Old Problems Will Get Fresh Airing at Next Parley On Disarmament

DAVIS SEEKS NEW HARMONY

Acting head of American Delegation Attempting to Bring United Action as the Conference Begins Work Again November 21; Other Nations Anxious Concerning Outcome Of Deliberations.

By P. I. LIPSEY, Jr. Geneva, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The world disarmament conference, through its general commission, will launch its second drive on November 21 to rid the nations of the burden of armaments and the peoples of their burden of fears.

The commission will meet after a four months' recess and about ten months after the conference began, only to find the fundamental problems with which it has been battling still unsolved, despite negotiations between representatives of the principal governments.

None has been more active and tireless in pursuit of a favorable outcome for the deliberations than Norman Davis, acting head of the American delegation. With Hugh Gibson incapacitated, this democratic representative of a republican administration has been on the go for months.

He first went to Washington to confer with President Hoover and Secretary Stimson. Then he came back to Europe and has gone from London to Paris to Rome to Geneva and back around again, seeking a basis for agreement.

The paramount issues of security—dear to the French—and equality—a shibboleth with the Germans—remain as the chief obstacles to an agreement for reductions of fighting forces.

The French, however, are not the only people who are profoundly concerned with security. Within the year the question has acquired a vital meaning for a number of other States.

Poland and Rumania, for example, are frankly anxious about the intentions of their neighbors. Poland looks with uneasiness toward the Russian frontier and the German-enclosed corridor that gives the country access to the Baltic. Rumania thinks of Soviet claims to Bessarabia and of aspirations by some of her other neighbors.

Security has become a major concern of Japan and China, and of several States in South America who were troubled in recent months by threatened or actually brought on armed conflict.

Woman Slightly Hurt in Wreck

Mrs. J. F. Parrish suffered severely from shock when the automobile which she was driving collided with another car driven by Will Clark, colored, at the intersection of Fourth and Greene Streets last night.

Police said Mrs. Parrish attempted to cross Greene Street, a stop corner, without stopping and crashed into Clark's automobile which was going south on Greene Street.

Mrs. Parrish was taken to Pitt Community Hospital for medical attention, but an examination disclosed that she suffered only from shock. Clark's car was badly damaged by the impact.

Mrs. Parrish is the wife of Freeman Parrish, auctioneer at Webb's Warehouse, who fell from his car last week and sustained a broken ankle. He is confined in the local hospital and was reported as getting along nicely today.

FOOTBALL PLAYERS SUE CLUB FOR MEALS, FARE

Berlin, Nov. 18.—(AP)—German sport circles are anxiously awaiting trial of a suit filed by two players against a football club, the players charging the club owed them money for railway fares and meals.

Sports writers, inclined to be cynical toward "amateurism," expect the suit to shed light on German amateur athletics, from which sources sprang the information which resulted in barring Paavo Nurmi, great Finnish runner, from amateur competition.

ADVISOR FOR ROOSEVELT

President-Elect is To Take Columbia Professor to the White House Conference.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 18.—(AP)—His plans complete for visiting President Herbert Hoover in Washington next Tuesday, President-elect Frank D. Roosevelt has summoned to the executive mansion at Albany Raymond Foley, Columbia University professor, who will go with him to the White House to confer on war debt and other questions as Mr. Roosevelt's only advisor.

WARN AGAINST IMPURE MILK

Health Heads Also Urges Public to Be Careful in the Buying of Oysters.

Dr. Alex Viola, city milk and meat inspector and Dr. R. S. McGeachy, county health officer, wish to warn the public against the indiscriminate buying of both milk and oysters.

The desire and aim of both these officials is to have the best rating of dairies of any county in the state. Some of the dairies have gone to a great deal of expense in order that they may offer for sale only first class Grade A milk, and it is manifestly unfair to them to encourage the sale of milk by those who are not equipped to produce a Grade A product.

The "Standard Milk Ordinance" requires that all cows be tested for tuberculosis and all dairy workers must have a physical examination at least once a year, but this does not apply to the families having one and two cows, consequently such cows are not regularly tested, nor do the milkers and handlers of the milk stand a regular physical examination, therefore, persons buying milk from any one except a regular dealer do so at their own risk. The Health Department earnestly requests the whole-hearted cooperation of the citizens in its efforts to justly deserve the very best dairy rating in the state.

The State Board of Health and the State Department of Conservation and Development are cooperating in an effort to secure the sale in North Carolina of only first-class oysters by regular licensed dealers, and to this end have prepared a list of registered dealers for display in all places where oysters are sold and the local health department urges the public to patronize only places displaying such a card.

GRANGE WOULD PROMOTE WIDE USE OF COTTON

Three Resolutions are Presented at the National Conference in Winston-Salem.

Winston-Salem, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Three resolutions, one urging promotion of the use of cotton, one opposing any change in the present system of delivering rural mail and another opposing compulsory crop reduction were presented at today's session of annual convention of the National Grange.

The resolutions were offered to a committee for consideration before being placed before the Grange for action.

Rear Admiral Byrd, who will address an open meeting of the Grange tonight, arrived early today. He had breakfast with a group of local citizens and Grange officials before retiring to complete work on his address.

The seventh degree, one of the most colorful fraternal orders of the Grange, was conferred today on 4-100 members. The seventh degree is the organization's highest award for service.

SEEK YOUTH AS TERRORIST

Young Epileptic Believed Responsible for Slaying and Assaulting in Illinois.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—(AP)—A seventeen-year-old boy who escaped from the State institution for epileptics at Dixon, Illinois, was sought in a city-wide search today as the terrorist who slain Frank Jordan, a motorist, and then kidnaped and criminally assaulted Miss Lillian Henry, niece of former Police Commissioner Alcock.

Police sought James Varecha, who escaped from the State school last August. Police were given descriptions of the youth by James Dusinger, escort of Miss Henry, who was also kidnaped by him last Thursday night, and said it tallied with that of Varecha.

Graham, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Dora DeWitt, young daughter of Mrs. Riley Dollar, who shot and killed two of her children Tuesday at her mill village home here, suddenly regained consciousness today and physicians said she had a chance to live despite two bullet wounds in the head.

Meanwhile Mrs. Dollar remained in jail awaiting preferring of charges against her for shooting the three children. She said she shot them because she believed "it would be best" for them to be out of the way and because her husband had mistreated her since their marriage, 21 years ago.

The other children, Warren, 12 and Daphne, 7, who died instantly, were buried yesterday.

The vivacious and smiling girls excitedly swarmed over the Prince's automobile when it appeared in front of a thread factory in Lisburn.

The girls flung themselves on the mud guard of the car, jumped on the running-board and climbed over the baggage in an effort to get a glimpse of the popular heir to the British throne.

Bourne said the goat was to be held by Cooper until his district deemed itself "getting out of the cellar."

Late News Flashes

Sees Beer Bill Next Congress. Washington, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Chairman Poy of the House rules committee today expressed to newspapermen the hope that "we can get modification of the Volstead Act behind us at the short session."

As head of the powerful committee which has so much to say as to what the House will act upon in a strategic position in the House. He said he realized the difficulty of getting important measures through Congress in a short session and added: "I will be glad to help in carrying out the pledges of the Democratic platform."

Pou, the Democratic dean of the House, voted against the Volstead amendment although he was an advocate of prohibition in North Carolina.

Senator Harrison predicted there would not be sufficient vote to pass a beer bill over a presidential veto. He said he did not know what action President Hoover would take on such a measure.

He told newspapermen he felt beer and light wines would be legalized at the next session if the treasury could not get revenue.

WOMAN SLAIN IN TENNESSEE

Officers Seek Unidentified Slayer of Wife of a Former County Commissioner.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—Officers today sought to solve the mysterious slaying of Mrs. James Crumbliss, 60, wife of a former city commissioner, who was shot down by an unidentified man last night while she was walking to her daughter's apartment in an exclusive residential neighborhood.

Director Walter Anderson said he believed the murder was planned. Mrs. Crumbliss, mother of three children, was shot without warning by a man who appeared at her side and fired. The elderly woman staggered a short distance to the apartment of her daughter.

ROLL CALL IS PUSHED HERE

Committees Continue Canvass in the Hope of Raising County's Quota.

Although a committee or so has been able to function as planned, the Red Cross Roll Call was reported as making fairly good progress in Pitt county today.

It was at first planned to complete the drive in two or three days but owing to a hitch in the plans of some of the committees this was impossible.

W. J. Bundy, chairman of the Pitt County Chapter, said several days ago that they had hoped to raise the county's quota in a short and intensive canvass, but that in event they were unable to do this work would continue until the objective was accomplished.

The public has been asked to join the organization and in that way help put across the ambitious program for the relief of suffering humanity in all parts of the world. A major part of the funds received in the membership canvass here will be devoted to community relief work while the remainder will go to the national organization.

The Red Cross Bundy said has no way of carrying on its work except through membership fees, and people who appreciate what the organization is doing to relieve distress and suffering are asked to join for another year.

Lenin Books Given to Police Library

Bydgoszcz, Poland, Nov. 18.—(AP)—Formerly owned by Nicolai Lenin and marked with his own notations, have been added to the public library of this town.

Adam Grzymala Siedlecki, a Polish author, made the presentation and told how he had saved the collection from being used as wrapping paper.

He said he was living in Carcow in 1918 and one morning found his breakfast rolls had come wrapped in Russian prints, although that language had scarcely been used in the city through its one hundred years of Austrian control.

Inquiry developed that the baker had bought a lot of second-hand books because the war had made wrapping paper too expensive.

Siedlecki paid the baker twice what the latter had spent for the collection. He explained that Lenin spent 1912 and 1913 in Carcow as a political exile under his true name of Ulanoff.

FLYING SPARKS DAMAGE BURLINGTON AIRPLANES

Burlington, Nov. 18.—Sparks from a road roller yesterday morning fell upon the wings of two planes on Huffman field damaging both before field attendants came up with extinguishers and put the fires out.

The most seriously damaged was the Aeronca plane of Lawrence Cwyn whose wing fabric was burned while the other, a Cessna, owned by Barnwell Bros., only slightly damaged, was repaired and was flown to Raleigh during the afternoon.

The accident occurred about 9:30 o'clock when the roller, fired, was starting out to roll the flying field. The pilot of the roller had gone by the planes standing on the field, before he knew that sparks had started the fire. Losses on both planes were covered by insurance. Mr. Cwyn operates a school of instruction here.

Doesn't Fear Rockne Style Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 18.—(AP)—There is at least one coach in the country who does not fear the Notre Dame system of football. With numerous teams imitating or adopting the Rockne style of play, Coach Robert Reese Neyland of the University of Tennessee has yet to be beaten by one of them.

DUKE CLOSES STIFF WEEK OF PRACTICE

Durham, N. C., Nov. 18.—As the Duke and Carolina grid machines were finishing all important work this afternoon, North Carolina football fans gave notice in ever increasing numbers that they would be on hand Saturday in the Kenan stadium to witness the battle.

Judging by the advance sale of tickets, the athletic officials are expecting one of the largest crowds ever to see a football game in North Carolina to be on hand for the conflict.

The students of both schools are more interested than ever. Pep meetings, bonfires, and talks are on the program for Friday night at both institutions as the students gather to urge their teams on to victory.

A great deal of the interest can be attributed to the fact that due to the scoreless ties of past two years, both teams will be fighting desperately for the supremacy, and therefore a battle royal is expected.

Coach Wade has been working hard with the defensive tactics of the Devils, for that was unsatisfactory against State last Saturday. The Blue Devils will be somewhat weakened in the line due to the injuries of Schock, a regular guard, and Porrea, a first string tackle, both of whom are out due to injuries received in the game with N. C. State.

The individual battles of real worth will include E. B. Dunlap, Duke's soph center, and June Underwood, the Tar Heels' outstanding lineman. Another duel will be between Rossiter, the Devil triple threat end, and Burnett, Carolina back, when they vie for punting honors. Both can kick them far and wide.

had helped already, or turned him down.

One Last Hope
Finally he remembered an old acquaintance he hadn't seen for years. The tie wasn't close, just friendship long ago. But it was the last desperate chance. He had to take it.

He jumped a train, hurried to this man's business office. The friend was happy to see him, not effusive, just pleased. He wanted to know about the family, about friends. The baseball man's face was drawn as he answered:

"I'm afraid you won't be so interested," he burst out finally, "when you know why I'm here. I've got to tell you now. Listen. . . ."

The man listened; $60,000, immediately, no security.

He smiled at the end, beckoned his secretary.

"Miss Soandso," he said, "write out a check for Mr. Blank for $60,000. . . . Now tell me, how's the family?"

He got no answer for several minutes. The baseball man's head was in his arms, and he was sobbing.

BLUE DEVILS ALL SET FOR U.N.C. CLASH

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 28.—The much-anticipated championship battle of the State's football giants, Carolina and Duke, is just around the corner, and the Carolina players approached this afternoon's last light drill in high spirits and keyed to the last pitch.

The Tar Heels completed heavy preparations in good shape yesterday. They began to show signs of snapping out of their mid-week slump then. Coach Collins is banking on the fact that Carolina teams usually save their best for Duke and the State championship battle.

The Blue Devils have tied Carolina for two years now, but haven't been able to beat the Tar Heels since 1893. One team is as intent on breaking that record as the other is maintaining it. With the two teams unusually well-matched and with the State title hanging on the outcome, their meeting here tomorrow at 2 o'clock is expected to transcend the most classic of past Carolina-Duke battles.

Every important Carolina player was ready and anxious today to get in, although one or two still nursed slight injuries. Johnny Phipps, Johnny Daniel, Erwin Walker, Harry Hodges, George Barclay, June Underwood and the other boys with good chances for

TO PLAY DUKE AND VIRGINIA LAST TIME

On Saturday the Carolina football players pictured above will be given their last opportunity to leave college with the satisfaction of having played on a Carolina team that beat Duke. For the last two years Duke and Carolina have tied.

And on Thanksgiving Day at Charlottesville, when the Cavaliers and Tar Heels will engage in their annual Turkey Day classic, these same eight boys will don a Carolina uniform for the last time. They are the only eight men on the Carolina squad who will be ineligible to play next year, although several of the other players likely will not return.

Three of the players—Stuart Chandler, Erwin Walker and Harry Hodges made All-State as Juniors last year. They and June Underwood, brilliant Senior, are leading candidates again this year for All-State positions and are being given much consideration for All-Southern picks. Elliott Newcombe and Cabell Pillpott are a fine pair of fast "pony" guards. Snyder Cozart is a steady and dependable end. Jim McCaskill is a driving half-back and is the boy who ripped up State's line last year.—University News Bureau.

All-State were especially on edge. Their showing against Duke's Laney, Mason, Ershler, Crawford, Iossiter and Werner may go far toward settling these posts. Coaches Collins, Fetzner and Cerney had two lines and three backfields to shoot the works. The coaches have scouted Duke religiously all year, waded through and analyzed all the write-ups of Duke power, and even dug up a news reels of last year's Carolina-Duke tie.

Student and fan interest has kept pace with the Tar Heels' efforts to reach their peak.

Indications point to the year's largest and most colorful crowd, probably 20,000.

As extra features, the crack Carolina and Duke bands will march on the field together and play several numbers each, the Carolina Cheerios will make their reappearance, and the Friendship Trophy will be awarded to the winning team.

teams in the nation this year, including Tennessee and Auburn, undefeated Southern schools. State, however, has been conceded as having the finest array of backfield material in North Carolina.

Cumiskey is regarded as one of the South's best fullbacks, and is frequently mentioned for All-Southern. He is a powerful back. In eight games this fall he has failed to gain on only three plays. Cumiskey, in addition to his line driving prowess, is an excellent defensive fullback. He covers nicely on passes and is a power at backing up the line.

McAdams and Roy are both sophomores, but their play this fall has stamped them as among the best backs in the State. Roy's biggest feat was his 92-yard touchdown run against Davidson.

Don Wilson played his best game against Duke, and will be given charge of this backfield when State meets South Carolina here Thanksgiving Day.

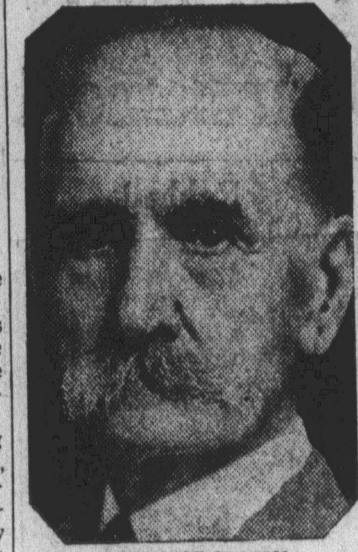

STATE BACKS AMONG BEST IN COUNTRY

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 18.—Wallace Wade, coach of the Duke University football team, was reported as having said after the Duke-State game here last week that the State College Wolfpack had the best backfield Duke had faced this season.

The backfield Wade was referring to was composed of Don Wilson, quarter; Robert McAdams and Roscoe Roy, halfbacks; and Mope Cumiskey, fullback. It was Cumiskey who crashed the center of the Blue Devil line for the only score of the game. McAdams gained 68 yards on ground plays against Duke—three more yards than made by alal of the Duke backs.

In addition to out rushing the Devils on the ground, State's backfield completed two of four passes attempted and did not have any intercepted. Duke tried six passes, completed one, had two intercepted and the others were broken up. Wade's compliment is a big one. Duke has faced some of the finest

SPORT SLANTS

Many a grandstand play has nothing more behind it than some empty head who never had a large feeling, human, kindly or otherwise, outside of the sphere of his own particular physical activity.

That's why some of the things against a background of things others try to do, solely for effect.

It's nice to report that the night of the world series game in which the Babe slashed a pair of home runs to demoralize the Cubs, he ate a large dinner and then went downstairs to the ball-room of the hotel to plead with the orchestra leader for a job for a friend.

He sneaked away later for another small errand he felt he should do. A bomb explosion blinded a Chicago boy shortly before the series started. The youngster, an innocent bystander, had a ticket for the games in Chicago. He was in a hospital. He'd never see those games, or any others.

The Babe heard of that while with the orchestra leader. He went alone to the hospital. For a couple of hours, alone with the boy, absolutely unknown except to the youngster, he told about the home runs, went over every play in the ball game, loaned the kid his eyes for the evening.

There aren't many nicer ways of celebrating victory.

There's one owner of a major league ball club who has fought reverses for seven years. He knows now he won't last through the winter. He may lose the property, and his last cent with it. But he'll go out with one memory as fine as that of the blind boy.

Last spring he was in such financial distress that he just about conceded the end. There was a note due in a few days for $75,000. He had just $15,000 in cash. And not another resource in the world.

He lay awake night, thinking, figuring, trying to find a way out, poring over in his mind for some friend he had overlooked who might come to his aid. He had no security that wasn't already mortgaged. Every last man who owed him a favor

A. A. U. W. SPEAKER TALKS ON MODERN AMERICAN ART

That contemporary American painting is worthy of serious attention was the theme of a most interesting talk on "America's Contribution to Painting in the Last Fifty Years" given by Mrs. E. L. Hillman Thursday afternoon at the regular meeting of the A. A. U. W.

Mrs. Hillman went on to speak of some of the major figures in the art of our country—figures recognized the world over—George Inness, "the Father of American Landscape"; the portrait painters Sargent, Whistler and Thayer; Winslow Homer, whose marine scenes are famous; and Edwin A. Abbey, unequalled for his murals in the Boston Public Library on the theme of the search for the Holy Grail.

The speaker reminded her audience that many of the so-called miniatures of today are not real ones, that the term miniature includes only paintings made from life, on ivory.

"The art of today," said Mrs. Hillman in closing, "is turning to industry for its materials and its inspiration."

The talk was illustrated with many representative prints, and some genuine miniatures painted by Mrs. C. W. Hearne of Greenville.

The association was entertained at the parish house by Miss Gussie Kuykendall, Miss Louise Williams and Miss Lois Grigsby, of the college.

The next meeting will be on the second instead of the third Thursday in December, on account of the Christmas holidays.—Reported.

What Are Jitney Players?

This question is being asked. "Jitney" merely describes their mode of travel and they were among the first of the modern strolling players to use trucks and cars and the highways instead of the railroads. At first they had as a stage a Ford truck with drop sides. They are the successors of the strolling players of England of a hundred and more years ago, those that went out from London between seasons. They are high class actors and actresses who have had Broadway success.

The movement started about ten years ago, before the slump in the theatrical business in the cities, when it was a real sacrifice to leave Broadway.

In the summer of 1923, soon after Alice Keating, John Barrymore's leading lady, had married Bushnell Cheney, a young man just out of Yale, where he had starred in dramatics, they equipped cars, and with the caravan started out for the New England resorts. Since then they have traveled far, both in miles and reputation.

The Jitney Players will present "Arms and the Man" at East Carolina Teachers College on Tuesday evening, Nov. 22, at 8:30.

Jack Frost, a little late, has at last nipped the tender flower and now our calendiums which have been so beautiful all summer and fall drooped and dead.

A telephone line from Greenville to Ballard's, soon to be in operation, will be a great advantage to our community.

Mrs. Sheba Planagan and daughter, Miss Myrtle, who have been spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Tyson, are now spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Turnage Jr.

Mrs. I. U. Joyner and daughter were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Anderson near LaGrange Sunday.

Mrs. Nannie Elks, who was confined to the house by illness for several days, is now able to be out again, we are glad to note.

Mrs. Roy Crawford and mother visited Mrs. Fannie Cobb in Farmville Wednesday.

The origin of the crowing rooster, proclaiming a Democratic victory is known to this writer, but it is a fact that these same roosters were crowing in the Reflector before the present editor was born.

These same roosters were crowing in the Greenville Express the fore-runner of The Reflector, away back in the late seventies, or early eighties, when that paper was first published by Messrs. J. R. and D. J. Whitehead, when the latter was only 16 years old.

Note to the Editor: I have been an almost constant reader of The Reflector and the Greenville Express since the first issue. No paper has been able to succeed in Greenville until your uncle and father took up the work. The Reflector is a monument to the late Mr. Whitehead, as Mr. Jule Whitehead was not long on the editorial staff.

Wild Flower Exhibit At College.

A wild flower exhibit in the science building of East Carolina Teachers College excited a great deal of interest yesterday. Instead of the flowers themselves the paintings of the flowers were on display, and were so realistic one felt like reaching out a hand and plucking them or leaning over and catching a whiff.

Mrs. Clara Binder of Windsor, is the genius in whom is that rare combination of naturalist and artist. She, with her two dogs as protectors, dressed in roughing clothes, goes into the swamps or scrambles through thickets for rare specimens and she knows them and knows where to look for them.

More than 150 paintings of specimens are in the collection and most of these from actual flowers found in Eastern Carolina.

In the collection are all of the familiar flowers that make the woods attractive, such as yellow jessamine, dogwood, azaleas and wahoo, commonly known as "swamp dogwood" or "Indian arrow." Such rare things as Venus fly trap, fringed and bottled gentians, lady slippers, and blue bells make one marvel at the variety of beautiful things hidden in the swamps around him.

There were many pictures of such shrubs as the Yopon, the bay, and various types that have berries. She also had pictures of flowering trees and shrubs that are not wild, such as magnolia, mimosa and crepe myrtle.

The paintings were in water colors mounted on cardboard and these were placed around the wall and on tables. Not only were the nature lovers delighted with the exhibit, but the artists were equally charmed. Mrs. Binder is a genuine artist who has caught far more than the lines of the flower. These paintings have delicate coloring and individuality, very different from the usual gaudy plates of flowers.

The Science Club hopes to have Mrs. Binder in the early spring to talk to them about the wild flowers of Eastern Carolina and her work.

ORIGINAL PLAYS TO BE PRESENTED BY PLAYMAKERS

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 18.—Four original plays, done by students in Professor Frederick Koch's class in playwriting, are to be presented to the public for the first time at performances scheduled for December 8, 9 and 10 in the Playmakers' theater.

The four were chosen from a group of ten that have just been a private audience which judged their merits. They are to represent the second bill to be put on by the Playmakers this season, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" being the first.

The new plays to be offered are "Four on a Heath," a phantasy in which three handies maintain conversation on their lives; "Pester Fitz-Simons of Atlanta, Ga.," "Creek Swamp Negro," a tragedy of lust, woman, and money; by Harry W. Coble, of Douglas, Ga.; "Stumbling in Dreams," a play of Tin Pan Alley in which the author portrays a song-writing incident in his own life; by George Brown, of New York City; and "Davy Crockett," a revitalization of the hero of the Alamo, probably the first dramatic work of its kind, by John Philip Milip Milhours, himself a Tennessean.

BETTY AND SCARLET BUNNY TO ARRIVE TUESDAY

Old Man Depression is given a blow in the Betty and Scarlet Bunny play to be given in Greenville on December 2nd. As the Scarlet Bunny points out to Betty: Prosperity is just like a ground hog; if he sees his shadow or frowns on everybody faces and hears the sound of gloomy talk, he runs away and hides, but when people smile and are talking of cheerful things then prosperity comes right back again. The Smile song that is sung during this part of the play is one that will be sung down the years. Those who are fortunate enough to hear it on Dec. 2nd will be glad as long as they live that they heard it the first time it was sung in Greenville.

FAIRMONT WOMAN COMMITS SUICIDE

Lumberton, Nov. 18.—Miss Flora Faulk, 29, daughter of J. V. Faulk, prominent McDonald farmer, shot herself to death in the jewelry store of C. W. McCormick at Fairmont at 2:15 p. m. today.

She was employed at the store and was alone at the time. Neighboring storekeepers heard a shot, ran in and found her in a dying condition. She had shot herself through the heart. The pistol lay nearby. She left no explanation for her act, and no motive has been given. Coroner D. W. Biggs and Sheriff P. S. Kornegay, who went to Fairmont to investigate, deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Funeral arrangements were not complete today, but it was stated she will be buried Friday.

Surviving are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Faulk; McDonald; a sister, Mrs. Bland Brown, Fairmont; four brothers, W. H., who is traveling through Virginia; George, of Burlington; Mack and Alva, of Lumberton.

U. N. C. STUDENTS AWARDED SCHOLARSHIPS THIS YEAR

Chapel Hill, Nov. 18.—A. W. Lowe, of Robersonville; H. A. Hartgrove, of Hamlet; R. L. Holt, of Pink Hill, and W. G. Miller, of Rockwell, have been awarded this year's Holt scholarships, according to an announcement by Dean A. W. Hobbs, chairman of the committee making the awards.

The Holt scholarships are made available from the interest of a fund of $10,000 given the University by Lawrence S. Holt, Jr., of Burlington, of the class of 1904, and are awarded yearly to one student from each of the undergraduate classes on a basis of financial need, character and merit.

Each scholarship is valued at $125.

Mr. Holt has also made available other funds for worthy students needing financial assistance.

Talks to Parents

which his child soul happens at the moment to be confronted.

His play in such instances is the most necessary of safety valves. The conflicts which he is allowed thoroughly to work through in this "meaningless" play are not likely to crystallize into the trouble-making "complexes" of which we head so much in later life.

For this reason the child's play, no matter how silly it appears to the adult mind, should not be checked, criticised or directed.

Interference at once causes the game to lose for the child its value. For when the adult steps in the game at once changes its character and no longer possesses its original "significance for the child's conscious or unconscious strivings."

Mothers need frequently to remind themselves that there is a deal of sense behind the child's most senseless games even if adults are not able to understand them.

Consists of forcibly tripping a horse while at full speed—"and my objections," he declared, "were solely on the grounds that it was brutal and inhumane."

Beginning as a stunt man, O'Brien has had numerous narrow escapes in the making of westerns, one movie form which retains a certain amount of actual thrills in the filming. Among those close calls have been a near-drowning, when his horse became panic-stricken while swimming him across a lake; a crash on a horseback in which his mount landed on his chest—and he still wears adhesive tape from that one, although it happened several weeks ago; broken ribs from a fight scene; a broken foot-bone from a high dive, and similar flirtations with risk.

SENSELESS GAMES

By Alice Judson Peale

Children often invent and play with absorption games which to the adult seem senseless.

They invent elaborate rituals, make up "magic" words, carry out long eternally repeated conversations, wage battles that never end and go on journeys that get nowhere.

A toy long neglected suddenly becomes of the utmost importance. The child refuses to be separated from it even for a moment. "I've it, talks of it and executes with it complicated maneuvers whose meaning would escape anyone but a trained psychiatrist.

Yet these games, even the most fantastic, pointless and apparently vacuously repetitious of them, all have a definite significance to the child. By means of them he is without doubt working out some emotional conflict, some problem with

No Film 'Doubles' Take Risks For George O'Brien

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 18.—The movie accident recently in which a "double" was injured while on location for a George O'Brien picture caused the report to circulate that husky George must be weakening, since one of his proudest claims has been that he never uses "doubles."

But it develops that it's all a mistake. The man who was hurt was representing the heroine, Maureen O'Sullivan, and not George.

"At the time of the accident," O'Brien says, "the man was wearing a wig and a woman's riding habit, as the scene in question was much too dangerous for any woman to undertake."

Little Use For 'Doubles'

Only twice in his career, avers George, has he used a "double." On both occasions, several years ago, he was asked to do a "running w." in a scene. A "running w." illegal now,

Films Seem Good To Spanish Star After Vaudeville

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 18.—Brown-eyed, youthful, vicious Conchita Montenegro may collect dolls and woolly animals as a hobby, but her serious thoughts are all turned to the movie career she wants to resume after her recent vaudeville venture.

Soon after she came to Hollywood, a sixteen-year-old girl who couldn't speak a word of English, she acquired the reputation of a social leader in the Spanish colony, and was hostess at many gatherings in the big house she leased. This time she has taken an apartment, where much entertaining is impossible—so she means business.

Vaudeville and its four or five shows a day converted Conchita to Hollywood, which she hadn't liked so well before. She plans to stay now.

Given Easy Role

Constilla, born in Madrid, attracted considerable attention because she learned enough English in three months to play the lead in "Never the Twain Shall Meet" opposite Leslie Howard. She was brought here for Spanish versions, but her future in English films was so promising that Fox signed her. Spanish roles weren't so plentiful, she found. But now she hopes to become "a real actress" in English films.

Easy Job

Screen-writing, if we are to accept the authority of Jane Murfin, who co-authored "Smilin' Through" with Jane Cowan and writes picture plays too, is fairly simple.

Chances for a successful career in screen writing are "well founded," she says, if—

ABOUT TOWN

The life of Washington should always be an inspiration to the nation because of his great achievements.

Washington had so much vision the speaker said that he knew seven years ahead where he was going to plant a certain crop.

The Greenville celebration was the first of the kind held in this immediate part of the state and is one of thousands of others being conducted in other parts of the nation.

With President Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt definitely opposed to a moratorium on foreign debts.

Although the conference between the President and President-elect will not be held until next week.

An extension of foreign trade may be considered as the two leading men of the nation attempt to discover some way of assisting the foreign powers.

The debt question has become one of the most converted of the day. It affects scores of nations as well as this country.

Farmers of this section should do everything in their power to rush the remainder of their crop to market as early as possible.

In moving up the closing date a month or so ahead of previous years the directors of the association expressed opinion that all of the tobacco of the belt would have been disposed of by that time.

By co-operating with the warehousemen the farmers will do much toward decreasing the cost of the movement of the crop this year.

Revision of tariff rates will be one of the first problems to be assailed by the new Democratic congress.

He believes that the party members realize that the high wall erected in recent years by the Republican party is largely responsible for the financial situation existing in this and other parts of the world.

Nobody doubts but that he is right. The retaliatory step taken by other countries has practically closed the door of the world to American products.

The Democrats have lots of changing and house cleaning to do when they get in the capital and the public will look on with interest wondering all the time what will happen next.

A PATH TO PARADISE

by Coningsby DAWSON

SPNOPSIS: Day after day Clive goes through the heart-breaking routine of job hunting.

Chapter 29

A JEALOUS SANTA

Next morning when Clive tendered her his own gift, his mood was humble. Dicky had made unfair competition for him.

"You ordered me not to spend too much. You mayn't care for it."

As she lifted the vase from its wrappings, her face glowed.

"You've disobeyed me, old extravagant. How you spoil me!"

She was delighted as a child. Over breakfast she never ceased thanking him.

In the hall, on the point of departure, the offensive bureau caught his eye.

"You've been handsome over my measly offering. It isn't a patch on the one your first husband sent you."

He belonged to her forgiveness drifting apart. Going out of his way to wound her.

Shortly after the curtain had risen Santa clutched his hand. There was no tense moment—there rarely are in musical shows—to account for her emotion.

"What's troubling you?" he whispered.

"Lou-Lou."

"Who's Lou-Lou?"

"You remember at St. Jean, Dicky's temptress?"

"Where? I never saw her, so can't recognize her."

"How allowed? Do you mean she ought to be exterminated?"

"It's insulting to have to watch her. How anyone can be such an idiot—"

"She's the kind men fall for."

"You couldn't. Or could you?" she inquired jealously.

"The human heart is a mystery," he spoofed her. "Who would imagine that you could have fallen for Dicky? To me she seems a decent enough little person."

"A poacher who breaks up homes and makes a profit by it!"

"Look here, this was to have been your birthday treat. We can scoot if you wish it."

"Buy me some of those song-records; they're selling them at that table."

He was glad to give her a chance to calm down. She was curiously aloof-sided. Could see only her own viewpoint.

Having secured the records, he returned to where he had left her. He spotted her behind a barricade of shoulders in animated conversation with an opera hat.

As he claimed her, she threw him a clear look.

"Hello darling! Here's Dicky Saves me the trouble of writing. I was thanking him for our wedding present."

"Good of you to remember my wife's birthday," he said shortly.

"That's the difference between us, darling. I can't ignore—you can. You forget; I go on remembering. I want you to be absolutely mine in the same way you try to make me absolutely ours."

"Not my business. I was never married to him."

Having entered the apartment, she proposed that they should raid the ice-box. He volunteered to accompany her, but she refused.

Left alone, the rudeness of his retort appalled him. Where would things end if he took to throwing her first marriage at her?

"Darling," she threw him one of her melting glances, "you're mine. To me you're perfect. Everything's going to come all right."

"I'm not referring to finances. Don't you realize, Santa, that there is a growing friction between us? We love each other to distraction, but—"

"Of course you're irritable, poor dear," she interrupted. "I make allowances."

"If we were as certain of each other as we were at St. Jean, there wouldn't be any necessity for allowances."

"It's a fact. Refusing to see unpleasant things is my way of getting through life. Yours is to imagine them."

"I don't imagine that." He pointed at the bureau. "I didn't imagine Dak tonight or your excitement over meeting him. I didn't imagine my unkindness to you this morning. And there's one other thing I didn't imagine—your jealousy over Lou-Lou."

"Why mention—why not ignore?"

"That's the difference between us, darling. I can't ignore—you can. You forget; I go on remembering. I want you to be absolutely mine in the same way you try to make me absolutely ours."

"What a coincidence!"

"The encounter seemed to have put her in a good humor; the rest of the performance she enjoyed thoroughly."

"Wasn't she cute? I take everything back. I'm sorry I was snappy."

"That's all right," he muttered. "It was queer Dicky being there," she ventured.

"You get a kick out of discussing him."

"But I've no one else to talk to," she pouted.

"Then shoot."

"How did Lou-Lou scramble into that show?"

"Someone's backed her. We should worry."

"One more question." The taxi was halting. "Do you think Dicky's backing her?"

"Not my business. I was never married to him."

"Why the politeness?" Her mischief was returning.

"GUILTY CONSCIENCE." He shrugged his shoulders.

"Funny boy!" She reached up to him.

"Not till I've said what's troubling me. One kiss from you and I'm in your power."

"Don't you want to be?"

"This is your birthday. Anniversaries are milestones. One halts to look back and forwards. I've been looking back, remembering how I longed for you and the struggle I had to win you."

"Well, you've won me." She helped herself to cheese and crackers.

"I haven't won you the way I'd hoped."

MARKET REPORT

Market will close of Thanksgiving after Wednesday's sale, reopening Monday, November 28th.

Greenville is nearly 2,000,000 pounds ahead of all other markets and gaining every day.

Scrap Tobacco

Beginning at once, we will gain sell your scrap tobacco at Auction. For many years the warehouses in Eastern Carolina have not offered scrap for sale. This year some of the markets have resumed selling scrap at a auction and Greenville will do likewise.

Greenville is leading all other markets because we are paying more for every grade of tobacco. Competition has never been keener, and some of the markets are getting frantic offering all kinds of wild inducements, even to hauling tobacco free if they will bring their tobacco to them. Every thinking farmer knows he pays the bill if he takes up with these wildcat schemes.

We believe the farmers of Pitt county will stand by their market, which has proven to be the best and largest bright tobacco market in the state.

..another expert chooses Crisco for all frying and shortening purposes

During the recent cooking school Miss L. Dixon showed thousands of women how to make fried and baked foods more delicious by using Crisco. Naturally, she used Crisco because she knew that she could depend on this all-purpose cooking fat to help her demonstrate her points. And she is only one of hundreds of experts who prefer Crisco. Ever since Miss Louise Dixon held her school here, more and more women have been telling their grocers how much they like Crisco, and how glad they are that they tried it. Because of this growing interest the local grocers have decided to feature Crisco at special prices this week so that every woman may have an opportunity to learn of its many superior qualities.

Excessive Enthusiasm.
Although enthusiasm has been termed the element of success in everything—the light that leads and the strength that lifts men on and up in the great struggles of scientific pursuits and of professional labor, we think that in excess it is an evil—a harmful disease of individuals.

Excessive enthusiasm is the intoxication of earnestness—that temper of mind in which the imagination has overpowered the judgment. At such times clear thinking becomes almost an impossibility, and that which should require premeditation is chiefly spontaneous. For example, let us imagine that in a football game, one quarterback becomes very enthusiastic to break his neck for dear old "alma mater." He imagines he is going to make a dash for a touchdown from the fifty yard line; nothing can stop him. With this enthusiasm, sensible reasoning leaves him and he becomes a crazy machine controlled by his imagination. Is it at all amazing that he saves his interference and is brown for a loss by a cool calculating fullback on the other team?

The super-enthusiast may be compared to a man walking in a fog; everything immediately around him or in contact with him appears sufficiently clear; but beyond the little cell of which he himself is the nucleus, all is mist, error and disorder. For this type, we think the attainment of success will be extremely difficult.

National Book Week

Greenville's observance of National Book Week Nov. 13-19, reached a grand finale in the concluding story-telling hour held at Sheppard Memorial Library yesterday afternoon at 3:30. Throughout the week story-telling has been conducted each afternoon in an attempt to familiarize the children of the primary schools with the better type of children's literature. By request of the library, Miss Dora Coates, head of the primary department of East Carolina Teachers' College, has taken general charge of the programs. She has been assisted by her student teachers in relating stories to the children.

The program yesterday afternoon was especially planned to commemorate the centennial anniversary of the births of Louise M. Alcott and Charles L. Dodson, better known as Lewis Carroll. Under the direction of Miss Cleo Rainwater, principal of the training school, discussions of the lives and works of these authors were held; and later a one act playlet taken from the first chapter of Miss Alcott's "Little Women" was presented. The students participating in this program were Nell McGowan, Clyde Upchurch, Dorothy Miller, May Meadows, Louise Kilgo, Phyllis Shuff, Virginia Rouse and Mary Belle Roberson. Several stories by Lucille Yeats, Dorothy Willard and Dora Coates completed the program.

Attend District Meeting

The North Eastern division of the North Carolina Education Association held its annual meeting in Rocky Mount on Friday and Saturday November 11 and 12 with a large number of teachers present. The Greenville schools were well represented at all sessions of the conference. In attendance from the high school faculty were Supt. Rose, Mary York, Mary Shelton McArthur, Mary Ellen Powell, Dr. ReBarker and V. M. Mulholland.

One of the outstanding group meetings to be held was that of the home economics teachers. Miss Mary York, critic teacher in home economics at the local high school, spoke to this group on "Home Economics' Share in Helping Education Become an Insurance Policy of Democracy." Miss York comes to Greenville with an enviable reputation in central and western North Carolina and bids fair to add to her fame while in Eastern Carolina.

Miss Connie Horne of the French department was secretary of the French group this year and helped to formulate their interesting programs.

Dr. ReBarker, professor of math at E. C. T. C. and director of an experimental class in math at the high school, arranged the program for the math group and presided over its sessions.

The English teachers' conference was largely attended; and for the next two years will be headed by V. M. Mulholland, English critic in the Greenville high school. Dr. Tom Briggs of Columbia, Dr. Hudson of Carolina, and Dr. Jordan of Duke, spoke to the association of English teachers.

Miss Rachel Scarborough's sophomore assembly won the contest in attendance and punctuality for the past four weeks with a percentage of 99.57 present, one of the best records yet made by an assembly. The reward was a free pass to everyone in that assembly to see Will Rogers in "Down To Earth" at the State Theatre Tuesday afternoon.

Winners in the grammar schools were Miss Wahl's seventh grade at the training school with an average of 99.09 per cent. present; Miss Hart's sixth grade at West Greenville school with a percentage of 97.69, and Miss Greene's seventh grade at the Third street school with

Sophomores Elect Officers

The sophomore class met Wednesday during the home room period to elect officers for this year. The following outstanding members of the class were elected: Ronald J. Slay, president; Samuel Dees, vice-president; and Carl Abee, secretary and treasurer.

Following in the footsteps of last year's junior class, the sophomores have wisely elected a Slay as president, and under his guidance the class is expected to accomplish much.

Irma Cobb Dunn, former president of the class, presided over the meeting.

Football Game

Mr. Morgan's freshman home room won a football game Thursday afternoon from Mr. Porter's home room by the score of 13-7.

Room 11, Mr. Porter's room, was coached by Rex Hodges and Room 12 by Mr. Morgan. The first half of this game was all Porter's team; it scored 7 points with fast running attack aided by deceptive plays. Incidentally, the Tripp to Swartz passing combination was good for two gains, twenty yards each.

The second half of the game however, was all for Morgan's team. Gaining almost entirely on line plays, it went for two touchdowns and an extra point. Hamilton and Hatem were the alternate stars of this drive. Room 11 seemed to be faster, using spinner and reverse plays to advantage, while Mr. Morgan's team had the weight and the drive.

Students Attend Address

By an interchange of periods, the junior and senior classes were enabled to attend Judge Winston's address on George Washington held at the campus building on Friday morning at 10:30.

Judge Winston, an able member of the North Carolina Bar, is the chairman of the state committee in charge of the Bicentennial celebration; and his address was enjoyed by all the students.

New York, Nov. 18.—(AP)—The delightful Geeta Ljungberg made an amusing feature story for the ship news reporters when she came back here for the abbreviated Metropolitan season.

Asked if she were as tall as she looked—say, perhaps 5 feet 10 or more—Miss Ljungberg staged a little scene for the boys right in the grand salon of the Deutschland. She kicked off her high heel slippers and insisted she be measured then and there in her stocking feet.

A steward brought a tape measure and said he found her to be only 5 feet 8. Miss Ljungberg said it should be a mere 5 feet 7. You know how the salt sea air stretches those tape measures.

Those who know her are not surprised when the lovely Ljungberg does something of the sort. They would have you know it isn't just a kittenish bid for publicity. Made-moiselle is that way—impetuous.

Thyra Samter Winslow's dog goes where she goes. It's one of those pretty little toy pooches. Perfectly resigned to resting in her arms, the pup is completely indifferent to all those who gather about at a party to coo over it.

Another famous pup is Shanty an Irish terrier belonging to Morgan Dennis, etcher. Shanty has been the model for many of his dog studies.

NEGRO ARRESTED ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Goldsboro, Nov. 18.—A negro believed to be the one who attacked Frank E. Barner, Goldsboro merchant, with an axe one night last week, was located in Snow Hill Wednesday. Policeman L. O. Rhodes went to Snow Hill and brought the negro, Charlie Atkinson, to Goldsboro, and placed him in the city jail to face trial as soon as Mr. Barnes is physically able to attend the trial. Mr. Barnes, who had been struck and severely cut in the forehead with an axe, was able to leave the Goldsboro hospital on Wednesday and is now in bed at his home.

Voters of Ohio View Campaign From Ringside

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, Nov. 18.—Those who early in the Presidential campaign, predicted that Ohio would be a mighty political battleground before the elections of November 8 may not have realized just how true were their prophecies.

The Buckeye State has seen and continues to see the biggest guns of both parties loosed in a terrific drive to capture the State's twenty-six electoral votes.
Consider, for example, what political fare Ohio voters already have had. Governor Roosevelt journeyed to Columbus to make the first real speech of his campaign. President Hoover replied by journeying to Cleveland, where he made the second of his major campaign addresses. Later he spoke in several Ohio cities on his way to Detroit.

All-Star Bill
Few States or localities, even in a year such as this, can boast of having so much political talent within their borders at one time.

But it seemed evident months ago that Ohio was to be one of the main focal points in the campaign. Events preceding the campaign itself seemed to make it inevitable.
The election of Senator Buckley, an opponent of prohibition, back in 1930, started Democrats talking about a Presidential victory for their party in 1932. A Democrat who could roll up more than a million votes, as he did in the Me State of the main drive for constitutional prohibition—and in an offer year—gave cause for hope.

And Buckley's victory played no inconsiderable part in the adoption of the out-and-out repeal plank in the Democratic platform at Chicago.

Pre-Campaign Strategy
Some political prophets, at least, thought the appointment of Ailee Pomeroy, an Ohio Democrat, to a place on the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, after General Dawes' resignation, meant that campaign strategists foresaw Ohio would be a very special battle-ground in the months to come.

Then, too, perhaps the Democratic chieftains pulled down old record books and found that Ohio, although she has been the mother of many Republican Presidents, has also shown some affection toward Democrats.

ENGLAND SABBES LARGE SUMS BY DEBT REVISIONS

000,000 of internal debt—more than one-third of the nation's total domestic debt—into securities carrying lower rates of interest.

Their effect, so far as the treasury is concerned, has been estimated by Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, to mean a gross saving in a full year of $133,000,000.

The latest of these steps was accomplished early in November when the treasury announced an issue of $950,000,000 of three per cent convertible loan payable at par on March 1, 1933 or, on three months notice, any time after March 1, 1948.

Previously, on October 11, $525,000,000 in two per cent treasury bonds were issued at par and these two together will provide funds to deal with maturities December 1 and February 1.

The result is that the treasury has made a clean slate for more than a year of all maturities. These maturing bonds, moreover, have been drawing 4.5 and 5 per cent interest.

The conversion campaign started in the middle of March when holders of $400,400,000 of 4-1-2 per cent treasury bonds maturing in the next month were invited to exchange their holding into either 4-1-2 per cent conversion or 4 per cent consolidated loan.

A second step was taken at the end of April by the tender of 3 per cent treasury bonds, of which $385,000,000 were sold.

The third operation was the great war loan conversion, a 5 per cent loan for $7,297,500,000 for which conversion was offered in the form of a 3-1-2 per cent loan. There was non-assent to the amount of $577,500,000, the holders of which will receive their cash December 1.

Besides the benefits to the exchequer, the effect of the conversion operations as seen in financial circles has been to enable other countries, particularly the dominions, to convert relatively dear loans into cheaper ones. A gain in the same way for municipalities is claimed, whereas, to industry, old capital has been, or may be, renewed on better terms and fresh capital may be raised more cheaply.

The effect, it is seen, is to bring downward adjustments which will have a general lightening effect on the burden of the debtor.

British analysts of the conversion operations, while conceding them to be a triumph for British finance, point out that they may entail more economies as they lead to a reduction in tax receipts.

The actual savings to the exchequer have not been estimated. It is understood that the $133,000,000 gross saving will not be a net saving, since the State will no longer receive income tax and surtax from that sum.

OFFERINGS OF LEAF HEAVIER

year the market disposed of 3,709,964 pounds for $376,803.17 at an average of $10.10 per hundred.

Sales picked up sharply on the market today it was indicated when work began this morning, but it was thought warehouse floors would be cleared by the middle of the afternoon. It was estimated that there was approximately 750,000 pounds of tobacco here today.
