RESCUE EIGHT FROM VESSEL

Ninth Member Crew of C. Rover Perishes in Heavy Sea Near Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Eight of the nine men aboard the fishing schooner C. Rover, ashore on a bar near the Little Island coast guard station, were rescued early today. The ninth man lost his life in an attempt to swim ashore with a line, needlessly it turned out for coast wardmen placed a breeches buoy aboard the schooner and brought the eight members of the crew safely ashore. In the pitch darkness of midnight with the wind blowing forty miles an hour and in a raging sea, the schooner stuck on the bar two hundred miles from shore. Pounding heavily, for she had 160 barrels of fish aboard, she finally edged down with the bar while the wind (Continued on Page Four)

LEAF PRICES PICK UP HERE

High Averages Set Here Yesterday In Face of Large Offerings Low Grades.

With offerings nearing the million pound mark the price situation took a pronounced upturn on the Greenville tobacco market yesterday and one of the highest general averages of the season was recorded. The official report of sales made public this morning by K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, showed the market sold 854,066 pounds of tobacco during the day for a total sum of $122,467.42 at a general average of $14.33 per hundred pounds. Prices showed much strength on virtually all grades, and the average was considered remarkably fine in view of the facts scrap and common grades were in the ascendency. The movement of leaf continued rapidly today and during the early morning hours there was over three hundred thousand pounds of leaf on the floors of the various warehouses with indications that this would be greatly increased during the day. The heavy sales chalked up the last several days is indicative that growers are attempting to co-operate with warehousemen in their effort to complete the season by December 21. Offerings were expected to be fairly heavy from now until the closing day by reason of the fact that Greenville is drawing from larger territory this year than ever before.

PEOPLE WILL OFFER THANKS Community To Express Appreciation For Blessing at Union Thanksgiving Service

While hundreds of people will hie away to the gridirons and hunting fields during Thanksgiving Day, many of those remaining in Greenville will attend the annual union Thanksgiving service at Immanuel Baptist Church and attempt to express their appreciation of the many blessings which the community has received during the year. The service by far one of the most inspirational of the year, will be marked by a special sermon by Rev. A. W. Fleischman pastor of Memorial Baptist Church. An offering for various orphanages conducted by different denominations in all parts of the country will be taken, and as customary, a good sum was expected to be raised. The service is held in a different church each year and members of all denominations and the public generally are invited to take part and join in expressions of thanksgiving for the bountiful harvests produced in this part of the country. As customary on Thanksgiving Day, virtually all phases of business will be at a standstill throughout the day, in addition to the inducements offered by the gridiron and hunting fields the populace will turn its attention to the eating of turkey and cranberry sauce. One of the greatest gastronomic achievements of the year will take place at Johnston's warehouse when the Salvation Army will entertain approximately 700 poor people at dinner. The spread is an annual affair, and in view of the seriousness of the unemployment situation it was expected more people would be fed this year than ever before. Virtually all churches and other organizations of the city are assisting in providing food for the dinner, and Ensign Willett, in charge of Salvation Army activities, expressed belief they would be able to feed at least seven hundred hungry persons.

Late News Flashes

Schooner Capsizes. Washington, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The navy received a report today from its hydrographical office at Norfolk which said the fishing schooner Rappahannock had capsized one-half mile off Smith Point at the mouth of the Potomac river in Maryland. The report said no member of the crew had been sighted. No other details were given. Guard War Debt Plans. Washington, Nov. 22.—(AP)—With his own war debt ideas in form President Hoover awaited the arrival today of Franklin D. Roosevelt in the hope of evolving with him a joint program for dealing with international financial complications. There was expectancy in official Washington as the time for the precedent-shattering conference drew near. The meeting time was 4 p. m. in the historic Lincoln study. Although none including the President, who guarded closely his thoughts could foresee the outcome (Continued on Page Four)

COBB CHOSEN JUNIOR ROTE

High School Student Honored at Regular Meeting of Club Last Night.

Charles Cobb has been selected as the Junior Rotarian for the month of December, it was announced at the regular meeting of the month of December, it was announced at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club last night. He succeeds George Willard who held the distinction during the month of November. Junior Rotarians are chosen from the high school student body each month and the distinction is conferred only upon those showing the most outstanding ability during the month. Announcement of Cobb's selection was made by C. W. Porter, director of high school athletics, who made a short talk dealing with high school sports and the prominent part which young Cobb is taking in this school of activity. Following the talk, George Willard presented the Junior Rotary badge to young Cobb, who will hold it during the month of December, after which another student who has made a high mark in school activities will receive it. The program last night was in charge of A. E. Hobgood, who presented Mrs. J. B. Spilman, who in turn presented several young women from the college who put on an entertaining program of music, songs and recitations. Those taking part were Misses Margaret Holt, Melba Watson, Erna Watson, Edith Morton, and Elizabeth Hyman. Brigadier Casler, representing the Salvation Army, told of the annual bread drive which his organization is to put on in the community in the near future and asked the Rotarians to give their support to the movement. Eastern Joseph Willett, local director of the Salvation Army, also joined in the appeal. This month has been denominated "family month" by Rotarians throughout the country, and quite a number of children were guests of their fathers last night as the club joined in observance of the occasion.

CONVICT TWO FOR MURDER

Two Men Charged with Slaying Man at Store in Greensboro Section.

Greensboro, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Fred Winkley and Paul Spencer were convicted today of a second degree murder charge with recommendations for mercy in the fatal shooting of October 1 of Herman Smith. The jury received the case yesterday. Judge W. F. Harding did not immediately impose sentence and the two men were remanded to jail. Smith, a bystander in the store, was shot as two men attempted to hold-up the proprietor. The storekeeper, S. Walters, testified that both of the defendants were the robbers, but they denied connection with the robbery or shooting. They did admit, however, of participation in a number of other robberies, and Spencer confessed to having served a term in prison for highway robbery. Funeral of Accident Victim. Rutherfordton, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Funeral services were held today for P. B. Logan, 66, who died when his auto skidded and crashed into a telephone pole near here.

War Debts To Be Given Consideration At Confab Planned At White House

LEA SEEKS AID OF REYNOLDS BOTH MEN ARE AGAINST DELAY

N. C. Senator Sought to take Part in Nashville Financier's Action in Court.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Robert A. Reynolds, Senator-elect from North Carolina, said here today he has been "approached" to represent Luke Lea, Nashville publisher and financier, in his fight to escape a prison sentence in this State. Reynolds indicated his services were wanted in event the Supreme Court of the United States denied Lea's petition for an appeal and the State of North Carolina started extradition proceedings. New York, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt left today for Washington for his history-making war debt conference with President Hoover. From his town house he went with a police escort to the Liberty street ferry and caught the Hudson to take a 10:45 train on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for Washington. Here in brief is the debt situation involved in the Hoover-Roosevelt conference at the White House today: Total debt $11,598,501,461, plus $184,000,000 in interest from postponement under the moratorium. Total paid by foreign nations $2,627,580,897 prior to the moratorium under which fifteen debtor countries obtained suspension of one year, expiring December 15. Great Britain, Belgium and Czechoslovakia have petitioned for another suspension pending the new study of problems looking to revision. Congress is on record against another moratorium, cancellation or revision. Both President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt have declared themselves in recent utterances to be against cancellation. President Hoover a year ago recommended creation of a war debt commission but his proposal was rejected by Congress.

PUSH DRIVE FOR RELIEF

Committee Continues Soliciting of Funds For Relief Campaign This Winter

The campaign to raise funds for relief work in this community during the present winter continued unflaggingly today after getting away to a good start yesterday. Yesterday and today were set aside for the drive for funds with which to carry relief to the homes of the poor during the cold weather and work will be completed during the afternoon. The canvassing is being conducted under direction of James S. Ficklen, prominent tobacconist, who has been identified with this phase of activity for years. Although no definite report from the committee members had been received, it was believed they were making good progress. Persons who are not able to contribute money have been asked to give foodstuffs which may be used to direct advantage in feeding the hungry people of the city and community for the next several months. Mayor R. C. Flanagan called upon the people to give liberally to the cause in a statement last week declaring that the situation here this year is even more severe than last year.

Cotton Spinning Is On Increase

Washington, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The cotton spinning industry was reported today by the Census Bureau to have operated in October at about 97 per cent capacity on a single shift basis compared with 46 for September this year and 85.1 for October of last year.

SEEK $2,000 FOR BUDGET

Salvation Army Chooses G. V. Smith As General Campaign Chairman

At the meeting of the advisory board yesterday at 4 o'clock plans were discussed for the approaching appeal. A budget of $2,000 was accepted by the board at a very enthusiastic meeting. Brigadier Casler suggested Guy V. Smith as general campaign chairman. Dr. S. M. Schultz made a short address, setting forth the splendid qualifications of Mr. Smith and expressing his belief that he was the ideal man to put the campaign over the top in Greenville. Mayor Flanagan made a motion that Guy V. Smith become the general chairman and all voted "aye" and Mr. Smith consented to serve. Mr. Smith will have a conference with Brigadier Casler today and suggest vice-chairmen and the work of organization will go forward. The board expressed the belief that they could put the campaign over now that things are properly started, without the assistance of Mr. Casler. Therefore Brigadier Casler will be leaving today for Fayetteville, where his campaign was cancelled in order to put on the one in Greenville. However, a telegram was received last night, asking for his (Continued on Page Four)

CONTRACTOR PREDICTS FIREPROOF RESIDENCES

New York, Nov. 22.—From the skyscraper building most of the innovations and improvements in private home construction have been developed, George E. J. Pistor, of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation, told the members of the Science Club of Teachers College, Columbia University at a meeting in the Teachers' College building. "The new building code of New York City," said Mr. Pistor, "provides for apartment structures taller, under specific conditions, than hitherto permitted because they will be built of fireproof materials. The next step will be to make all residences fireproof. Experience from building skyscrapers is gradually demonstrating to builders that it is perfectly feasible to construct small fireproof residences just as cheaply as the flammable buildings of the past. It is the duty of American architects to further this development."

JAMES C. DAIL SEEKS THIRD TERM AS MAYOR

Kinston, Nov. 22.—James C. Dail is seeking a third term as mayor of Kinston. He has announced five months in advance of the Democratic primary to choose a nominee. The election a month after the primary will be a mere formality. Democratic candidates have been unopposed in municipal elections here in recent times. Dail was elected for his first term in 1928, succeeding Wayne A. Mitchell. He has given most of his time to the municipality's affairs.

Loss of His Aids Gives Snell Task In 73rd Congress

By HERBERT PLUMMER. Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—Bertrand Snell, of New York, Republican leader of the House, must look for something akin to dismay at the job that faces him in the Seventy-third Congress. The Democratic sweep of November 8 not only left gaping holes in his ranks on the left side of the political aisle, but it also tore from his side his most trusted lieutenants. First of all, Earl Michener, of Michigan, will be lost to him. The short, curly-haired Michener has been Snell's right-hand man. He, perhaps more than any other Republican, is closest to the floor leader in the actual direction of G. O. P. forces in the House.

YEGGS FAIL TO ROB BANK

Professional Safe Crackers Foiled in Effort to Rifle Winterville Bank Vault

Believed to have been scared off by people passing along the street, professional safe crackers were foiled in their attempt to rob the Bank of Winterville last night. It was revealed by reports reaching the city today. Although the robbers battered and burned the door of the safe they left without gaining entrance to the vault where the money is kept. Their flight evidently was hasty, officers believe, because they left behind two acetylene torches and other implements with which they hoped to relieve the bank of its cash. The attempted robbery was discovered by merchants going to the business district about 5 o'clock this morning to open their stores for the day's business. Upon investigation it was discovered that the robbers had gained entrance either through a side window or the front door as both were left open. The safe is of the time lock kind and was badly burned and battered. The front door was both burned and battered off and work had been started on the vault lock when the intruders were believed to have been scared off by passersby and were unable to return because of approaching day. Had the robbers had a little more time it was believed they would have accomplished their mission. That they were experts in their line was evidenced by the acetylene torches and the experienced way the door of the safe was ripped off.

GAS STATION IS ROBBED

Undetermined Quantity of Goods Taken from Station Near Grimesland.

Robbers entered the Galloway filling station below Grimesland last night and made away with an undetermined amount of goods. It was revealed in a message received at police headquarters this morning. In a long distance telephone message with Grimesland police early today, Chief of Police George Clark was informed of the robbery and asked to send a finger-print expert to assist in rounding up the robbers. Although it was not determined how much goods were taken, the haul was described as large, almost depleting the stock carried in the combination filling station and store. Chief Clark said Officer Page, who has charge of finger-print work of the local department, would be sent to Grimesland during the day to assist in the investigation.

Lowell Resigns From Harvard

Cambridge, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Abbot Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard for twenty-three years, has resigned. No reason for the resignation was given in the tersely worded announcement calling attention to the fact that he would be 75 years of age December 13, and the creation of the house plan had fulfilled his desire. He had no comment to make regarding his resignation.

Purnell Gone, Too

Also snatched from his side is another stalwart, Fred Purnell of Indiana. Purnell shared with Michener the confidence of the leader. In the rough and tumble of debate Snell invariably had one on his right and the other on his left. That veteran of eighteen years in the House, Will Wood, of Indiana, former chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee, passed from the scene, too.

New Whip Needed

Snell in the next Congress must even find him a new whip. The Democratic sweep carried with it Carl Bachman, of West Virginia, who holds that job. He must also get along without the counsel of Colonel Johnny Tilson of Connecticut, formerly Republican leader of the House and Willis Hawley, of Oregon, his tax and tariff expert. Tilson resigned and Hawley went down to defeat in the primaries.

Just whom he will select to "carry on" in the places of those departed ones, only time will tell. He still will have a number to choose from. Fred Britten, of Illinois, is a good fighter. He can depend on Ike Bacharach, of New Jersey, James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, one of the most scholarly men in the House, also will be available.

ABOUT TOWN

this means that the legislature will have to delve into new channels to obtain sufficient revenue to make this possible. That there will be more paring down of expenses in the various departments is not to be doubted, but just where the knife will strike is a matter of much speculation and concern to people drawing their money from the state.

In the face of dwindling revenue it is going to be necessary to relieve the strain of finances as much as possible and it will be a relief to the people generally when this has been accomplished.

Members of the Ministerial Association sponsors of the Thanksgiving Day union service are hopeful the largest crowd of years will be on hand to help express thanks for the many blessings which the community has enjoyed the past year.

Fairly large crowds have attended these services in past year but it is hoped they will be present in greater numbers this time.

Pitt county has lots to be thankful for this year, probably more so than some other parts of the nation where crops have not been nearly as bountiful as our own. It is true some of us don't have as much money as we used to have but we are blessed with food and a place to live, and with the opportunity of accomplishing more in future years.

The service should be attended by members of all churches and the public generally because it is the only concrete way the entire section has of expressing its appreciation for what it has received.

The additional consignment of cloth to this community by the American Red Cross will add just that much more to the plan of re-clothing for the poor during the cold winter months.

Much of the cloth received during the fall has been made into garments for school children of the indigent, and this means hundreds of them will be properly clothed during the coldest period of the winter.

The additional shipments to be made in the near future will enable the committee to provide for those who would have gone without proper clothing. Through the distribution of this cloth the Red Cross has carried happiness to many homes, desolate because of lack of employment, and the winter now beginning will find much less suffering among children because of it.

The Red Cross is striving to be a great help in eliminating human suffering, and while its activities apply largely to disasters, the effort to minister to the poor of the various communities shows what can be done when an organization of this kind goes after it.

her, you'd be the last person to stand for." "I'd stand for anything that was good for my child. Since you're not partial to my first remedy, adopt my second; laugh her out of her silliness."

"You think I am taking her too seriously?" "Heaven, yes. They took each other too seriously" could be written across half the divorces. One has to have cared tremendously for a woman to have parted from her."

Clive stirred. "The same applies to a girl who divorces a man, I reckon."

Their eyes met, and glanced aside. Both made as if to speak. At last the older man faced the issue. "You're thinking of Dak. He had an undoubted fascination for Santa. To you she's probably pretended that he hadn't. Steer clear of him. On no pretext whatsoever allow yourself to become involved with him."

Clive lurched to his feet. "I wonder where she is at present."

"Wonder the same about you. I'll bet dollars to doughnuts she's sitting at home scared stiff that you've deserted her."

"I'll put my mind at rest," Clive reached for the telephone. "His father-in-law intercepted him. 'Be an artist. A telephone spoils the drama of reconciliation.'"

At the door he added evocatively. "It also gives a wife time to think up new monkey-shines."

One comfort Clive had derived for his interview with his father-in-law—he had been assured that his lot was average. On his wedding morning he had promised himself that it should be sublime. He was climbing down from this edifying altitude where he had believed that character could be reborn by union with another mortal.

Santa had never shared these exaggerated hopes. It might be that in his anxiety to see her as more perfect than was possible, he had spurned her to give too hectic proofs of affection. To that extent he was blame-worthy.

Arrived before the dark pile in which he dwelt, he raised his eyes and noticed that the windows of his apartment were illumined. A propitious sign. The hour was approaching eleven. Santa must have returned ahead of him. As he crossed the threshold, she would throw her arms about him, completely contrite. A wife in a million had been her father's verdict.

But she wasn't hovering in the hall when he entered. As he removed his coat and hat, he coughed unnecessarily to apprise her. "That you?" she called in a voice that held no hint of tragedy. "Took a run over to see your father," he called back.

"Thoughtful of you. But you're always thoughtful." Compliments when he had expected tears! Women were incalculable. "Excuse me," he heard her murmur.

So she had company! That accounted for her suavety. The next moment her vivacious face popped rabbit-wise from the doorway further down the passage.

Being all for peace, he caught her to him. "So glad you haven't been alone." Then he inquired by dumb signs regarding her visitor. "You precious!" She disentangled herself, weaving her arm through his.

From a deep arm-chair, its back toward them, a thing column of smoke was rising. A blond head thrust itself up, which turned slowly, revealing a fine set of teeth, a clipped mustache and insolently amused blue eyes.

"What does this mean?" Clive challenged. "The same applies to a girl who divorces a man, I reckon."

Clive stirred. "The same applies to a girl who divorces a man, I reckon."

A PATH TO PARADISE

by Coningsby. DAWSON

SYNOPSIS: Two major discoveries have enlivened Clive's day. The position secured for him by Santa turns out to be in the employ of her former husband, Dicky Dak whom Clive dislikes intensely. And the firm of Cross & Cleasby, whose failure threw Clive out of work is again afloat. He tells Santa that he cannot work for his predecessor, and Santa, angry, runs out of the apartment.

Chapter 22

"THE CAT CAME BACK"

Daylight faded. In the park below lamps sprang up. Too late he wondered whether he had adopted the proper tactics. Women were bullies; they profited by men's gentleness. All the justice was on his side. If he'd stormed, he'd have had her feeding from his hand. It was monstrous that she should be punishing him.

He ought to turn the tables on her. How would a coarser man act in his circumstances? He would buzz off with another woman. Dak had practiced that type of revenge and lost her.

A wild surmise struck him. Perhaps he, too, had lost her. Embittered precedents might misguide her. She'd bolted from Dak. Previous to her first marriage her ill-treatment of her suitors had been notorious.

Let it be granted that she had bolted. Whither could she bolt without luggage? Probably to her parents. He could find out by telephoning. But if the breach were to be healed, the wise policy would be to seek her.

The door was opened by Goff, imperturbable as an undertaker, who in days gone by had ejected so many of her admirers. Clive affected nonchalance. "Family at home?"

His father-in-law replied. "That you, Clive? I'm at dinner. Stack your coat and hat. He found Mr. Dawn at his last course, peeling an apple.

"Presume you've dined. My wife's away. I'm alone. Brought Santa with you?" Clive laughed with all the gusto of a dying humorist.

"Santa's performed the disappearing act. I rushed over hoping to find her."

Mr. Dawn continued placidly with his peeling. "There used to be a song. I recall only one line: 'The cat came back.' Put out a saucer of milk and there you'll find pretty pussy some fine morning, purring on your doorstep."

Clive was shocked by this unnatural parent. "But Guardie, you ought to knock me down. You ought to take her side."

"My dear chap, I'm married to her mother. To take her side would seem too much like siding against myself. How it brings back old days to hear you call me Guardie! Since you've improved our relationship, you've dropped the title. I've often wondered what you thought of me when we shared this house—my wife in Italy, pretending she was educated in Santa."

"I thought you were great, Guardie."

"Ah, but you had other thoughts. You're in the same box now. One has to appear meek if he intends to stay married. That passage dealing with charity describes the ideal husband: 'Is kind; vaunteth not, is not puffed up; believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.'"

Seated in deep chairs, toasting their toes before a blazing fire in the library, Mr. Dawn grew expansive.

"As a battered veteran to a young recruit, who's conducting this bombing-raid?"

"Santa. She's ruining me—for my own good, so she tells me."

Mr. Dawn puffed at his cigar luxuriously. "The argument sounds familiar. I shall relieve my youth in listening to you. Some woman was bound to ruin you—so why not your wife?"

As Clive finished his story with the latest threat of philanthropy, his father-in-law laughed uproariously. "What's so amusing, Guardie?"

"You're the wife in a million." "I'm aware of that. Unfortunately so is Dak."

"But all her mistakes have been prompted by the excessive love for you."

"Which makes them doubly annoying, Guardie. Delicacy prevents me from correcting them."

Mr. Dawn rose and straddled the fireplace. "Now you're talking. Delicacy is the curse of married life. We modern husbands are maudlin sentimentalists; we spare the rod and spoil the wife. A good beating, administered prayerfully, sets the blood circulating. It helps a woman to see herself in relation to the universe. Tones up her system. I often wish I'd been sufficiently noble to beat mine."

He tapped Clive's knee. "A little hair-pulling would restore the balance. You and Santa are suffering from repressions. She probably requires stimulating—finds your politeness nauseating. Your retort is obvious: 'Physician heal thyself.' It's too late for me to start. Besides, your mother-in-law bruises readily."

"What rot you talk, Guardie! I came for advice. I haven't the least idea how Santa bruises, but I do know that if I were rough with

Chesterfields are Milder

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

Poor George Washington! - After nine months of continual bombardment, we surmise with regret that the mere mention of our country's foundation gives rise to a feeling of rebellion.

Dozing in the sun is the little dwarf pine. An old, wrinkled sailor-man home from the sea—Gnarled and twisted and withered and worn.

Beaten by gale and by sand and by spray. Basking in the molten, golden sunlight.

The young morning breeze has come over the sea. Whispering of yellow lands far to the West.

And spiced with the tinklings of pagoda bells. Softly and gently she ruffles his leaves. Perfuming every ancient scraggly leaf.

Found in a Waste Basket - 1. (In a tiny, angular hand): Who stuck that darn tack in my seat? 2. (In a rapid style): Not I. 3. (In a sprawling scrawl): Me neither.

2. Saw the pretty sure X— is guilty—Did she turn red? 'Yknow when Jim was sick he told Miss H— he saw him playing ball.

3. I think you have a girl in Rocky Mountain's worried; she asked me if I knew Elizabeth Parker.

Yeh, I know, she's been asking me about her. So has X— Gee, they're dumb!

Furthermore, I caught her in the act of asking George about her. She said she wanted to find out whether 'twas a fake or not.

What does she mean? that I don't know her? She doesn't know! Nor does she know E. Parker nor anyone concerned. Personally, I think it's but the rattle of her asinine, perverted, minute brain.

I think you're right. I never heard of the blamed girl. Ha! Ha!

No Time to Finish It

He began it some six months ago, to occupy his time while picture parts were slow in coming. Friends contributed old bricks, he got other wrecked buildings, and other cast-off materials challenged his ingenuity to be included. It isn't quite finished yet, and—testimonial to his sudden come-back in film favor—doesn't know when he'll have time to do it.

The tin roof, by the way, was formerly a 24-sheet billboard for a real estate subdivision. "No, I haven't any qualms of conscience about it," he commented. "You see, the company had folded anyway."

Southern California's outdoor life can be over-rated. Helen Vinson learned. In New York Helen rode bareback regularly during her theatrical career, but in Hollywood she didn't had time. And until recently when one scene called for her to ride a horse in "Lawyer Man," she didn't get to ride even at work.

Hard as it is to believe, William Haines broke from type in films—once upon a time. He started, you may remember, in the "haughty boy" role made famous by Charles Ray, and fans didn't hesitate to accuse him of imitation.

Just for a change, Haines began wisecracking in "Slide, Kelly, Slide"—and ever since has been trying, in vain, to get out of the flippant mood.

ZEPPELIN TERMINAL IN RIO

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, hopes to make Rio de Janeiro the terminus of regular dirigible service between Germany and South America, he announced here.

Negotiations for formation of a subsidiary company to build hangars and a mooring mast are under way.

Pernambuco, a thousand miles north of Rio, is the present terminus for most voyages of the Graf Zeppelin.

Eckener prefers Rio because it offers direct airplane transportation to Buenos Aires, and communication with Chile and Peru by way of Bolivia.

ABOUT TOWN

The community relief drive came to an end today and while it was not determined how much money the canvassers raised, hope was expressed that it would be sufficient to enable the community to pass through the winter without so much suffering among the indigent population.

Although the situation was serious here last year, it has been stated that the condition is more severe this winter. Even with the best the government can do for us, the relief committee is going to have a difficult time providing for the poor, and people who have never before given to this cause are urged to get busy and do so at once.

The government will base its appropriations to the community on the amount of relief work we do ourselves, hence the necessity of as complete response as possible.

President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt went to Washington today to confer with President Hoover on the controversial foreign debt situation and it was expected the conference would definitely settle whether or not this country will continue to let the European countries go without paying us.

There is a general disposition on the part of President Hoover to deny the plea for further leniency and should Roosevelt concur it is at once evident that the government will demand that the regular payments December 15 be made.

While Europe like ourselves is suffering from lack of money, we have been forced to pay our debts to other nations, and Europe should not expect to be treated otherwise. They have already enjoyed a holiday of one year and if they were not able to straighten house in that time it is likely another year of grace would do them little good.

The budget committee of the General Assembly was due to meet today to consider the state budget to be submitted at the next meeting of the legislature.

Governor-elect J. C. B. Ehringhaus has signified his intention to meet with the committee to familiarize himself with the needs of the various departments of government. It is a good plan and should result in a closer relationship between the Elysabeth City man and members of the committee.

The governor-elect has promised the people to lift the remainder of the land tax from the shoulders of the land owners this time and this means that the legislature will have to delve into new channels to obtain sufficient revenue to make this possible. That there will be more paring down of expenses in the various departments is not to be doubted, but just where the knife will strike is a matter of much speculation and concern to people drawing their money from the state.

In the face of dwindling revenue it is going to be necessary to relieve the strain of finances as much as possible and it will be a relief to the people generally when this has been accomplished.

Members of the Ministerial Association, sponsors of the Thanksgiving Day union service are hopeful the largest crowd of years will be on hand to help express thanks for the many blessings which the community has enjoyed the past year.

Fairly large crowds have attended these services in past year but it is hoped they will be present in greater numbers this time.

Pitt county has lots to be thankful for this year, probably more so than some other parts of the nation, where crops have not been nearly as bountiful as our own. It is true some of us don't have as much money as we used to have but we are blessed with food and a place to live and with the opportunity of accomplishing more in future years.

The service should be attended by members of all churches and the public generally because it is the only concrete way the entire section has of expressing its appreciation for what it has received.

The additional consignment of cloth to this community by the American Red Cross will add just that much more to the plan of relief workers to provide food and clothing for the poor during the cold winter months.

Much of the cloth received during the fall has been made into garments for school children of the indigent, and this means hundreds of them will be properly clothed during the coldest period of the winter.

The additional shipments to be made in the near future will enable the committee to provide for those who would have gone without proper clothing. Through the distribution of this cloth the Red Cross has carried happiness to many homes desolate because of lack of employment, and the winter now beginning will find much less suffering among children because of it.

The Red Cross is striving to be a great help in eliminating human suffering, and while its activities apply largely to disasters, the effort to minister to the poor of the various communities shows what can be done when an organization of this kind goes after it.

her, you'd be the last person to stand for it."

"I'd stand for anything that was good for my child. Since you're not partial to my first remedy, adopt my second; laugh her out of her silliness."

"You think I am taking her too seriously?"

"Heaven, yes. They took each other too seriously' could be written across half the divorces. One has to have cared tremendously for a woman to have parted from her."

Clive stirred.

"The same applies to a girl who divorces a man, I reckon."

Their eyes met, and glanced aside. Both made as if to speak. At last the older man faced the issue.

"You're thinking of Dak. He had an undoubted fascination for Santa. To you she's probably pretended that he hadn't. Steer clear of him. On no pretext whatsoever allow yourself to become involved with him."

Clive lurched to his feet.

"I wonder where she is at present."

"Wonder the same about you. I'll bet dollars to doughnuts she's sitting at home scared stiff that you've deserted her."

"I'll put my mind at rest." Clive reached for the telephone.

His father-in-law intercepted him.

"Be an artist. A telephone spoils the drama of reconciliation."

At the door he added cynically, "It also gives a wife time to think up new monkey-shines."

One comfort Clive had derived for his interview with his father-in-law—he had been assured that his lot was average. On his wedding morning he had promised himself that it should be sublime. He was climbing down from that eddying altitude where he had believed that character could be reborn by union with another mortal.

Santa had never shared these exaggerated hopes. It might be that in his anxiety to see her as more perfect than was possible, he had spurred her to give too hectic proofs of affection. To that extent he was blame-worthy.

Arrived before the dark pit in which he dwelt, he raised his eyes and noticed that the windows of his apartment were illuminated. A propitious sign. The hour was approaching eleven. Santa must have returned ahead of him. As he crossed the threshold, she would throw her arms about him, completely contrite. A wife in a million had been her father's verdict.

But she wasn't hovering in the hall when he entered. As he removed his coat and hat, he coughed unnecessarily to apprise her.

"That you?" she called in a voice that held no hint of tragedy.

"Took a run over to see your father," he called back.

"Thoughtful of you. But you're always thoughtful."

Compliments when he had expected tears! Women were incalculable.

"Excuse me," he heard her murmur.

So she had company! That accounted for her suavity. The next moment her vivacious face popped rabbit-wise from the doorway further down the passage.

A PATH TO PARADISE

by Coningby DAWSON

SYNOPSIS: Two major discoveries have enlivened Clive's day. The position secured for him by Santa turns out to be in the employ of her former husband, Dicky Dak whom Clive dislikes intensely. And the firm of Cross & Cleasby, whose failure threw Clive out of work is again afloat. He tells Santa that he cannot work for his predecessor, and Santa, angry, runs out of the apartment.

Chapter 32

"THE CAT CAME BACK"

Daylight faded. In the park below lamps sprang up. Too late he wondered whether he had adopted the proper tactics. Women were bullies; they profited by men's gentleness. All the justice was on his side. If he'd stormed, he'd have had her feeding from his hand. It was monstrous that she should be punishing him.

He ought to turn the tables on her. How would a coarser man act in his circumstances? He would buzz off with another woman. Dak had practiced that type of revenge and lost her.

A wild surmise struck him. Perhaps he, too, had lost her. Embittered precedents might misguide her. She'd bolted from Dak. Previous to her first marriage her ill-treatment of her suitors had been notorious.

Let it be granted that she had bolted. Whither could she bolt without luggage? Probably to her parents. He could find out by telephoning. But if the breach were to be healed, the wise policy would be to seek her.

The door was opened by Goff, imperturbable as an undertaker, who in days gone by had ejected so many of her admirers.

Clive affected nonchalance.

"Family at home?"

His father-in-law replied.

"That you, Clive? I'm at dinner. Stack your coat and hat."

He found Mr. Dawn at his last recourse, peeling an apple.

"Presume you've dined. My wife's away. I'm alone. Brought Santa with you?"

Clive laughed with all the gusto of a dying humorist.

"Santa's performed the disappearing act. I rushed over hoping to find her."

Mr. Dawn continued placidly with his peeling.

"There used to be a song. I recall only one line. 'The cat came back.' Put out a saucer of milk and there you'll find pretty pussy some fine morning, purring on your doorstep."

Clive was shocked by this unnatural parent.

"But Guardie, you ought to knock me down. You ought to take her side."

"My dear chap, I'm married to her mother. To take her side would seem too much like siding against myself. How it brings back old days to hear you call me Guardie! Since you've improved our relationship, you've dropped the title. I've often wondered what you thought of me when we shared this house—my wife in Italy, pretending she was educated in Santa."

"I thought you were great, Guardie."

"Ah, but you had other thoughts. You're in the same box now. One has to appear meek if he intends to stay married. That passage dealing with charity describes the ideal husband: 'Is kind; vaunteth not, is not puffed up; believeth all things, hopeth in all things, endureth all things.'"

Seated in deep chairs, toasting their toes before a blazing fire in the library, Mr. Dawn grew expansive.

"As a battered veteran to a young recruit, who's conducting this bombing-raid?"

"Santa. She's ruining me—for my own good, so she tells me."

Mr. Dawn puffed at his cigar luxuriously.

"The argument sounds familiar. I shall relieve my youth in listening to you. Some woman was bound to ruin you—so why not your wife?"

As Clive finished his story with the latest threat of philanthropy, his father-in-law laughed uproariously.

"What's so amusing, Guardie?"

"You've the wife in a million."

"I'm aware of that. Unfortunately so is Dak."

"But all her mistakes have been prompted by the excessive love for you."

"Which makes them doubly annoying, Guardie. Delicacy prevents me from correcting them."

Mr. Dawn rose and straddled the fireplace.

"Now you're talking. Delicacy is the curse of married life. We modern husbands are maudlin sentimentalists; we spare the rod and spoil the wife. A good beating, administered prayerfully, sets the blood circulating. It helps a woman to see herself in relation to the universe. Tones up her system. I often wish I'd been sufficiently noble to beat mine."

He tapped Clive's knee.

"A little hair-pulling would restore the balance. You and Santa are suffering from repressions. She probably requires stimulating—finds your politeness nauseating. Your retort is obvious: 'Physician heal thyself.' It's too late for me to start. Besides, your mother-in-law bruises readily."

"What rot you talk, Guardie! I came for advice. I haven't the least idea how Santa bruises, but I do know that if I were rough with Being all for peace, he caught her to him.

"So glad you haven't been alone," Then he inquired by dumb signs regarding her visitor.

"You precious!" She disentangled herself, weaving her arm through his.

From a deep arm-chair, its back toward them, a thing column of smoke was rising. A blond head thrust itself up, which turned slowly, revealing a fine set of teeth, a clipped mustache and insolently amused blue eyes.

"What does this mean?" Clive challenged.

PEAT DIGGING PROFITABLE TWO WAYS IN WISCONSIN

Madison, Wis., Nov. 22.—(AP)—A new industry for Dane County is working as a mutually beneficial situation for farmers hereabouts and the new industry's workers.

It is peat digging, in which hundreds of persons have become engaged in the last few months.

The diggers co-operate with the farmers by digging drainage ditches when they remove the fuel—thus the farmers get their marshy land converted into profitable pasture land and the diggers get fuel for the winter.

Chesterfields are Milder

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

Expression of Thanks.

We wish to thank our many friends far and near, who have been so kind and faithful to us during the sickness and death of my dear wife, and our sweet mother. We want to thank each and every one who lent a helping hand and they will always be remembered by J. L. Briley and Children.

JITNEY PLAYERS AT COLLEGE THIS EVENING

The Jitney Players will present "Arms and the Man" this evening at 8:30 o'clock at East Carolina Teachers College.

This company travels as a caravan, bringing their stage equipment and costumes along with them in cars, or what were not so long ago called "jitneys."

Their last engagement was at Winthrop College, in Rock Hill, S. C. They head north from here and are at the end of their fall season. Their work-shop is at Madison, Conn. There this group of actors and actresses and other artists meet, select the plays they will present in their repertoire, arrange the cast, make their stage properties, design and have made their costumes, rehearse, and have all ready before they start out on their motor journeys.

Allice Cheney and the group she has gathered around her have as their mission taking the best of the theatre out of the cities and these buildings directly to the intelligent public. Most of their engagements are in the college centers and places where the people of culture assemble.

Every member of the company is an actor or actress of ability who has had successful experience on Broadway and in other big cities and in plays that have had long and successful runs.

The play, "Arms and the Man," has always been one of the most popular of all of George Bernard Shaw's plays, and recently there has been quite a revival of interest in it. Few here have seen the play, and those who have seen it will doubtless like to see it over again because of the rich satire and the splendid cast.

CHILD CRITICALLY HURT IN ACCIDENT

Kinston, Nov. 22.—William Dail of Duplin county, was under $1,000 bond today pending outcome of injuries suffered by Herbert Davis, 10, when he was struck by Dail's automobile on a road near here late Sunday.

The boy is in a hospital with internal and other injuries, his condition critical.

Persons who gathered at the scene threatened to shoot him. Dail told authorities he left hurriedly for Duplin county, secured a guard of two officers and returned to Lenoir county to surrender. Dail said the boy walked in front of his car.

NEW YORK MEN BUY FACTORY AT NEWTON

Newton, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Announcement was made here today that a group of New York business men have bought the Warlick Manufacturing Company, and will begin operations soon after reorganization.

The plant will be known as the Mid-State Cloth Mills with John Cilley of Newton, president.

Cilley has been receiver for the company since it went into voluntary receivership some time ago. The Warlick Manufacturing Co. made rayon.

TALLEST MONUMENT FAVORED FOR SIMMONS

New Bern, Nov. 22.—The tallest monument in North Carolina should be erected to former Senator F. M. Simmons, of New Bern. Dr. Julian S. Miller, of Charlotte, director of public relations for emergency relief work in the State, told the local Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs in an address here. The visitor declared "Senator Simmons is the patron saint of Democracy, from whom I got all my conception of the principles of Democracy."

Poor George Washington!
After nine months of continual bombardment, we surmise with regret that the mere mention of the name of a man so essential to our country's foundation gives rise to a feeling of rebellion. And we secretly hope that the congressman who started this "Bunkum" was not re-elected to Congress, if he be the cause.

There is such a thing as "too much" even of a man as great as Washington, and we assert that this gigantic exhibition of meaningless balldom has done nothing to commemorate the high type of man that, Washington was. This blaring pageantry, overdone until we silently scream our protests, would better be superseded by a sane realization and appreciation of the man.

We advise the reading of a good biography, one emphasizing the part he played in the crucial period of our nation, and then refusing to attend any more Bicentennial celebrations where his picture adorns the cigarette tray.

Drowsing
Dozing in the sun is the little dwarf pine.
An old, wrinkled sailor-man home from the sea—
Gnarled and twisted and withered and worn.
Beaten by gale and by sand and by spray.
Basking in the molten, golden sunlight.

The young morning breeze has come over the sea.
Whispering of yellow lands far to the West.
And spiced with the tinklings of pagoda bells.
Softly and gently she ruffles his leaves.
Perfuming every ancient, scraggly leaf.

Student Government Plans.
Last Monday Mr. Rose called a student assembly at which the idea of student government was presented by various officers of the classes. Carl Joyner, Naomi Gaskins, Virginia Casey, Willie Warren and Harding Sugg. At this meeting it was brought out that the student body would assume gradual responsibility, culminating in a student government later on in the year. A petition was ready asking for better traffic regulations in the halls and, if necessary, four minutes between classes. The student body adopted this petition and the matter was referred to a committee of senior class officers.

It has been the policy of Mr. Rose for the last two years to shift more and more responsibility to the students with the idea of eventually establishing a student government.

At the same assembly Carl Joyner, president of the senior class, read a set of resolutions praising the spirit of cooperation exhibited by the student body in the Armistice Day march, and condemning the action of a few who skipped after pledging to march.

High School Citizens Absent.
Students and teachers of the Greenville high school regret the absence of the school secretary, Mrs. Brits Ruffin (Eleanor Tyson) who for two weeks has been confined to her home because of illness. During her absence Mrs. A. W. Harris, former secretary to Mr. Rose, has been supplying. The entire school wish for Mrs. Ruffin a speedy recovery.

A member of the senior class, and former president, Jim Slay, has also been absent from school for two weeks. Slay was operated on for appendicitis about ten days ago and remained at the local hospital for a week. He is now at his home on Eighth street recuperating nicely.

Gridiron Greatly Improved.
During the last several weeks the Greenville high school football field has been greatly transformed. Almost miraculously from an ordinary field to a regular stadium.

Bleachers have been erected for the convenience of the spectators; the field has been enclosed with a heavy wire fence; the playing field has been shifted a few yards eastward and remarked; and yard signs have been painted and placed at the five yard lines. George Willard was responsible for the painting of the yard signs.

A field house is now being built, and when completed Greenville high will have one of the best athletic fields in Eastern North Carolina.

The labor for this construction has been furnished by the government, which is aiding the unemployed of Greenville. The building materials have come from the old model school, which is now being torn down.

Seeing Through My Windshield

By ETHEL NICE, N. D. A. Achievement Day.

A hundred and fifty women from all sections of the county assembled last Tuesday for their annual achievement program. Reports by project chairmen showed considerable progress made by clubs this year.

Certificates of Merit.
Certificates of merit were presented to those who had fulfilled all requirements in the two year food course; the conclusion of the achievement program. The following club members received certificates: Mrs. P. H. Pitman, Mrs. Hassell Mayo, Mrs. R. B. Tyler, Mrs. C. P. Wildman, Falkland; Mrs. Jerome McGlohon, Ayden; Mrs. J. D. McArthur and Mrs. David Smith, Hopewell; and Miss Annie Carroll, Hollywood. These certificates are presented by the State Extension Department and are signed by Mrs. Jane S. McKinnon, state leader of Home Demonstration, Miss Mary E. Thomas, state nutritional specialist; and Miss Ethel Nice, home demonstration agent.

Window Displays.

The following window displays were prepared and shown in store windows during last week: "The Fall and Winter Food Supply," which was in the R. E. Harris window; "Handicraft," in the Reid Perkins window; "Flowers" in the window at White's and "Breads," "Grape Products," "A Canning Budget," "Rugs," "Chairs" and "Singing and Play" posters at the Electric store room on Evans street. Fifty or sixty women helped to prepare these exhibits.

4-H Program.

Good club programs were given last week both by the Stokes and the Fountain 4-H girls.

Doris Nichols Winner.

Miss Doris Nichols, president of the Pitt County 4-H Girls' Council, won one of four gold medals presented last week to North Carolina 4-H club girls. Miss Nichols won this distinction on her 4-H club record for the past several years.

Tree Planting.

The Home Demonstration women voted at their annual meeting to observe December 1-15 as tree planting days. During this time they will replant trees on the highways. The 4-H girls want to help with this program.

Beaufort County Program.

Fifteen Pitt county boys and girls participated in a program which was presented before the Beaufort County Federation last week. This program included a playlet given by the senior Bel Air 4-H Club, a club report given by Miss Doris Nichols, and community singing conducted by Misses Florence Overton and Sarah Brown Braxton.

PROFESSOR MOLITORE HIGHLY COMMENDED

Greensboro, Nov. 22.—In the Music News of Chicago, Ill., November 11, 1932, there appears an article entitled "Molitore Triumphs in New York." The article says, in part:

"Edward Molitore was chosen by Fortune Gallo to open the New York season of grand opera presented by the San Carlo Opera Company. Mr. Molitore opened as Pinkerton in Puccini's 'Madame Butterfly' and achieved outstanding success."

Mr. Molitore, who is professor of voice in Greensboro College, last spring had outstanding success as soloist with the Chicago North Shore Music Festival with such artists as Gota Ljunberg, John Charles Thomas, Jeannette Vreeland, Beniamino Gigli, and Percy Grainger. Last summer he completed his third consecutive season as leading tenor with the Cincinnati Zoo Summer Opera.

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 22.—There are some expensive faces on the cutting room floor these days, perhaps the natural outcome of the desire to put "name players" even in minor roles in pictures. Skeets Gallagher played a comedy bit in "The Conquerors" and is listed in the cast—or was—but no Skeets appears.

If you have good eyes and are quick, you may catch a glimpse of him in a line of soldiers on parade—his the chubby-checked fellow next to Richard Dix, the star.

No Time to Finish It
He began it some six months ago, to occupy his time while picture parts were slow in coming. Friends contributed old bricks, he got others from wrecked buildings, and other cast-off materials challenged his ingenuity to be included. It isn't quite finished yet, and—testimonial to his sudden come-back in film favor—he doesn't know when he'll have time to do it.

The tin roof, by the way, was formerly a 24-foot billboard for a real estate subdivision.

"No, I haven't any qualms of conscience about it," he commented. "You see, the company had folded anyway."

That Type Boy

Hard as it is to believe, William Haines broke from type in films—once upon a time. He started, you may remember, in the "haughty boy" role made famous by Charles Ray, and fans didn't hesitate to accuse him of imitation.

Just for a change, Haines began wisecracking in "Slide, Kelly, Slide" and ever since has been trying, in vain, to get out of the flippant mood.

OLD GRADS' ARE DUBIOUS ON REMAINING COLLEGE

Stillwater, Okla., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Oklahoma A. & M. undergraduates want to change their alma mater's name, but the "old grads" aren't so sure.

After students had approached State Board of Agriculture members with a proposal to make it "Oklahoma State College," the former students' association passed a resolution urging that no further agitation be attempted until they had polled their members.

ZEPPELIN TERMINAL IN RIO PLANNED BY DR. ECKNER

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckner, commander of the Graf Zeppelin, hopes to make Rio de Janeiro the terminus of regular dirigible service between Germany and South America, he announced here.

Negotiations for formation of a subsidiary company to build hangars and a mooring mast are under way.

Pernambuco, a thousand miles north of Rio, is the present terminus for most voyages of the Graf, but Eckner prefers Rio because it offers direct airplane transportation to Buenos Aires, and communication with Chile and Peru by way of Bolivia.

HIGH TO PLAY MOREHEAD ON THANKSGIVING

Greenville high school's football team will play its last game of the season on Thanksgiving Day when they meet Morehead City's strong outfit. The game will start at 2:30 p. m. and will be played at the Third street stadium.

This game will bring to a close the most successful season that the local highs have enjoyed for the past several years. The locals have lost only two games of the nine they have played and have been scored on in only two games. Five members of the team will sing their swan song on that day: Taylor, Rivers, Dill, Moseley and Windham will participate in their last football game for Greenville high.

Morehead City has an enviable record for the season losing only to Wilmington and Ayden. They will present a fast heavy outfit and the game should be one of the closest and hardest fought seen on a local field this year.

DUKE FROSH WILL MEET TAR BABIES

Durham Nov. 22.—The Duke freshman football team will end their season when they meet the Carolina Tar Babies in the Duke stadium Thursday afternoon as a Thanksgiving engagement.

The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock.

The game will duplicate the game of their bigger brothers in that they will also be playing for a state championship, just as the two varieties of Duke and Carolina teams played for last Saturday.

This year's Imp team has come along in great style. The Duke freshmen have wins over N. C. State, Wake Forest 13-7; Oak Ridge 18-13; and Davidson 13-6. The Tar Heels juniors also have a good season behind them, and therefore a great battle is anticipated.

Some promising material has been found on the Duke frosh team. Especially has the backfield shown up well, the most noticeable of which are Ward, Alexander, Mizell and Russell. The consistency of Dempsey, Quinn, Saleeby and Durner has been a feature in the line this season.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady unchanged to two lower on disappointing Liverpool cables and December liquidation.

There appeared to be better trade demand on the opening than previously this week. Offerings were light with little Southern selling and the market soon turned steadier.

December advanced from 6.04 to 6.08, and May from 6.21 to 6.31, with list showing gains of three to four points at the end of the first half hour.

The market continued steady later in the morning. December sold up to 6.11 and May to 6.37, and prices at midday were about four to six points higher.

Stock Market

New York, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The stockmarket shot higher in one of the duller sessions of the year today.

It was the fifth consecutive session of the inconsequential price changes and Wall Street began to wonder how long the market could drift without breaking away from the extremely narrow trading range.

The list may have been bolstered a little today by improvement in wheat, but gains were limited to fractions.

Issues making gains of fractions were American Tobacco, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Consolidated Gas, International Harvester, U. S. and Steel Preferred, U. S. Steel Common was a shade higher. Seaboard Oil was again lost in pool activity.

Washington, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Poland today joined the nations seeking notice they want reconsideration of the debt question.

The Polish ambassador called on Secretary Stimson and informed him that his country would send a note asking for extension of the moratorium. Poland is due to pay $3,308,988 December 15.

Charity Football Game

Raleigh, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The Raleigh Times said a charity football game between State and Wake Forest, who battled to a scoreless tie during State Fair week will be played here December 3 on Riddick Field.

The proposal for a charity game between the Deacons and Wolfpack who have enjoyed their best season in years, has received endorsement of Dr. Thurmon Kitchin, president of Wake Forest, and Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of State, as well as that of Governor Gardner, the paper said.

Honor Governor Gardner

Raleigh, Nov. 22.—(AP)—The newspaper fraternity of North Carolina will honor Governor and Mrs. O. Max Gardner at a live-at-home dinner to be served in the dining hall of N. C. State College Tuesday, Dec. 13. John Parks, president of the State Press Association, announced today.

Raleigh newspapermen and women will be hosts to more than 200 visiting scribes expected. President-elect Roosevelt and his wife will be invited to attend the dinner which will be held before conclusion of the three years of operation of Govern-

nor Gardner's live-at-home program in this state

Governor-elect and Mrs. Ehringhaus and A. W. Graham and wife will also be invited.

Agricultural South

Winston-Salem, Nov. 22.—(AP)—An obsession that the South will not lose its place in the world cotton picture, expression of a belief that liquor is coming back, and a word of praise for Senator E. B. Smith, of South Carolina, were given before the National Grange here today.

L. Cully A. Cobb, of Atlanta, Ga., associate editor of The Progressive Farmer, told the Grange that the South will not lose its place in the world cotton picture and based his assertion on the latest summary of conditions in other countries. He said the South had a natural climatic condition that set it apart as a most superior cotton-producing area in the world.

Bob Will Work for Repeal

Raleigh, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Senator-elect Robert R. Reynolds, in an interview today, said he would not only vote for but would work for immediate modification of the Volstead act and repeal of the 18th amendment.

The Asheville man, who will take his place in the Senate in December, also said he was opposed to any further extension of the war debts payments. The senator-elect did not express himself with regard to the sales tax, expected to come before Congress as a budget-balancing proposal.

Parole Former Sheriff

Raleigh, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Acting on a petition signed by 2,600 citizens of Edgecombe county, Governor Gardner today paroled John B. Lancaster, former sheriff of Edgecombe county, who was sentenced in February 1930 to serve 2 to 5 years for embezzlement.

He was charged with embezzling $11,500 in public funds.

A NEW FORMULA FOR CONTRACT SETS

By Tom O'Neil

Leslie E. Rowell, of Berkeley, California, has a method of computing the total penalty for doubled not vulnerable undertricks at contract which he thinks is easier than one now in wide use.

He starts with the figure one and keeps adding successive digits until he reaches the number of tricks set, then repeats the last figure, multiplying the total by 50. For instance, down five:

One plus two plus three plus four plus five plus five (repeated) equals 20, which multiplied by 50 equals 1,000, the penalty to rive down doubled not vulnerable.

Possibly some players will find that method easier than beginning with two and stopping with a figure one higher than the number of tricks set, as for a set of five: Two plus three plus four plus five plus six; multiplied by 50 equals 1,000.

Instead of multiplying the total by 50 in either case one can divide by two and add one cipher or two ciphers as the case may be.

Nagging Pains are Warning Signals

TEMPORARY pain relief remedies may save you much suffering at the moment, but putting a mask over a warning signal does not clear up the condition it was telling you to avoid.

When periodic pains, due to a weak, run-down condition, distress you, treatment for the cause of the trouble should be started without delay. Take Cardui to build up against the nagging symptoms of ordinary womanly ailments. So many women praise CARDUI, it must be good to have the widespread use that it has today. Sold at drug stores. SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

"In my twenty-seven years of officiating," remarking Dr. Eddie O'Brien, the referee, "I never had a tougher or more complicated game to handle than the Pittsburgh-Pennsylvania contest."

We were on the way back from Philadelphia, an hour after this sensational tussle, and the doctor still had his rule book tightly clutched in one hand, recirculating with the other and reading aloud from certain technical passages events he had just handled.

Some Tricky Ones

"Yes, sir," he went on, emphatically, "I don't think we missed anything in this book this afternoon."

"Did you wonder what was going to happen on that appertaining to the on when Penn partially blocked that kick, Pitt recovered and then Penn was given the ball? Well, the rules state: 'After the ball is kicked across the line of scrimmage (even if it be partially blocked), no player of the kicker's team may touch or recover it until it touches an opponent.'

"Get it? All right. Did you also wonder why we called back that passing play in which a Penn tackle grabbed the ball out of the air for a long run after it had bounced off several other parts of hands? Listen again to the rule: 'Forward pass... touching or being touched by second (originally eligible) player of passer's team—Loss of a down, the ball to be put in play at spot of preceding down. This penalty MAY NOT be declined.'

"The pass had been touched by TWO Pennsylvanian eligibles before it was finally grabbed by a third player in the melee. It was a tricky development. There was no doubt what happened, but now many of the 70,000 in the stands, who groaned when we called the ball back, knew what was going on and why?"

Ousta Pitt Captain

Unless Jack Sutherland is saving it to baffle some of Pittsburgh's late-season opposition, including Stanford, the passing combination of Warren Heller and Paul Reider, Panther captain, seems to have been broken up.

It was one of the sensations of the 1931 season, but Mike Sebastian, a harder running and blocking back than Reider, replace dthe Panther captain early in the campaign, against Army, and successfully held the job at right halfback.

Sebastian is one of those rare "pinch-runners" who can slash off the yardage when it is most needed. Some of the Pitt adherents think that if Mike had been given the ball in that celebrated goal-line drive of the Panthers against Ohio State in the last minute of play, the scoreless deadlock would have been broken.

Heller appears faster than Sebastian and is, of course, a superior passer, but no more elusive after being shaken past the first line trenches.

fore through her rigging and waves roared ahead over the vessel.

Three hundred yards of swelling sea lay between the ship and shore, but one of the crew, Joano Domingos Mearne, dared to risk his life in carrying a line ashore. He was unable to make it, for the report received at the Norfolk coast guard headquarters said he had been left aboard and drowned.

It is assumed that when he was exhausted by his battle with the waves that he was drawn aboard the schooner.

services in Fayetteville Mr. Casler gave an address to the Rotary Club last night and requested the president of the club to appoint a committee of eight or ten Rotarians to work in the campaign next week.

The date set for the campaign is Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 29, 30 and December 1, and arrangements were made for a big meeting to be held next Monday night at 8 o'clock at campaign headquarters at 312 Evans street. In this meeting Mr. Smith would like all of his vice-chairmen of the campaign, lieutenant women's and men's committees to meet him without fail.

Brigadier Casler wishes to express his sincere appreciation of the splendid cooperation he has received among his many friends in Greenville, and he feels sure that Eusebi and Mrs. Joseph Willett, the commanding officers, will put forth every effort to render every service among the less fortunate families of the city.

DEATH TRAIL OF KIN'S GOLD DARED BY THIRD BROTHER

Townsville, Queensland, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Charles Schultz is leading an expedition from here in a search for gold which his two brothers found—one after the other—only to die before they could bring back the treasure.

Albert Schultz discovered a rich gold deposit near the South Australian border in 1925. On his way home he died after entrusting his story to a half-caste who brought the news to William Schultz.

William went to the spot, which is reported to be near Tanami, in Central Australia. He, too, found the gold—but was killed by a fall from his horse.

Now Charles hopes to secure the wealth. The aborigines in that region are stated to be unfriendly, so the expedition will travel in armored trucks.
