DEMOCRATS TO HEAR GARDNER HERE TONIGHT

Governor Will Deliver Most Important Speech of Campaign at Courthouse.

W. E. Hooks, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee, was in the city today making final arrangements for the appearance here tonight of Gov. O. Max Gardner of Raleigh, who will deliver the most important political speech of his campaign.

The governor and Mrs. Gardner will arrive late this afternoon and will be entertained at dinner at East Carolina Teachers College. While at the address, the chief executive will address the student body although his subject had not been announced.

The governor will speak at the court house at 8 o'clock and delegations from six surrounding counties were expected to be on hand to hear him outline achievement of the Democratic party during the present administration. The address is of such importance that it will be broadcast to all parts of the state by a special hookup with the radio station at Raleigh, it was announced several days ago by the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Mr. Hooks said he had been promised large delegations from Nash, Edgecombe, Greene, Beaufort and Martin counties and felt confident the courtroom in which the rally will be held would be filled to overflowing. Although other rallies have been held in the county from time to time, this is considered by far the most important of the campaign, and the county chairman was hearing everybody to be on hand to hear the governor tell of what North Carolina has accomplished under Democratic administration.

The rally is held one week from the date of the national election, when millions of people will go to the polls to express their preference for a president and state officers, and was expected to give additional impetus to the campaign here. Pitt County, in the opinion of Chairman Hooks, will pile up the largest majority ever given a Democratic nominee and will probably forge into the lead of all other counties of the state from the standpoint of the size of the vote cast.

The campaign is receiving much attention from women who never gave politics much thought before, and indications at this time point to the largest feminine vote in the history of the county.

Methodists To Meet at Salem

Winston-Salem, Nov. 1.—(AP)—The Western North Carolina Methodist Episcopal Church will hold its annual conference here starting Wednesday, November 9, with representatives expected to attend from each of the 294 churches of the district.

The Western North Carolina Conference is recognized as the second strongest conference in the 52 which form the Southern Methodist Church, being exceeded only by the North Georgia division.

Centenary West End Methodist Church here will be host to the convention, which will probably extend through Monday, Nov. 14, with pastoral appointments for the ensuing year being announced either Sunday or Monday.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouson of Charlotte, is presiding officer of the conference and the Rev. William L. Sherrill of Charlotte has been its secretary since 1894.

The conference's historical society will meet Thursday, Nov. 10, and the Rev. W. E. Poovey, presiding elder of the Mount Airy district, will be the principal speaker discussing "The Beginning of Methodism on the Branches of the Yackin—and Beyond."

TWO HUNDRED TO GET WORK ON HIGHWAYS

New Bern, Nov. 1.—As a phase of the unemployment relief work in this section, similar to that being provided in other parts of the State 200 men now out of employment will report to work Wednesday in this district of the state highway department to be assigned jobs on road maintenance in different parts of the section.

These maintenance and improvement jobs on the highways, streets and school grounds will be separate and apart from the new construction projects that will be undertaken soon in the region, highway officials report. Men for this maintenance work are being furnished by the county welfare department from its unemployed list.

HERMAN CASEY ON TRIAL FOR LIFE AGAIN

Kinston Court Busy Selecting Jury To Hear Murder Charge During Morning.

Kinston, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Herman Casey, convicted once of the murder of J. C. Causey, prominent Suffolk Va., lumberman, and who has seen the date of his execution changed five times, went on trial for his life in the Superior Court here today.

As court opened, the selection of a jury from a venire of 225 men was begun, but as the names were drawn it was apparent it would take some time to select a jury.

The special venire was ordered yesterday when Casey pleaded not guilty.

Casey was shot to death in 1930 and the automobile containing his body was burned on a lonely road in Lenoir County. Casey was arrested sometime later and the trial followed.

GROWERS ON STRIKE IN FLA.

Bean Producers hold Crop from the Market in Effort Boost Price Situation.

Okeechobee, Fla., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Bean growers of the Great Lake Okeechobee farm region have gone on a strike to hold their crop from the market in order to boost prices.

Against the usual shipment in excess of fifty cars daily, only two carloads were shipped from this section yesterday. Fifty-eight other cars were loaded Saturday and Sunday, but remained on the siding.

Prices offered ranged from twenty-five cents a bushel for ordinary qualities of beans and forty-five cents for the finer qualities. Growers said present prices would not pay the cost of production. In order to make a living profit, they said they would have to get $1 a bushel.

MURDER CASE IS DEFERRED

Cases Against T. H. Barnhill Continued Until January Term of Court.

The two cases against T. H. Barnhill, Bethel Township farmer, charged with murder and manufacturing whiskey, were deferred until January term of criminal court at the opening session of the criminal term of Superior Court here yesterday.

The cases were continued at the suggestion of Solicitor D. M. Clark, who stated there were other angles of the murder charge they wished to go into before the case is given a hearing.

Barnhill, who has been at liberty under bond the last several months, is charged with the slaying of his ward, Jesse Barnhill, on the Flat Swamp road, during the early summer.

Although the coroner's jury returned a verdict that the man came to his death from bullet wounds inflicted by unknown persons Barnhill was arrested by county officers following extended investigation.

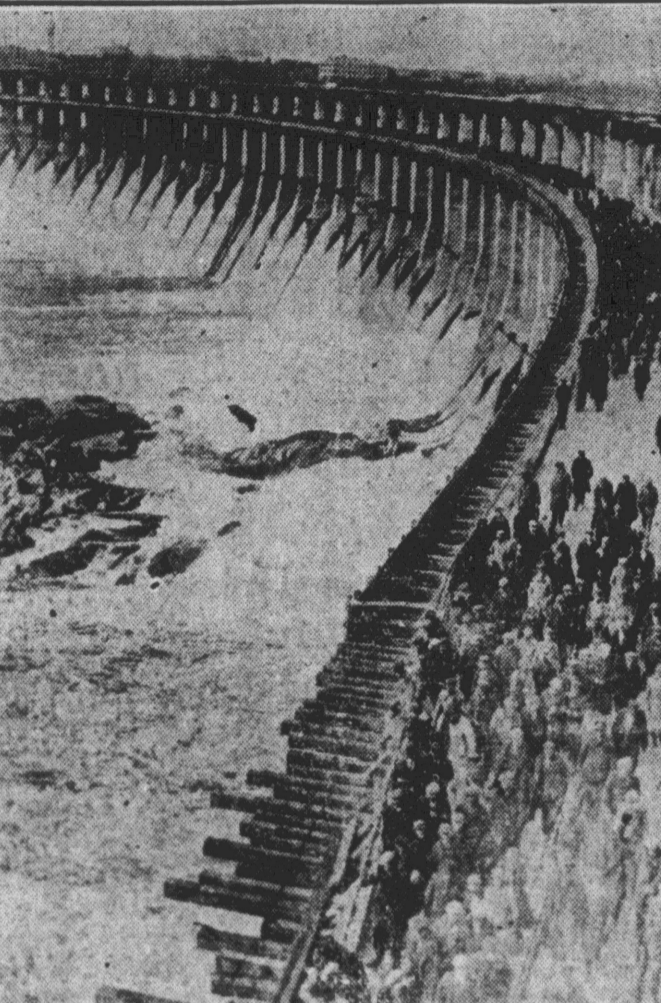

He was believed to have killed his ward for the purpose of obtaining $10,000 insurance which was said to have been made payable to him in event of the ward's death.

When arrested Barnhill vigorously denied he had anything to do with the slaying, but he was said by witnesses to have been seen with the ward a few hours before the slaying occurred.

The case has attracted considerable interest among the people of the section in which it originated, and hundreds were expected to be on hand today when both charges had been previously scheduled to come up.

Paris, Nov. 1.—(AP)—A quietly dressed little man with the lousing case of an American collegian is Wellington Koo, China's new Minister to France and selected to be his country's spokesman when the Lytton report on Manchuria is debated before the League of Nations.

He holds a Ph.D. from Columbia University, speaks well-chosen English and knows America as do few of his race. He was Minister to Washington when he was only 28.

He has been China's foreign minister, finance minister and premier. Many times he has been commissioned as an envoy plenipotentiary and he was president of the first League of Nations assembly.

"His Excellency" is his by right of conquest, but he dislikes official titles except for the most formal occasions. He would rather be called "Dr. Koo."

He is glad to be back in Paris, he says. He fought a stiff fight here for his country during the peace.

LEAF PRICES PICK UP HERE

Highest Average Of the Season Recorded on Over Million Lbs. Sold Monday.

The price situation took a pronounced jump on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday and the highest price average of the season was established. It was revealed today in the official report of sales by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales.

The high average was recorded on over a million pounds of bright leaf and farmers from many sections of the belt benefited by the price rise.

The market handled a total of 1,095,012 pounds of tobacco for $157,175.62 at an average of $14.35 per hundred.

Offerings were comparatively light today in the face of rain-fall throughout the community and there was only about 400,000 pounds of leaf on the warehouse floors when sales got under way. It was indicated work would be completed by the noon hour.

With the crop three-fourth disposed of considerable quantities of common tobacco have appeared on the market the last several days. Offerings yesterday, however, were some better and this was reflected in the upward trend. Improvement was also noted on the other grades.

As on other days of the season scores of people from remote parts of the belt were on the market yesterday, offering their products for sale, and watching the rapidity of the sales made possible by the tremendous facilities of the market.

BIG RACE IS ON IN CALIFORNIA

Wm. G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, Seeking to Gain Senatorship in Sunshine State; Indiana All Pepped Up Over Race Between Watson and Van Nye; Other Races Drawing Attention.

Washington, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Aside from general interest in the Presidential, congressional and gubernatorial contest next Tuesday, political leaders of the nation today were paying particular attention to the senatorial election race.

Chief interest of the two dominant parties centered on the senatorial races in California, Massachusetts, Indiana, Iowa, Utah, Ohio, along with several other States.

In California, Allen Tubbs, young Republican Senator; William McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Rev. Robert Shuyler, exhibition candidate, were engaged in a three-cornered contest for the minor senatorship left open by the defeat of Senator Tubbs Shortridge, Republican.

Tubbs is for outright repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and McAdoo stands on the Democratic speak platform.

Another struggle was under way in Iowa where Henry Field, winner over Senator Brookhart, is opposing Louis R. Murphy, Democrat. The latter is a prohibitionist, while Field and Murphy are standing in the platform of their parties.

Indiana is all pepped up over the contest between Senator James Watson, Republican leader, and Fred Van Nye, of Indianapolis, former District Attorney. Senator Watson is talking mostly about the tariff and the Home Loan Bank law which he sponsored in the Senate.

Adherents of the Republican Senator Smooth and Dr. Albert Thomas, professor of Political Science of the University of Utah, and a Democrat, are mixing it in old-time fashion. It is a race between a man who has never held a political office and one who has been in the Senate for thirty years. Both are prominent members of the Mormon Church.

Senator George Moses, incumbent and president pro tem of the Senate, is conducting an active campaign for re-election against Fred Brown, Democrat, while Senator Buckley, Democrat, of Ohio, and his Republican opponent, George Beckman have attracted much attention as result of their activities in the stump. Buckley is for repeal of the prohibition law and Beckman in favor of the Republican campaign plank.

SCORES NEW BRIDGE RULES

William Karns thinks System Effective Today is Entirely Too Complicated.

New York, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Contract bridge experts said today they had many misgivings as to the new code of rules which went into effect today. Several stressed the lack of simplicity in scoring below the line and double under tricks.

Criticizing the varying count of no trump, thirty for odd numbers and forty for even numbers, William Karns suggested that evaluation be revised to thirty for no trump, twenty-five for majors and twenty for minors.

Eli Culbertson recently warned that no card game with a complicated count could endure.

JAIL MAN IN SHOOTING CASE

Elizabeth City, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Mack Jennings was held in jail here today under bond of $250 in the shooting of Federal Prohibition Agent C. S. Coats in a still raid in the Berra section Saturday.

TAKES CRACK AT ROOSEVELT

Anti-Saloon Official Sees Danger of Policies if Roosevelt Is Elected.

Wilmington, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Arthur J. Barton, chairman of the educational committee of the Anti-Saloon League in this State, charged in a statement here that election of Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Presidency would mean turning the government over to Al Smith and liquor policies.

Hundreds of thousands who did not vote for Smith in the last election, but who have been supporting Roosevelt in the present campaign should have their eyes open as result of Smith's recent address, he said.

Terry Ready to Take The Giant Team Apart

By GAYLE TALBOT (Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 25.—(AP)—Any doubt that Bill Terry, new boss of the Giants, means business in his avowed intention of breaking up the old guard at the Polo Grounds, was removed by his sensational swap with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Four players for two, without a cent of "difference," proved that Terry is willing to turn his team inside out in order to get the material he desires. If there are any other traders of Branch Rickey's calibre in the National League, there might not be more than four or five old line Giants left when spring comes around.

Daring Deal

The most impressive feature of Terry's initial deal was its very daring. He gave up four good men, including a pair who at one time or another have starred in the big leagues, for what amounts to a freshman battery.

Gus Mancuso, the catcher obtained from the Cards, has been around St. Louis for several years and has proved himself a sound hitter, but has been kept in the background by the veteran Jimmy Wil-Ray Starr, Terry's pitching acquisition, is a rookie in fact, entirely unproved as a major league starter. He has shone with Rochester, and he turned in a couple of brilliant performances for the Red Birds late in the past season, but he still is a gamble.

Against this pair Memphis Bill stacked up Bill Walker, a great southpaw pitcher in 1931; Jim Mooney, a youngster who stood National League batsmen on their heads at the bag end of 1931; Bob O'Farrell, veteran big-time catcher, and Ethan Allen, one of the game's speediest outfielders.

While the Cards found no particular bargain either in O'Farrell or Allen, there is the possibility they picked up something really good in Walker and Mooney. Two seasons ago the most effective pitcher in the National League, Walker just has passed through an "off-year" and may come back better than ever. It has happened before, and he still is in his prime. Mooney, with a year's big league experience, might be ready to blossom into a star.

If both come through for Gabby Street, the Cards will be equipped with about the most formidable staff of southpaws in either league. Bill Hallahan still is one of the best. Add Dizzy Dean and Paul Derringer to the list and you get a lot of pitching.

The wisdom of Terry's move will rest, in the last analysis, with Starr. If he comes through big, proves a suitable pitching mate for Carl Hubbell, the Giants will be satisfied. If Shanty Hogan is not traded or sold, Mancuso probably will get no better than a division of the catching duties.

Big Five football game. Few teams in the state can boast a better defensive record than that of State College. In six games the Wolfpack has had 19 points scored against it—six by Florida and 13 by Carolina.

Capt. William "Red" Espey is the big power in the Pack line. He played brilliantly against Carolina last week, working the entire 60 minutes. Espey is classed as one of the south's best pivot men and his play against the Heels put him in direct line for a place on the 1932 all-Southern selection.

Ranking next to Espey are Rudy Seitz, big senior tackle, and John Stanko, sophomore guard. Both are leading candidates for North Carolina's all-star team.

Injuries to Allen Neils, end; and Buck Buchanan, guard, will prevent their playing Saturday.

One of Carolina's two touchdowns Saturday came as the result of an intercepted pass and a short drive. The Tar Heel backs found Smith's line too tough for any consistent or long drives.

Chapel Hill, Nov. 1.—One of the most pleasing developments of the State game from a Carolina point of view was the fact that Coach Collins was able to use two complete teams and have each held the powerful Wolfpack fairly well under control.

Early season predictions pointed to a lack of reserve material as the Tar Heels' chief weakness, but mid-season finds Carolina fairly well equipped in this department.

Coach Collins started his second stringers against State and though they yielded four first downs in the initial quarter they held well in the pinches.

The effective punting of Woolen and Burnett along with the offensive drive displayed by McCaskill, Thompson, Phipps and Daniel and the hardy defensive play of both lines were merely mechanical highlights so far as Coach Collins was concerned. The big thing was the spirited and aggressive play that saw the Tar Heels taking advantage of every break.

The team Coach Charlie Bachman will bring here Friday will have plenty of experience and power. Al Rogers, Hughes and Culler are the leading backfield performers and all these are veterans. Stoltz, McAnly, Henderson and Moyer are sophomores who have proven their ability already this season.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

In addition to a number of other excellent results, the new football rules have had the effect of focusing more attention upon officiating and officials.

It has begun to dawn on a lot of folks that what they supposed was just a whistle-blower or a guy who galloped up and down the sidelines with a stick has a highly technical job and plenty of responsibility, involving speed of foot, agility, quick eye-sight, experience and good judgment.

"Let me describe a case or two, just for example," remarked Dr. Eddie O'Brien, one of the East's most prominent officials, after the Army-Pittsburgh game. "You saw Palmer (the umpire) call interference on a pass against Pitt and to my mind it was one of the finest decisions I have seen this season."

The defensive player violated the rule by waving his arms, so as to interfere with the pass-catcher's vision. As it happened he also touched the receiver, but this was scarcely noticeable except to an official closely watching every detail.

A Difficult Job "The new rules outlawing crawling by the offensive side or piling on by the defensive team have added immeasurably to the difficulties of officiating. They are good rules but complications often develop."

To give you another idea: Suppose a halfback on Team A gallops loose and runs 60 yards before he is tackled. He tries to get up and advance, forgetting the new rule against crawling. In the meantime he is piled on by the opposing players. That's another violation, making a double-foul, and under Rule 12, Section 3, the ball must be brought back to the point where it was put in play and be played over again."

Need For Instruction On the same subject, Dr. F. A. Lambert, of Columbus, who has been officiating for twenty-two seasons, mostly in the Middle West, says: "Football is a complex game and the rules therefore are not simple nor are they quickly learned or understood thoroughly, regardless of what some may say. There is a considerable need for proper instruction upon the rules and how to apply them when one appreciates that in Ohio alone over 15,000 high school boys are in uniform. . . . Younger coaches, especially, are not taught enough about the rules."

"Few realize it takes time, study and real work now to officiate properly. Formerly, most any prominent football star could get a job officiating, but today he is just in the 'red' unless he has developed himself."

Dr. Lambert's contributions on "A Study of the 1932 Football Rules" and "Football Officiating and Interpretation of the Rules" have become text-books this season among officials as well as many coaches.

BARREL INDUSTRY SEEKS TO REGAIN OLD FOOTING

St. Louis, Nov. 1.—(AP)—One of the ancient industries, and one whose product has not changed greatly in twenty centuries, is making a bid for revival.

With a new monthly trade publication and a national convention, the cooperage industry has commenced a campaign to bring back some of the prominence barrel-making once enjoyed.

GRINS from the GRID

(This is the seventeenth of a series of articles in which O. W. "Red" Severence, noted official, relates the humorous and "inside" stories he has run across in a long association with leading football coaches.

By O. W. "RED" SEVERENCE (Written for The Associated Press) (What happens in the huddle out on the gridiron as tense, excited players stick their heads together before a crucial play rarely becomes known to the outside world.

But one good story that took place in a huddle comes from the lips of Andy Kerr, head coach at Colgate. In the 1931 Colgate-Syracuse game, with Coach Kerr's team leading 14-0, Syracuse started a drive that ended in a touchdown and changed the score to 14-7.

Rallying behind Johnny Litster, head-driving fullback, Colgate carried the ball straight down the field on line plays without using a single forward pass and scored a third touchdown to ward off the Syracuse threat and make victory a certainty. A moment later Colgate had the ball on the Syracuse 26-yard line and Bob Samuel, aggressive sophomore quarterback, again called Litster's signal as Colgate went into their huddle.

"Say, listen," the tired fullback complained, "I'm worn out. I've carried the ball three out of four plays all afternoon. Give it to someone else now."

Quick as a flash Samuel snapped back: "I'm running this team. I called your signal and you'll carry the ball."

The huddle broke up and the weary Litster, stung by the remark, plunged through to Syracuse's 3-yard line for his longest gain of the day.

But the crowd saw only a tired fullback on the winning team making a desperate effort to score for NO apparent reason whatever.

DUKEMEN ARE ALL SET FOR 'TUCKY GAME

Durham, N. C., Nov. 1.—Meeting in the third of an annual series of contests which have always called forth brilliant battles, Duke and Kentucky whose records for the season are remarkably alike, are expected to write into grid history another thrilling game when they clash in Duke stadium Saturday.

The great crowd of 16,000 North Carolina fans who saw the Blue Devils beat the Wildcats, 14 to 7, in the Blue Grass boys' first invasion of this State in 1930, remember the spectacular play in that contest, with Kentucky, trying in vain the last half to overcome the two touchdown lead of the Devils.

Another great battle was written on the books at Lexington last year, the Blue Devils living up to the meaning of their nickname by fighting off all Wildcat threats and finally getting the winning touchdown.

Both teams this season have been defeated twice out of six games, both times by narrow margins and after great fights. The Kentuckians have lost to V. P. I., 7 to 0, and to Alabama, 12 to 7. Alabama's margin of victory came in the final period. Duck lost to Auburn, 17 to 7, after a great stand, and to Tennessee last week, 16 to 13 by a Vol field goal in the final minutes of play.

Coach Wallace Wade has the singular record of never having been beaten by a Kentucky team. That string of victories has continued for eleven years, when the Duke mentor was coaching at Vanderbilt. Annually, since 1921, his teams have won. That string of defeats at the hands of Coach Wade with Duke having won its only two games played with them, give Kentucky everything to fight for and the Blue Devils everything to defend Saturday. So another great and thrilling battle appears to be in the offing.

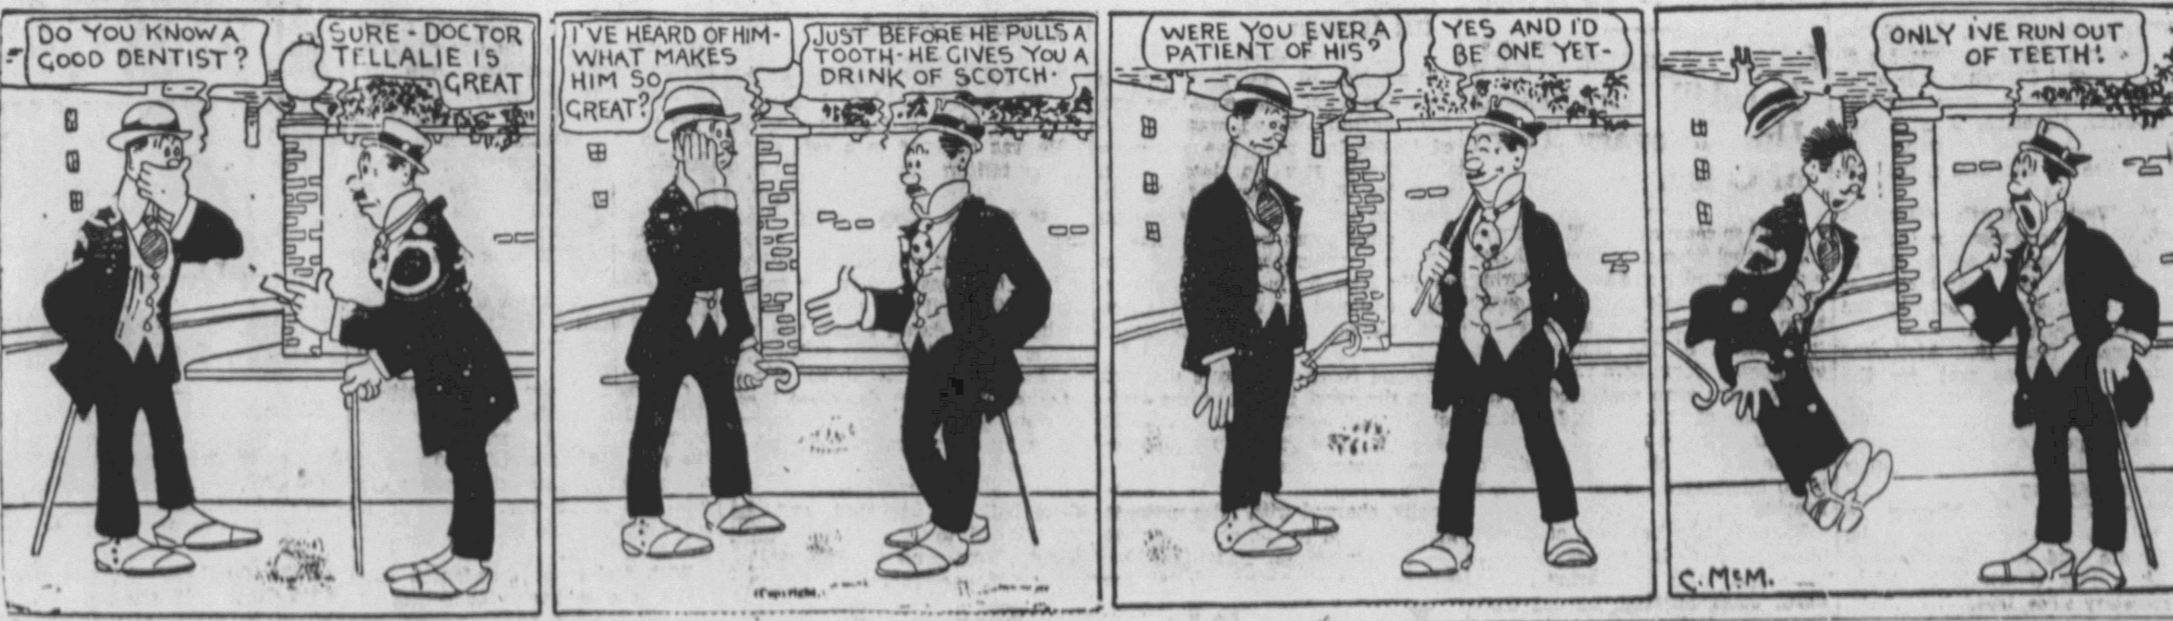

The airplane passenger death rate in schedule flying for 1931 has been placed at 2 per cent 1,000 passenger hours, or five per 100,000 flights by the committee on aviation of the Actuarial Society of America.

The preliminary report of the Alaska salmon pack in 1932 to August 31 shows that 5,156,118 cases of 48 one-pound cans were packed.

DORIS KENYON TO BE HERE NOVEMBER 14th

Doris Kenyon, in private life Mrs. Milton Sills, the screen star and versatile artist, will give a costume recital which she calls "Lyric Silhouettes" at East Carolina Teachers College on the evening of November 14.

She presents impersonations in song and picturizations of various types she has found in her travels, giving the atmosphere and wearing the costume of the nationally represented. She has shown rare talent in combining beautiful music with brilliant character studies and she has a fine voice and dances well.

She has appeared in these recitals in many parts of this country and Europe, and all who have seen her have been charmed with her. Return engagements have been asked for wherever she has been seen.

Last year she was at Duke University and this year they are again announcing her as one of the leading stars in their program. The chairman of the entertainment committee of the college, when he found that the Grace Moore engagement was definitely cancelled, at once got in touch with the manager of Doris Kenyon to see if it were possible to get her to come here on her southern tour. There was just one date open, and that was perhaps due to a complicated schedule. That date was immediately taken and the contract signed and all arrangements made as speedily as possible.

THIRD DEGREE ROW STIRS MANILA'S CITY AUTHORITIES

Manila, Nov. 1.—(AP)—Resentment over police third degree methods arose here when the insular supreme court released Guendo Nishishima, a Japanese, who had served one year of a life term for murder.

The court held that an alleged confession upon which he was convicted was obtained by duress.

Mayor Tomas Earnshaw ordered an official investigation of police methods and a bill was introduced in the Philippine Legislature imposing penalties for police mistreatment of prisoners.

Thomas Platt, chief of police, answered newspaper attacks by forbidding the department to give any information to reporters.

WILL PRESIDE OVER NATIONAL CONVENTION

Wilson Nov. 1.—Miss Daphne Carraway of Wilson has gone to Dallas, Texas, where she will preside over the National Story League convention to be held there November 4 and 5.

Miss Carraway is a charter member of the Story League which was organized in 1903 by Dr. Richard T. Wyche at the summer school of the South in Knoxville Tenn. Since then the interest in the art of story telling has grown until now there are Story Leagues all over the nation and it has become a patent influence for developing the principles of character building and of good citizenship. Miss Carraway has been president of this league during the past four years in which time she has seen it become an increasingly effective factor in community, church and playground activities.

Chevrolet Motor Co., Observes Its 21st Birthday

This marks the "coming of age" of the world's largest automobile company.

For just twenty-one years ago—on November 3, 1911—the Chevrolet Motor Company was incorporated in Michigan for the manufacture and sale of automotive vehicles.

The first car ever to carry the name "Chevrolet" came out of an upstairs flat converted into a workshop in Detroit, and now, a generation later, the name has decorated more than 8,000,000 radiators of cars and trucks throughout the world.

Today the Chevrolet Motor Company has a past record of leading the industry in sales in three years out of the past five. For the 1932 year—date Chevrolet registrations outnumber the second highest make by approximately 100,000 units, indicating another year of Chevrolet leadership and an increase in "first" to four years out of the past six.

Curiously enough, the first Chevrolet bore a basic resemblance to the modern product of the company in the Louis Chevrolet, famous race driver of another era, who did some experimental work on the first car and whose name it perpetuates. The employed a six-cylinder engine. The company's greatest comparative success came with this type of motor, built exclusively during the past three years, and now being copied by other entrants into the low-priced market.

In another sense the early years of the company bear a strange parallel to modern days in that as early as 1915 Chevrolet was launched in the volume car field, where it was later to achieve leadership, with the introduction of the Model "490." This car, named for its price, was a sensation in its day, and production of it was continued for several years. This, incidentally, was the lowest priced Chevrolet ever on the market until the reduction of the base price in the 1931 series of $475. The present base price is $445 f.o.b. Flint.

After the formation of the company, a decade elapsed before 1,000,000 cars had been turned out. But since those early years, when Chevrolet was finding its place in an already large industry, the company has written a veritable Horatio Alger story of modern business growth.

4-H Clubs.

Seventeen 4-H girls clubs have reorganized since school began. Each club has a leader and is starting the work with real enthusiasm. Perhaps the best program given so far was given by the Fountain 4-H girls. All clubs have members doing both the Junior and Senior program in clothing. The Home Economics girls at Ayden, Bethel and Farmville are doing their regular class work in clothing and an addition are having monthly 4-H meetings in which they will incorporate such subjects as club reading, tree planting, health work, grooming, etc. All enrollments have not been turned in yet but in a few days reports can be made.

4-H Leaders

Some splendid 4-H leaders have been secured to help with the 4-H program this year. The club members owe much to these leaders who are giving of their time and influence so freely. The following have been enlisted up to date and we are very proud of them: Arthur, Miss Elizabeth Spain, junior leader, and Miss Frances Dilda, senior leader; Belvoir, Miss Nancy Lewis; Chicod, Miss Mamie Edwards, senior leader, and Miss Doris Stephenson, junior leader; Fountain, Miss Amanda Etheridge; Pactolus, Miss Willard Allen; Falkland, Miss Margaret McKinnon and Miss Nanny Parker Allen; Grimesland, Miss Nancy Willford.

Highest Club Record.

Each year two girls and two boys are selected from each state to represent the 4-H members of the state. Two years ago this county was honored by Miss Olive Jackson of Winterville who was chosen. Since that time Miss Jackson has been a member of the State 4-H Honor Club which has about two dozen members. Doris Nichols of Bell Arthur, has the highest honor in Pitt county at present and has been recommended as a state candidate.

Her friends are hoping she will rate high enough to be selected this year. Miss Nichols has been a leader in her community for five seasons and is a loyal member of her club. For the past year she has been president of the 4-H council.

4-H Club Play.

A 4-H club play is being prepared by the Arthur Senior 4-H club to be presented as a part of a Beaufort county program at Camp Leach on November 12. All Pitt county club members are invited to this meeting.

Final arrangements are being made for the Achievement program of Home Demonstrator women to be held in the Greenville Woman's Club building November 15. Each club is also preparing a window display for that week.

Report Blanks Still Missing

Questionnaires were sent out several days ago to be returned to the home demonstration office. Some of these reports have not been returned yet. Will those who have not already done so get them in at the earliest date possible as they are quite necessary in making the county report.

Certificates For Winners.

Each president is asked to check her club members and turn in the names of those who are eligible for food certificates on Achievement day. The requirement will be sent to each president.

Miss Willie Hunter Here.

Miss Willie Hunter, state clothing specialist, was in the county Saturday morning to work with the home demonstration agent on the clothing program for 1933. The year books will soon be available and the program will be given out at that time. All those interested in clothing are urged to enroll in any one of the home demonstration clubs. And, if there are new groups that would like to be organized at this time, they should be reported to the home agent. When the program is new is the best time for organization.

WILL A FARMER VOTE FOR HOOVER?

To hear President Hoover's campaign speech delivered at New York last night, persons unfamiliar with the situation could easily draw the conclusion that all American traditions since the landing of the Pilgrims down to the present day were embodied solely in the Republican party and his recent candidacy for the presidency and that every evil that has ever come to this country was the result of the efforts of the Democratic party and that election of Mr. Roosevelt and the Democratic party in the coming election would spell immediate and lasting disaster to the American nation and all American traditions. In other words, apparently Mr. Hoover thinks the American people are America itself and that any thought to the contrary seeks to undermine the foundations of our government to which, using the familiar slang expression we speak, "How does he get that way?"

Despite his former thoughts and opinions sometimes it doesn't take some time long to make definite decisions regarding where they stand when they begin to feed at the political pie under and apparently Mr. Hoover comes into this class. While he speaks of the American traditions of the past hundred and fifty years and gives all the credit to the Republican party, does Mr. Hoover think for a moment that the American people have forgotten so quickly that it was only a few years ago that he renewed his contacts with America after pending the major part of his life and energies on foreign soil; does he think that they have forgotten that just a few years ago he could not make up his own mind whether he was a Democrat or Republican and that since casting his lot with the Republican party he has held public office continuously; does he think that the American people have forgotten the scandals of the Harding administration (he was a member of Mr. Harding's cabinet at the time), and does he think that the Teapot Dome and other oil deals for the benefit of a few rich oil magnates upheld the American traditions of the past hundred and fifty years. All in all, does Mr. Hoover think for one minute just with a lot of high sounding patriotic words he can blind the American people to the fact that the Republican administrations always have stood for and continue to stand for the principles of special privileges to a few at the expense of the masses.

While we cannot go into the faults of Mr. Hoover's address in detail, as we see them, because neither time nor space will permit, we do call special attention to Mr. Hoover's remark that should a Democratic administration interfere with the present high Republican tariff wall that grass would soon fill the streets of thousands of our cities and towns and that all the farms of the nation would be reduced to a crop of weeds. While there are hundreds of reasons why, as we see it, that our people should not and cannot afford to support a Republican administration the tariff alone should be enough to prevent any farmer of the tobacco growing states to vote the Republican ticket.

There are many no doubt who are of the opinion that the tariff is something we read about and that is all, but here is how it affects the farmers of our section with regard to tobacco alone, and what is true in this case is true with most any farm commodity in any section of the nation. The records show that approximately thirty-five per cent of the bright leaf tobacco crop goes to the domestic companies, the remaining sixty-five per cent of necessity having to go to foreign markets, if it finds any market at all. Now just what has the Republican tariff done to this one product? It has caused retaliatory tariffs by foreign nations that places a duty of more than two dollars a pound on our tobacco going to the British Isles, while the duty on the same tobacco from Canada and British colonies is 50 cents. The result is that tobacco is being grown more extensively in those countries (many of our own farmers have spent this summer in Canada teaching the farmers there the art of curing tobacco) and the demand for our tobacco is growing less with each succeeding year, as is evidenced by the starvation prices now paid our farmers for this one crop, while the growers in the other provinces receive prices many times higher for their tobacco because, with less duty the tobacco is still much cheaper to the foreign manufacturer. What is true with tobacco is true with every product of the farmer that is dependent upon foreign markets to consume the surplus, yet those manufactured articles, without exception, that the farmer buys, are protected and the prices kept high by this same high Republican tariff wall. We could go into each crop and each article individually and the result would be the same, but we have chosen this one item because at this time it most vitally affects the financial well-being of the farmers of our section and this fact alone is, we believe, sufficient to cause the farmer vote not only of our own section, but of the nation, to cast their ballots in favor of the entire Democratic ticket on November 8. Mr. Hoover's New York address might have sounded good to those who have benefitted at the hands of the Republican administrations and the Republican tariff, but to our farmers who year after year have witnessed an ever decreasing demand for their products with a corresponding lowering of prices, it is just so much hokum.

ABOUT TOWN

The story of the present state administration will be told by Governor O. Max Gardner at the court house here tonight. The governor chose Greenville as the center of his most important speech of his campaign in behalf of the Democratic party, and his address promises to be one of the most interesting of the campaign. The address will be the highlight of the county campaign, although several rallies have been held from time to time during the last month. W. E. Hooks, county chairman, is optimistic concerning the outcome of the fight and is of the opinion the largest vote ever recorded for a presidential candidate will be registered in Pitt. The governor's address will be of so much importance that special arrangements have been made to have it broadcast over the radio station at Raleigh.

Several automobile wrecks happened in the county over the weekend and while none of them resulted in the death of anybody, the mishaps resulted in severe property loss. While the loss of life from automobile wrecks is still very great, the loss of property is probably more severe. Thousands of dollars are spent daily because of the carelessness of somebody and the situation will not improve until people begin to give more attention to traffic laws.

When an automobile is smashed to pieces it deprives somebody of several hundred dollars, not considering the money paid to hospitals for possible injuries. If all of these wrecks could be eliminated, think what the property owner would be saved. People should forever be conscious of the danger they are in while on the highways and should keep their eyes open against themselves as well as the other fellow. It is the only way the annual toll from automobile wrecks will be decreased.

In view of the fact that the forthcoming election affects every man, woman and child in the country, mothers should make it a point to go to the polls in greater numbers and express their preference for holders of office.

The presidential election, as always, holds the spotlight but there are other offices just as important to the various communities, and only men of the best calibre should be elected. Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, is seeking the position now held by President Hoover. As governor of one of the most powerful states in the union, Governor Roosevelt has shown the people he is a trustworthy servant of the people and not any particular faction.

Being a true Democrat, he believes that all the people should be served and will enter public office with that end in view and signs of the times certainly point to his success at this time.

Pitt county is expected to pile up the largest woman's vote since they were enfranchised, and if other counties will do likewise it is certain Roosevelt will win out by the largest majority ever given a presidential candidate. Lots of people have a habit of talking too much. They may give away to their tongues so frequently that they oftentimes find themselves in trouble and have a hard time getting in the clear again. That was the case of Jean Saul, who told Seville, Spain, acquaintances several days ago that he knew something about the $50,000 Lindbergh kidnaping case.

When arrested he refused to talk, declaring he would not open his lips until placed under the protection of American police. Since that time, however, he has softened and told police that the only thing he knew about the case was what he heard two people say on a train.

Lots of people are like that. They hear somebody say something, think it is the truth and then spread it to the end of the earth if possible. This business of talking too freely, and especially gossiping, will prove costly in the long run, if not in dollars and cents, in loss of respectability and prestige.

Churches are the most valuable assets of a community and people should do more than ever to support them now that financial conditions are affecting the development of the various denominations. Greenville churches, like those in hundreds of other towns of the nation, have been hard hit because of the decreased earnings of their membership, and are finding it difficult to make the grade. Expenses have been cut everywhere possible. Missions at home and abroad are suffering and the very life of the church itself is affected. This is a serious situation. The churches are the foundation of civilization. They are the check which holds people in line and keeps them from stooping to certain planes of life that would result in destruction. It is true money has been tight and will remain so for some time, but we can help. We should deprive ourselves of some of the luxuries which we haven't yet given up and let that much money go to the cause of the church.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

THE SEA WOLF

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the noted artist, N. C. Wyeth... inspired by the infamous Captain Kidd's fierce raids on the gold-laden Spanish galleons (1696), which made him the scourge of the Spanish Main. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Campaign CHEERLEADERS

To Senator Lester J. Dickinson, Hoover loyalist from Iowa, Republicans are entrusting much of the campaign work to keep Western farmers in the party fold.

Recognition of the important part to be played by the farmers vote both in the Presidential race and the contest for control of the next Congress was reflected in the agricultural-minded Dickinson for two strategic posts in the Republican line for ballots.

At the National Convention he was the militant keynoter calling on to administration efforts to the farmer, lauding the tariff as a bulwark in the depression and citing the work of the Farm Board.

Now he is managing the Western campaign for election of Republican Senators and vigorously pressing the fight for Hoover among the people of the grain belt.

Dickinson, who entered the Senate last March after six terms as a Representative, was regarded as a farm bloc leader in the House. He sponsored scores of farm-aid measures in Congress.

White-haired and of powerful physique, the Senator from the Tall Corn State is one of the most distinguished-looking figures in Congress. He speaks with almost explosive force.

Shooting gentility derisive punches at the G. O. P. is the specialty of Pat Harrison, Senator from Mississippi for the past ten years and one of the leading Southern campaigners for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket.

Harrison, a veteran campaigner for his party and a past master of partisan attack, is rated a better debater than an orator. He likes the give-and-take of verbal combat on the Senate floor, where his goading of the Republicans is a familiar spectacle.

His "razzing" of the policies or performances of a political adversary is considered highly entertaining both by the galleries and his colleagues, the targets of his jibes often joining in the laughs at their expense.

He tempers his attack with a soft Dixie drawl and a whimsical wit, and, while he may get "under the skin" of an opponent, he seldom leaves a scar.

Harrison shines as an impromptu speaker, often departing from the text of a relatively staid formal address to employ a telling phrase or make an ironical observation.

Harrison, like most Southerners in politics, has a lawyer's training. He was a district attorney before coming to Washington as a Representative in 1911.

THE HOME THE HEART OF THE CITY

As the poet said: "it takes a lot of living in a house to make it 'home'" —also it is true that it takes a lot of healthy, happy, progressive and neighborly home-owners to make a great city. The complicated responsibility of running a home can, and does, become irksome to any woman. So . . . the Cooking School. It is devised and operated for the average housewife. She will receive new home-making methods, new recipes and new ideas from the lecturer—another woman, who brings a wealth of practical experience which she explains while actually at work in a model kitchen. No charge is made for the lectures—everyone is invited. Bring your pencil and notebook. Meet your friends at this gala event for home makers.

Talks to Parents

A JEALOUS PEALE

By Alice Judson Peale
A little boy whose father had been away for nearly a year showed great distress when again he returned home. He cried frequently in the night and developed a new and intensive dependence upon his mother.

Before, he had willingly played by himself for an hour at a time. Now he hung constantly on her skirt and cried when she disappeared even for a moment.

One afternoon as he awoke from his nap he began to cry as if his heart were broken. When his mother came into the room he put his arms about her neck, saying: "Why did you go away and leave me? I was all alone."

"But I wasn't gone. I was only in the kitchen baking cookies for you." "Cookies for me?" His face brightened, and then clouded again suddenly: "But not for daddy. Say it mother. Not for daddy!"

Children go through phases of this sort. The parent of the same sex is hated for a time even when he has shown them only love and kindness.

He was jealous, of course, because he had become used to having mother all to himself. His father's return had forced him to share her love. Time and continued patient friendliness from the temporarily friendly father are needed for the child to reconcile himself to the new order of things and to make a perfectly wholesome adjustment.

This kind of jealousy must always be met with love from the person who has caused the child to be jealous. Anything else will serve only to accentuate the difficulty and perhaps make it impossible for the child really to solve it, ever.

Scanning NEW BOOKS

By JOHN SELBY

New York, Nov. 1.—Few biographers are able, it seems, to retire from the field without leaving in their lists of titles another "Napoleon." Hilaire Belloc (by no means ready for retirement!) is no exception.

Mr. Belloc's "Napoleon" is somewhat out of the ruck in plan. He sketches for 65 pages the fabulous career of his subject, then goes back to the beginning, and in a series of episodes considers the numerous crises that made the career fabulous.

It is a rewarding plan, and although a less practiced hand might have left it confusing, Belloc does not. There are nevertheless some remarkable passages, stylistically and factually. Belloc's impetuous rush at times leads him to offer sweeping statements without citing definite authority.

As might be expected in a writer who is also something of an authority on military tactics, the battle episodes are most vivid.

From England Also

Frank Swinnerton is represented as well, and so is Catherine Carswell (the slow progress of whose writing will be remembered by all who read the D. H. Lawrence letters).

Swinnerton has to offer "The Georgian House," one of the surest and most effective of all his novels. Like his contemporaries, he rather over-values the atmosphere value of the English scene, and unlike some of them he knows definitely when he has built up the desired effect, whether of tragedy, comedy or irony. Then he stops. It being the thing to furnish maps with novels, nowadays, Swinnerton has provided an amusing one of his mythical Sanderford.

Mrs. Carswell knew Lawrence from 1914 to his death, and unlike the majority of his friends, stuck by him through that period. She calls her book "The Savage Pilgrimage, a Narrative of D. H. Lawrence," and for one who wishes to fill the chinks between the recently published letters of Lawrence, the work is valuable.

Mrs. Carswell got much from Lawrence in the way of Philosophy—literary criticism also, for that matter. In return she was able to ease a little that abysmal loneliness that Lawrence both hated and courted.

The Compilers

Mark Van Doren, who recently published a compilation of American poetry, now offers "The Oxford Book of American Prose," which is designed as a companion piece to the English Harvesting of Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. It is a more difficult job than selecting poetry, this extracting prose excerpts. Van Doren has tried to make the excerpts as long as possible; units standing alone when practicable. There are seventy-three pieces from forty-eight writers, many first rate. Fifteen short stories are to be found in the current "O. Henry Memorial Award Prize Stories," some of them fine examples of their sort. The committee (with Dr. Blanche Colton Williams supervising) awarded first prize to Stephen Vincent Benet, and second to James Gould Cozzens. A further "short short story" prize went to Edwin Granberry.

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, Oct. 29. — (AP) — Theatrical names are funny things. People who haven't them want them and people who have them sometimes wish they hadn't.

Veree Teasdale, whose name is odd enough to be remembered and short enough to fit in marquee lights and therefore is perfect for stage and screen, often wishes it were just plain "Vera."

"People think Verree is just a fancy spelling of Vera, anyway. I'm sure, and they seldom spell it correctly—with two r's," Miss Teasdale comments. "But I came by it honestly, none-the-less."

It seems that years ago a young Englishman named John Teasdale came to America and joined the union forces in the civil war. In New Orleans he was quartered in the home of a French family named Verree—and to make a long story short, real life romance equalled fictional. John fell in love with the beautiful young daughter of the family, and married her.

The marriage attracted quite a lot of attention, Miss Teasdale says "because it was the first north-south marriage after the war. At any rate, that's how the name came into our family, and it was given to me when I was born."

Spokane, Wash., was her birthplace and she is the only child of her parents, who moved to New York City when she was two. She grew up with theatrical ambitions, attended dramatic schools, traveled extensively and at length fresh from school began making the rounds of stage producers' offices. She "waited" three months before she landed her first job through Al Woods who finally yielded to her persistence and gave her an interview.

The tall, slim blond who was the ringleader of the three gold-diggers in "The Greeks Had a Word for It" in New York never has played in stock, disagreeing with most actors that stock is the best dramatic training school.

HALF OF STUDENTS WORK

AT UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS
Austin, Tex., Nov. 1.—(AP)—Almost half of the students at University of Texas either earn all of their expenses or a portion of them while studying there.

Last year 23 per cent of the entire student enrollment earned all of their expenses, while 24 per cent more, or more than 1,500 students, defrayed part of their outlay by various kinds of employment.

A PATH TO PARADISE

by Coningsby DAWSON

SYNOPSIS: Santa just has returned to her philandering husband Dicky in Chicago when she learns that he has given her polo coat to a girl whom he had known before their marriage. It is too late, and perhaps seeing Clive, the lover she had jilted for Dicky, at her parents' house in New Jersey helped her a decision. She goes to a lawyer friend.

Chapter 14

SANTA BARES HER HEART

"I need someone I can trust," Santa declared. She pulled herself together with an effort. "I'm here to learn what are the grounds for a divorce."

"You're thinking of divorcing Dicky?"

She hadn't shocked him. His expression was unperturbed as if she had inquired how much his wife paid for butter.

"Can I?"

"Before I can give an opinion I must hear the provocation."

At the sense of the tendency of expediency, Santa faded. Garth's attitude was as matter of fact as that of a doctor examining a patient. She forgot that they both were young and were discussing her deepest passion. In an aloof way, maintaining his view, he asked her case. Her burden grew lighter. With a question here and an astute suggestion there, he coaxed from her her story.

"This Clive," he pinned her, "your old suitor, couldn't he make the excuse for a counter-charge by your husband?"

"How could he? I've not written him a line. He's been out of the country since I married. It was only by pure luck—I mean accident—that I met him at my parents'."

"We lawyers are compelled to be intrusive."

Dusk was gathering. Windows in the rambling cottage were beginning to shine. He switched on the lights.

"As I see things, Santa, you've got your husband cold. Habitual drunkenness. Non-support. If they don't constitute cruelty, I don't know what does."

She began pulling on her gloves.

"If I decide to proceed against him, what should be my first step?"

"You must leave him and establish a separate domicile. I see a tremendous difficulty. She rose abruptly. "I felt I ought to know the safe side."

"As he accompanied her to the elevator he chafed her.

"You'll have only one difficulty: to persuade any judge that a man who had been so fortunate as to marry you could be unfaithful."

"Dicky didn't have to struggle," she glanced up side-long.

"If he could only see you as other men see you."

"Men who aren't married to me," she retorted.

It was her parting shot. The sliding door of the elevator flew open. With a smile, unconsciously siren-like, she vanished.

Not till the chill air of the street had restored her did she realize that her afternoon had been enjoyable. Paul Garstead had proved to be a thoroughly nice person. She wondered vaguely whether he often held such intimate conversations. She ran over snatches of what they'd said. They sounded desperately like the prelude to flirtation.

She'd heard that divorce lawyers often married their clients. What more natural? They had to flatter a woman by pretending to believe she was always in the right. A husband who believed his wife always in the right was the kind for whom every woman was searching.

Scandalized, she discovered that she was light-hearted. She probed for the reason. Merely because a man had implied—not a syllable more—that she was desirable.

"Don't be a debutante," she upbraided herself.

Her lapse into frivolity inclined her to be charitable. There was the bare chance that she'd jumped to mistaken conclusions. To invite Dicky to an explanation was the only fair course. The prospect of having to provoke another scene sobered her.

Beyond the door as she approached, she could hear the phone ringing. Some seconds were lost in finding her key. The apartment was in darkness. Again she wasted time in groping for the switches. The phone continued to insist and command.

"Hello!" she exclaimed fretfully. "I should hope so." Dicky's voice. "Been trying to reach you for the past two hours. Don't wait dinner. Got a business conference."

"It won't do, Dicky." She spoke firmly. "This is my first night back."

"To bad, darling. The conference is about those mines. And it's too worse, too; I have to sleep on a train, for I'm due in St. Paul tomorrow."

"For another conference?"

"You're becoming quite a cute little rouser."

"I don't believe a word of it, Dicky. For some reason you're afraid of me."

"For heaven's sake!" He yawned so that she heard him. "This is your chance as much as mine. If the deal goes through, we'll be in clover."

"Then I wish you luck, if I don't see you again."

"But you will." His tone became anxious. "I have to fetch my suitcase. If you're a kind little wife, you'll have it packed."

She made her toilet with special care, choosing the high-waisted evening gown with the billow skirt, which he had loved when he was court-

ing. Between tears and temper she flung his traveling kit into his suitcase. Dinnerless and wounded she sat down to wait for him.

Hours slipped by. Seven. Eight. Nine. There would be no time to deliver her ultimatum. To start a discussion with a husband in a hurry would be useless.

Her reading of his character became clear and yet more clear. From that third night of the honeymoon when he'd called her Lou-Lou she'd been continually stumbling on his overtures. Most of them she'd refused to admit till now. They had come to her in fragments. She found them together like a Chinese puzzle. At last she had no doubt but she knew all about him.

His key in the latch. She snatched a book. He entered briskly, hunching.

From the hall he called to her. "Get my suitcase ready?"

"In the bedroom."

She heard him go in search of it—then his footsteps returning.

"Well, I'm off, darling."

"That's good."

"Not huff, I hope."

"You're an optimist."

"Bless my soul, I hadn't noticed you're all dolled up. Why the magification?"

"I'm going along."

She turned a pace. He approached and stood over her.

"Expecting someone?"

"There was one name with which he would always annoy him.

"Looking aside," she glanced up to whom did you lend my coat? Ty Lou-Lou?"

"Been snooping! So that's how you've spent the afternoon?"

"I'll hand it to you, Dicky, when you place your affections, you're tremendously loyal."

"You're right. He twiddled his mustache—a sure sign that he was confused. "I hate to quit on anybody. The poor kid was down and out. I used to be her pal. Of course when I married you—So in a sense I feel responsible. Surely you don't blame me?"

"Blame you, for playing the good Samaritan!" She opened her eye charmingly wide.

"I wish I didn't have to go." He perched himself on the arm of her chair. "You strike me as queer Santa—too darned polite. What are you planning about the twenty thousand?"

"Oh, that! You really must go, Dicky. Look at the time. I'll give you my answer later."

"That's not very satisfactory. These fellows I'm to meet will expect me to be definite."

He hovered uncertain; then poked up his suitcase. She accompanied him to the hall and submitted to his embrace.

The moment he was gone, she slipped the chain in place. She might have forgiven him had his solitary contribution to the furnishings. To the pillow she pinned a note referring him to her lawyer.

Her final act in the ritual of departure was to tiptoe through the empty rooms. She'd promised him his answer; here it was with no word spoken. She pictured the surprise of his homecoming.

To the pay roll were increased it added, by lower operation of plants. Wholesale trade showed gains and when sales were ahead of sales in September last year, this being the first time to report in ten months an increase in comparison with the corresponding month of the preceding year.

Coal production increased "by about the usual amount."

In banking, the developments in September and early October were mostly of an unseasonal nature, among them being a decline in deposits for member banks at the Federal Reserve Bank, a decline in outstanding loans in reporting member banks located in leading cities, a slight decrease in the circulation of Federal Reserve notes, and practically no net change in deposits in member banks in spite of a reduction in loans," said the report.

CANDIDATE FOR FAZED BY THEFT OF HER CAR Smithfield, Nov. 1.—The larceny of her automobile has in no wise deterred Miss Cora Bell Ives, Democratic candidate for reelection as register of deeds, in continuing her vigorous canvass of the county.

Her young lady left her Chrysler sedan in front of the home of Miss Mattie P. Saturday evening, and in ten minutes the car had been stolen. The mysterious mechanism had been secretly locked, but this did not prevent the stealing of her automobile. The thieves evidently had stolen another car just prior to taking Miss Ives' car, for another automobile was found abandoned in a field near the town limits, and around this machine were found several papers and some small articles that had been thrown from Miss Ives' car. The license tags on the two cars were exchanged, but the abandoned car had had its makers' a diamond serial numbers so battered and obliterated that it has been impossible to identify this car or to locate its owner.

GILBERT GATHER WOOD TO GET LASSES RATION Oklawaha City, Nov. 1.—(AP)—A group of a youngster's love for "beige" Robert Jackson's labor problem is fading.

Operating the town's only open-air sorghum mill, which he moves between his four patches of cane, Jackson has found an inevitable gallery of big-eyed children glad to "ther" enough wood to keep the fire going.

In turn the youngsters get the "clickings."
