Cashier Slays His Wife, Son And Himself

Tragedy Follows Finding Shortage

Cashier of Lorillard Tobacco Co., at Elizabeth, N. J., Leaves Note Describing His Embezzlement Of $147,750.

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Short $147,750 in his accounts as cashier of the Lorillard Tobacco Company, Archibald McCullom shot his wife and small son to death here today and then took his own life.

The apparent motive for the tragedy was revealed after County Physician Dr. C. W. Brown, who examined the bodies, said there was no doubt that the 48-year-old cashier had slain his wife, Elizabeth, 42, and son, William, 8.

McCullom, who had worked in the New York office of the tobacco company for thirty years, left a sealed envelope to Sidney Kelly, auditor of the firm.

Communicating with Lorillard officials, police obtained permission to open the note. It revealed the shortage in McCullom's accounts.

DAMES BOILING WATER INTO HUSBAND'S FACE

Spencer, Nov. 29.—Because she objected, it is said, to relations between her husband and another woman living in their home in East Spencer, Mrs. M. B. Misenheimer dashed a kettle of boiling water in the face of her husband, "Red" Misenheimer, while he slept a few nights ago. The husband has since been in a precarious condition in a Salisbury hospital, where it was feared he had lost both eyes, and the wife resides in the Rowan County jail, apparently unrepentant for her act.

Court action will await the recovery of Mr. Misenheimer, who is a well-known car inspector for the Southern Railway. While still in a serious condition, it is thought he will recover. Several grown children are said to have been at the home at the time the hot water was used, but were unable to prevent the occurrence.

The deceased is survived by six children: Raymond, Luby, Landrum, Romulus and Misses Gay and Ceale Johnson.

Pall bearers were: P. R. Taylor, W. W. Salisbury, W. T. White, S. A. Jenkins, B. G. Taylor and John Burgess.

ROTES HAVE A NIGHT OF FUN

Weekly Session of the Club Turned Over to Fun - Making Here Last Night.

Family month which has been observed by the Rotary Club during the past month came to a close with the regular weekly meeting last night with several members of the families of the clubmen in attendance.

The program last night was confined largely to fun and frivolity and was in charge of J. B. Kittrell, imitable funmaker of the organization.

Three-minute talks were made by past presidents of the club, and their subjects embraced everything from eggs to the controverted war debt situation.

Howard McGinnis, the first speaker, told of some of the achievements of his administration, and J. H. Waldrop and Haywood Dall engaged in a debate on the subject, "Whether mortar holds brick together or apart." At the end of the discussion the speakers didn't know whether they were upholding the affirmative or negative side of the query as result of gentle jabs made by Kittrell from time to time, but everybody knew they had been in an argument.

Jasper Winslow talked on the subject of Cancellation of the War Debts, and said he thought the debts should be paid if the foreign countries could pay them, but if they were unable to pay he didn't know what to do about it.

Dr. Pace was assigned one of the most difficult subjects of the evening. It involved the question "If my peacock should lay an egg in my neighbor's yard, who does the egg belong to?" Needless to say he hung to the theory that the peacock being his, all of its productions also belonged to him.

Dr. Wright was assigned the difficult subject of amendment of the dry laws, but before he was able to

Although preparations for decorating the main business district with lights and the customary tree at Five Points have not received any impetus as yet this was expected to come about within the next several days as the spirit of Yuletide penetrates the bones of the citizenship.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Southern agriculture was described today as "the worst in any other country," by Hugh McRae, of Wilmington, N. C., president of the Southeastern Council's first annual meeting here today.

"The South has inherited from and has further developed the present system of agriculture, the worst in any country," McRae said.

"Its excess of tenancy, its absentee landowners, its one-crop cash crop system have in combination determined our status."

The speaker told the conference: "From personal experience I can say with confidence that the South from small grain legumes and certain annual crops can produce milk, beef, pork and chickens at lower cost than can be done in any other part of the United States."

The report of K. W. Cobb, supervisor of sales, showed the market handled 166,306 pounds of tobacco yesterday for $19,402.26, at an average of $11.67 per hundred pounds.

It was indicated that sales today would be similar to those yesterday.

England Prepares Another Petition

McDonald to Stress the Fact that Debt Suspension is Essential to the Economic Welfare of World.

(By Associated Press)

Europe's debts to America still occupy the statement of every country concerned to the exclusion of every other issue. Prime Minister McDonald is giving his entire attention to the preparation of a second note from which he hopes to convince the United States that postponements of the $95,550,000 payment on December 15 is essential to the economic well being of the entire world.

The French Chamber of Deputies engaged in some acrimonious debate, but agreed to give Premier Herriot more time to determine the policy of France.

This government is also preparing another note for Washington asking postponement of the $120,000,000 debt due next month.

Austria, although it is not concerned so much with negotiations with America, is deeply interested, for if France and England have to pay, it may be impossible to obtain ratification by those two countries of the $43,000,000 conditional loan which the League of Nations was to extend.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE THANKSGIVING SERVICE

"Thanksgiving" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ. Scientist, on Thanksgiving Day.

The golden text was from Psalms 69:33: "I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify him with thanksgiving."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following passage from the Bible: "I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said: 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'" (Acts 20:35).

The lesson-sermon also included the following from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Our Master taught spirituality by similitudes and parables. As a divine student he unfolded God to man illustrating and demonstrating life and truth in himself and by his power over the sick and sinning."

The lesson-sermon was followed by testimonies of healing and expressions of gratitude to God, by members of the congregation, for past blessings received.—Christian Science Committee on Publication.

Don't Don Your Heaves—Yet; This Winter May Be Warmest In 25 Years, Records Indicate

By F. B. COLTON (Associated Press Science Writer). Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—(AP)—The warmest winter in a quarter of a century is in store for the United States if the past behavior of the thermometer is any guide to its future.

The nation has had increasingly warmer winters for the last twenty-five years, weather bureau records show, and the same charts seem to indicate that the trend of warmth is still upwards.

But that's no forecast. The weather bureau, ever-cautious, tells inquirers about the coming winter's weather only that we are now in a period of higher than normal temperatures.

Weather records show, however, that there is some basis for the older generation's often-repeated statement that "winters aren't as cold as they used to be." For the last ten years, says the weather bureau, winter temperatures have been "uniformly and decidedly above normal" (35 degrees Fahrenheit) over the whole United States east of the Rockies. The rise has been going on since 1905, though with a few temporary set-backs such as the cold winter of 1917-1918.

The weather bureau's records, kept since 1876, show that winter temperatures fluctuated about one degree above and below normal from that year to about 1886. Then came a drop to nearly two degrees below normal, followed by a sharp rise that reached its peak about 1892 at more than two degrees above normal.

There followed a steady decline that reached a "new low" of almost four degrees below normal around 1905, and then began the rise that seems to be still continuing. Temperature trends for the entire year periods since 1876 have closely followed the winter fluctuations.

The rising temperatures of the last twenty-five years are no sign that weather is permanently growing warmer, however. Records that antedate the weather bureau but are accepted by it as reliable, reveal that temperatures seem to move in warm and cold cycles extending over many years.

The chart above, prepared by the U. S. Weather Bureau, reveals the average winter temperature has been rising in the last thirty years, and has been above normal for ten years. Apparently it will continue to be above this winter. The difference between the average temperature of a cold winter and a mild winter is only a few degrees.

And there are several others who face similar situations.

Jobs For Some

A few of these veterans behind-the-scenes workers may be able to land better work when they replace their old employers. This often happens.

A new Senator or Congressman who arrives in Washington not knowing much about the way things are done sometimes picks his secretaries from the ranks of these veterans.

The change this time, however, are slim. It'll be Democrats replacing Republicans taking the places of Republicans.

And as a rule, these jobs are promised back home months before election time—sometimes more than once.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, Nov. 28.—The Democratic sweep on November 8 was not confined to Senators and Congressmen on the hill.

For that crowd of people who must leave on next March 4 includes many who have come to be regarded almost as fixtures around the capitol because of their long service. Veteran secretaries to members of Congress and clerks of committees, many of whom have spent a good part of their lives there, must depart.

There's Representative Wood's secretary for example—Miss Jessie T. Lovell. She came to "the hill" 22 years ago, worked for eighteen years with one Congressman and has been with Wood for fourteen. Wood's defeat in Indiana after a period of service extending over eighteen years forces Miss Lovell to look for another job.

Jim Cook, a recognized authority on international relations, tariff and taxation, for twenty years has been secretary to the representative of the second Rhode Island district. His boss' defeat in November places Cook among the unemployed.

Women Lose Out

Miss Lola Williams, secretary to Charles Curtis and the first woman ever to hold such a post with a vice-president, is another casualty.

But he'll still be the boss' she says of the vice-president.

Another veteran congressional secretary and clerk is Miss Virginia Davis who has been on "the hill" for nineteen years with Representative Albert Johnson, of Washington. Miss Davis has been publicly commended for her work on the House Immigration Committee where she has served as clerk for the past three years.

Mrs. Edna Stenzer has been with Burton French, of Idaho, for the last sixteen years. French's Congressional assignments extended into many fields and Mrs. Stenzer has become an expert in each. She is a

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York, Nov. 29.—The final passing of vaudeville from the Palace leaves no heaven for vaudevillians on this earth.

Maybe in time they will find reason to think of the new music hall in Rockefeller center as a sort of second heaven, but it can never be a second Palace.

For nineteen years, to play the Palace, was a dream of every tank town trouper. It was the crowning experience of a vaudevillian's life—sufficient compensation for all the heartbreaks of show business.

The Palace was opened March 24, 1913, by Martin Beck. He saw the house become a flourishing institution, then retired from vaudeville for ten years.

Last spring feature pictures were wedged into the Palace program, but an interlude of variety was retained. Since then there have been occasional hints that the former policy of two "vaude" bills a day, with reserved seats, might be restored.

But finances, not sentiment, govern in the show world. The Palace, with living actors on the stage, has been running "in the red" too long—so say the generalists of big time vaudeville.

The heaviest blow to the Palace came when the huge Broadway movie houses, a couple of years ago, began offering incidental stage shows with more "flesh" attractions than the smaller Palace seemed able to muster for its principal form of entertainment.

Big vaudeville names have been demanding $5,000, $8,000 and such figures for a week at the Palace. There are only 1,735 seats in the house, and the management says it couldn't meet the competing bills of the theaters where popular prices prevailed.

The Rockefeller city music hall will accommodate 6,000 persons.

Bulls Die Promptly

Benito Collada, the Greenwich Billage restaurateur, grew a bit restless awaiting the arrival of a prominent visitor from Spain. He plumped himself down at a table with some up-towners.

"It's always this way in Spain," he complained. "People late. Nothing happens on time over there except the bullfights. The ystarright on the dot, at 4 o'clock in Valencia, 4:30 in Madrid, and 5 in Seville. The people are never late for the fights."

Collada was off on the subject of bullfights, and when he gets off there is no stopping him.

During the summer, when Collada was in Spain, he took his motion picture camera to the ring and filmed some fights. He'll screen the pictures for you with practically no encouragement.

In a little while the expected visitor arrived. Collada went to greet him, and came back to tell the up-towners:

"He says he was late because some people kept him at his hotel, talking about bullfights."

Statistics and Such

One of those end to end things: If all the wire used in the George Washington bridge were stretched out that way, it would wrap around the equatorial circumference of the earth more than four times.

Hints on Contract Bridge Up-to-Date

HANDS MUST FIT

By Tom O'Neill

Bridgemen are careful not to make their contracts with big hands impossible of fulfillment when the bidding indicates that their cards do not click with those of partner's on the other hand, at times they will try for game or more on comparatively little strength if there seems to be a good fit.

An illustration is a game made easily in the Vanderbilt cup tournament when the declarer held only four trumps to the ten-spot, contrasted with a hand from a rubber game at the Des Chapelles Club, New York, in which a master's over-enthusiastic partner, dazzled by possession of three aces, three kings and three knaves, went down at a slam contract.

Here is a hand on which David Burnstine and Howard Schenken ranking players and members of the team of four that was runner-up in the Vanderbilt tourney, fared better than any other pair playing the same cards:

Champion Stock Judge

Fifteen-year-old Jean Leake of Emerald, N. D., was first individual scoring in the non-collegiate live stock judging contest at the International Livestock exposition in Chicago. It was the first time a girl won that blue ribbon. (Associated Press Photo)

South opened the auction with two spades. West and east kept silent till a slam contract was reached, when there came a double from west, mostly on suspicions, aroused by the bidding, that the south and north hands did not fit.

Over south's two spades north bid two no trump, the best response, and south offered his next best biddable suit, saying three diamonds. North then offered four hearts. South bid five clubs.

North then tried to stop the bidding at five spades, but south, misinterpreting the jump in hearts, went to six spades.

Three queens in the adversaries' hands set the contract two doubled vulnerable.

POLITICS

By BYRON PRICE

It is notorious that official communiques never tell the real story; and it is safe to assume that the rule applies with special force to the White House statement immediately following the much advertised Hoover-Roosevelt conference on war debts.

Seldom has an equal number of words been culled from the dictionary and put together into sentences saying so little. Only four of the lot indicated action: "progress has been made."

Whatever world of meaning may be hidden behind that short clause must await eventually the disclosure of developing events. In his later statement setting forth his own views the President did not mention the conference. The President-elect has been equally silent.

This need not mean, however, that the meeting failed to live up to expectations. Those who know the thoughts of these two men will have little difficulty in envisaging what the talk must have been like: cigar and cigarette were burning and the first amenities had been cleared away.

Surely it is safe to suppose that in due respect President and President-elect met on common ground and parted in complete accord.

They undoubtedly discussed and agreed upon the major considerations which brought them together, namely, that they had the joint responsibility of seeing to it no debtor nation profited unduly by taking advantage of the uncertainties attending a change of administration in Washington.

If no longer is a secret that Mr. Hoover was disappointed at the results of the celebrated moratorium. It bridged an emergency, whereas he had hoped it would mark a definite turn upward in world affairs.

He must have recalled to his visitor that what he had in mind originally was to give Europe a holiday to put her house in order, especially in these respects:

The German indemnities, about which coming conditional only was done later at Lausanne. The failure of European nations to stabilize but partially met. The tariff wars among European neighbors based purely on retaliation, which still go on. And the disarmament problem, which remains unsolved.

It is conceivable the outgoing President counseled his successor that in considering any further holiday the United States must weigh what Europe has done with the holiday law ending.

STATE HOPES PUT MEN ON ALL STAR '11'

Raleigh Nov. 28.—Three members of the 1932 State College Wolfpack seem assured of first string berths on this fall's all-star football team as a result of early balloting.

Captain Red Espey, center; Mope Cumskey, fullback; and John Stanton, left guard, are the three Wolves leading other candidates for these jobs.

Cumskey is the unanimous choice of North Carolina coaches for full-back and Espey received all votes except one. Stanton was adjudged the best of the left guards by the same men. All three are also leading on teams selected by sports writers and fans.

Robert McAdams, redheaded left half, was placed on the first team picked by the News and Observer. He has been named for such honors on practically every second team selected. Rudy Seitz tackle; and Bob Gresson, end, are two other Wolves named on second teams by coaches and writers. Fans have, in addition, named Roscoe Roy, halfback; and Bob McQuague, quarterback.

A number of all-southern selections have listed Espey on the second team and one picked by the Winston-Salem Journal named the redheaded Tech captain as right guard on the first selection. Frank Spencer, sports editor of the Journal, said of Espey: "Espey is a great linesman, probably without a peer in the south, and too good a man to leave off the team." Spencer gave the center post to Gracy of Vanderbilt.

The New York Sun gave Espey honorable mention for all-American declaring him to be one of the finest players in the country.

CHARLOTTE AND DURHAM IN TITLE BOUT

Chapel Hill Nov. 29.—Two of the most powerful high school elevens North Carolina has ever produced will clash here Saturday at 2:30 for the Class A title of the state.

Charlotte High was undefeated and unscathed on in the Western Conference, defeating Greensboro 14-0; High Point 40-0; Winston-Salem 38-0; and Salisbury 19-0.

Durham High rolled up an even greater total in the Eastern Conference, and had only one touchdown scored against it. Durham beat Rocky Mount 39-0; Wilmington 32-0; Goldsboro 46-7; and Raleigh 34-0.

Their championship meeting here Saturday draws extra interest from the fact that Charlotte and Durham also met for the state title last year. Charlotte had won the title the two years previously. Durham was playing in the finals for the first time and was considered a rank outsider. The decisive war Durham upset and trounced the favorite will likely be remembered locally, and will probably make the big rivals of high school football fight all the harder Saturday.

Charlotte also won the state title in 1917, 1919 and 1923. Last year was Durham's first championship. Coaches Stuessy and Burke have developed a team at Durham this year which is said to be even stronger than the 1931 outfit. And Coach Walter Skidmore has another of his old time powerhouses at Charlotte.

The stage would seem to be all set for a great game Saturday.

New York, Nov. 29.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady two to five points lower under liquidation due to lower sterling and material Southern selling.

Offerings were light and the market staid after trade buying. December sold from 5.64 to 5.69 and May 5.87 to 5.92, and the list showed a gain of a point or two at the end of the first half hour.

Trading continued quiet late in the morning. At midday December was holding around 5.69 and May 5.92 or about two or three points higher.

The distribution was the first one from the $815,000 secured by the state from the Reconstruction Corporation sometime ago.

Three previous allotments of $188,600 had been made. Governor Gardner and Relief Director Fred Morrison are in Washington now seeking a new allotment for the state from the federal agency.

Allotments to counties included: Beaufort $3,015; Duplin $4,147; Greene $1,359; Johnston $3,206; Jones $690; Onslow $690; Pamlico $394; Pender $1,534; Sampson $1,777; Wilcox 2,963; Wayne $3,015; Pitt $3,607.

Dark Tobacco Belt Opens Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Opening sales on the dark tobacco market here today brought a crowd of some two thousand speculators but found the Green River or Pryor type of air cured tobacco averaging $3.05 per hundred pounds—slightly above last year's opening general average for dark tobacco and more than one dollar more than the year before that.

Seek Higher Peanut Prices Murfreesboro, N. C., Nov. 29.—(AP)—Establishment of a central agency for handling the peanut crop of this section and picketing of the highways to see that sales are not made without the agency's consent was recommended in a resolution placed before 400 North Carolina and Virginia peanut growers here today. The debate on the resolution began at once with C. W. Spruill, representative-elect from Bertie county, the largest producing county in the state, urging its adoption.

Spruill, large grower, scored the low prices being paid for the crop. The resolution was introduced by Charles J. Shields, of Scotland Neck, who started agitation for increased prices at a meeting at Scotland Neck Sunday.

P. N. Peele, of Bertie, was named chairman of the organization meeting. Under plans outlined in the resolution chairmen in each county would organize and their organization would be affiliated with the central agency. Cleaners would be asked to buy peanuts from no one except through the central committee which would issue permits to farmers.

In order to enforce the ruling pickets would be placed on highways where cleaners operate.

SPORT SLANTS

Two of the All-America berths that may be most difficult to fill this season, barring some fresh and outstanding developments, are center and fullback.

This is not to say there will be no major arguments over the rest of the make-up of the 1932 honor roll of gridiron performers, but the pivotal line and backfield positions have the experts scrambling around at a great rate for "dope" and opinions.

Minnesota's Jack Manders appears to have gained a nearly lead over the other candidates for fullback, but his condition and consistency have been subject to some question.

Ernest Koy, of Texas, is being ranked as the greatest fullback of all time in the Southwest Conference.

There probably is no better defensive back in the country than the Cornell captain, Bart Viviano. Cotaches and players have told me they never saw a harder tackler anywhere than this New Jersey boy who captained the Andover team before going to Itasca.

For personal fire and team inspiration, Angel Brovelli of St. Mary's belongs well up on the fullback list. Bill Gibane of Brown, Olson of Northwestern, Westminster of Pittsburgh, Poppelman of Maryland, Cain of Alabama, Hall of Oklahoma A. & M., Sauer of Nebraska, and Horstman of Purdue all have attracted attention.

Dixie Roberts of Vanderbilt, although nominally assigned to a half-back position, appears to be an ideal fullback type, offensively as well as defensively.

Ely Stands Out Middle Western critics rate Lawrence Ely, of Nebraska, usually high as a center. Fred Ware of Omaha says he doesn't think there is a better one anywhere, and coaches who have sent teams against the Cornhuskers praise Ely's ability to diagnose plays, tackle and direct most of his team's defense from a roving position.

One of the best centers on Eastern gridirons is Newell Wilder. Columbia's converted fullback, who stepped in an filled the shoes of the sensational MacDuffie, described by Head Coach Lou Little last year as the best center he ever had. Wilder waged a great battle with Tom Clibane, Brown star, who has a better offensive record than his Columbia rival.

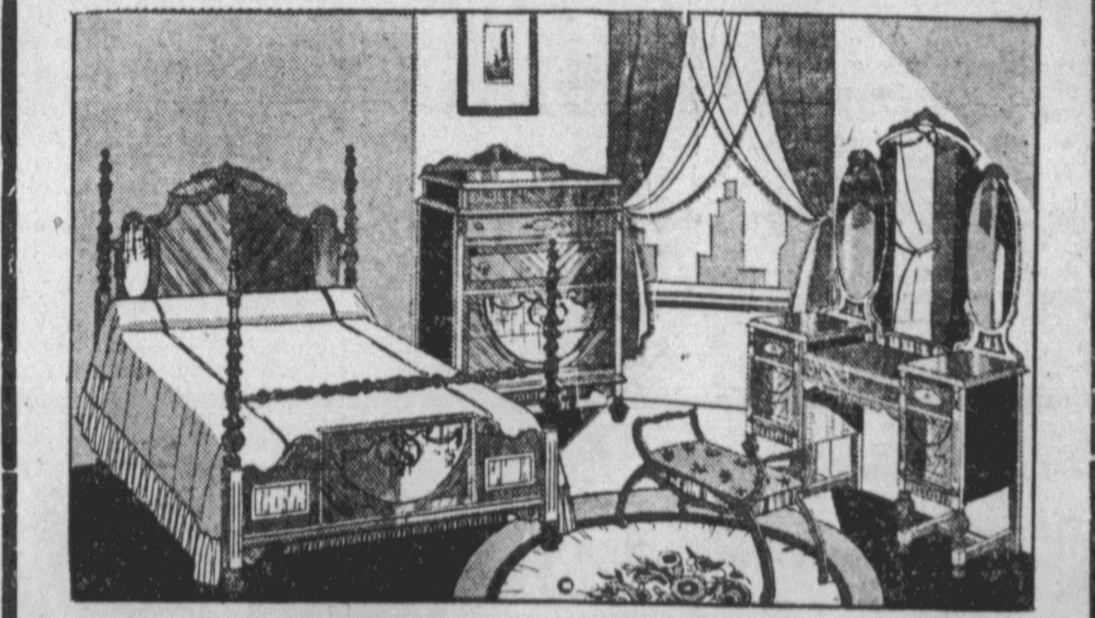

Fred Gracy has stood out as the South's best center this season, although Jake Wade of Charlotte, has nice things to say about William (Red) Espey of North Carolina State. Neblett of Georgia Tech and Lodrigues of Tulane have looked good.

Sooner Have Star Center of Purdue, Bernard of Michigan and Paul Young of Oklahoma have impressed Mid-West critics. Young, a 190-pounder who stands 6 feet 3 inches, has been the "whole show" for the Sooners.

Oliver, U. C. L. A. captain, has looked good on the coast. Brock of Cornell and Engle of Pennsylvania have been kingpins in two strong Eastern lines and Evans is a lightweight terror in Army's forward barrier.
