WOMEN PROTEST PLAN FOR HANDLING 'MARCHERS' Group Will Visit Capital And Seek New Plans For Receiving Hunger Parade

Group Will Visit Capital And Seek New Plans For Receiving Hunger Parade

WILL NOT SEE PRES. HOOVER

Secretary of Chief Executive Will Receive Group of Socially Prominent Women, But They Will Not Be Permitted to See President; Goslin Says Matter is up to District of Columbia

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Indication was given at the White House today that a group of socially prominent New York women who have requested an audience with President Hoover to protest against present plans for handling demonstrators en route to the capital will not be received by the President but will talk to one of his secretaries.

Theodore Joslin, one of President Hoover's secretaries, said he had received a telegram requesting an appointment to see the President. He said he would talk to the group and did not believe they would be able to see the President.

Anything pertaining to the so-called hunger marchers, Joslin said, "is a matter wholly for the District of Columbia and not for the President."

Asked if the telegram had been shown to the President, Joslin said he would rather not discuss that.

Among those requesting the appointment were Mrs. William B. Good Field, Jr., of New York; Mrs. Corliss Lamont, daughter-in-law of Thomas Lamont, of J. P. Morgan Company; Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, of Chicago; Miss Margaret Hartfield, writer, and Carol Heiss King, attorney.

Betting Craze Hits England

London, Eng., Dec. 2.—(AP)—English "pub" keepers have opened a heavy offensive against the thousands of legalized gambling clubs which have spread over the nation like dandelions in spring.

The reason is the intense competition which the club bars offer the public houses.

To serve beer and whiskey the "pubs" must pay heavy license fees to maintain certain standards of sanitation and service.

The betting clubs, which make use of the pari-mutuel system, are organized under the club regulations, escape the heavy tax, and figure on making most of their money out of the betting.

Many of the clubs are operated in chains, and one system of thirty clubs is said to cater to more than 100,000 persons daily.

Betting is permitted on horse races and dog races and 50 per cent of the bettors in some suburbs are said to be women.

EHRINGHAUS LEADS VOTE

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The Democratic gubernatorial candidate appears after all to have followed precedent and led the ticket in North Carolina in the general election November 8.

Revision of the results unofficially tabulated by the State Board of Elections showed J. C. B. Ehringhaus led Franklin D. Roosevelt by 91 votes instead of the Presidential candidate running ahead by about 500.

Raymond Maxwell, secretary of the board, said around 444 votes found in checking returns of one county gave Ehringhaus a total of 497,657 and Roosevelt 497,566. All other candidates trailed behind.

Details received at the office of county authorities were meagre, but it was said the shooting resulted from an argument over some corn housed on the Brown farm.

According to reports, Mr. Brown was said to have suspected Stafford (Continued on Page Six)

Albany, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The State moved quickly today to help the government of New York City avert what was called a threatened financial crisis.

Acting Governor Lehman after a conference last night lasting into the small hours of the morning, announced he would call an extraordinary session of the legislature for next Friday.

The object of the special session of the General Assembly will be to consider proposals for control of salaries so cuts may be put into effect.

How many of the 148,000 employees of the nation's largest city will be affected by the cuts was not known, but one estimate was that $20,000,000 might be slashed from the 1933 budget by this means. The bankers have refused to lend money to the

Will Not Relieve War Debtors. Washington, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A flat prediction that Congress will not act to relieve war debtors was made today by Vice-President-elect John N. Garner.

"Congress is not going to change the situation," the Democratic vice-president-elect told reporters. "I said to Mr. Hoover when I was down at the White House a week ago that as soon as the European debt is realized the whole world will be better off." Garner added: "I still think that."

MOSELUM SABBATH CHANGE FINDS FAVOR IN ISTANBUL

Istanbul, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A plebiscite conducted by the semi-official daily Djumhuriyet shows that Istanbul readers favor changing the Moslem day of rest from Friday to Sunday.

Turkish merchants and bankers are urging the Ankara parliament to put through this reform, which would break the new Turkey's last link with the old Moslem world.

At present Turkey actually has only three full working days a week. On Sunday her Christian subjects lay off, on Friday the Moslems and on Saturday the Jews. Nobody likes to make any important deal on Tuesday, which is considered a bad luck day.

DAD WHO REARED 47 ORPHANS URGES SPANKINGS -- ON PURSE

The best way to bring up a child is to hurt him in his bank account when he is bad, says 76-year-old Everett Reese of Shandon, O. Reese caught to know for he has been father to 47 adopted children in his time.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 28.—(AP)—was a pretty good measuring stick when it came to telling whether a child was a better child than when it came to telling whether a child was a better child than Reese is to spare the bank account and spoil the child. In the end each child had $150 or so when the time came to leave the farm and go out into the world. Reese started his "child farm" when he was supplying milk to the county children's home. He became interested in some of the children and offered to give them a home. More and more came as the years went by. Then the juvenile court judge began to turn over to him some of the constable's captures, and even one or two apparently incorrigible ones who had been sent to the county jail found a haven in the Reese farm house. He never turned them down. In 25 years he has reared 47 children. He did it with only his sister to help him. He never married. He thought about it once, he said, but then he was "too busy paying off the mortgage" and the lady would not wait.

BRILLIANT STARS IN VARIED COLORS TO LIGHT EASTERN SKY IN DECEMBER

BRILLIANT STARS IN VARIED COLORS
By ROBERT H. BAKER
(Professor of Astronomy, University of Illinois)

Nrbana, Ill., Nov. 30.—The eastern sky during the evenings of December will be ablaze with the brightest constellation in the heavens.

At 9 o'clock the familiar quadrilateral of Orion is well above the horizon with its two brilliant stars, the red Betelgeuse at the left and the blue blue Rigel at the right.

Three stars in line in the middle of the quadrilateral direct the eye downward to the Dog Star, Sirius, the brightest of all the stars. Near the horizon it flashes momentarily all the colors of the rainbow, if the air is disturbed.

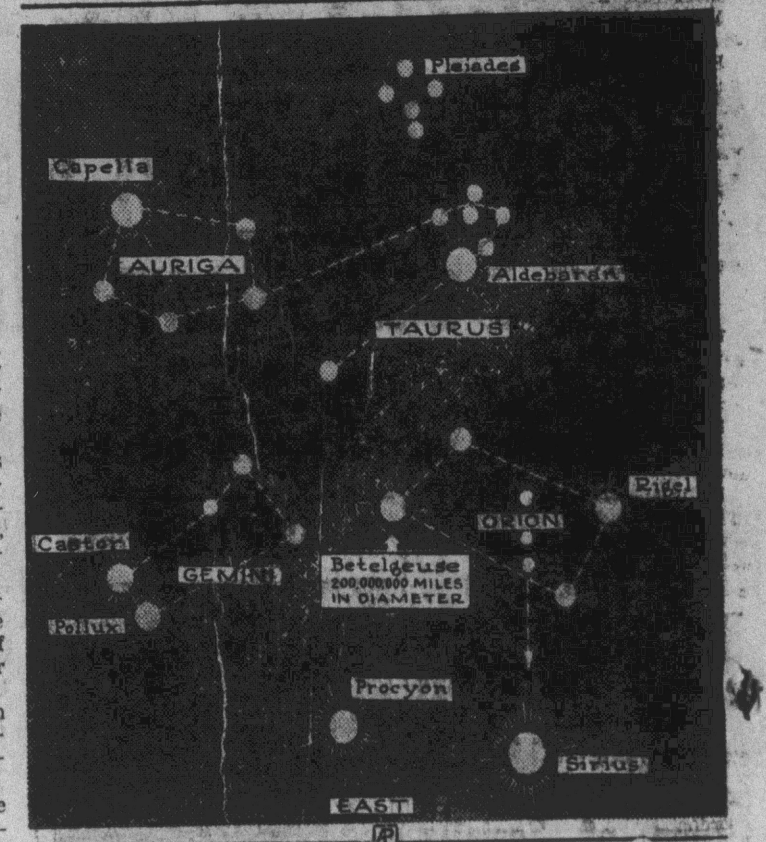

Above Orion the V-shaped Hyades can be seen in the constellation Taurus, containing the red star Aldebaran; and still higher the Pleiades, or Seven Sisters, bear some resemblance to a short-handed dipper.

Procyon, the lesser Dog Star, appears to the left of Sirius and a little higher. Above it is the rectangle of Gemini, with its bright stars Castor and Pollux, the heavenly twins.

Auriga, looking somewhat like an inverted muffin, appears above Gemini. Its brilliant star Capella is yellow, like the sun.

It will repay anyone to observe this celestial display some good evening, especially when the moon is out of sight. Then the colors of the stars are more clearly seen. And then, if there is not too much competition from artificial lights, one notices the luminous stream of the Milky Way threading its way up the sky, past the feet of Gemini, and the horns of Taurus. It is the thinnest part of the edge of the great galactic system which is nearest us.

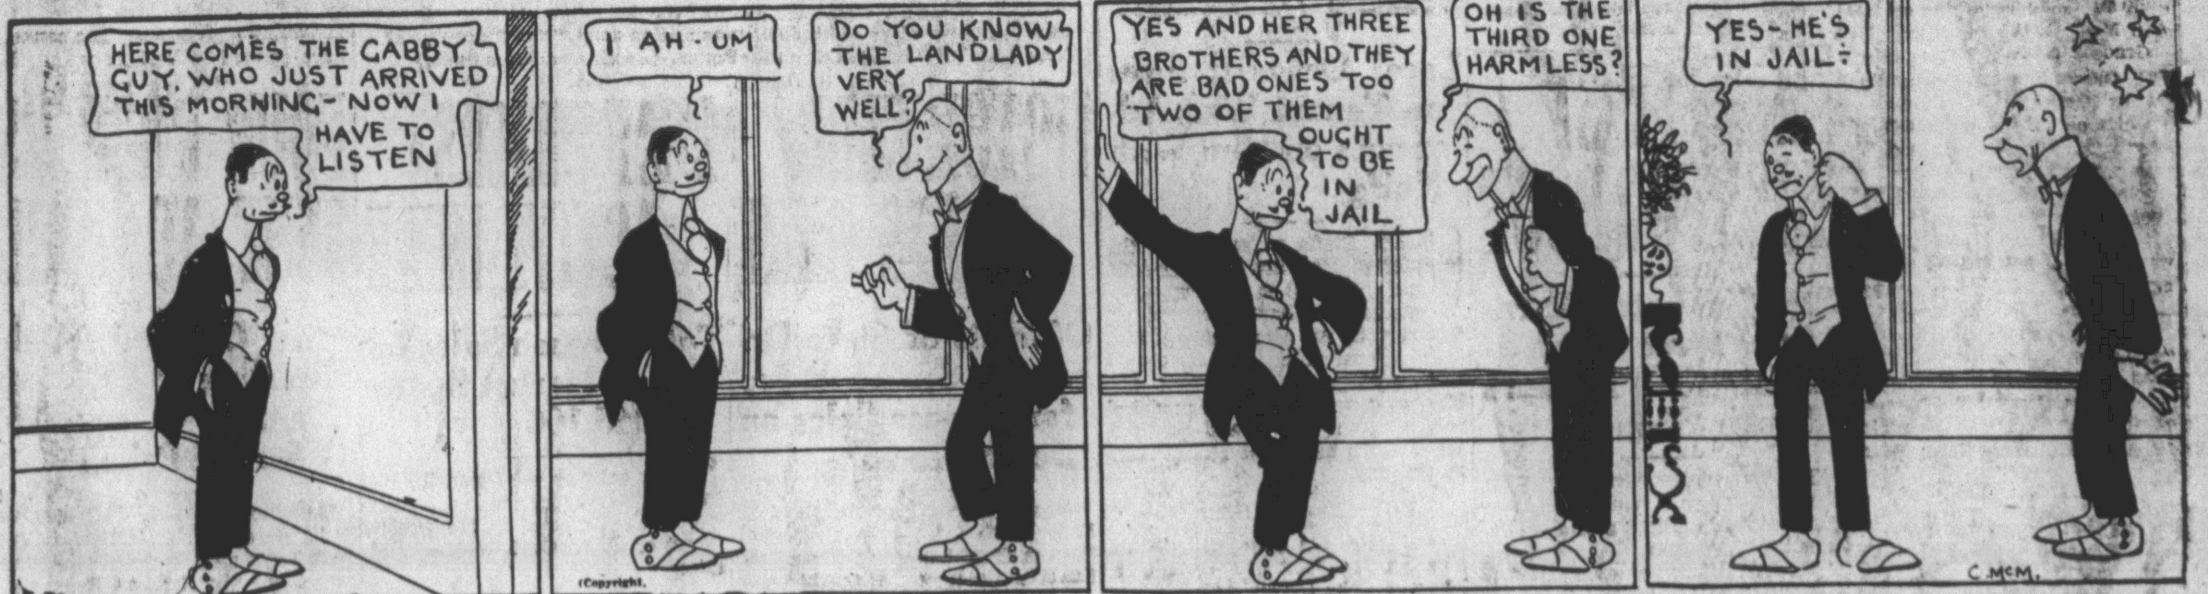

Betelgeuse, the red star in Orion (it is pronounced as though it were spelled Betelger) is in fact one of the reddest of the bright stars. It came into public notice some twelve years ago when the late Professor Bright stars will light up the eastern sky on December evenings. The chart above gives the positions of constellations at 9:30 p.m. on December 1.

Michelson succeeded in measuring its diameter, for it turned out to be enormous—more than 200 million miles. Only two stars are known to be larger. The largest of all is the red star Antares, which is seen in the south during the summer evenings; it is nearly half of a billion miles in diameter. Betelgeuse varies in brightness in a way that until recently was believed to be entirely unpredictable. Sometimes it rivals its blue neighbor Rigel; at other times it is only a third as bright. It is now known that a cycle of its fluctuation occupies about six years. But there are irregularities as well, so that no one can predict precisely how bright the star will be at any time in the future. The light of Betelgeuse is now declining. It will be faintest during March of next year.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 2.—It is a bizarre crew Tay Garnett is directing on one of the most astounding sets in Hollywood today. The set is a ship at sea, built on a sound stage, a hasty feat of movie engineering that improves on nature as far as filming facilities are concerned. The boat, thirty feet wide and 100 feet long, is mounted in such a way that it can roll and tilt at the director's wish, with little oceans of water in reservoirs waiting to dash over its decks.

A Tough Crew

Peopling the sound stage boat, on which all the action for "Destination Unknown" takes place, is a crew that embodies, in eleven men, about 175 unsavory characters. That is, the eleven "heavies" comprise in their combined experience the portray of about that many previous pluguglies, gamblers, villains, brutes, slugs and wife-beaters. The entire crew, including Pat O'Brien who makes his debut as a heavy, and Russell Hopton, likewise inexperienced in villainy, become amiable and God-fearing souls at the end through the intervention of a spirituality persuasive stowaways played in Ralph Bellamy.

MY BEAUTY HINT

By MERRA KENNEDY (Screen Actress) Red hair and freckles go hand in hand, and I have both. However, neither worries me. I merely try to keep my skin in first-class condition, and the result is that my freckles have become less noticeable. Skin that freckles is always thin. So I use very little water on my face. I do use plenty of cream, cleansing and nourishing. Bathing my face in buttermilk, I find, tones up the skin tremendously and I do it once a week. Allow it to dry on, then rinse it off with cold water. Applying cleansing cream and nourishing cream just the same, and forget about the freckles, which will take care of themselves.

Janet In New Role

Janet Gaynor, who recently has had a succession of films in which she portrayed tiny waifs, immigrants or country girls, climbs the social ladder again in "Princess At Your Order." This is the film that will introduce Henry Garat, co-star with Lillian Harvey in "Congress Dances," to the Hollywood studios.

ABOUT TOWN

Greenville firemen again are going to contribute their bit toward making children of the poor happy during the Christmas holidays. Through the toy shop operated the last two years the firemen will mend broken toys turned over to them by the citizenship and the result will be that many a child who would have known little of the ammeties of the holiday season will be made inexpressibly happy.

Broken toys received by children last Christmas or previous years are what the firemen are asking for and if they get them in proper amounts they will be able to provide for the demand of the Salvation Army, an organization that reaches probably more down-and-out people than any other body in the community.

Parents should look through closets and see what they can uncover in the way of Christmas gifts of previous years and send them to the firemen to be converted into brand new things for carrying joy to the hearts of the poor.

The condition among the poor is worse this year than previous and many a child will go without Christmas gifts if the public does not provide them through such agencies as that created by the firemen. It is a worthy undertaking and should be instrumental in spreading happiness to many a bleak fireside.

The people of Goldsboro and community are to be congratulated upon the opening of the new bank to take the place of that which closed last year.

This will mean the placing in circulation of thousands of dollars which was tied up after the closing of the bank. Of course it is going to take time for the new institution to grow, but with community faith and support this should be accomplished in comparatively short time.

Banks offer a splendid service to the hundreds of communities which they serve in this and other parts of the country, and the institution opening at this time will build on former ground that those which they succeeded. The experience of the last two years in banking circles will not be soon forgotten, and failure of institutions of this kind in years to come will be few and far between.

The Communist party is behind the march now being staged on Washington, according to a statement made by one of its leaders yesterday. It is the object of the marchers to obtain federal relief from Congress, but whether their activities will have any weight remains to be seen.

Members of Congress are cognizant of the unusual situation prevailing among the workmen at this time, but there is nothing they can do to improve the condition. Vast sums have already been appropriated to every state in the union and it is possible that if the people taking part in this march be participating in the relief funds being participating in the relief funds.

Washington can do only so much and the people who constitute the government must do the rest. This is done by staying at home and by application of individual effort at work to work out of the rut of depression into which the country has fallen.

Seven hundred millions of dollars will be paid out in interest and dividends to the people of America during the present month, it has been indicated in a recent report from Washington.

This is a tremendous sum of money and if poured into the pockets of one section of the country alone might do much toward driving the wolf away from the doors of the hungry and destitute.

But spreading it among investors in all sections of the country it will hardly make a ripple in the tide of depression which has engulfed the entire populace.

It is gratifying, however, to note that there is plenty of money still in the country, and not all in the hands of some few to suppose, and

by Coningsby DAWSON

SYNOPSIS: Having at last got rid of Santa's first husband, Dicky, Clive and she find that his absence and their silence about it keeps him in their minds almost more than when they saw him daily. At last, while skating on a New Jersey pond, Clive makes it clear that he has no objection if Santa talks about him, even sees him.

Chapter 41 DICKY BACK AGAIN

"Being weak, Dicky probably misses you tremendously," said Clive to Santa. "I'm not dog-in-the-manger. If he's on your conscience and there is anything we can do for him, you won't arouse my jealousy. You're through with him. In a sense, you were through with him before you started. And then, he came to my help when he himself was shipwrecked."

"What's your idea, Clive—that we ought to get rid of him more gradually?" "Something like that." "So that was how it happened, when Dicky called a few nights later, that he was admitted. Clive had brought home work from the office—genuinely brought home work this time.

Following the precedent he had previously established, he withdrew to the library. A wife had the privilege of entertaining her friends, especially when she contributed to the housekeeping. He flattered himself that he was handling the situation modernly.

Finding no obstacles placed in his way, Dicky dropped in more and more frequently. He entered as if he were bestowing a favor and seated himself in the best chair, blond and immovable. To a humorist his vanity would have been amusing. He glanced round at familiar pictures on the walls and surveyed the furnishings with an air of possession. Then he waited with restrained impatience for Clive to vanish, as though he and not Clive was master.

Clive consoled himself by thinking, "All I have to do is to kick him out." "The moment he had left his wife with her ex-husband, they would lapse into French." "Such good practice," Santa exclaimed.

She kept no secrets. Was clear as daylight. Gave Clive a synopsis in bed of what had occurred each evening.

"You don't need to," he advised her. "But it helps me to correct my impressions. Dicky's so sly—always was. He'd swear he hadn't been near her when it was smeared all over his face."

"What does he lie about?" "You and me. The noble influence we are. How he's given up drink and women to be worthy of us."

"He'll drive me to drink. Good night, old girl. I have to be up in the morning."

Often she talked Clive to sleep. "Are you listening?" "Her slim arm protecting him, she would like awake, pondering how complicating it was to have been married twice. What it amounted to was that you were responsible for two husbands."

To have two husbands' buzzing about you was exciting. It kept you expectant and emotional, the way you were as a flapper. It made you feel that you were still competed for. The danger was that you might offend your present husband in trying to save your former.

And Dicky required saving. Though he sighed over his wasted years, he was convinced that he still dabbled in the muddy pool of Broadway.

Clive, having flung wide the windows of his wife's repression, wished he hadn't. Dicky's lapses, reformation, evasions, hogged two-thirds of their conversation. Santa had turned their love-nest into a rescue home. Why did a woman when she had divorced a man, feel impelled to become a mother to him?

At the close of a sample day of rest, during which Clive had sought sanctuary in his stuffy little library, he protested. Having listened for the intruder's departure, he stepped into the hall to confront his wife.

"This is becoming too much." "I agree, darling." She raised her face to be kissed. "We've bitten off more than we can chew."

"More than I can swallow." She slipped her arm through his coaxingly. "I'm all worn out. Let's talk while we undress." "I'll turn out the lights first."

What there is prospect of some of it being cut loose in not such a distant future.

The bright leaf tobacco markets of this part of the state are on the last lap of the season and growers should turn their attention more definitely to the marketing of the remainder of their crop before December 21, the date set for the closing.

While the bulk of the crop has already been sold, there is yet quite a bit of tobacco over the countryside and it will be to the advantage of the farmer to make it now while the price situation remains favorable.

Greenville tobacco men are doing everything in their power to cope with other markets in the matter of prices and accommodations and that they have met expectations of the thousands of growers who sell here from time to time is indicated by the fact that the market has forged to the front as the largest market in the belt. This distinction is coveted by every market in the belt, but it is evident that Greenville is going to capture it again this year.

Talks to Parents

By Alice Judson Peale

REPETITIOUS PLAY By Alice Judson Peale Repetitious play is often the sign of inadequate stimulation. The child, perhaps, has not a sufficient variety of good play materials. He has seen the same ones in exactly the same situation day after day.

Her has been kept so closely at home, perhaps, that he actually has no new ideas upon which to draw for the enrichment of his play. He had played too much alone. He has been over-supervised and corrected, so that he has lost all initiative.

All these good objective reasons for repetitious play frequently exist, and they suggest their own remedies. But often a child plays for long weeks in a stereotyped fashion, despite the fact that his play materials are good and frequently changed, despite the companionship of other children, despite the fact that he daily sees and hears all sorts of things which ought naturally to find

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Although, after a period of some thirty years in the Senate, Reed Smoot, of Utah, dean of that body and now past seventy, finds himself in that group dubbed "lame ducks," there is little indication that it weighs so heavily on him.

The slim, soft-spoken Utah Senator was among the first arrivals in the capital for the coming short session of Congress. Almost immediately he busied himself with getting ready for that event.

His voice, as on many previous Congressional eyes, was heard loud and often a to what should be done in the coming few months. It was much as if he were "in" for another six-year Senate stay.

Not Discredited Perhaps one reason for Smoot's cheerfulness lies in the fact that it is generally conceded his defeat in the Democratic sweep of November 8th left him by no means discredited. It just couldn't be helped.

The veteran Senator's State and his candidacy for re-election were objects of special concern to the Republicans in the campaign. It will be remembered that practically every one of the "big guns" at one time or another was trained on the Utah electorate.

President Hoover delivered one of his major speeches there, in which he said of Smoot: "He knows more of the workings of our government than any other living American."

Vice-President Curtis invaded Utah, as did Secretaries Hyde, Mills, Wilbur and any number of the lesser lights—all in vain.

A Deeper Reason But perhaps there is a deeper reason why Senator Smoot shows no sign of depression at his defeat. Of all the "lame ducks" on Capitol Hill perhaps no one, from President Hoover on down the line, has a more safe sanctuary, whether it be in or out of the government, where he may turn than has Smoot.

That sanctuary is the Mormon Church, of which he is one of the twelve apostles, who under the first presidency, guide the spiritual affairs of that organization.

The Senator's religion is one of the principal things in his life.

expression in his play, and despite the fact that he has been given a free hand. In such instances psychiatrists feel that the difficulty is caused by underlying and probably unconscious fears which inhibit the child's mind and limit his activity. He cannot branch out into new play because he is afraid to think new thoughts.

The best that the intelligent parent can do is to provide the child with a home atmosphere so reassuring and encouraging that he perhaps will be able to rise above his fears without further help.

Punishment, scolding, interference and criticism of the child's freely chosen activities are especially to be avoided.

The stimulating companionship of other children in a new environment often helps to release such a child so that he can begin to play freely.

3rd PARCEL: All the right, title and interest of the said Fenner L. Allen and wife in that tract of land containing 25.7 acres, conveyed by Ollie F. Allen and wife Bertha Allen to James Allen and Fenner L. Allen by that deed dated May 30, 1927 and duly registered in Book W-16 at page 339 of Pitt County Registry, to which reference is hereby directed for more accurate description.

"Sargon has brought health, strength and happiness to both my wife and me and I would not take all the money in the world for the good it has done us," declared Thomas B. Reed, well-to-do farmer and lumberman, residing at 919 Holmes street, Kansas City, Mo.

"Five years ago when on the train going from Bonnsana, Canada, to Calgary, I had a severe attack of acute indigestion and nobody thought I would live to reach my destination. When I came to myself I was in the hospital at Calgary.

"Since then I have suffered constantly from bilious attacks and splitting headaches that lasted for days at a time. Everything I ate disagreed with me. I had smothering spells that made me think I would die. I would get so dizzy I could hardly stand up, and I was constipated all the time. I was nervous and did not get a good night's sleep for years. My good nights I would get up and sit in a chair for hours.

"Sargon made a well man of me. My nerves are steady as a die and I sleep like a boy. My old-time strength has returned and I have gained 15 pounds. I feel fine all the time."

"Sargon helped my wife, who is the mother of 13 children, the same way. She has actually gained 15 pounds in weight and feels better and stronger than in many years."

Mr. Reed was formerly a worshipful master in the Masonic order and Mrs. Reed is a beloved member of the Methodist Church. Sargon may be obtained at

"Sargon has brought health, strength and happiness to both my wife and me and I would not take all the money in the world for the good it has done us," declared Thomas B. Reed, well-to-do farmer and lumberman, residing at 919 Holmes street, Kansas City, Mo.

"Five years ago when on the train going from Bonnsana, Canada, to Calgary, I had a severe attack of acute indigestion and nobody thought I would live to reach my destination. When I came to myself I was in the hospital at Calgary.

"Since then I have suffered constantly from bilious attacks and splitting headaches that lasted for days at a time. Everything I ate disagreed with me. I had smothering spells that made me think I would die. I would get so dizzy I could hardly stand up, and I was constipated all the time. I was nervous and did not get a good night's sleep for years. My good nights I would get up and sit in a chair for hours.

"Sargon made a well man of me. My nerves are steady as a die and I sleep like a boy. My old-time strength has returned and I have gained 15 pounds. I feel fine all the time."

"Sargon helped my wife, who is the mother of 13 children, the same way. She has actually gained 15 pounds in weight and feels better and stronger than in many years."

What Ho! East In Throes Of Football Epoch

Gridiron Renaissance Seen In Records Of Five Powerful Elevens

By GAYLE TABOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)
New York, Nov. 25.—(AP)—The Eastern football fan, inclined of recent years to apologize rather than boast of the section's talent, is enjoying a revival of spirit.

What with such teams as Pittsburgh, Army, Colgate, Brown and Columbia on the loose, all at one time, the eastern brain of the football family scarcely can be regarded as a poor relation.

Of the five aforementioned elevens, Army alone had tasted defeat at its mid-season mark, and that at the hands of Pittsburgh's powerful array.

Colgate's Red Raiders, sweeping through their first seven games, piled on 227 points without having their goal line crossed.

The "predy, versati"-Brown Bears, featuring the very latest thing in offensive tactics, a triple wingback, trimmed their first six rivals, including Yale and Harvard.

Little's Columbia Lions, led by the brilliant Cliff Montgomery, scored seven consecutive triumphs, mostly over pretty stout opposition, with 193 points to opponents' with 193 points to opponents' 25.

The West Pointers, after a heart-breaking one-touchdown defeat by Pittsburgh, came back to crush Harvard 46 to 0, and right now are regarded by many experts as the most violent aggression in the East.

With such great scoring machines as Pittsburgh, Army, Brown, Colgate and Columbia bearing its colors the Atlantic seaboard is making very few apologies for the calibre of its football this autumn. It is the strongest lot of talent out in these parts in recent years. The five young men above have been outstanding stars.

Seek Rose Bowl Bid
Despite the most arduous schedule undertaken by any team in the country this season, Pitt stands an even chance of winding up undefeated and making a strong bid for participation in the Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena, New Year's Day.

Only a scoreless tie with Ohio State mars the record of the Panthers, who have yet to tackle Nebraska, Carnegie Tech and Stanford. If they win those three, it will be very tough to overlook them when the Rose Bowl committee starts looking over the prospects.

Pittsburgh doubtless would welcome a chance to atone for that 47 to 14 plastering received from Southern California the last time it carried the East's colors out that way.

Colgate and Brown also are said to covet the Rose Bowl assignment, but Columbia and Army, for various reasons, are not interested.

Recover From Shock
Although slightly dazed at finding all this gridiron gold in their own back yard after so many lean years, Eastern fans are bearing up very well.

Those who go in for such things profess to see what amounts to football renaissance. The East where the game began, is about to start playing the thing again, they believe.

After bowing in obeisance these several years to the South, the Midwest and the Far-West, the section is going to set up its own dynasty, maybe.

purchaser will be required to make a deposit of ten per cent of the purchase bid, awaiting confirmation. This sale is subject to be confirmed by the Superior Court of Pitt County after the expiration of ten days, out of term, and without notice. The property will be offered for sale subject to 1932 taxes. This is the 1st day of Nov., 1932.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD
Within a year and a half, football has lost its two most compelling figures—Knut Rockne and now Edward Kimball Hall, the executive genius who plotted the National Rules Committee through stormy seas for twenty-five years.

Hall, of course, was not so well-known as the Rock of Notre Dame. Their personalities were widely divergent in type, yet equally forceful. Each had a deep-rooted admiration for the other.

Rockne went about the country proceeing loudly, a few seasons ago, when the Rules Committee put a stop-watch on the shift to keep it within legal bounds. But when the Notre Dame coach sat down around the conference table with E. K. Hall he yielded quickly to the latter's logic and persuasion.

Hall possessed a rare knack, not only of gaining and keeping the cooperation of men in many lines of work, but of piecing together conflicting views. After an intricate discussion of football rules, in which it would appear no agreement whatever was possible, Hall would sum up both sides so clearly that unity emerged. He was a postmaster at logic and expression.

Disliked Ballyhoo
Unlike Rockne, football to E. K. Hall meant a sport to be shorn of individual ballyhoo and over-emphasis. I recall how this quiet, soft-spoken leader once shooed a gathering to honor The New York Sun's All-America proceedings as unfair, undesirable and even dangerous.

Hall always thought of football in terms of co-ordinated team play. More than perhaps any other individual not connected with coaching he saw and weighed the fine points of offense and defense, deftly balancing one against the other. He fought for changes in the football rules designed to increase safeguards, with a fairness and clarity of purpose that won widespread recognition.

Under his leadership, the old and dangerous mass momentum plays were abolished and after the flying wedge, the goal posts were moved back, forward and lateral passing developed to make the game more open and spectacular, the recovered fumble declared "dead" to eliminate those heart-breaking reversals, and finally, the sweeping changes of 1937 put into effect for the greater safety of the players.

Bush Still Hustling
Donie Bush's luck has seemed to run out on him at times, in the course of a checkered career as a baseball leader, yet the doughty little Irishman never has failed to instill quickly the spirit of hustle and confidence into his clubs.

He helped build up the club that Bucky Harris led to Washington's first pennant in 1924. At Pittsburgh 'onie led the Pirates to a pennant in his first year as manager, 1927. He did pretty well with what he had to work with as pilot of the Chicago White Sox, then continued his winning record by building up another pennant club in his first season with Minneapolis.

STAGE IS SET FOR HIGH TILT

Chapel Hill, N. C., Dec. 2.—The stage was set today for the clash here tomorrow for the Class "A" State High School football championship.

The kick-off will be at 2:30 o'clock. The Charlotte team was to arrive early this afternoon and go through a last light workout.

The Durham team will not come over until tomorrow just before game time.

The Bulldogs will defend a title they won last year by defeating the Queen Cit team, and they seem determined to repeat the performance despite the fact Charlotte is again regarded as the favorite.

Charlotte will have a distinct advantage in weight, but Durham's Hackney and Spain give the Bulldogs sufficient speed to counter-balance the westerners' bulk.

The game will offer several of the leading high school performers. Gadd and Morris are Charlotte's best, while Durham has Spain, Germino, Hackney and Bryan on which to stake its hopes for another State championship.

Sooners Present Valuable Player

Norman, Okla., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The most highly specialized talent on the University of Oklahoma football team is that of Orin (Red) Borah, who hails from Champaign, Ill.

Playing only a couple of minutes in his third and last year, he is accounted one of the most valuable members on the squad.

"Red" is the boy who kicks off for the Sooners; then retires. This season he averaged better than 55 yards. When he muffed a kick in the Texas game, it made him so made that on the next three kick-offs "Red" nailed the man with the ball.

Coach Lewie Hardage says such a player's value is hard to over-estimate, since kicks over the goal line eliminate the danger of long returns, sometimes for touchdowns.

"Darned if I know," is Borah's answer to the question of how he toes it. "You just keep your eye on the ball, get your step right, swing your leg and hit just below the middle of the ball with all you've got."
