almour's account. He was given twenty-four years in the pen.

Julius Chawick, former bookkeeper in the Florida National Bank, also headed by Dupont, and a brother, David, of Wilmington, were also arrested and are awaiting trial.

DRY LEADER SPEAKS HERE

third step will be the encouragement of legislation to put books into the schools that will set forth the scientific facts concerning the evil effects of alcohol, and as a final action, to set up an organization in each of the one hundred counties of the state which will distribute literature pertaining to law observance, law enforcement, temperance and kindred subjects. It will also be a part of the league's work to bring informing articles to the attention of the citizenry of the state these matters through the weekly and daily newspapers.

Mr. Burnett said that he had always given his support to the Anti-Saloon League, and that his own personal experience led him to continue that support in its work against the liquor forces today.

It is incumbent upon us to teach with no uncertainty today respect for constitutional authority. This must be done in the home, the school and the church.

Taking up various arguments put forth by the wet forces Mr. Burnett answered them successfully. The wet forces have claimed that the 18th amendment was "put over when the soldiers were in France, and that they did not have an opportunity to vote on this matter. That is not true. In the years 1912, 1914 and 1916 we elected senators to the United States Senate by the direct vote of the people for the first time. In 1916 Woodrow Wilson was re-elected President on the appeal, "He would keep us out of war."

That congress selected in those three periods passed the amendment several months before the United States entered the World war in April, 1917, and therefore the men who became soldiers did vote for those who represented them in that Congress. This amendment went into the Constitution only after the longest period of education that ever preceded any addition to our federal document.

Mr. Burnett further stated that both candidates now aspiring to the high office of the presidency have said nothing about what shall be put in place of the saloon when liquors may be legalized and offered to the people of the country for sale. It must be realized that if liquor, in any form is legalized it must be offered for sale, and whatever you call the thing, it will still have about everything that pertained to the old saloon. Ben Tillman of South Carolina said "The only thing that can be done with liquor is to kill it!"

When the 18th amendment is repealed, if ever, it must be by the due process of constitutional procedure which are entirely too long to suit the thirsty appetites of the wets. Hence, their warfare will be directed toward a process of nullification by the rescinding of the Volstead act and other enforcing laws, and the enactment of such legislation as will be expected to legalize the liquors offered for sale.

There is, however, a much bigger question before us that must be faced, and faced honestly and courageously. It is "Shall we enforce law or not?" The flag of the United States has never been dipped in defeat to any enemy thus far, shall it be dragged into the dust now, by these unholy forces of iniquity?

Our newspapers that go into the homes tell very little about these facts concerning enforcement, or the benefits there. Most of the news that is broadcast pertains to law-breaking. Mr. Burnett quoted Evangeline Bosch of the Salvation Army as saying that before the 18th amendment went into effect it was a nightly affair to care for from 1200 to 1500 drunks in their lodging places in the city of New York. Now their average is only 7 per cent. In the city of Chicago their rooming house given by Mr. Wright

Miller Makes Plea for Poor

Tens of thousands of North Carolinians are facing the winter "without the comfort of the crude creature comforts and going into war equally as dreadful and far more drab than that on any battlefield upon which Carolina soldiers have ever fought," Miller said.

Miller was the principal speaker for the central district welfare conference. Other speakers included Mrs. W. T. Bost, state commissioner of welfare; Dr. W. C. Jackson, of the University of North Carolina; Mrs. T. W. Bickett of Raleigh, and Dr. John S. Bradway of Duke University.

Devoing the major portion of his talk to federal relief aid given the state, Miller urged each welfare worker and interested citizen to remember it is "necessary that every community buckle up for greater local effort instead of less if their own individual needs are to be properly cared for.

"Federal aid is for those who help themselves," he continued, "and not for those who fold up and try to shunt the entire burden over onto the back of the federal government" amount of common tobacco was in evidence during the day.

It was stated today that about 75 per cent of the crop in this part of the country had been disposed of. This indicated that the bulk of the crop will be disposed of by Thanksgiving holidays with little market activity after that time.

By reason of shortage of plants and unfavorable weather conditions the crop in this belt has been cut about 50 per cent below that of last year, and this accounts for the large part of the crop already disposed of.

repose. The silver tongue that swayed the multitude is silent. He was loved and honored as few men are and thousands of loyal friends will ever revere his memory. Our State seldom produces a man of his fine nature, his beauty of character and his sincerity of purpose. Long may he live in the hearts of the citizens of his native State.

Judge Dunn paid brilliant tribute to Colonel James, who died last summer following a lingering illness. He described him as one of the most lovable characters of the State, an optimist whose optimism warmed the lives of those whom he came in contact with from time to time and always endeavored to leave them better than he found them.

After reviewing the splendid record of Colonel James as a lawyer, politician and friend to human kind, Judge Dunn said:

"He was honest, sincere, genuine, fearless and candid. He never rang false or hollow. He hated pretension, sham and concealment. He despised double dealing, trickery and deception. He abhorred hypocrisy, cowardice and deceit. Loyal in his friendship true in his convictions, he commanded the fullest measure of respect and admiration of all who knew him"

Mr. Gavlor declared S. T. Carson to have been one of the most promising young lawyers of the local bar. He said he always exhibited interest in the progress of the community and State, and that his activities in behalf of improved citizenship was very pronounced throughout his life.

He lauded the kindly spirit of the

The early setback was not only recovered by December, which sold up to 6.40 with the general list showing an advance of 8 to 9 points. The market was steady at midday. (Courtesy Speight & Co.)

Stock Market
New York, Oct. 27.—(AP)—The stock market tilted up again today but with most traders on the side line. The list was unable to make important progress. The list wobbled uncertainly in early dealings, but developed somewhat after opening of the wheat market.

The bon market also took on a better complexion. Rails led the upturn with gain of a point or more with New York Central, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania and others.

American Can rose a couple of points and other issues up a point or so included United States Steel, American Telegraph, Case, Westinghouse, Dupont, National Biscuit and others.

The late tone was soggy. g Sales were apparently 80,000 shares.
