PREDICTS LANDSLIDE FOR DEMOCRATS ON TUESDAY

LARGEST VOTE IN HISTORY OF STATE EXPECTED TO BE CAST IN NATIONAL ELECTION

ORATORS MAKE FINAL STANDS

From Manteo to Murphy Democrats Are Preaching Doctrine of Their Party; Republicans Claim that Only Their Party Can Give Satisfactory Government; Governor Says Candidates Will Surely Be Swept to Victory in this State.

Raleigh, Nov. 3.—(AP)—The political campaign in the State of North Carolina thundered down the home stretch today to the tune of much political oratory.

With interest in the battle for ballots apparently increasing each day throughout the State, leading political orators of every section have swung into action.

From Manteo to Murphy the Democrats are preaching the principles of Democracy and the Republican adherents are claiming that only their party can give good government and satisfaction. Socialist speakers are pleading for the cause of their presidential candidate.

In every nook and corner attempts are being made to bring out the greatest vote in the history of the State. It is generally expressed by political leaders that Tar Heels are anxious to vote.

"More people are awaiting the dawn of November 8 to cast their vote than any other time in history," is the way Governor O. Max Gardner put it today.

"There is a spontaneous desire to vote this year," the Governor continued, "and let me tell you, the Democrats will carry the State by unheated majorities, sweeping all candidates along with exception of about 35 legislators."

Governor Gardner estimated that not less than seven hundred thousand people would vote Tuesday. He predicts a Democratic majority of one hundred thousand, and put no limit on how high it may go in the "landslide that will start at sun-up Tuesday."

GRIFTON WILL HEAR WARREN

Congressman Speaks at Rally of Democrats in High School There Tonight.

Democrats of Grifton tonight will have the opportunity of learning something of the great cause of the Democratic party when Congressman Lindsay C. Warren, of Washington, addresses the voters of the district at the High School auditorium at 7:30 o'clock.

The visit of the Congressman has attracted considerable interest among the people of the territory, and W. E. Hooks, Chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee, said today he was anticipating a record-breaking crowd.

Congressman Warren has won considerable recognition during his term in Congress, and especially for the period he presided over the House of Representatives during consideration of the Reconstruction Corporation bill. Speaker Garner described him as one of the ablest men in Congress, and has seen fit to recognize his ability on many occasions.

The Grifton rally will be the first held in that community since the opening of the campaign, although several similar events have been held in other parts of the county. The first rally was held in Ayden and was followed by others in Greenville, Farmville, Grimesland and several rural communities.

Mr. Hooks urged people to rally to the polls in large numbers in the general election next Tuesday and give Democratic candidates their vote of confidence. He declared this was the only way to do away with Republican extravagance at Washington and would place the Democrats in position to really render the country pronounced service.

EURE TO SPEAK AT FARMVILLE

Democratic Elector of this District Will Address Democrats Friday.

Thad Eure of Winton, Democratic elector for the First Congressional district, will address a Democratic rally at Farmville Friday night, November 4th, it was announced today by W. E. Hooks, of Ayden, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee.

Mr. Hooks said he was advised this morning that Mr. Eure would be able to deliver the principal address at the Farmville rally and that one of the largest crowds to attend a rally in this county was expected to attend.

The speaking will be held in the Farmville high school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock and the chairman of the executive committee will preside.

Mr. Eure is considered one of the most forceful speakers of the party in this part of the state and will carry to voters of Farmville a message dealing with prospects of a Democratic victory next Tuesday.

Speaking of the Eure engagement over long distance telephone this afternoon, Mr. Hooks said he felt sure the coming of the Winton man to this county would play a powerful part in the county campaign, which is expected to result in bringing out the largest vote in history.

The county chairman was busy today completing a special message to the people on the eve of the election. "It will be his final utterance before the people go to the polls and register their approval for their preference."

MAKE NOVEL ELECTION BET

Grifton Men Agree to Push the Winner To this City in Wheelbarrow.

Despite the trend of the election next Tuesday, one of two Grifton men is going to have to push the other from Grifton to Greenville in a wheelbarrow as result of an election bet completed today.

Richard Fick, supporter of Herbert Hoover, and Newman Jones, admirer of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, have agreed that the loser push the winner of the bet from the Grifton well at Grifton to Five Points in Greenville. The trip would cover a total of twenty miles.

They plan to leave Grifton at 6 o'clock on the morning of November 9, and hundreds of people were expected to gather along the highway to see the winner of the bet laboriously pushing the winner in the direction of the Pitt capital.

All kinds of bets probably have been made concerning the outcome of the election, but this is one of the most novel so far revealed.

Fick, who is a Republican, feels confident he is going to win in spite of the Literary Digest poll predicting victory for Roosevelt. Jones one of the staunchest Democrats of his

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, D. C., Oct. 29.—If the Democrats are successful at the polls on November 8 as they are now claiming they will be, there'll be some rather interesting personalities figuring in the news out of Washington during the coming months.

There's Bob Reynolds of North Carolina who has been nominated to take the seat of Cameron Morrison. Reynolds describes himself as a one-time professional wrestler, a globe trotter and writer of adventure stories before he settled down to law and politics. He's only 47 years old now.

Fred Brown who is reported to be giving Senator Moses such a tussle up in New Hampshire is a former baseball player, said to have been the best all-around player at Dartmouth in the thirty years.

Utah Offers a Scholar

The Senate stands a chance of getting a full-fledged Ph.D. and a scholar of first rank in Dr. Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah. Thomas is running against the dean of the Senate, Reed Smoot. Although not yet 40 years old, he already has had a remarkable career.

He was a missionary in Japan for five years, starting when he was but nineteen, and is a student of the orient. Since 1924 he has been a professor of political science at the University of Utah. He also is an author.

The son of Champ Clark, of Missouri, Colonel Bennett Champ Clark is another Senate aspirant inclined to be scholarly. Young Clark has just completed a biography of John Quincy Adams which has brought favorable comment from the critics.

Van Nuys Another

The man seeking to end the long political career of Jim Watson, of Indiana—Frederick Van Nuys—is another interesting personality.

Van Nuys would come to the Senate no stranger to the politically-minded in Washington. He was a law partner of the late Senator Ralston, of Indiana.

It was Van Nuys who made the nominating speech for Ralston at the famous Democratic convention at Madison Square Garden in 1914. In that convention, when Smith and McAdoo were in such a hopeless deadlock, at the time Ralston loomed as the compromise candidate.

Washington, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The decision of the Supreme Court upholding the validity of Mississippi's redistricting law was significant to Washington observers principally because of the bearing it will have on the future organization of the powerful ways and means committee of the House.

The present chairman, James W. Collier of Mississippi, was one of those vitally affected by the court's decision. Collier, a veteran of 24 years' service in the House, refused to participate in the state primary in which the congressional nominees were chosen on the ground that the redistricting act was unconstitutional.

According to the Supreme Court's decision he is now "out" as a Democratic nominee. He was deprived of the chance of running at large and his only chance of holding on to his seat was to file as an independent candidate, which he refused to do.

In Collier's failure to return to the House, the chances are that the next chairman of the ways and means committee—one of the most influential jobs in the House will come from way down the line.

Crisp of Georgia, the acting chairman during most of the present Congress due to Collier's ill health, would certainly have gotten the post had he not been defeated a few weeks ago in his attempt to enter the Senate. Now he is out, having accepted a job as a member of the tariff commission.

The next man to Crisp in rank is Rainey of Illinois. There's little likelihood of his becoming chairman, however. Already he is his party's floor leader and would hardly relinquish that job under any circumstances.

There remains then Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, the tall wide-shouldered representative who sprang into such prominence this past session as one of the leaders of the coalition that defeated the sales tax.

Doughton who has represented the eighth district of North Carolina for some 22 years in the House was the only member of the ways and means committee who refused to sign the report recommending the sales tax to the House last session when such desperate attempts were being made to "balance the budget."

He not only refused to go along with his committee members, but with the fiery and irresponsible progressive Republican LaGuardia of New York, led the offensive that sent the bill down to defeat.

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE

The rival election forecasts are about as varied and confusing as ever in 1932, but they do have one distinctive note.

The tenor of the Democratic estimates is that Democratic victory in the presidential campaign became a foregone conclusion long ago, while the Republican outgivings take the general position that although the fight has been a hard one, the tide now has turned decisively toward the Republican ticket.

Neither of these two schools of survey and prophecy follows the orthodox habits of previous years. The country has been accustomed to hear pre-election claims based on identical suppositions on both sides and expressed in identical language. Almost without variation the burden of these claims has been: "We started strong, and since then have completely taken the country by storm."

Now neither party is saying exactly that. Both claim victory but by entirely different routes, and in entirely different words.

Thus up to the last, 1932 continues to write its own precedents.

Jouett Shouse recently went so far as to say that the defeat of President Hoover was decided on by the American people more than a year ago; that nothing said or done since has changed the situation so far as the net result is concerned.

Alfred E. Smith, six weeks before the election, declared there no longer was any doubt about the outcome. Governor Roosevelt, returning from his last extended campaign trip, told the workers in New York Democratic headquarters that the mass of the voters had determined to turn to the Democrats "many weeks ago."

On the Republican side, Chairman Sanders and his lieutenants have been saying almost daily that conditions in the pivotal states were "improving." After the Maine election they did not conceal their conviction that strong medicine was needed if the Republican cause was to win out, and they changed their whole method of campaign to that end.

By common consent, therefore, the debate over the outcome would seem to have simmered down to just this: Have the Republicans been able, during the final weeks of the campaign, to reverse the forces which were operating against them during the preceding months?

It is not within the province of this writer to forecast the answer, but it can be said at least that the situation has produced a far more spectacular campaign finish than anyone foresaw.

No one will deny that the Republicans have tried. Instead of making three campaign speeches as he had planned, President Hoover has delivered scores. Instead of disregarding his Democratic opponent as he did four years ago, he has indulged in direct quotation and answer. Win or lose, the Republican windup will remain in future years one of the memorable features of the campaign.

HALF OF WORLD'S REVENUE BEING SPENT FOR ARMAMENTS

Chapel Hill, Nov. 3.—"One-half of the total revenue of the nations of the world is spent for the upkeep of war materials and armaments," declared Dr. K. C. Frazer, of the University History Department, in an address before the student assembly recently.

Dr. Frazer pointed out that disarming 55 nations, all of which have different interests to protect, was a difficult task.

He said that undue pessimism in this country regarding disarmament was due chiefly to a lack of knowledge of the problems and conditions faced by the delegates at Geneva.

CRANBERRY INCUBATORS TEST KEEPING QUALITIES

Washington, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Cranberries are tested in "incubators" by Massachusetts growers as a means of determining in advance their keeping quality for the season.

The incubator test was begun several years ago by Dr. Neil E. Stevens of the Department of Agriculture. It consists of keeping pint samples of cranberries in an electric incubator for a week, early in the picking season. They are kept warmer than in ordinary storage and this hastens the normal ripening and decay.

Spillage of the samples indicates approximately the general spoilage to be expected in storing the crop, and aids growers in deciding how best to handle the crop.

Saturday Confederate Flag Day

The "Stars and Bars" was adopted by the Confederate Congress in 1861. It has two red and one white stripes with a star for each state arranged in a circle in the field of blue. The battle flags, which is of blue bars crossed in a field of red and stars along the center line of each bar, was designed by General Beauregard.

Major Orin Randolph Smith of Louisburg, designed the first flag, and threw it to the breeze on the corner of the court house square from a pole 100 feet high, March 18, 1861. It had three stripes, with seven stars in a circle on a blue field. This was the stars and bars, a model of which he had made and sent it to the committee who accepted it for the Confederacy.

When Major Smith died in 1913 his casket was draped with Old Glory and the Stars and Bars.

Saturday is Confederate Flag Day. Wear a flag in memory of those who wore the gray.

Talks to Parents

CONFLICTING GOALS (By Alice Judson Peale)

A mother registering her son at a new school expressed to the principal her wish that the boy learn how to "really work." She wanted him to learn thoroughness and concentration. Some day he would have to make his own way and she expected him to "amount to something."

Yet the term hardly had started when the boy was absent twice, once to go to a horse show, once to go to a matinee. Another time his mother kept him out of school for a week because she herself was going on a visit to a city several hours' journey away and there seemed to be no one with whom to leave him.

At each point where the school sought the mother's cooperation she failed to give it, not only as to attendance but also as to punctuality, regular hours for home work and sleep. The boy's teacher even discovered to his amazement that a number of the mathematics exercises he had been correcting were not the work of his pupil but of his pupil's mother.

It is not at all unusual for a parent thus consciously and in all sincerity to hold one kind of educational goal for a child but to be guided in quite an opposite direction by the drive of unconscious attitudes.

This mother thought she wanted her boy to be thorough, earnest and hard working but her own conduct in relation to him was such as to make it impossible for him to turn his efforts in this direction.

It is a salutary thing sometimes to check up on ourselves on this point. We might put it in this fashion: "What do I expect of my child? What have I actually done to make this possible?"

ABOUT TOWN

President Hoover is attempting to make the people believe that if they not vote for him in the November election the country will go to the devil.

Considering what Governor Gardner said to people from five counties here Tuesday night, the President is merely trying to cover up the sins of his own party by attempting to pick flaws in the Democratic form of government.

Using the Republican yardstick, a governor showed that the value of the tobacco crop in Pitt county one dropped from $21,000,000 during the administration of Woodrow Wilson in 1920 to $4,000,000 under Hoover administration in 1931.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is a lover of humanity and is always trying to improve the condition of the people he comes in contact with from me to I me.

The carelessness of the Democratic nominee was plainly exhibited in this single act. What he did for his little girl he would do for the whole nation if he could.

The Greenville High School football team will take on a worthy opponent here Friday when Tarboro comes over to try to capture what is generally conceded will be one of the hardest fought games of football this season.

A PATH TO PARADISE

SYNOPSIS: Clive orders Dicky out of his New York apartment when Dicky asks Clive to persuade Santa to take him back. Clive has not seen Santa since before she sued Dicky for divorce in Chicago.

Chapter 16

SANTA GETS HELP

Santa was brushing her hair before the mirror preparatory to climbing into bed, when a peremptory knock sounded. Another of Dicky's persecutions, she conjectured, in the shape of a pleading letter.

How much longer would she be able to hold out against him? The only reason he didn't intrude in person was that she'd left strict orders at the desk. For weeks she'd been afraid to stir out since she never knew when or where he would waylay her.

"Married again. I adore it."

"No answer." Santa from prying eyes, she re-read the message: "Arrive Chicago tomorrow. Clive."

"Turning out the lights, she nestled into bed and wept— wept from joy. She'd been so proud since her disaster. She'd panted her father and mother on into the distance.

"O, Clive, I was so afraid—so driven. How did you guess?" He wasn't prepared for this emotion.

"I was told you were finking the creel." "Mummy told you." He allowed her surmise to pass. She turned her back and strolled to the window. Beyond the panes spring was stirring.

"Clive, dear I love to have you, but how do you make that out?" "Dicky was always jealous."

"For myself, I don't. I'm finished. Nothing can hurt me. I'm thinking of you." "I don't mind for myself either. Why do you think I made the journey to attend the game."

The careless handling of fire in the woods of the state is against the law and persons who are convicted of violations of this kind will not find it easy to get out of the toils of the law.

A man was convicted of a crime of this nature in court here in a week. He was sentenced to the roads for four months.

The Greenville boys are doing their best to bring honors to the school. They have shown considerable strength this season, although defeated by more powerful adversaries, and are hoping to capture the majority of games played.

another man's wife. When you're free— Till then, I can't say what's in my heart."

"Married again. I adore it." "But I'm not married again." Clive forced a smile: "this is my first adventure."

A serious problem besets Clive and Santa, tomorrow, before their train reaches New York.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

U. N. C. ENDS ALL SET FOR 'GATOR GAME

Chapel Hill, Nov. 3.—With its offense looking as good as last week, Carolina has completed heavy preparations for tomorrow's home game with Florida's strong 'Gators and will take only light polishing drills this afternoon.

The two teams meet in Kenan Stadium Friday at 2:30. They tied at Florida 0-0 last year, and indications are for another fine scrap.

The Tar Heels will be slight favorites Friday for the first time since the Wake Forest game, but Church Collins and his coaching partners, Bob Fetzer and Bill Cerney, discount the edge the dopsters are conceding Carolina.

As a matter of fact, Florida will have five stars who weren't available last week. Its team appears to be much stronger than its scores against State and Georgia indicate.

If the Tar Heels are cock or complacent, however, they have been hiding it well. The veterans unbred their big guns in scrimmages yesterday, and the McCaskill and Thompson, and Phipps-Daniel half-back combinations which featured against State literally cut the opposition to pieces.

Coach Collins also has two strong lines intact except for George Barclay, star left guard and Cabell Philpott and Bob Probenberger are both looking adequate there.

LEGION PLANS FOR NOV. 11TH

Arrangements for the Celebration of Armistice Rapidly Being Completed.

Arrangements for the local celebration of Armistice Day neared completion today, it was announced by J. C. Lanier, commander of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion, sponsor of the observance.

The post, the commander said, is looking forward to a big day and is attempting to provide one of the best programs of years.

The program will consist of a parade, speaking, barbecue dinner for former service men, and a football game.

The speaker of the day will be Major L. P. McLendon of Durham, who served as a major during the world war. He is one of the most prominent lawyers and orators of the state and is expected to bring one of the most stirring addresses heard here since the first celebration of the armistice fourteen years ago.

In the parade will be seen ex-service men, the local unit of North Carolina national guard, Boy Scouts high school band and hundreds of high school children. The parade will form at the Atlantic Coast Line depot on Dickinson avenue promptly at 10 o'clock and will move to the campus building at East Carolina Teachers College where a program, including the speaking, will be held.

After the exercises the Auxiliary will serve a barbecue dinner in the basement of the campus building. All ex-service men have been invited to join in the feast.

At 2 o'clock Rich Square and Ayden high schools will engage in a pigskin contest at the Third street school grounds. The proceeds from the game will go to the Legion. The game promises to be one of the best seen in this part of the state in sometime. Both teams are fast and occupy front ranks among aggregations of this part of the state.

The coming of Major McLendon, long prominent in the political life of the state, has been received with interest by members of the post and the public generally, and it was expected one of the largest crowds of years would be on hand to hear him laud the intrepidity of the men who sacrificed so much in behalf of humanity.

JORDAN ISSUES CALL TO ENGLISH TEACHERS

Durham, N. C., Nov. 3.—Prof. A. C. Jordan of Duke University, president of the North Carolina State Council of Teachers of English, has issued a call to all teachers of English in the State to attend the 22d annual meeting of the National Council in Memphis, Tenn. November 24 to 26.

Miss Stella Center, formerly of service men, the local unit of North Carolina national guard, Boy Scouts high school band and hundreds of high school children. The parade will form at the Atlantic Coast Line depot on Dickinson avenue promptly at 10 o'clock and will move to

TARBORO TO PLAY LOCAL HIGH FRIDAY

Greenville High School will take on a very strong opponent Friday afternoon when Tarboro comes over for a game of football. Tarboro has not lost a game this season but his record two, while Greenville has had its goal line crossed this year in only one game, that with Roanoke Rapids last week.

The game will be played at the Third street school grounds and patrons will be agreeably surprised to find that new bleachers have been built to accommodate those who like to take their football sitting down. The field has been graded and it is doubtful whether there is a better athletic plant in Eastern Carolina.

Three new players will likely see action in the game against Tarboro. Clifford Madrin, star of last year's victory over Farmville, will be one. Rex Hodges, backfield luminary of two years ago will be another, and Matthew Gibbs, Farmville flash will be another. It should be a good battle, fought on even grounds.

BIG SHIFT ON PUBLIC ISSUES

Change of Position on Prohibition Seen In the Election Campaigning.

By BYRON PRICE
Time alone can assign to 1932 its exact significance in the evolution of the American political system. But it is possible even now to catalogue some of the things which must stand out when the historians of the future leaf through the records of this troubled period.

Certainly it can be said that, in long retrospect, the campaign will appear notably for the political shift of base on prohibition; for the effort to bring the western progressives under Democratic leadership for the rise of the Socialist party to new prominence; and for several changes in the tendencies and methods of the two old parties themselves.

Whether these turns in the rope will be important eventually can not now be foretold. Any one of them may be the beginning of great things or of nothing. At least the are all eloquent of the political state of the union in 1932 and surely they present interesting data for the student of national psychology.

Few political developments in recent years have been more spectacular than the swing of the major party candidates away from the present prohibition regime.

Other issues have had greater public notice in the last weeks of the campaign. The nominees have talked of the tariff, of the fundamental relations of government to private enterprise, and of many things besides; but all these discussions have been clouded by complications so that it is difficult to follow far either party has departed, if at all, from its previous tenets.

On prohibition, the case is much clearer. Both presidential nominees have directly asked for a change which means that 1932 has seen one of those surges of political sentiment for which the historian always watches.

Secession of a considerable group of the western progressive leader from the Republican ticket does not in itself represent a new trend in politics.

Something similar has happened twice before within the last twenty years. In 1912 the Roosevelt progressive ticket polled 4,126,000 votes and in 1924 the LaFollette progressive ticket polled 4,822,000.

The historic thing about the 1932 secession is that after two unsuccessful attempts to go it alone as a third party, those western progressives who have left the Republicans are linking their fortunes to the Democrats.

Two of the most interesting questions which this campaign has raised are these:
Can the Democratic-progressive alliance now be put on a permanent basis, so as to go forward in future campaign years as a working entity?
Can the tremendous gains made by the Socialist party in 1932 be preserved, even in large part, in future elections.

Aside from the alliances they have made, and the gains and losses they have suffered, a good many other things have happened to both of the great parties.

The Democratic campaign geared itself to an appeal to liberalism, an informality of procedure and a disregard of precedent unmatched for many years.

The Republican tradition of sitting tight, disregarding the roars of the opposition, and trusting to a normal Republican majority to do its work on election day, has been blown to bits. President Hoover's last-minute dash into the thick of the fray will be long remembered in party annals.

WENDELL CROWE IS CHOSEN FOR BEAUTY
Goldsboro, Nov. 3.—A Wendell girl Miss Frances Roberts, has been chosen to represent the superlative type beauty in the year-book of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina next spring. Miss Roberts was selected by popular vote in a recent mass meeting at which students nominated eight superlative types which are to appear later in pictures in "Fine Needles," their annual.

When came other engines, other machines. They required coal, oil and water power. The production was for man, so man in effect consumed the energy necessary for the machines.

This besides the items necessary for his physical existence man now uses other of the earth's resources—and at the rate of 150,000 calories per capita a day, exclusive of food. This represents a gain of seventy-five times in little more than a century, after 7,000 static years, most of the gain coming in the last thirty years—calary consumption being 5,000 calories per capita per day in 1900.

This extremely rapid gain in a society entirely unprepared for it has produced similarly rapid economic gains and also violent fluctuations in the economic cycle. Scott says energy production remained at that rate of 2,000 calories a day for 7,000 years. Suddenly it expanded.

The expansion was quite smooth although rapid up to 1900, then it became more rapid and began to fluctuate violently because the social mechanism could not adapt it.

Fluctuation in energy produced resulted in fluctuation in production of goods, thus fluctuation in employment and economic distress.

The fluctuations are the basic causes of the present depression, and they tend to gain in violence as mechanical efficiency increases. Scott says producing even more disastrous economic changes, unless the method of operating the machine is changed.

In 1890 the United States had slightly more than 12,000,000 population and was witnessing the early beginnings of the new means of energy transposition, that is, finding new machines, fuels and ways to use them to do work—the steam locomotive, for example.

At that time the nation was producing from coal and timber less than seventy-five trillion B. T. U. (a measure of energy) in order to drive its simple machines, its factories, mills and to carry on other activities.

In 1929 the United States had a population of 120,000,000, an increase of ten times over 1840, but energy produced had risen to almost 27,000 trillion B. T. U., or 353 times as much as in 1840. Most of this increase occurred after 1900, for 1900 energy production was 2,640 trillion B. T. U.

The United States has produced energy and with it the amount of goods, since energy is necessary for the production of goods, much faster than the growth of the population, and much faster in the last few years than it was possible for the goods to consume the production.

They point out with a new vividness, Scott says, that society has moved from the time—only a century ago—when it moved at the speed of an ox-cart in a society which moved at that rate and has entered an era in which it is moving at the speed of an airplane.

The society fundamentally unprepared for this increase in energetic and social machines.

WILL TAKE UP WORK OF WOODROW WILSON
Richmond, Va., Nov. 3.—(AP)—Colonel Henry Breckinridge, former Assistant Secretary of War, told a rally of Democrats here that next

March Franklin D. Roosevelt "will take up where Woodrow Wilson left off on the road of honest, courageous, sound and liberal Democratic progress."

Colonel Breckinridge criticized the present administration as being on a "gold brick standard" and characterized Ogden Mills as "the secretary of the greatest peace-time deficit since Alexander Hamilton." He charged Secretary of War Patrick Hurley with haranguing "the farmers of the metropolitan area (New York) on the blessings of the tariff to the farmer."

He concluded the address with the assertion that one week from tonight the ballot will have terminated the "twelve-year reign of political impotence and economic provincialism."

Threats Demonstration
Washington, Nov. 3.—(AP)—Despite police refusal to grant a permit, representatives of the National Labor Defense firmly told capital they planned to hold a demonstration Monday in connection with the Scottsboro, Ala., case.

The case in which seven negroes were sentenced to death in Alabama for assault on two white girls is now pending before the Supreme Court. Accompanied by a delegation of four, the assistant international secretary called this morning on capital police to ask for permission of 200 representatives of the organization to parade.

He said members of the organization had a right to enter the capital grounds and declared they would parade Monday and the responsibility was on the police.

SEVEN JARS OF RUM FOUND IN ICE BOX
Smithfield, Nov. 3.—The cunning persons seeking to violate the prohibition laws keep fully abreast of the diligence of officers seeking to enforce this law, as was evidenced in the case against Alice Smith, colored woman who was tried in the recorder's court Tuesday. This woman had an ice box in which it was charged she concealed liquor for the purpose of sale. Apparently it was the ordinary home-made container for ice, and to one who did not understand that two ordinary nails, in either end of the front of the box, served really as the locking device of the container, one would not have thought at the time of her arrest that this box really con-

Auburn also offers Kimbrell and Hitchcock while Dan McGugin at Vanderbilt, thinks quite well of a sophomore named Larry Burton, one of those pinch-runners like Harvard's "find," Johnny Grady.
