Chinese Leader Asserts Communism Threatens Create Chaos in China

KOO IS SEEKING QUICK REMEDY SEEK TO FORM NEW CABINET

Dr. Wellington Koo Says Ravages of the Communists So Devastating that Organization of Nation May be Destroyed if Quick Action is Not Taken; Prepares A Memoranda for Lytton Commission.

Washington, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Communism ravages in China have been so devastating that Dr. Wellington Koo believes the Communist menace may threaten the foundation of China's special organization if a prompt remedy is not found. In a memorandum prepared for the Lytton commission and now published here, Koo representing China to Geneva, quoted the national government report that 186,000 persons were massacred by Communists in the Kiangsi province alone during the period of May 5, 1931. In all, 2,100,000 persons have been compelled to flee to non-Sovietized areas.

ENGINEERING STUDENTS TO PUBLISH MAGAZINE

Chapel Hill, Dec. 3.—Engineering students in the University of North Carolina are to have a magazine of their own for the first time. It is to be called "The Carolina Engineer," and to insure success of the venture the engineering students have assessed themselves. Plans call for two issues during the remainder of this year and publication four times a year thereafter. George Gorham, of Rocky Mount, has been elected editor-in-chief and Noel Zelly, of Roselle Park, N. Y., business manager.

Mrs. E. P. Melton Dies
Wadesboro, Dec. 3.—Following a protracted illness, Mrs. Sarah M. Melton died on Wednesday morning at her home in Wadesboro. Funeral services were conducted from the First Baptist Church at 2:30 Thursday afternoon by Rev. W. H. Moore, and interment was made in the Eastview Cemetery. Mrs. Melton was 71 years of age. She is survived by her husband, F. P. Melton, and one son, Jesse Melton.

SIXTY CENT GAS IN CAPITAL CAUSES AUSTRALIAN PROBE

Canberra, Dec. 3.—(AP)—The Australian Federal government has begun an inquiry into gasoline prices in an endeavor to discover whether British and American oil companies are making excessive profits. Residents of this capital, who pay 60 cents for first grade and 56 cents for second grade gas, led the agitation and brought pressure on the Senate and House of Representatives. An independent company which tried to distribute Rumanian gasoline at lower prices found that most of the filling stations were tied to the established companies.

WESTERN LEGISLATORS MEET IN ASHEVILLE

Asheville, Dec. 3.—(AP)—State Senators and members of the lower House-elect from nine Western North Carolina counties held an informal meeting here at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The meeting was a "get-together" gathering to allow legislators-elect of this section an opportunity to get acquainted. Short talks were made by the lawmakers. Counties represented were Burke, Rutherford, Cherokee, Buncombe, Howard, Jackson, Macon, Transylvania and Henderson. Legislators of this county—Clarence E. Blackstock, senator-elect, and Representatives Julius C. Martin and William R. Sullivan, attended. Mr. Martin said no special legislation was discussed and that the meeting was called solely to have members of the General Assembly in this section meet each other.

EXPECT STATE COURT TO TRY P. D. CROOM

Kinston, Dec. 3.—Authorities here expect P. D. Croom, former recorder of Lenoir county, asserted to have confessed embezzling more than $12,000 from a negro ex-serviceman to be tried in state courts. It is possible his case may be transferred to a federal court, but officials at the court house here believe the Veterans' Administration will be content to let a judge and jury in Superior court dispose of it.

READY FOR PROHIBITION VOTE

When Speaker John N. Garner bangs his gavel opening the short session of congress, the first business before the house will be the prohibition issue. Garner has a resolution for outright repeal of the dry amendment which will be submitted the opening day of congress under suspension of the rules. (Associated Press Photo)

BALDWIN HERE NEXT FRIDAY URGES FAST LEAF SELLING

Owing to Confusion of Date His Appearance Was First Set for Last Night.

Owing to confusion of dates, the organ recital by Dr. Minor C. Baldwin, internationally known musician, will be held at Immanuel Baptist Church until Friday night of next week, it was announced today.

Officers of the church today expressed regret that this information was not at hand in time for announcement in yesterday's issue of this paper. Numbers of people who desired to hear the famous organist went to the church last night, but were informed that Dr. Baldwin had not made his appearance. Information as to the confusion of dates was not received until later.

This will be the second visit of Dr. Baldwin to the city during the year. He gave a recital at the same church here last spring, and those who heard him were loud in their praise of the excellence of his rendition of the various numbers. In addition to playing at many expositions in this county, Dr. Baldwin has also appeared in many other countries.

STATE USES OVER HALF OF COTTON IN OCTOBER

Richmond, Va., Dec. 3.—(AP)—North Carolina textile mills used more than one-half of all the cotton consumed by mills in the Fifth Federal Reserve District during October, according to the November report of the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank today. The total number of bales consumed in the district during the month was 242,038, of which 124,392 bales were used by North Carolina mills. South Carolina was second with 104,476 and Virginia third with 13,163. The October consumption was 27 per cent over the 235,734 bales used in the district in September, the report showed.

Late News Flashes

Washington Ready for Congress.
Washington, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Capitol Hill bustled today in the expectancy of big things soon to come. The great and small of its denizens were busy with last minute preparations for the opening of the short session of Congress Monday. Between party greetings of returning senators and representatives ran currents of questioning and dispute over the prohibition resolution or the House vote at the first meeting. War debts, balancing the budget, taxes, farm relief and other problems are due for hearing. It became increasingly apparent with the return of Democrats from conferring with Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., that forces of that party hope to lay in this session the course for the next administration swinging away from twelve years' domination by Republicans and averting a special session of the new Congress next year. Already bidding for a place in history as probably the last "dudded" session the last Congress in which defeated representatives will take part in government. It is set upon a record-making course through decisions of House leaders to vote on the plan for placing before the people a constitutional amendment to do away with prohibition.

Mrs. Harvey Gets Divorce.
Reno, Nevada, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Testimony her husband was cruel to her won Mrs. Felix Harvey a divorce here today from C. Felix Harvey, Jr., son of the late C. Felix Harvey, pioneer Kinston, N. C. merchant. Harvey was addicted to drink. Mrs. Harvey testified and embarrassed her by using profanity in the presence of friends. He also threatened her with his fists, she stated.

Ehringhaus To Address Farmers.

NEW OFFICIALS TO BE INDUCTED HERE MONDAY

Much Interest Centers Around First Action of New Commissioners.

A new Board of County Commissioners will take over the reins of government in Pitt County next Monday, and much speculation was in evidence today regarding first action to be taken in the administration of the county's affairs. All members of the board are new save one, S. I. Dudley, who emerged winner in the November election. Other members to be seated are: Noah Williams, former member of the City Council; R. O. Cox, prominent Winterville manufacturer and business man; Herman McWhorn (Continued on Page Six)

CHARLIE STAFFORD DENIES ATTACKING KEY BROWN WITH A KNIFE YESTERDAY

Charlie Stafford, quoted in the columns of The Reflector yesterday as being shot in the arm after attacking J. Key Brown, local druggist, and that he was wounded by the two bullets alleged to have been fired at him.

His statement concerning the episode follows: "I told Mr. Brown about a month ago that the corn was out and we had nothing to feed the hogs on. Mr. Brown told me not to give them any more new corn. "A few days later I went back to Mr. Brown and told him I thought about raising a drove of hogs up until that time it was poor business to not continue to feed them. "He told me to give them some corn, which I had gathered out of the field for the purpose of putting the hogs on soya beans, but cut the feed off and not to give them much. When we divided the corn it was understood they were to get together on what hogs had eaten after the corn was divided. "Mr. Brown suggested that one load of corn should be put in one barn, and the other in another house. I called Mr. Brown and told him to come down and divide the corn. Mr. Brown came down and acted as if in fine humor. He looked over barn and said it was all right, choosing his barn. "I called his attention to his owing me some corn for that which had been fed to the hogs. He said it had taken so much he did not feel like he owed me any corn. I told him it had required a lot of corn, and that our trade was for him to feed the hogs and I was to do the work. Mr. Brown said he did not think I was due any corn back. He said someone told me that you had offered some of my corn for sale. Stafford (Continued on Page Six)

FARMER HELD FOR SLAYING RUTH TO HUNT IN N. CAROLINA

Wayne Grower is Accused with Killing Youth During Drinking Party.

Goldsboro, Dec. 3.—(AP)—M. Tyndall, 50, farmer of New Hope Township, was in jail here today charged with the fatal shooting yesterday of Elijah Halmis, 19. Young Helms was killed by a shotgun charge as he sat in the Tyndall dining-room. Victor Worrel, testifying at the inquest, said Tyndall killed Helms and attempted to shoot him but the gun jammed. He said they had been drinking. Tyndall was arrested two hours after the shooting.

BUDGET FUND GROWS SLOWLY

Contributions to Salvation Army Campaign Reach $700.00 Mark.

Funds to the Salvation Army budget campaign were moving sluggishly today, but were expected to pick up steam when all of the canvassing committees get into action. It was this morning that approximately $700 had been reported by the law committees which are to have been able to work their respective districts. Other committees were to complete their work late today or the early part of next week.

The campaign is being directed by G. V. Smith, prominent tobacco warehouseman, who expressed the hope that the public would make an effort to give as much as possible to the cause. The organization has suffered the last year because of lack of funds, but has been able to increase the scope of activities in spite of the shortage. The program this year because of the acute situation prevailing among the poor, is more ambitious than ever, and it is hoped to raise every cent of the budget so that both the religious and relief phases of the program may be taken care of.

Germany Wins Decision In Famous 'Black Tom' Case In The United States

ORDER WOMAN TO ASYLUM

Graham, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Elsie Witherspoon, who shot to death her two children and wounded another recently, and who was adjudged incompetent to plead to a murder indictment, was committed to the State Hospital for the Insane at Raleigh today.

Judge M. V. Barnhill, presiding over the November term of Superior Court, pronounced the order that said the woman is to be confined to the department for the dangerously insane.

NOT EASY TO CATCH UP WITH WALL STREET

Durham, Dec. 3.—Getting the Biblical cruel through the "eye of a needle" is easy compared to the modern problem of catching up with Wall Street, if you ask City Manager R. W. Flack. Mr. Flack now finds that through salary cuts and other savings, the Durham Public Service Company which is owned by Cities Service Company of Wall Street, actually comes out the winner in their battle with the city, despite rate reductions, so Mr. Flack writes the Corporation Commission. The council, late because of a general wage slash to take care of rate cuts, hasn't dropped the matter by an inch, but members are keeping their own counsel at present. 2

SECOND TIME CASE AIRED

Favorable Decision is Also Returned By Umpire in Kingsland Case; Action Centers Around Destruction of Black Tom Terminal in New York and Kingsland, New Jersey Munitions Plant Before America Entered War.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 3.—(AP)—Owen J. Roberts, umpire of the German-American mixed claims commission today handed down a decision favorable to Germany in the famous Black Tom and Kingsland cases. The decision is the second and final one favorable to Germany in the case which was re-opened at the request of the American government to permit submission of new evidence.

The umpire was called in after the American Commissioner Anderson disagreed with the German Commissioner Kieselbach. The previous decision was unanimous by the two commissioners. The case involved destruction of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, Black Tom terminal at New York and the Kingsland, New Jersey, plant of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company just before the United States entered the World War.

BEGIN BEAUTIFYING PRINCIPAL STREETS

Scotland Neck, Dec. 3.—The garden department of the Woman's Club started this week on the work of beautifying some of the town's principal streets by the planting of tulips. Five hundred red and yellow tulips will be planted under the direction of the chairman of the department, Mrs. Surry Dunn. In the grass plots on the main street, it is expected that this work will be continued each year until springtime will see beds of beauty all over the town.

RELIEF FUNDS HELP NEEDED AT MT. OLIVE

Mount Olive, Dec. 3.—Between 30 and 40 negroes were given work here this week draining canals leading to the run of the Northeast River and to Thunder Swamp. Payment was made from Federal Relief funds allocated to Mount Olive and received at a time of urgent need. A crowd of unemployed and needy Negroes were on hand the first day, anxious and eager to get jobs.

SLAYER OF TWO CHILDREN COMMITTED TO INSANE INSTITUTION AT RALEIGH

Graham, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Elsie Witherspoon, who shot to death her two children and wounded another recently, and who was adjudged incompetent to plead to a murder indictment, was committed to the State Hospital for the Insane at Raleigh today.

NEW ELECTRIC RATES

Raleigh, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Reduction in electric rates of the Tidewater Power Company of Wilmington it is estimated will result in an annual saving to the company's consumers of about $25,000. It was announced today by the Corporation Commission. The commission order pointed out that the reduction which will become effective January 1, 1933, came on top of a $93,000 reduction effected April 1, 1930, or a reduction of the company's income of $118,000 in 21 months. The new reduction is equivalent to six per cent and makes a total reduction in 21 months aggregate 16 per cent. It was possible to eliminate only five of the 44 complex standards, leaving 39 in force. The company serves Wilmington and several points in this section. The University of Pittsburgh 1933 football schedule calls for games against Navy, Minnesota and Notre Dame on successive week-ends in October.

MIDDLE WEST PLACES 4 ON 1932 ALL-AMERICA

Associated Press Team Features Brawny Line Light And Fast Backs

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)
New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—For the fourth successive year football stars who develop their brilliance in the great American midlands dominated the All-America team of 1932. Their margin over the other three main sections of the gridiron battlefront is not so pronounced as in the past two seasons, but Mid-Western eleven players occupy four of the first eleven positions in the honor lineup. The East and the South, including Texas, each gain three places and the Far West only one in the eighth annual All-American compiled by the Associated Press.

The All-America squad of 33 players, including the "shock troops" of the second and third elevens, numbers 12 from the East, eight from the Mid-West, seven from the South and six from the Far West.

The selections climax a season in which great teams rather than great individuals scintillated. There were a number of flashing ball-carriers especially in the South but outstanding teams like Colgate, which was not scored on in nine straight victories; Texas Christian, Auburn, Michigan, Pittsburgh, So. California and Purdue all achieved fine records because of balanced, well-drilled strength.

Fine support enabled Harry Newman, Michigan's resourceful and versatile quarterback, to emerge as one of the season's few dominating individuals. As a result of the stellar role he played in bringing about most of the Wolverine triumphs by passing, running or kicking Newman was virtually the unanimous choice of the nation's experts for the job of quarterbacking the 1932 all-stars. He is without question the ablest field general since Frank Cardillo piloted two straight unbeaten Notre Dame teams. He excels Cardillo as a passer and ball-carrier.

Two other mid-western aces, Paul Moss, Johnny Purdue end, and Joe Kurth, brilliant Notre Dame tackle shared the distinction of being outstanding selections, although close observers felt there was little to choose in consistent performance between Kurth and his running mate in the Rambler line, Ed Krause.

Don Zimmerman, Tulane's fleet back who had his greatest season despite the loss of experienced running mates and Captain Milton Summerfelt, stalwart Army guard, also were clearcut choices of the majority of critics.

The contests and rivalry for other positions all were keen as a variety of factors figured in the tabulation of final All-America results. Injuries balked the chances of Ernest (Pug) Rentner, Uort-western's 1931 all-star half-back gaining this honor again. A broken ankle in mid-season against Harvard abruptly shelved Dick King, regarded by Major Ralph Sastes as one of the greatest ends in West Point history. The doctors kept Orville Mobler, Southern California's field general and the outstanding back on the Pacific coast, from finishing his career as an All-American.

King's inability to finish the season left the race for the other flank position wide open. It was won, after a flock of arguments, by the fiery young Mexicana, Jose Martinez-Zorrilla of Cornell whose ability to knife through interference, rise to emergencies and block kicks combines to furnish a fine running mate for Paul Moss, a specialist in pass-catching and punting as well as an excellent defensive end.

Latest of an exceptional family to gain gridiron fame at Cornell, Martinez-Zorrilla has finished three colorful and consistently brilliant years of competition. He blocked a half dozen punts in important games this season and single handed, almost held Pennsylvania to even terms by his thrilling end play in his final game.

As a group, the ends lacked the class of other seasons. Joe Skladany of Pittsburgh, who has another year in which to improve, caught the popular eye with his sensational pass-catching in the Army game, but was not as consistent as his team-mate, Ted Dailey. Tony Matal of Columbia, shone on the receiving end of passes, besides playing a fine defensive game. Frank Meadow was a key performer in Brown's stout defense. Dud Parker, Yale punter, did a remarkable job in shifting from the backfield to end.

The South this season had no ends as colorful as "Catfish" Smith or Dalrymple, but "Gump" Aral of Auburn, Dan Wood of Furman and Virgil Rayburn of Tennessee turned in fine performances. Madison Pruitt was a conspicuous unit in the famous Texas Christian line, while "Snakebite" Iabet of Washington and Frank Sivich of Santa Clara won praise on the Pacific coast. The Big Ten, in addition to Moss, had a number of excellent ends including Williamam ad Petoskey, used also as a fullback; Michigan; Sidney Gillman of Ohio State and Dick Fencil of Northwestern.

Miller several years ago, who, the writer believes, would have made a sensational record for himself on any gridiron in the nation. Miller was one of the squirmiest ball toters imaginable. The writer has seen him start for one side of the field with the opposition massed in front of him, run clear across the field, then cut back and get loose for a big gain.

Then, too, take last year, Doc Spears, Oregon aggregation stopped off in Grand Forks for a game with the university. The contest wound up in a 0 to 0 tie. The following week-end, the Oregon eleven defeated the New York University Bilets. Which doesn't look too bad for Jack West's Nodaks.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

"Viviano of Cornell," writes Stanley Woodward, "is the greatest back of the year, in my opinion. Coaches who sent teams against Cornell were scared to death that they wouldn't have a back left after the game."

"His tackling is more deadly and more savage than that of any back I ever saw. He is a clear player, a good blocker and blocker (and calls the signals), although not of the type to attract attention because he isn't often flashy."

The emphasis on team play among the big college football teams this season, as contrasted with the "build up" of individual stars, has been a noteworthy feature of the year and one calculated to aid the process of de-emphasis.

Pacific Coast observers noted the concentration on eleven men, rather than one or two stars, in this year's play by the top-notch teams. The same thing is true of the East, where the success of teams like Army, Pittsburgh, Brown and Colgate, especially the latter two, depended on the ability of its human units clicking together.

It has made the season tougher for the All-America deposters, but a huge success from the viewpoint of those who see a better future for the game in more stress upon the team, less upon the individual.

Defends the Dakotas

A syndicated cartoon which appeared recently in many papers of the country portrayed the disappointment of a youngster who thought he was shaking hands with a Notre Dame football player, but discovered that the wearer of the monogram was from North Dakota," writes Tom Dunn from Minot, N. D.

It's true there is a wide variance in the calibre of the famous Ramblers and North Dakota aggregations. But, it seems, North Dakota has fallen behind in credit for the athletes it has procured, some of whom have gained quite a reputation. Then there are John and Harris Thomas, the brothers who made football history at Chicago about a decade ago. Waldo Fisher, Rus Bernheim and Johnny Haas, Northwestern athletes of a few years ago, hailed from the Pickertall State originally.

PLAYWRIGHTS SCORE GREAT SUCCESS HERE

On Friday night, December 2, a capacity audience packed the auditorium of the Austin building of the East Carolina Teachers College to see the initial performance of the three-act fairy play, "Betty and Scarlet Bunny."

The hundreds of people filling the large auditorium were taken back to fairyland by the play. In beautiful costumes, flowers, flashlight fairies, butterflies, star-fairies, white fairies and rain-bow fairies delighted the audience from start to finish by their lovely pageantry.

The music of the play included touching songs and exquisite dances. The theme of the play was that of an excited, enthusiastic little girl who learns many lessons of life from a wise old rabbit, and through the process gained contact with fairyland.

As a vehicle for the expression of the finest talent of the children taking part, the play proved exceptionally splendid.

Honors for good acting were achieved by Ann McCormick, who played the part of the excited enthusiastic child Betty. J. B. Kiltrel, Jr., who took the part of the Scarlet Bunny, and Joy Flanagan who played the Fairy Queen, also carried Lilycyp, who played the part of the little Magic Doll was quite a favorite.

The dances of the various groups were all attractive with special honor going perhaps to the group of boys playing as Not True Fairies and to the group of girls in the scarf dance of the Rainbow Fairies.

Interest in the play has been State-wide because of the fact that the charming story, "The Adventures of Betty and Scarlet Bunny," written by a native North Carolina, W. A. Lillycrop, of Greenville.

Like Lewis Carroll, Mr. Lillycrop has been able to lay aside the sober dignity of adult professional life and to carry his readers back to the world of childhood and fairyland. The children of the State will ever enjoy and appreciate the characters of "Betty and Scarlet Bunny."

Mrs. Ann Jennie Roberson, who adapted the story to the stage has done an exceptionally fine job. A niece of former Governor Glenn, she came into prominence a few years ago by winning the State contest for the development of playrights sponsored by the University of North Carolina. With this adaptation, she has contributed to the children's literature of the State as well as to the field of North Carolina dramatics.

Much credit for the initial success of the performance goes to Miss Hennie Long, who directed the presentation.

PAGEANT TO BE GIVEN AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

"Renewing the Flame" is a suggestive and impressive pageant which will be presented by the Women's Council of the Eighth Street Christian Church, assisted by the choir, tomorrow night at 7:30.

The theme of the pageant is as follows: The flame of light on the altar of the church as burned low because Christians have been pleasure seeking, ambitious, money-loving or merely intellectual. One by one these groups appeal to Christianity in the effort to ascertain how they may once again make life worth living.

Christianity leads each of these to renew their burned out flames. Service then challenges them to help womanhood everywhere. As representatives of India, Japan, China, Latin-America and new Americans appear they, too, find the light.

The pageant begins with the flame having been renewed and burning brightly upon the altar of the church.

The leading characters in the pageant are: Christianity, Miss Agnes Fullilove; Love, Mrs. L. B. Fleming; Service, Mrs. A. M. Swartz. In addition to these there are twelve other characters represented by Mrs. A. W. Harris, Mrs. J. B. Cummings, Mrs. R. S. Ransom, Mrs. Nicholson, Miss Allie Corey, Mrs. V. M. Forrest, Mrs. R. E. Corbett, Miss Rachel Scarborough, Mrs. Harvey Erley, Mrs. Kathleen MacLawn, Mrs. T. I. Moore, Mrs. Walter Tucker, Mrs. E. L. Clark.

The members and friends of this congregation are cordially invited to this presentation.

December 4. The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

Meat Canning

The Home-All Home Demonstration Club held the first meat canning program for this winter. Sausage was canned at the home of Mrs. Lonnie Stocks Friday afternoon. Several in that community are killing hogs and much of the pork will be canned in order to save it. Unfortunately the pressure cooker method is the only safe method for canning meats, although it has been often kept by other methods. There is a danger of poison which would make it unwise to recommend anything other than the pressure cooker method. The following rules should be followed when canning meat:

- 1. Select fresh, clean meat. Discard the surplus fat.
2. Season and cook as for serving, but do not cook until done.
3. Cooking the meat before canning brings out the flavor and shrinks it, thus more can be put into the can.
4. Season lightly and do not over-cook. In frying use a minimum of flour.
5. Cut meat into pieces suitable for serving. Remove bones (except in fish and fried chicken). If bones are not removed the processing time must be increased.
6. Pack meat tightly to within 3-4 inch of the top of the jar.
7. Canned meats are more attractive if no liquid is added to the pack.
8. Meats should be hot when packed. If glass jars are used the tops should be wiped off carefully to remove all fat before the rubbers are adjusted, as fat causes the rubbers to disintegrate.
9. Pressure cookers only should be used in canning meats. Other methods are unsafe.
10. After processing inspect jars to be sure of a good seal.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 3.—If there are still skeptics concerning the future of the legitimate stage, perhaps Rouben Mamoulian's observations on his recent visit to New York and the theater centers of Europe will be reassuring.

The director who gained considerable attention for "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "One Hour With You," declares with conviction that the stage will be at right as soon as the screen develops its own individuality. From the stage himself, Mamoulian has been a zealous and successful experimenter in cinema innovations.

"The stage," he says, "is dependent upon the screen's ability to find its real entertainment niche."

"Sage Aping Talkies" From using the stage, the talkie has come to be imitated by it, with many new plays "not really plays but film scenarios played on the stage," and obviously written to attract film attention by their movie-like construction, he observes, and what better example of this than "Grand Hotel," with its revolving stage and lightning-like changes of scene practically ready for the cameras in its legitimate form?

Hollywood's impression that it needs stage technique has brought about a condition in which the stage no sooner develops an important personality in acting, writing, or direction than the screen lures that discovery westward with a salary the theater cannot meet, Mamoulian comments.

"But some time," he predicts, "the screen will have its own mode with its own individual experts different from those of the stage. Then both will thrive in the separate fields of each."

No Real Life Heavy Charles Laughton, chubby young English actor who became typed in roles of a psychopathic nature during his stay in Hollywood—Nero was one of his milder characterizations—is anything but the heavy tragedian in real life. (Witness: Richard Arlen nicknamed him "Buster.")

Laughton, with attractive offers from several studios dangling before him, planned to leave for England immediately unless one hope materialized before the day set for departure. That was to play opposite Alison Skipworth in a comedy, or to be directed by Ernst Lubitch. Neither seemed probable, the staid doubting the box-office value of the vehicle he wanted to do, and Herr Lubitch being away.

SUNDOWN STORIES

THE FIRE By Mary Graham Bonner "I believe you're right," said Rip, the dog, "I do sniff something burning."

"But what can it be, quack, quack?" asked Mrs. Quacko. "I'll have to get the fire engines out," said Mr. Quacko, the Fire Chief, "if there really is a fire."

"Let's look around and see if anything has caught fire," said Top Notch, the Rooster, but Rip, the dog, and Willy Nilly were already looking.

"Oh, look!" cried Flotilla Boddie, who had been wandering around to see if she could notice anything. "You porch has caught fire!"

"Fire, fire, cock-a-doodle-do, let's send in the alarm!" crowded Top Notch, the Rooster.

But in a flash Mr. Quacko and the other Ducks and the Toads and all the inhabitants of Puddle Muddle Engine House where all the fire engines were kept, and their uniforms and were clanging up the road to Willy Nilly's.

His porch had caught fire from some of the burning leaves that had blown over in its direction, and soon the fire had got such headway that there was no use in trying to save the porch.

"Save the house!" cried Fire Chief Quacko, as he ordered the others to carry the buckets from the engine to the well so that plenty of water could be had to pour over the porch and the bonfire.

The house was saved through the quick work of Puddle Muddle's Fire Department under the direction of Fire Chief Quacko, but alas, and alack, Willy Nilly now was without a porch to his house!

ABOUT TOWN

The presentation of the fairy story "Betty and Scarlet Bunny" is an example of what Greenville people are capable of doing when they set out to do a thing.

The play, presented here last night by scores of Greenville children was adapted by Mrs. Roberson who adapted the production from a story by Rev. W. A. Lilly, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, won the hearts of the people and is probably due for considerable recognition throughout the country.

It is an intensely interesting story of a little girl by the name of Betty who through a Scarlet Bunny, was led into many mysteries of fairyland. It is one of the most appealing productions of the present day, and promises to receive wide circulation.

In adapting the story to the stage Mrs. Roberson has produced an entrancing creation, appealing not only to children but grown-ups alike.

The first consignment of toys to the firemen's toy shop was made yesterday a special matinee conducted by State Theatre.

From now on people are expected to contribute freely of used toys and the firemen will convert them into things of beauty for the children of the poor.

This means of providing happiness for the hundreds of children who would experience little of the joy of Christmas without the thoughtfulness of the public, no doubt will receive more interest this year than ever before and the firemen should be able to offer far more gifts to the children than in previous years.

City automobile license tags will be sold through the office of the Carolina Motor Club here this year instead of through the office of the city clerk, as has been the custom in past years.

The same rules regulating the disposition of state license tags will apply to those of the city and people in the past who have been delaying the purchase of city tags will be called on to provide them earlier than usual.

In other words, there will be a time limit set for obtaining tags and those who refuse to abide by the regulations will be brought into court to answer to why they did not.

The new system of handling the tags is expected to expedite the city's sales this year and enable the city to treasury much sooner than under the old system.

The people should give the change due consideration and try to obtain city licenses at the same time they buy those of the state.

The Salvation Army budget drive is due to come to an end this week and people who did not give to the cause and are able to do so should make an effort to do their bit toward the great program outlined by the organization for the present year.

The workers are asking for $2,000 this year to carry on their work and if they do not receive the total amount they will be handicapped as they were this year.

Money is tight, no one will dispute the fact, but work of this kind is necessary to the development of the community and everybody ought to make an effort to contribute something toward the program.

A PATH TO PARADISE

SYNOPSIS: Clive feels himself pushed again into the background, this time by his wife Santa's insatiable desire to reform her former husband, Dicky. Santa is so blind that Dicky persuades her he really is producing plays on Broadway until the name of Lou-Lou, long-time friend of Dicky's comes into the fray. Then she understands; then also, Clive sees a possible ally in Lou-Lou.

Chapter 42 STAGE DOOR JOHNNY

Clive was lacking in finesse. He had never had underhand dealings with women. To get in touch with Lou-Lou he chose the course that was most direct. Having waited till his wife and Dicky were settled for the evening, he slipped into his coat and hat.

Hearing movements, Santa called, "What are you doing, darling?" "Appointment with a friend."

That brought her into the hall on the run. "What sort of a friend?" "Sort of business friend."

"That's a fib. You can't lie like the truth, besides—"

He glanced back in the act of escaping. "Besides what?" "You mustn't leave me alone with Dicky."

"Santa, you're a fraud. Being alone with Dicky ought to be second nature."

As he bent his steps toward the glare of Broadway, he thought furiously. The Dicky business was becoming more serious than he'd anticipated. More serious than even Santa imagined.

The rendezvous that he was planning was a strategy of desperation. He set himself a problem in arithmetic: if his marriage had taken nine months to degenerate to this muddle how many more months would it require to bust up completely?

Having reached the theater where Lou-Lou departed, he bought an orchestra seat and handed a note to the clerk in the office.

"Please have it delivered." The note read: My dear Miss Lou-Lou, excuse my familiarity—it's the only name by which I know you. If you can spare me a few moments, I shall be most grateful. My business is urgent. It concerns a friend of yours—Richard Dak.

He had written it over as many times as a school-boy, his object being to spur curiosity and at the same time to prevent her from mistaking him for a stage-struck Johnny.

He felt furtive, almost wicked—a young man on the loose. He was doing no worse than Santa. Never cut him short, "you're a friend of mine. What about him?"

Perching on a stool before the mirror, she began to powder her arms and throat. That done, she redressed her lips and dabbed her ears with perfume. Clive had never been treated to sights so intimate by any woman except Santa.

During the intermission an attendant tapped him on the shoulder. "You are a nice boy." She spoke theless, as he sank in his seat, he was thankful for the darkness.

"At the end of the performance Miss Sandrelle will see you in her dressing-room."

He picked up a program and read Lou-Lou. Sandrelle on the list of actresses. Sandrelle was as good a name as any if you had been christened Smith or Jones.

Miserably self-conscious, at the final lowering of the curtain he wandered into the foyer. Everyone respectable was departing.

"I have an appointment with Miss Sandrelle," he muttered, and was directed to the stage entrance.

Thence he was handed on through scenery in process of being dismantled, till he found himself outside a door in a gloomy passage. With a sinking heart he tapped.

"Come in. O it's you!" She grinned like a street-urchin, only partially clad and totally unembarrassed.

"I troubled you, Miss Sandrelle—" "If you're a friend of Dicky's," she again, attempting to put him at his ease. "I've a date with a beau. That's the reason I'm squeezing you into my only spare moment."

"And if it is?" "She glanced across her gleaming shoulder. "He won't keep it." Clive sank his head. "We're companions in misfortune—adrift in the same boat. I hate to tell you. He's with my wife, and there he'll stay till I return to break up the party."

"The big, soft lump!" was her only comment. Clive raised his eyes shyly. She was lovely, collected, entirely undaunted. With slackened speed she was brushing her hair, which Santa had declared was tinted.

"I'm wondering," he faltered, "why he couldn't be content with you?" "I'm n of his class, dearie." She smiled at her reflection. "You ought to paste him one on the nose, or better still, go home and beat up your wife."

"Out of the question." She turned in surprise, tapping her knee impatiently with her brush. "Can't beat up your wife! Who's a better right? What's to prevent you?"

"A thousand reasons." "It's not do ne in your set, I suppose?" "That's one of them. But there are heaps of others. I love her and there's nothing she wouldn't do for me. She'd stake me with her last dollar."

"Then why's she messing about with my man?"

Clive's gaze fell. "She was married to him." Dead silence. Lou-Lou slipped off her stool and stole toward him. "You poor guy! You're the one she gyped to marry Dicky—the one who was always crazy over her. You see, Dicky's told me." She rested her hand on his shoulders. "I know all about you, too." Clive stared up at her. "Santa's told me. I guess we haven't much to learn about each other."

"Let's compare notes," she suggested. "He put you in this howr." Clive mumbled, "and he makes you an allowance."

"I'm the same as you are with her; he's my baby, I'm crazy over him. He's never treated me right. He couldn't treat any woman right. When he sees a bit of fluff he thinks he likes better, he appeals to my chivalry to let him go. He appealed to my chivalry to clear out when he got married."

"He's a great one for appealing to women's chivalry. I'll bet that's how he's got round your cutie a second time. As far as I'm concerned, I don't really mind; he comes whimpering back when he's been hurt, like a grubby little boy—can't do without me. And I, like a sap, fall for him."

Clive struggled to his feet. "You're fine. The little I know about women I've picked up from my wife."

She laughed good-naturedly and returned to her dressing.

"If you're ever borrowed any of her polo-coats, you must have picked up a mouthful."

Adjusting a chic hat, as she tugged it down across her forehead, she questioned: "Want me to whistle Dicky off?" "Is that it?"

"If you don't want to lose him." "Ever try to lose a cat?" She flung at him her urchin smile. Having arranged her furs, she turned.

"How do I look?" "Stunning." "Slim and sumptuous," she added to his praise. "I'll say it!"

With a comradeship that was startling, she poked her arm through his.

"Take me somewhere. I'm hungry." Leaving the deserted theater, they plunged into Broadway. Not wishing to make themselves conspicuous, they entered a Childs. Across a marble-topped table she pinned him.

"I have, but I hadn't." He lowered his voice. "What you said about Dicky's trick of appealing to women's chivalry is true. My wife thinks she's making a new man of him. If she were to find out for a fact that he's—"

"My very best beau." Lou-Lou stirred her coffee. Clive nodded. "Fur would fly. She'd kick him out."

"Kick him back to me." Lou-Lou laughed gaily. "I get your idea." They spoke in whispers, hatching their plot.

"We'll have to make it realistic," she warned him, "you mustn't mind if I insult you, too."

His last word, at parting was, "I'll telephone you at the theater when the hour is ripe."

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington, D. C., Dec. 3.—Jack Garner has served notice that the half-dozen or so candidates for Speaker in the next Congress can't expect him to show any favoritism.

"I'll give everybody here all the help I can until next March 4," he said recently. "But when it comes to the Speakership, I expect to tell them, 'That's your problem; work it out to suit yourselves.'"

Which is a very interesting and should make them all feel better now that they know the gentleman from Uvalde and the next Vice-President will not exert his influence toward anyone familiar with the situation confronting the incoming administration, of which Jack Garner will be a principal actor, finds it hard to believe that either Governor Roosevelt, and especially Speaker Garner, can not be vitally interested in who will preside over the House in the coming Congress.

It is highly desirable, even imperative, that a man be selected for the job who will work in the closest co-operation with the White House Selection of that man is as important to President-elect Roosevelt as anything else on his program.

The hopes of any administration for working in harmony with "the hill"—and that is the prayer of every President—lie with the Speaker. Without a sympathetic man in that key position there can be no hope of harmony.

He Races Post High Garner himself rates the Speakership second only in power to the Presidency. He is exceedingly jealous of the prestige of his position—as have been all other Speakers—and must be vitally concerned as to who will follow him to that post.

If, as many believe, Garner as Vice-President is to bring a new meaning and emphasis to that office, particularly with his relations to Congress, then a Speaker with whom he can sit down and talk over things would be a great help.

The chances are that he has thought all this out. He's too old at the game of politics not to have done so. Perhaps he thinks it's already in the bag.

At any rate that I'll bet I'll be friends with the next Speaker" statement, in the opinion of many, may not include some who are out for the job.

NEW OFFICIALS TO BE INDUCTED MONDAY

In recent years it has been the custom to induct new members of the board at the noon hour immediately following completion of business by the old board.

Other officers elected in the last election will be sworn in at a public meeting at the court-house Monday night to organize a unit of the North Carolina Institute of Government, but whether the old Board of Commissioners will consent to hold over until the public installation at night or demand the following of the usual custom, was a matter of speculation which will not be definitely decided until the sentiment of the outgoing and incoming members has been sounded out.

Always an important occasion in the life of the county, the change of boards is being watched with particular interest from all sections of the county, and especially by county employees.

Whether the new board will go in for more drastic economy or follow in the footsteps of the present board, was one of the big questions being debated on all sides. Rumors of various nature have been going their rounds recently in regard to probable action of the new commissioners, but the new members themselves have been non-committal and whatever they plan to do will not be known until they have met and organized.

MAKES DENIAL IN SHOOTING

(Continued From Page One) said I denied the accusation and that Brown said he didn't believe it at the time man told him. 'To satisfy you, I will tell you who told me,'

Stafford said Brown told him, 'it was Nat May.'

"We went to see Nat May and asked him if I had offered him any of the corn for sale. May replied that he had not, that you could get some corn up around Snow Hill for 35 cents a bushel, but it would cost gas and oil to go after it, which would be as cheap as to buy it here.

"Mr. Brown said, 'Nat, that is not what you told me; and anyhow, I don't believe Stafford has made way with any of my corn.' 'Well, we have got that fixed I told Brown. I am going to sell enough stuff to finish paying you what I owe you. Brown said not to sell anything, and if you do, I'll put you in jail. I said I have a perfect right to dispose of my part of the crop to pay you, and I am not going to dispose of any of it without notifying you and having checks payable to you for stuff that I sell to finish paying you.

"Brown said if you feel that way about it I'll take a claim of delivery. Well, if you do I'll give bond and hold it. Both spoke rough word or two. I turned around started back toward the stables and Mr. Brown jumped out of his car, ran around behind the car, and as I passed back of car he fired a bullet which struck my shirt on left side, going through shirt and coat sleeve on the left, and I turned around and saw he had a pistol and ran. He shot at me again thirty or forty yards, running me right in amongst two or three people who were gathering corn. I deny attacking Mr. Brown with any knife. (Signed) 'CHARLIE STAFFORD.'

LATE NEWS FLASHES

(Continued from Page One) Ready to Work With Roosevelt Washington, D. C., Dec. 3.—(AP)—The call of a meeting of the House Republican independents for next Tuesday to let President-elect Roosevelt know that "if he can hold his Democratic side of the House we will go along with him on farm relief," was announced today by Representative Leguardia, of New York.

"If Roosevelt will recommend and assume the responsibility for domestic allotment plans to give the farmer the benefit of protection enjoyed by industry through the tariff it would bring immediate relief," La-guardia said.

Miss Rovall to Wed Lieut. Caraway New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—An announcement was made today of the approaching marriage of Miss Mela A'len Rovall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lev Rovall of Goldsboro, and Lieutenant William Olie Caraway, U. S. Army.

The wedding will take place late in the month, and on January 19 Lieutenant Caraway and his bride will sail for China.

Miss Rovall is a graduate of St. Mary's School at Raleigh and of the University of North Carolina. Since graduation she has been alumni secretary at St. Mary's. Lieutenant Caraway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Caraway of New Bern.
