New Love Story Begins In The Reflector Today

Barbara Quentin was under no delusions regarding the man she intended to marry. She knew Mark Lodely was cruel and unappreciative, that Mrs. Mark Lodely would be an extremely unhappy girl.

But Barbara had promised, just before Mark's father died by his own hand, that she would look after him. Only an extraordinary girl would consider it binding, but Barbara did.

That is the situation around which Julia Cleft-Addams has written a delightful new serial, "Buying Barbara," which will appear in The Reflector beginning today.

Barbara was prepared to go through with her promise within a few days after Farrell Armitage saw her—and decided he would solve what was obviously a hopeless situation. He recognized his wealth would make it no easier for him to convince Barbara she shouldn't marry Mark and pick Farrell instead. Farrell chose a plan that was

FRYING PAN'S GLORIES INSPIRE MacDONALD PEN

London, Eng., Dec. 10.—(AP)—Prime Minister MacDonald has stolen time from his heavier tasks to write a lyric passage on the glories of the frying pan.

"How well I know it," he writes for "Rucksack," the hikers' magazine. "It is not work, for one can get down to it and, with sleeves up and elbows out, control the operations with a fork.

"Compare the more dilatory methods of which victuals simmer and cook themselves, and give me a sizzling frying pan, with its savoury smells encouraging my efforts."

daring as it was unique. He would use his money to make Mark Lodely a better artist, establish him in a lucrative profession, obtain medical aid to heal his crippled body—and thereby win a bride.

The principals in this mad contest were linked together by a curious set of circumstances, the events of a generation before that added new elements of drama to a situation charged with potential disaster.

Chief Executive Speaks at Observance of Duke Endowment Fund

Charlotte, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Speaking for North Carolina at the observance of the eighth anniversary of the Duke endowment created by the late James B. Duke, philosopher and statesman, O. Max Gardner here today said "our people could be neither just nor fair-minded were they to forget or fail to appreciate what this man has done for the good of our commonwealth."

The governor related the work that has been done by the millions Duke poured into the endowment that transformed Trinity College into Duke University, one of the most high-endowed colleges in the nation; provided for the care and treatment of the sick and made investments in rural Methodist churches.

Turning to present day conditions, Governor Gardner said: "North Carolina is feeling today many unusual trends in its economic and social life. Our people have felt the lash of unkind circumstances. We have had our share of the distress and heartaches of our times. It is encouraging to know what the benefits of the Duke endowment will continue to aid and comfort our people in the hard times that are ahead."

Asserting much of the state's future depends upon the wisdom of political leadership, the governor added, "much also depends upon the attitude of men of great wealth toward their fellowmen."

"As we face an uncharted future it is my sincere hope that all men of wealth will be deeply convinced of their duty to mankind," he said.

BAND MASTER IS SLAIN BY GANG BULLETS

Police Seek To Find Solution to Slaying Of Man At Washington

Washington, Dec. 12.—(AP)—A half dozen different theories arose to confound police today as they sought to learn who took Edwin Schilhaus, 28-year-old high school bandmaster on a typical gangland ride—a ride that ended in his death with two bullets in his brain.

Stories of an infatuated school teacher, a petty political leader and a girl friend, were among those entertained in the investigation as police delved into the private affairs of the slain man in the hope of uncovering the motive for the crime.

Schilhaus' widow, who saw two men abduct her husband three days from their home Saturday night, told police a woman school teacher had made unwelcome advances toward her husband for the last four years. She denied that he returned her attentions.

LARGE CROWD AT PAGEANT

"Prince of Peace" Presented at Presbyterian Church Here Last Night

Faithfully portraying events in connection with the Nativity, a pageant, "Prince of Peace," was presented at the Presbyterian Church last night and a large crowd attended in spite of inclement weather.

Seventy-two people including those from every department of the church, took part in the pageant and the choir rendered special Christmas numbers which added much to the impressiveness of the presentation.

The scenes were centered around the visit of the shepherds and wise men to the birthplace of the infant Saviour, Bethlehem Inn, the stable to which Joseph and Mary were forced to go after being denied admittance to the inn, the star, angels, Roman soldiers and all others connected with the beautiful Bible story were pictured in a striking and forceful way.

A partition of white separated the choir and organ from the congregation, and Bethlehem Inn with the inscription over the door was situated to the right of the altar. The manger where the Christ child was born was on the altar, and it was here the shepherds and wise men gathered to pay homage to the King, the Saviour of mankind.

The pageant was concluded with a beautiful consecration service in which representatives of every department of the church presented stockings filled with gifts for the relief fund. The candlelight service was led by Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of the church.

Withers Harvey and Mrs. N. S. Beard played the parts of Joseph and Mary in a creditable way, and their costumes like others used by characters in all parts of the pageant.

Says Moratorium Is The Cause Of Trouble Which Debtors Are Now Facing

SIX INJURED IN COLLISION

Two Seriously Hurt as Trucks Collide At Wilmington Early Today

Wilmington, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Six unemployed men temporarily working on a street improvement project were injured, two critically, today when a laundry truck crashed into the rear of the truck on which they were being taken to work.

Garner, however, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. All six of the injured were taken to a hospital where it was said they received varying degrees of injuries.

The two critically injured were Harley Benson and Leon Bann. Physicians said they had a fighting chance to live.

The workers were provided work under the Federal program and were en route to a suburban section where the project is under construction.

CLUB TO PUSH SALE OF SEALS

Woman's Club to Canvass City Tomorrow With Tuberculosis Christmas Seals

Although the seals have been on sale for several days, this is the first time a concerted effort has been made to dispose of them, and it was hoped the bulk of the consignment would be sold.

The seals will be available from club members at any time between now and the holiday season, and persons appreciating the great part which seal sales play in the support of tuberculosis patients at various hospitals are urged to buy until they feel they have done their part.

Greenville and Pitt County people have always done their part by campaigns of this kind, and it was believed the major part of the seals allotted to the club will be sold.

The seals carry a message conveyed by no other kind of Christmas package decoration. They speak in eloquent terms of the brave fight hundreds of people are making against tuberculosis and the effort being made by organizations to help them find their way to the road of recovery.

It is one of the greatest causes to which the public has an opportunity to contribute at any season of the year, and every resource of the club will be used in making the sales a pronounced success.

LARGE STILL TAKEN IN PITT

Three Men Facing Arrest as Result of Raid in Stokes Section.

Officers said Kay Stokes, white, and two colored men whose names had not been determined, were operating the still when the raid was made. Stokes fled after conversing with the officers a few minutes but was expected to be taken into custody sometime today.

The plant was of the usual type used in the distillation of illicit beverage in this part of the county. About twenty gallons of whiskey and two thousand gallons of beer were captured in close proximity to the still which was in operation the raiders reported.

With distillers working overtime to provide beverage for the holiday demand, it was expected that quite a bit of whiskey would fall into the folds of the law between now and the holiday season.

The handling of illicit whiskey is always more extensive at this season.

GIVES POLICY OF GOVERNMENT TO DEPUTIES

French Statesman Also Criticises Other American Foreign Policies; Raps Nation's Failure To Approve League of Nations as Outlined By War President Woodrow Wilson

Paris, Dec. 12.—(AP)—The debt moratorium which President Hoover declared in 1931 is the cause of all the present troubles in which American debtors are now involved.

Premier Herriot declared today in outlining his policy before the Chamber of Deputies.

"That is my interpretation of the Hoover moratorium," he said. "If the United States did not want to concern itself with the problem of reparation, Mr. Hoover should not have allowed Germany to ask for a moratorium as provided in the Young plan."

These statements came in the course of an exposition of the history of the debt issue.

The premier criticized other departments of American foreign policy beginning with the failure of Congress to approve the League of Nations sponsored by the war President, Woodrow Wilson.

ABOUT TOWN

France is ready to pay and the United States is ready to receive. France is stipulating that an international conference be held to consider the debt questions. The United States didn't make any stipulations when she loaned the money to France. The only thing this nation asked was repayment and France, on her knees before the steady advance of German troops, would have promised most anything to get assistance from this government. National attitude has certainly changed during the last thirteen years. The perspective of French statesmen has been warped by changing conditions and they need to turn back and review the past and then try to act as they should. The world owes this nation a debt of gratitude for the enormous sums of money and men thrown into the great conflict against Germany and no country should ask for cancellation of the war debt. It is an honorable obligation and one that should be met just like any other national obligation. America is ready to talk over the debt question with other nations, but she is not ready to literally give away the money rightfully belonging to her people because some other nation asks that such a step be taken. The debtor nations should try to visualize themselves in America's position and actually see how the thing looks through the glasses of a creditor.

Members of the Jr. Woman's Club are to be congratulated upon the effort which they put forth in the raising of funds for purchasing milk for undernourished children. Through the campaign launched the latter part of the week the city schools should be able to meet the demands of virtually all children during the coming winter and spring and the undernourished little bodies no doubt will reflect development they failed to make through lack of sufficient food. Work of this kind means much to the future of the community and the young women have been highly commended for their efforts in behalf of suffering humanity.

Proponents of the beer bill have been given an opportunity to express their opinion before the House Ways and Means Committee investigation of the bill to legalize beer and light wines and this week representatives of dry organizations will go before the committee. The committee after listening to the arguments on both sides undoubtedly will have a difficult time deciding who is in the right, but they will have to do so and the sooner the better. The outcome of the deliberation is being awaited with interest by the public and if it is beer the wets will celebrate and if it is against the dries will do their bit of rejoicing.

The election of Dr. J. E. Nobles to the presidency of the Pitt County Medical Society will be received with interest by members of the medical profession throughout the state as well as the public generally. Dr. Nobles for years has been prominently identified with the task of carrying relief to suffering mankind in this community and it was true acknowledgment of his real worth that he was elected to the highest post the society can confer upon him.

Don't forget to do your bit by the program to beautify the city during the holiday season. Housewives have been asked to co-operate with business men in making the city more attractive during the Christmas season and it is expected many will abide by the request by doing their best with home decorations. The city can be converted into a city of beauty if everybody will pull together and indications at this time point to more extensive decorations than those completed by the city last week in the business district.

A PATH TO PARADISE by Comingsby DAWSON

SYNOPSIS: Tortured beyond bearing by the attentions of Santa's first husband to her, although now she is his own wife, Clive goes a second time to Lou-Lou for help. Lou-Lou, Dicky's friend of long standing, plans to insist Dicky marry her immediately. On the day set for the wedding Clive hurries home, only to intercept a telephone call from Dicky to Santa. Santa is horrified by what Dicky says.

Chapter 49 THERE COMES THE END

"But it may be a matter of seconds," Santa wrung her hands. "Hurry." Clive shook his head. "Your first husband's free to go to hell how he likes. He's hogged two-thirds of my marriage. He's getting a better deal than he deserves. I won't lift a finger." "But, Clive, it's too awful. Lou wouldn't let me go alone?" She implored him. "Neither alone, nor accompanied. You seem to forget that you're my wife." She raised an arm to cover her eyes and burst into sobbing. "You can't understand." He longed to display tenderness; but he'd done that so consistently and he'd always lost the argument. Strolling to the window, he addressed her across his shoulder. "I understand too well. You'd exhaust the patience of a saint, Santa."

"Cruel and revengeful." She spoke brokenly. Her retreating footsteps. Then silence. In an effort to control his nerves, Clive stretched himself on the couch. This revival of an old infatuation could be no more than a pang of jealousy. That she should have fallen in love with that stuffed shirt for a second time was inconceivable. He roused. "That you, Santa?" Had his voice drowned the sound of the front-door closing or was that also imagined? Dashing down the passage he entered the bedroom. With luck there was yet time to intercept her at the elevator. "Too late. She had descended. Returning to the apartment, he sat down, clenching his head between his hands. A year was her limit for any marriage. He supposed there were girls like that. After all, he'd had fair warning. "Probably she'll come back to me if I wait a year." He began to laugh. Suddenly he stopped, staring. "Not to me. I've been abused enough." The furniture, which was hers, not his, seemed to smirk at him.

"Clive, you." He picked a chair. "You won't have to put up with me much longer." In a frenzy he unearthed a suitcase in the bedroom and began to pack. "I'm leaving Santa. It can't be true." On the bed lay the frock that she had been wearing. Timidly, as one who had no right, he touched it. It was still warm from her body. Without thinking, he crushed it to his lips. Then scornful of his sentiment, returned to his packing. Seating himself at her desk, he scrawled on a sheet of paper: "Dear Santa. How to progress? Dear Santa was exactly what she was to him. Never as long as the world lasted could she be less. Tomorrow would dawn and tomorrow; his hunger for her would be unabated. He might glance at other women, but he would duck at the final moment, as Dicky was ducking.

In heaven's name, if this was how he felt, why hadn't he said it to her? He'd turned his back on her and left her sobbing. He'd driven her into Dicky's arms, if that was where she was at present. He gnawed his pen. But was she? Was it too late? Legally she was his wife. Crushing the sheet of paper on which he had written nothing but the articulate two words, "Dear Santa," he rushed from the disordered bedroom and seized his hat. She could make her own terms; he would resign his will in everything. In the East Seventies before a palatial apartment-house, the taxi halted, aying stated at the office that he was expected "ough to be, if I'm not", he was shot up in an elevator and directed. To his relief the door was opened by Santa. He clasped her to him. "I was so afraid." "So was I." She cuddled. "But who's been frightening you?" "Nothing. I've been sitting here alone." "How alone? What I mean is, if there was no one to admit you—" "He'd dismissed his servants and left the key to be given to a lady who was to call on him." "Looks as though he'd played a practical joke. Ah! He had an inspiration. "On Lou-Lou." Santa stared. "Why Lou-Lou?" "What more natural? This is the day when they're to be married." "Is it true? Who told you?" "Lou-Lou herself." They wandered into a large, luxuriously furnished room. "But why should she notify you?" Santa continued. "Too long a story." He shrugged his shoulders. "To be brief, she knew that if he were married again, I'd feel that I was really married." A telephone in another room was ringing persistently, scoldingly. "What do you say?" Clive rose. "You said I seem to be the wedding reception committee. Guess I'd better answer it!" He came back.

Buying Barbara by Julia Cleft-Addams Author of "YOU CAN'T MARRY"

Chapter I. A FIRM ON THE ROCKS

The road to Kings Mallard held steadily west. When the most remote of cathedral cities had been left behind and the last big spread farm had ditched down into wasteland, there was still a sign-post to point due west "To Kings Mallard." Then, hard on the post, came an uprising of hills—heather-covered hills, lying in a plummy curve like the tips of a feather pan; open to the sea. And in the center of the fan the bay. And in the most sheltered lip of the bay, the town, King's Mallard; west of the world. The old quayside—for Mallard had been a king's port, once—and the still older Yarn Market, were hemmed in by what had once been merchants' homes and were now the offices of Kings Mallard's professional men. "He'll leave his wife and the little girl behind, though, won't he? What'll they have to live on? Mrs. Quentin hasn't a penny of her own! Why isn't he worrying out his last days, trying to provide for them! No, Mr. Lodely, it's not because he's lost his grasp of things—it's because he never had none. Books was his interest. Fishing Gardening. Not his profession—anything but that. And the same with you. Hunting. Sailing. Dogbreeding. Anything except—" "Isn't that just a little—impertinent, Cane?" "Plain facts, you said, Mr. Lodely. And the plain facts are that there's only one of us knows any law in this firm and that's me. And there's only one of us has done a full day's work in the last ten years and that's me, too. "Year after year — office-boy clerk, partner—have I worked at building up this firm. What do they call it in the town? Cane's. Quentin. And you can get out of my house." Mrs. Cane gulped and held on to the arms of her chair. She waited for the crash of Mr. Lodely flinging himself upon her poor James. . . . But the crash did not come. There was a moment's terrible silence and then the drawing-room door opened. Peeping through her own, she saw the visitor down the upper hall and go heavily down the stairs; a big red-faced man in riding clothes. He looked dazed, she thought; for a moment she wondered whether he were drunk or ill. She went to the window of the hall when his slow footsteps had finally faded from the house; she could see, by peering out and down into the yard of the inn next door. Within five minutes Mr. Lodely came into it and she watched him dig into one pocket after the other for the sixpence to the boy who was getting his horse. Sixpence. She sniffed—a shilling, more likely. They had never had any sense of money.

either him or his wife. They'd spent every penny of their income for the last ten years, although they insisted that they lived a simple country life. Mrs. Brown mouse-brown at her upper window, checked over the Lodely simplities; open house to the country, horses, dogs, servants, sables and tailor-made for shopping days in Totexter, had-spun tweeds for every day. Of course, there was poor little Mark, he was a great expense and one had never grudged him the best of everything. And what hope was there for his future now? Mr. Lodely, down in the inn-yard, mounted and rode slowly out of her sight; but the eyes of her mind remained upon him, much as her thin shoulder remained against the window-pane, because she herself was tired and unhappy. In her imagination she followed the rider's home-faring; she saw him come out from under the old archway of the inn and turn into the Yarn Market, and then up High Street; he would take his way out of the town by one of the many lanes that climbed into the folds of Upper Mallard hill. She raised her head and gazed at Upper Mallard hill, that great, golden butress curving between Kings Mallard and the world. "The gentry" lived up there; almost she could see the roofs of the house she called in her west-country way "Lodely's." And she could see that all the way up to that huge people touched their hats to the man on the horse. Bankrupt he might be, but they would always touch their hats to him. Whereas they would only stare at her and James. "Em! Here a minute!" She jumped and turned; James was motioning her into the drawing-room. But her thoughts were still vaguely with the man who had recently left it and, as she mechanically straightened cushions and emptied an ash-tray, she asked— "You don't think he'll do anything to himself, do you?" The reassurance she expected did not come. "He might. It's all he can do. And if he did I'd be the last to stop him."

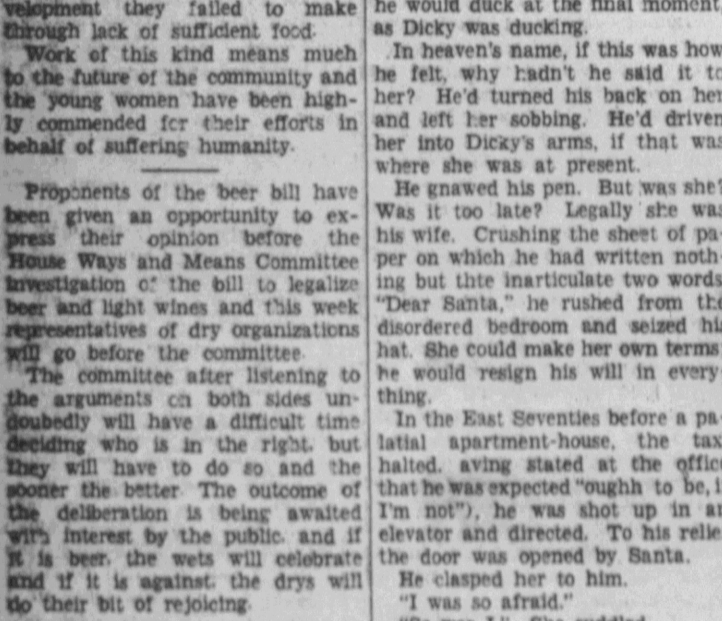

She glanced at her husband and her pride in his defiance gave place to her usual faint fear. Yes, for all he was so thin and sandy-colored and harmless-looking, and such a good father to little Lella, she was nearly always frightened of him. He had a fixed smile that—well, she couldn't put a name to it. But when he told her to stop fidgeting and come to the window, she obeyed him anxiously. "Look out there!" he commanded. "Out along the line of the bay to the old coast guard's cottage. See that bit of level green field just below it?" And when she nodded — "Well, that's where I was going to build my house. No Upper Mallard for me, with gentlemen's residences all around me, eying me right and left. I planned to build for myself, out there with the sea under the windows and a private road between the back door and this God-forsaken hole of a town. But all that's gone." "Poor James!" she said timidly. "Do—do you think of going back to London for a new start? Speaking for myself I'd be glad enough. People'll be staring and pointing here for a long while yet, whatever sort of a home we manage to keep together." "Let 'em stare! I'll be king of this dung-heap yet!" "James!" "But in London I'm nobody." He passed his hand over his face and seemed to wipe away some of his bitterness. His lips were folded in their habitual half-smile when he asked—"Where's Lella?" Mrs. Cane went to the door and called. Down the upper staircase

I took every kind of laxative I ever heard of, but they only aggravated my trouble. When I started taking Sargol Soft Mass Pills I just had to drag myself out of bed and through the day. A large number of students heard Rev. E. L. Hillman speak at the vesper service of the Y. W. C. A. at East Carolina Teachers College last night on the topic of "Personality."

Some factors he mentioned as playing an important role in personality are physical vitality, keen intellect, and scholarship. But you may keenly alert mentally and yet fail because if you are to be successful you must make your lives like God and pattern your personality after that of Jesus.

"Courage," he said "will enable you to stand all tests of life, to fight for the right; sympathy is necessary if you are to be like the one who is called the Light of Life; sincerity is to be depended on rather than the artificial."

Mrs. Dink James sang the beautiful solo "Lord, Teach Me How To Live," before Mr. Hillman took charge of the program.

Engagements Announced.

Asheville, Dec. 10.—Announcement was made here today of the engagement of Miss Ruth McLean, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. McLean, of this city, to Dr. Robert Herring Wright, Jr., of Greenville. The marriage is to take place on Saturday afternoon, December 31, at 4:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church of this city.

The disclosure of the engagement was made at a tea given this afternoon by the bride-elect's mother, attended by 30 intimate friends of Miss McLean.

The bride-to-be attended Randolph Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., and Agnes Scott College at Decatur, Ga., receiving her A. B. degree from the latter institution in 1930. While at Agnes Scott, Miss McLean was active in music and journalism. After being graduated from Agnes Scott College, Miss McLean attended the National School of the Young Women's Christian Association in New York City. During the past summer she was engaged in camp work as musical director at Camp Pawatinka, the Baltimore Y. W. C. A. camp near Annapolis, Md. For the past two and a half winters she has been an instructor in French at Fairview High School and was recently elected vice-president of the French Teachers' Association of Western North Carolina.

Dr. Wright is the son of Dr. Robert H. Wright, president of East Carolina Teachers' College at Greenville, and Mrs. Wright. He attended the University of North Carolina, receiving his A. B. degree there in 1927. At the same time completing two years of medical work. He then attended the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania, where he received his M. D. degree in 1929. After interning at the Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia, Dr. Wright established an office in Greenville, where he is now practicing his profession and has served as clinician of the Pitt County Rosendal clinic for the past year. Dr. Wright is a member of the Theta Kappa Psi medical fraternity and several medical societies.

GARDEN CLUB TO HOLD SPRING FLOWER SHOW

The Garden Club held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. E. W. Harvey on Thursday afternoon. During the business session it was definitely decided to have a Spring Flower Show. The annual Fall Flower Shows sponsored by the Garden Club for the past four or five years, have been most attractive and the club feels that a spring show will be even more attractive, as there will be available a greater variety of blooming plants and cut flowers. Members of the club and gardeners of the entire community are asked to begin now to plan and plant for this spring show.

The club voted to replant trees on Sallie Southall Cotten Drive on Thursday, December 15. There was much discussion about a park and playground for Greenville. The building of such a park will be a fine project for the unemployed. A committee was appointed to further investigate this idea. The club will assist the librarian in decorating the library for Christmas. A committee was appointed to confer with the Water & Light Commission about Christmas lights for the city and in parking strip at end of Fifth street.

An interesting program was enjoyed Mrs. T. E. Hooker on Christmas decorations for the home and for the Christmas dinner table. Mrs. E. W. Harvey told how to arrange plants in a small garden for best color effects. Mrs. J. H. B. Moore suggested several things to do in the garden during December. She urged everyone to put out pansy plants this month if that important planting has not already been done. This is the month to make cuttings of certain evergreens and in spite of other pressing duties we should not neglect the garden.

During the social hour while the hostess was serving tempting refreshments, the chairman, Mrs. J. N. Hart, gave each member present a collection of flower seed to be sown this month—these seed were contributed by a well known California seedsman.—Reported.

Mrs. Wooten and other members of her family were with her at the time of her death. Mrs. Wooten will remain in Farmville for several days.

CLUB WOMEN TO NOMINATE WRITERS FOR ANNUAL AWARD

(By Mrs. J. Henry Hight-Smith) A lass call for nominations of women writers for the George F. Milton Award of $200.00 offered to the "woman writer in the South who has accomplished most for her sex" has come to the club women of North Carolina. Mrs. J. M. Hobgood, president of the State Federation, believing that North Carolina has a number of women writers deserving to compete for this honor, urges women of the state to send in nominations at once to F. C. Lowry, Director, University of Tennessee, Knoxville. The closing date for receiving nominations is December 31, 1932.

Earlier in the year the club women of the state were notified that they would be expected to assist in making the selection for the award. They are now asked to submit the names of three outstanding women of their state and one from the south at large, who are writers and who in their judgment merit this award. In connection with each nomination and in order that each may receive the considerations she deserves, a list of achievements and a brief outline of the reasons for the nomination should be submitted.

The estimate of achievements, they are advised, will not be necessarily based upon work accomplished during the calendar year 1932, but necessarily upon work of purely literary merit. The administrators are asking the co-operation of all women's organizations throughout the south in suggesting women whose outstanding service merits consideration by the judges. They reserve the right to withhold the award if no contributions are deemed sufficiently worthy.

Last year the award of $200.00 went to Mrs. Cora Harris of Georgia, who was sponsored by a majority of women's club co-operating in making the selection. She is therefore, not eligible for consideration this year.

According to Mrs. Howard G. Etheridge of Asheville, chairman of Education in the Federation, a good start has been made in opening up night schools for adult illiterates in the state. An incomplete report, she says, shows that night schools are operating in High Point, Seals, Smithfield, Raleigh, Chapel Hill and Roxboro. For a fuller report, Mrs. Etheridge is asking not only the district literary chairman, but also the club women themselves to report to her the night school activities of their communities. The following district chairmen of illiteracy are asked to send in reports of night school work in their respective districts:

Mrs. J. G. Fearing of Elizabeth City; Mrs. B. B. Everett of Farmville; Miss Annie Perkins of Snow Hill; Mrs. W. B. Murphy of Snow Hill; Mrs. N. H. Kelley of Evergreen; Mrs. S. R. Smith of Waco; Mrs. O. L. Ray of Raleigh; Mrs. Claude S. Morris of Salisbury; Mrs. T. B. Finley of Wilkesboro; Mrs. J. R. Marks of Asheville; and Mrs. S. W. Black of Bryson City.

Mrs. Etheridge calls attention to the $500 prize which is offered to the district, reaching, teaching and having present at the Federation convention in Raleigh in May one or more pupils to receive certificates from each county in the district. A second prize of $250 in gold will be given the club sending in the best booklet showing work of a class of six or more. A third prize of a year's subscription to a magazine will be given to the pupils doing the most outstanding piece of work in night school.

Mrs. Palmer Jermon of Raleigh will be the speaker over WPTF at Federation Hour Tuesday from 2:15 to 2:30 o'clock. Her subject will be the "Federation's Interests in Legislation."

Unemployed Strike Gold Wellington, N. Z., Dec. 10.—(AP)—One of two unemployed men who found gold in Otago has sold a six-months' option on his claim for $50,000 plus 15 per cent of the gold extracted, says a report from Dunedin.

FARMVILLE HAILS CANTATA AS REAL MUSICAL EVENT

Farmville, Dec. 12.—The presentation of Gaul's sacred cantata, "The Holy City," by the Farmville Oratorio Society on Tuesday evening, December 13, is being hailed as a real musical event in the life of this community, and a capacity audience is expected at this, the first production of the recently organized choral group.

Much hard work along the line of study and careful preparation has been done for the past several weeks by the society under the direction of Frank R. Hufty of Wilson, ingenious voice weaver, with the instrumental coloring of the cantata put in the hands of Mrs. Haywood Smith.

Farmville has a quantity of good vocal material but as a large chorus is required for a well balanced and an artistic portrayal of "The Holy City" a number of former and present pupils of the director, from Raleigh, Wilson and Greenville will assist the local organization in its presentation.

The soloists are: Mrs. M. V. Jones, soprano; Miss Vivian Case, mezzo-soprano; Mrs. John D. Holmes, contralto; John D. Holmes, tenor; Elbert Holmes, bass; and the chorus includes: Sopranos, Mrs. J. T. Thorne, Miss Mae Joyner, Mrs. G. W. Davis, Mrs. A. Q. Roebuck, Mrs. C. A. Tyson, Miss Virginia Burgeon, Mrs. O. Q. Spell, Mrs. M. M. Veasey, Mrs. J. L. Shackelford; altos, Mrs. J. M. Hobgood, Mrs. A. W. Bobbitt, Mrs. A. C. Hedges of Farmville, Mrs. C. M. Thomas, Mrs. T. M. Watson, Miss Eva Hodges, Miss Ruth Bonnewitz, Miss Agnes Fullilove of Greenville; tenors, John D. Holmes, Farmville; J. W. Overton and J. H. Gayler, Greenville; basses, Elbert Holmes, Farmville; J. H. Rose, Dr. T. M. Watson, R. C. Deal, Buster Starkey, Greenville, and Wm. Langley, Wilson.

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved; for thou art by praise"—(Jer. 17:14).

MOORR COUNTY TOWNS VOTE FOR ECONOMY

Southern Pines, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Two towns which believe economy in public expenditures must be practiced as well as preached today had voted down a proposed new Federal-aid highway between them.

Representatives of Southern Pines and Aberdeen, describing the proposal for a new road as "extravagant waste of public money," voted unanimously at a mass meeting to keep on using their old road.

SANTA and the MAGIC DOLL

by SIGRID ARNE

SYNOPSIS: Inga, Toyland's most beautiful doll, is driven out after she has been changed to an ugly old woman by a witch who gives her a magic mirror. Pincocchio, a clown doll, befriended by Inga, helps her build a cabin in the woods. The mirror tells them where to find the witch.

Chapter VI HUNTING THE WITCH

That magic mirror put new hope in Inga's heart. Pincocchio was so delighted he did a few somersaults outside the little house they built in the woods after Inga had been bewitched.

"Let's eat," he cried happily. So Inga rushed around and found acorns for cups and filled them with dew. Then she made some nut cake and Pincocchio found some sweet berries hanging on a vine.

They built a warm fire in their fireplace and were just as merry as though nothing had happened.

Inga and Pincocchio met a little squirrel carrying a basket of nuts.

When dinner was over, Inga took out the mirror again and spoke to it.

"Where will I find the witch that put her spell on me?"

"Go East by East, Where neither man nor beast Will see the night Unless the moon is bright."

Several times the little mirror

she said. "Where are you going?" "To the Cave of the Bats," answered Inga.

"You poor children. That is a hard trip. And the witch will see you coming up her steep path. But I shall give you a disguise. Here are two little coins. When you want to change back just rub the coins."

She waved her wand and the two toys disappeared and in their places stood two beautiful red foxes.

SEEKS WISE USE OF HOLLY

State Forester Warns Against Wasteful Use of Plant On Christmas

Raleigh, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Judicious use of holly as a Christmas decoration will assure the perpetuation of this most popular tree, but the continuation of wasteful practices in gathering will threaten future existence of the beautiful plant in North Carolina. State Forester J. S. Holmes warned today.

Already the holly has disappeared or retreated before perennial armies of holiday enthusiasts in many districts and the future supply is threatened in other places, the forester explained.

In order to perpetuate the plant, Mr. Holmes continued, the cutting of trees and limbs should be carried out wisely. In no case should the last of a stand of holly trees be taken from any locality in such a practice would remove all possibility of a future supply of natural growth.

A plan of gathering leaves which will not take more than 15 or 20 per cent of the leaf surface should be done with a sharp axe or saw away from the trunk. Through such a policy, Holmes said, a permanent supply of holly will be assured.

Mr. Holmes pointed to the work of Mrs. U. Martin Speed of Biltmore forest, as having secured excellent effect in the conservation of holly and other mountain Christmas decorations.

In a recent article in American Forester, official publication of the American Forestry Association, written by Josephine Laxton, Mrs. Speed cited an instance where a woman made $17 by selling sprays from a single tree and still has the tree for future pruning.

Holly farming has been profitable in certain parts of this country, and might be followed in North Carolina in the future to advantage, Mr. Holmes said.

COLLEGE QUNT READY TO PLAY

Rounding out last week's practices in fine shape, the Teachers are ready to open the season tomorrow night against the strong Goldsboro Salvation Army outfit, the Red Shields. The game will be called at 8 o'clock in the campus building.

Probable starting lineup for the Teachers will be: Tucker and Barrett, forwards; Burnette, center; C. King and Eason, guards.

HIGH CAGERS PLAY TONIGHT

The basketball team of Greenville High School will play its second game of the season on the local floor tonight at 8 o'clock. The team from Winterville High will furnish the opposition.

Greenville was returned the victor in the first game of the season on Friday, when they defeated Grimsland 27-20 in an overtime game. Winterville went down in defeat before Grimsland by a score of 24-21 last week. By the comparative scores the game tonight should be a thriller.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

The thing Andy Kerr was happiest about after piloting his Colgate football team through a nine-game campaign without defeat, tie or being scored on—which is absolute par on any gridiron—was the crowning brilliance and resourcefulness of a group of boys who looked like anything but football players when he first looked them over as freshmen four years ago.

"Why, six of the regulars who played virtually the entire game against Brown were on as unsuccessful a freshman team as I ever coached," admitted Andy. "They were all fine boys and pretty good students, but they didn't seem to get along very well on the gridiron. They wound up a disastrous season in their first year by being walloped 54 to 0 by the Syracuse freshmen."

"I can say now, happily, that they have shown me they are the most responsive to coaching, the best team unit I have ever coached. The 1929 Colgate varsity had greater man-power. There are other teams now with much better man-power, like Army, Notre Dame and Southern California, but I don't believe any of these teams has developed more resourcefulness than my boys."

Has Flexible Defense

Kerr is one of football's outstanding fundamentalists as well as a coach with a record of success at such schools as Pittsburgh, Stanford, Washington and Jefferson and Colgate.

Brought up at the feet of the old master, Pop Warner, whom he first met while Pop was coaching the Carlisle Indians, Kerr has standardized the Warner double wing-back system.

"We use it exclusively," says Andy, "because it best suits the type of game and type of material I coach. We use a standard defense, with six-man line, for all our opponents. I don't believe in shifting defensive systems. I believe the one we have is flexible enough. Our record this year certainly speaks for itself on that point."

First Unbeaten, Untied

Colgate has had many great teams but this is the first to finish its season unbeaten and untied. Kerr's last unbeaten and untied aggregation was the Pittsburgh freshmen of 1931. He coached an unbeaten team at W. & J. in 1926, but it was held to a scoreless tie by Pittsburg.

Good Canvass Will Prevent Flea Beetle

By C. H. BRANNON (Extension Entomologist)

Tobacco growers should insist on tobacco "canvass" (cheese-cloth having twenty-six strands to the inch). Dealers should be requested now to obtain the proper grade for their customers. The proper grade of cheese-cloth (or canvass) will cost a little more, but it will pay a big profit in thrifty plants protected from flea beetle injury and cold weather.

Poorer grades of cheese-cloth will not give protection from flea beetle injury as the flea beetles will gain entrance through the poorer grades. This is a warning to growers to insist on the proper grade of cheese-cloth. Very few dealers last season handled cloth of 26 strands to the inch, therefore growers are advised now to have their dealers obtain the proper grade if protection of the plant bed against beetle injury is desired.

Use the proper grade of "canvass." It will pay you to do it.

Colombo, Dec. 10.—(AP)—Official figures show that at least one man a day is killed by falling from a tree in Ceylon, the total for a year being 410. Most of the accidents occurred in men picking coconuts.

Hints to Farmers

(Stokes Voc. Agr. Dept.)

Now is the time to begin to think about next year's tobacco crop. Getting an even and early stand in the field is an important factor in tobacco production. This makes the selection and preparation of the plant bed an important responsibility of the tobacco grower.

The location—A south or east exposure is the most desirable site for the bed, as this will insure earlier plants. The particular site chosen should be loamy and mellow, and naturally moist, but having good drainage and free from standing water at all times. Near a stream of water is a desirable location for a bed. Such a location is naturally moist, and in times of drought the bed may be more readily watered artificially. Freshly cleared land makes the most ideal bed because there is plenty of humus in such land and it is not compact and baked by heavy rain and the sun. Plants grow off better on new than on old land.

The chosen spot should be free from grass and weeds as possible. This may be insured by burning, which will also destroy fungus diseases and soil insects. Before the bed is burned all the leaves, grass and litter should be raked off as they hold moisture and will prevent the heat from penetrating the soil to a sufficient depth.

By all means get your seed cleaned and treated against certain diseases. Your county agent or vocational teacher will be glad to assist you in this work any time you will call on them but don't wait to the last minute to get this important job done.

A considerable number of diseases which cause great damage to tobacco in the plant bed and is preventable. The most important of these are the damping-off or bed rot disease, mosaic, wild fire, black fire or angular leaf spot and frog-eye. Because of the fact that these diseases start in the plant bed any effective measures of prevention and control must center around the proper preparation of the plant bed, since at no other point can prevention be accomplished more efficiently and economically.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 12.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, 5 to 11 points higher on steady Liverpool cables and unfavorable weather for the movement. Southern offerings were light and the market showed continued steadiness after the call.

January sold up to 5.85 and May to 6.07, and the market at the end of the first half hour showed net advances of about 7 to 12 points.

Buying dwindled after the early demand had been supplied and the market worked off several points later in the morning.

January reacted from 5.85 to 5.79, while May eased to 5.99, or within a point of Saturday's close on the latter delivery. No selling pressure developed and the market was steady at midday with prices back to about the best figures of the morning, or 8 to 9 net higher.

"SARGON SOFT MASS PILLS ARE THE IDEAL LAXATIVE FOR OLD FOLKS. THEY ARE MILD AND GENTLE, YET THOROUGH IN ACTION."

Unlike ordinary cathartics Sargon Soft Mass Pills do not shock or upset the system. They do their work by gently stimulating the liver to clean itself by increasing its production of bile—a more natural and thorough laxative than can ever be devised by man.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills are not like any laxative you have ever taken. They are so gentle and thorough in action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most remarkable of all, their directions call for a gradual reduction of the dose until the point is reached where you no longer require a laxative of any kind.
