Continue Court Fight To Return Samuel Insull To Illinois To Face Trial

PROCEDURE IS IN DOUBT AT CHICAGO

Possibility that Government of Greece May be Asked to Deport Utilities Magnate to Some Other Country So he Might be Extradited; Move Not Passed on, However, at Athens.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 28.—(AP)—The fight to bring Samuel Insull back to the United States to face his accusers is to go on, but there was a big question today as to the method of procedure.

This was indicated today by the prosecution which accused the former utility magnate of having secured embargement on which the Greek Court of Appeals at Athens refused to order his extradition to the United States on the grounds the deposition failed to support the allegations.

There was a possibility that State Attorney Thomas Courtney would ask the State Department a Washington to request the Greek government to deport Insull to some country to which he might be extradited, but he declined to answer this phase of the question.

Athens, Greece, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Samuel Insull, liberated yesterday after the court denied a petition for his extradition to America, returned today to his hotel from the hospital where he was taken shortly after his arrest several weeks ago.

"Thank God, the truth was proven," he said to a correspondent as he went to lunch. He said he will remain in Greece indefinitely, living at the hotel for the time being and until Mrs. Insull can come down from Paris.

Wesley Johnston, 9-year-old son of Mrs. F. V. Johnston, received a broken back and other injuries when he was run over by an automobile driven by Mrs. Maybelle Edmundson of Scotland Neck, this afternoon.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Biltmore and Fourth streets, where the boy with several of his playmates was skating on the streets.

According to available information, the youth was crossing Fourth street enroute home when he was struck in the back by the bumper and hurled underneath the car. It was believed his back was broken when the car was steered across the curbing into a vacant lot.

Stantonsburg, Dec. 28.—Monday morning about 8 o'clock, a shooting affair took place between John Whitley and Pete Whitley, both negroes. John used a shotgun, while Pete was satisfied with a rifle, and according to witnesses, about 15 shots were exchanged. John was shot in the forearm, while Pete received a lead in the shoulder and several shot in the face. There has been bad blood between the two for some time. Though they have the same last name, the two are no relation. After examination by Dr. T. E. Person, the wounds were pronounced as painful but not serious.

HOOVER STILL ON FLA. COAST

President Plans To Continue His Angling in Vicinity Of Palm Beach.

With President Hoover in Florida Inlet, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Abandoning plans for finishing fishing before Friday or Saturday, President Hoover today decided upon continuing his slow cruises down the Florida east coast waterways and starting his angling off Palm Beach.

Favored with perfect weather, the Chief Executive awoke to another perfect day this morning after his flotilla had been underway since sunrise. The small fleet passed Daytona Beach shortly before 10 a. m. without stopping.

The President resembled a small medicine ball cabinet on the top deck of the new U. S. Sequoia this morning.

CLUBMEN PLAY ST. NICHOLAS

Local Club Members Attend Exercise For Training school Lads at Rocky Mount.

Members of the Greenville Kiwanis Club helped the sixth and seventh divisions of Kiwanis play Santa Claus to the youthful inmates of the Eastern Carolina Training School at Rocky Mount, and in addition to taking part in a Christmas tree exercises, were treated to a delightful dinner served at the school.

The club carried presents for sixteen boys in addition to a donation to the athletic life of the institution. Nine of the youth receiving presents were from Pitt county and the others from surrounding counties that do not have Kiwanis clubs.

W. H. Montgomery, governor of the seventh division, and Lt. Gov. Owen Page of the sixth division, were the principal speakers. Rev. R. E. McClure of New Bern, who originated the idea of holding annual entertainments at the school, presided. Sam Lucas, superintendent of the school, responded to the address of welcome.

The young men of the institution were permitted to tell of the work in various departments and this proved not only interesting but highly informative.

After dinner the Christmas tree was held and every inmate of the school was remembered with gifts from the various clubs of the two divisions. The entertainment next year will be more extensive, it was said, as an effort would be made to get other divisions to join the movement to play Santa Claus to the youths. Kiwanians attending from here were: D. C. Moore Jr., G. V. Smith, B. B. Sugg, Berry Bostic, K. T. Futrell and Joe Taft.

NO EJECTION AT ROCKINGHAM TUESDAY

Rockingham, N. C., Dec. 28.—A truce seemed in force here between certain of the operatives of Hannah Pickett and Entwistle Cotton Mills in the matter of ejection of eighteen families of workers from mill houses.

Summary ejection judgments were secured by the mills last week against eighteen families, and one family, that of Mrs. Cora Buckles, 65-year-old widow, of the Hannah Pickett Mills, was ejected from a house in the Hannah Pickett village. Richmond County deputy sheriff moved the family's furniture into a nearby shed and the family is reported to have taken refuge in an old garage.

Tonight it is reported the Buckles family are all stricken with something like the flu.

No definite steps were taken today by the mill authorities in eviction of the families as to which they hold summary ejection judgments, though today had been set for execution of the judgments.

FIX DUES FOR CHAMBER HERE

Finance Committee of Commerce Body Sets Annual Membership Dues at $20.

The finance committee of the Chamber of Commerce met this morning and set the amount of dues to be charged for membership. The committee after taking everything in consideration, agreed to make the yearly dues $20. They believe that this is the lowest amount of dues charged by any Chamber of Commerce in this state and section of the country. By making the dues as reasonable as possible they hope to secure a larger membership which will be more representative of the community.

A merchants' division of the Chamber of Commerce will be formed in which the dues will be three dollars monthly. Members of the merchants' division will receive weekly bulletin of court records and have access to the credit files. Members of this division will be asked to become a member of the North Carolina Merchants Association in which the yearly dues are three dollars.

All Kinds of Shipping Is Crippled Around Norfolk Because Of Fog Blanket.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Fog so dense it shut out all kinds of shipping was reported today by observers at Cape Henry. Norfolk also had a considerable fog which reduced the speed of motor traffic. MAKE WAR ON STILLS IN CHEROKEE COUNTY

Murphy, Dec. 28.—The makers of Christmas liquor have received a rather costly setback during the past few weeks at the hands of Sheriff L. L. Mason and his deputies and as a result many a Cherokee County citizen probably went without his Christmas toddy on the 25th unless his favorite bootlegger can make arrangements in the meantime to get his supply from other sources.

Five stills have been destroyed during the past few weeks since Sheriff Mason took office on December 5, together with thousands of gallons of beer and hundreds of dollars worth of utensils and manufacturing paraphernalia.

Argue Supply Bill

Washington, Dec. 28.—(AP)—A definite refusal to recognize beyond the recommendation of the appropriations committee showed itself in the House today as it pressed on toward early passage of the big agricultural supply bill. On two separate occasions the membership rejected proposals to trim some hundreds of thousands off of the $110,000,000 appropriation measure. The House was at work alone, the Senate remaining in holiday recess which again prevented action by its judiciary committee on legislation of beer. Chairman Norris set consideration of the question for next Monday and renewed opposition to holding hearings on the bill. He has proposed reporting it to the Senate immediately there are enough members voting in the committee to make its action formal. Norris also named a committee to start work January 5 on the five-day week bill introduced by Senator Black of Alabama. This measure would prohibit from interstate commerce products in whose manufacture employees worked more than 30 hours a week. Early disposition of the Philippine independence bill was promised as Chairman Hare presented to the House the compromise agreement with the Senate calling for independence in ten years. The Senate already has approved and House action tomorrow or next day will send it to the President for his signature or veto. (Continued on page four)

THREE HURT IN CAR WRECK

Greenville Young Men Painfully Injured as Car Turns Over on Highway

Three Greenville young men were painfully injured when the car in which they were riding turned over in an attempt to avoid hitting two cars which wrecked ahead of them on a highway near Rocky Mount Monday night, according to information reaching the city today.

They were Paul Fitzgerald, Van Staton and Carl Willard. They were carried to the Rocky Mount Hospital for treatment, but Staton and Fitzgerald were able to return home yesterday. Willard, who was more seriously hurt than the others, will remain in the hospital some time longer. All of them received painful cuts and bruises about the head, limbs and body.

The wreck occurred as the young men were on their way to Rocky Mount to attend a dance. Two cars ahead of them wrecked, it was stated, and the Greenville car turned over as Carl Willard, driver, attempted to prevent hitting the wrecked machines. Another machine was said to have also been wrecked trying to prevent hitting the other cars.

J. A. Robinson, reported in morning news accounts of having been driving the car occupied by the Greenville young men, was the driver of another car, and was said to be held in connection with the wreck which caused the local car to turn over. An error in the morning account caused it to appear that Robinson and the Greenville citizens were occupants of the same car.

GLADNESS AND SORROW MINGLE AT CHRISTMAS

Seaboard, Dec. 28.—The Christmas holidays here had a decidedly Grand Hotel flavor. Just prior to Christmas Eve, one street saw in an afternoon a load of evergreens being hurried to a local residence for wedding decorations, and in its wake a funeral procession from a neighboring house moved slowly to the church. The local interior decorator turned from funeral flowers to the arrangement of arches and improvised altars and candles. On Christmas Eve the wedding was solemnized and on Christmas Eve the widow of the deceased neighbor was spending her forty-first anniversary alone. A colored neighbor with a white heart was unable to help as his wife went on such occasions, because of a new baby at her home.

Regular Dividend

New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Directors of American Can Co. yesterday voted the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share on the common stock payable February 15 to stock of record on January 25, but took no action on the $1 extra dividend usually declared at the year-end.

OLD KRIS KRINGLE GETS OFF THE WAGON

Henderson, Dec. 28.—It was a sad and forlorn look that many little tots here had Christmas Eve afternoon as they strolled along the streets in the shopping section. The strong arm of the law had arrested Santa Claus himself and he was put into the city's "jug" thus bottling up the Christmas spirit. He was scattering along the main thoroughfare among the throngs of half-minute shoppers. Old Saint Nick was getting along famously until he apparently imbibed a little too freely of the "rigid water" and then John Law himself took a hand.

GOVERNOR IS SILENT WHILE RUMORS FLY

Men Close to the New York Executive Say He is Opposed to any General Sales Tax, But He Remains Silent at Albany; The Story Got Out from Washington City.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 28.—(AP)—Friends of President-Elect Roosevelt who let it be known late yesterday was "horrified" at news reports that he had instructed Speaker Garner to revive the general manufacturers' sales tax plan, have portrayed Roosevelt as opposing any such principle of general sales taxation.

The New York governor himself remained silent today on the report which was issued from Washington.

They were brought to town by a passing Virginia car and taken to Dr. J. C. Vaughan's office where they received medical attention. Later in the day they resumed their trip in another car.

ABOUT TOWN

Sixty-four persons were killed in accidents in the south during the Christmas holidays, the majority meeting death from accidents on the highways.

While the toll probably was not as large as in recent years it was sufficient to cause the majority of motorists to stop and take stock of the heavy loss.

The holiday spirit probably causes some people to take chances they would not take at other times. If everybody would pause to consider the danger of reckless driving, it is probable he would be more cautious in the operation of his car.

But county suffered only slightly from mishaps of this nature, but there were a number of minor accidents which might have resulted more seriously under similar circumstances.

With the new year at hand, the public should make a resolution to give more consideration to state traffic laws in the future and do their bit toward reducing the annual toll of death and destruction of property.

One thing Greenville will carry over into the new year with pride is the fact that she has done everything possible to take care of the poor during the winter.

The spirit of liberality in evidence during the Christmas holidays shows that the people fully realize the serious situation existing among the poor and are doing everything in their power to effect an improvement.

Had it not been for the mounting effort which charitable organizations put forth during the holidays many families would have been destitute and many childish hearts would have been denied the thrill that goes with the Christmas season.

The people behind the movement are to be congratulated upon what they accomplished, and it is hoped they will not let up until the winter is over and hundreds of idle people are able to return to gainful occupation on the farms.

The roundup of members of the illicit whiskey traffic during the holidays shows county officers have well-rehearsed their vigil in this community.

While it is believed there has been some relaxation of effort in this connection in other parts of the country because of public desire for a change in the prohibition amendment officers in this section apparently mean to enforce the law as long as it remains intact.

This is as it should be. Law is law regardless of public desire and the officers should continue to try to get down the manufacture and transportation of liquor as long as prohibition laws remain on the statute books.

The consumption of liquor in this county was cut down considerably during the holidays by seizure of stills and stills but even at that there was enough liquor in the county to permit all the swimmers a liberal bath. The law must continue to be enforced as long as the statute remains unchanged and the officers will be commended for taking such action.

Prediction that business conditions are on the mend was made by the head of the Reconstruction Corporation yesterday, and everybody hopes it will be fulfilled.

Conditions have been had for a long time now but with improvement in the future many a man who has been hard pressed the last two years will find things looking just a bit more rosy.

What the nation needs is more jobs for the average workman. Give him that and the depression which has been on everybody's lips for so long will be dissipated and the cheery atmosphere of good times will come again.

Buying Barbara

SYNOPSIS: In five days Barbara Quentin is to marry Mark Lodely, an artist, crippled and cruel, too. Yet tonight Farrell Armitage tells her he is determined to marry her; that Mark has postponed the wedding day for selfish reasons. A moment before they had unearthed a portrait of Lella Cane among Mark's effects—and Lella is wearing the emerald Mark just has given Barbara. Barbara reaffirms her love for Mark, but at last offers to marry Farrell if he will use his great fortune to cure Mark and to launch him as an artist. Farrell refuses marriage on those terms.

Chapter 15 THE NEIGHBORS PEEK

He just looked at her, marvelling. "This is she. . . . Beyond question he knew her—she was the woman towards whose love he had been shaping since earliest years. And there she sat, found at last, his destiny woven into the pearly silks at her breast—there she sat and insulted him as grossly as he had ever been insulted; rated him lower than any man, woman or beast had ever rated him yet.

"You ignorant, conceited, lovely little fool!" he added; still in his most civil tones. "Barbara—doesn't the name mean a barbarian, a stranger? You are only a barbarian evidently, strange to the ways of men and women. What a lot I am to teach you about life!"

He saw her face flame and whiten. He went on, choosing his words, placing his blows. He was not in the least sorry for her—it was Mark he was hitting through her, by her own choice. It had to be.

"You see, such a lot of beauty is offered to any man," he told her—"any wealthy man, I mean, with reasonable health and an ordinary appearance. It would sicken you if I were to describe to you one-half of the number of beautiful women who have been willing to make their bargains with me. It would sicken you and, because you're a blind little small town girl, you'd think I was boasting, whereas I should simply be dispensing with mock modesty. So we'll take the list as read and—refrain from adding your name to it."

She cried out: "Because I was—stupid there's no need for you to be brutal!"

"On the contrary, there is every need. You're very strong, you know, Barbara, and it can only be by strength I'm to release you from Mark. Mark! Take your mind off him for a moment, your whole mind. Push him aside for a very few minutes and stand up to me as a free woman as I am a free man."

"When I strike at your pride and your beauty," he went on, "strikes back at my weakness and my passion—I'm not a cripple, you know, or an old woman, or an infirm child. I'm your equal in strength; in some ways, I'm to be your master; in others your servant. But just now we're enemies—so stand up to me, you little slacker, and hit!"

She had struggled to free her feet in her first furious amazement; but it seemed to him that he had plucked her out of her chair as he had plucked her back from the truck wheels in that far-off time that was not six hours ago.

She faced him across four feet of unstained floor, a piece of old carpet, and the emerald she had forgotten. Yes, at last she had forgotten Mark. . . . Armitage, using her anger as a key to lock Mark out, proceeded to make her angrier still.

"You could hurt me, Barbara Quentin, if you knew how, just as I can hurt you. Well, learn how to hurt me, when needful. We shall often desire to hurt each other. Perpetual pity, you know, is not a bearing state of mind. You've pitied too much, you've lost tone, you've gone to sleep emotionally. When you wept over Mark, you were a mother who had lost a child. Now you're a woman who is most intensely loved. Well?"

He waited. He saw her swallow convulsively. At last— "You may say all that you have to say, Mr. Armitage, and then you will leave this house—my house and Mark's."

"Better," he approved. "There's a savagery under that. Once you feel definitely that you hate me, we have made a start."

"You flatter yourself there. I don't hate you for what you've been saying to me. I hate you only because you have it in your power to give Mark health and happiness and fame."

"You actually have it in your power and instead of doing it you quibble and moralize about the nature of my love for him! I didn't know—I didn't dream that anything as ungenerous as you could exist!"

"Better and better. That's really a very good dig because it has shown me up to myself. I'm almost sorry that I can counter it."

"How?"

"By agreeing to do all those things for Mark."

She took an uncertain step backwards. He thought she swayed a little and he stood ready to catch her. She stared at him, her eyes wide and fixed.

"You mean that?"

"Certainly I mean it! Of course, I can't promise you health and success for him as if they were a penny's worth of candy. But I'll do my utmost. And you, in return—"

He paused and saw the terror darken in her eyes.

"No, no," he said gently. "You've lived too long among half-shadows and hidden meanings and lordships what. Real life isn't a bit like that. . . . I want you, in return for my willingness to remodel Mark, to

THAT TECHNOCRACY QUESTION

Editor's Note: Predictions by Technocracy of a possible collapse of the economic system have startled the nation and brought a farflung controversy. This is the first of a series of six daily articles giving a new insight into Technocracy, and presenting other statistics pertaining to the displacement of men by machines, energy consumption, debts and other points involved.

By J. R. BRACKETT
(Copyright, 1932, by The Associated Press)
New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Last August a man named Howard Scott spoke before the American Statistical Association. He stood informal-

Is the machine responsible for the nation's long lines of unemployed? Technocracy, a research group at Columbia University, says it is partly to blame. Others, including economists, hold that statistics fail to bear this out.

ly at a table, one hand in his pocket, the other resting on the table top, so that his arm became a prop for his tall body.

Quite casually, with many wry smiles, he said this social structure was being seriously, perhaps devastatingly, imperilled by the uncontrolled advance of the machine. It was a small group of statisticians who heard him! They were interested, probably not unduly excited.

Suddenly, four months later, the whole country was talking about Howard Scott and some strange thing called Technocracy, for which he spoke. Headlines flashed: "Machine peril society," "15,000,000 can do nation's work," and "Price system seen falling."

Many already had believed these things were true, and thought that here perhaps were the facts in proof. Many believed they were not the facts. Result: A flar-fung controversy.

Scott said the data on which he therein engaged varied in this way, being 25.6 per cent in 1880; 29.1 per cent in 1900; 33 per cent in 1920, and 39.9 per cent in 1930.

Others asked, Why not consider total employment, not just manufacturing employment? Considering all gainfully employed in all pursuits, from soda clerks to bank presidents, it has been calculated by a prominent economist in a paper soon to be published, that the proportion of the population ten years of age and older in gainful occupations has varied only 6 or 7 per cent in the fifty-year period 1880 to 1930. The economist doubts that this figure indicates any serious problem.

Scott has cited as statistics to indicate the extent of the machine's inroads on employment: it took a man 5,760 minutes, or 96 hours, to till an acre with a spade in 1930, and somewhat less with a wooden plow. Today he can till an acre in five minutes, a gain of about 1,100 times.

A statistician for a leading research organization, objecting that such startling statistics mean little alone, that they should be considered in the whole manufacturing picture, has collected some index numbers of production per capita. Taking 1849 as 100, he found that production for each individual worker in manufacturing and mechanical pursuits had increased to 362, a gain of about three and half times.

The National Bureau of Economic Research in a recent study by Dr. Frederick Mills of Columbia University, finds that between 1922 and 1929, there was an absolute decline in the amount of farm population; industrial population was increasing at a rate lower than the rate of total population growth, while the number of persons engaged in the service industries (transportation, trade and finance, public service, professional service and domestic and personal service) increased from 35 per cent of the total population in 1920 to 42 per cent in 1930.

Many hold that these occupations more than absorb those displaced by the machine, granting that there is such displacement.

This argument also holds that the improvement of the machine has made necessary the extension of these other industries, its greater production necessitating more transportation, more clerks and so on. This all meant greater complexity in the industrial system, which in turn required more government and other service.

It is because of these and other similar statistics that a group of business men and economists, including Dr. Lionel D. Edie, economist and vice-president of the Capital Research Corporation, suggested that the data for Technocracy's conclusions be published, since present published data may be given different interpretations.

Traveling Salesman Was Almost Ruined

Greenville, Miss.—W. A. Huber, recently said: "Traveling day and night and eating in cafes and hotels had a lot to do with my case. I know, but I was in mighty bad shape. Constipation had practically ruined me. I took every kind of laxative I ever heard of, but they only aggravated my trouble. When I started taking Sargol, Scott's Mass Pills I just had to drag myself out of bed and through the day. The treatment not only relieved me but I have actually gained 35 pounds in weight."

"Christian Science" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ. Scientist, last Sunday. The Golden Text was from Psalms 119:106: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Which things also we speak not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but in which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual." (I Cor. 2:13)

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science Textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is no physical science, inasmuch as all truth proceeds from divine mind. Therefore truth is not human, and is not a law of matter, for matter is not a law-giver. Science is an emanation of divine Mind, and is alone able to interpret God aright. It has a spiritual, and not a material origin. It is a divine utterance—the Comforter which leadeth into all truth."—From the Christian Science Committee on Publication.

Book World Cuts Titles, Improves Product in 1932

By JOHN SELBY
New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—There have been no spectacular fortunes won the book world in 1932, either by writers or publishers. But major casualties have been refreshingly few as well.

Of major interest has been the general reduction of titles accepted for publication—a reduction estimated at 15 per cent in general. The result has not been the elimination of all the books nobody can love, but certainly it has been to elevate the artistic standard of the products.

Less important directly, but full of promise is the greater vogue abroad of two types of American fiction.

This year in particular has seen a wide interest abroad in such writers as Ernest Hemingway, John Dos Passos, Thomas Wolfe and William Faulkner.

Writers of definitely "popular" fiction also have been taken up in Europe, sometimes to a quite remarkable degree. Among them may be mentioned Vera Delmar, Ursula Parrott, William Woodward and Emile Gauvreau.

Most talked about among the prize awards has been (because it is largest) John Galsworthy's recently achieved Nobel prize of some $30,000.

The impact of the award, added to the natural attraction of a new Galsworthy novel, enabled "Flower of Wilderness" to displace Mrs. Pearl S. Buck's "Sons" from its place at the head of the best seller lists in November, and to hold first place up to the end of the year.

Likewise largely discussed was the Atlantic prize of $10,000 which went to Mrs. Owen S. O'Malley, an Englishwoman, who wrote a novel of Chinese life under the pseudonym Ann Bridge, entitled "Peking Picnic."

Among novels that have held their own against the current that sweeps away the majority of books are Ellen Glasgow's "The Sheltered Life," T. S. Stripling's "The Store," Charles Morgan's "The Fountain," and William Faulkner's "Light in August." Elizabeth Madox Roberts' "The Haunted Mirror" and Willa Cather's "Obscure Destinies" hold equivalent positions among collections of shorter pieces.

Biographies generally attractive are Mary Austin's "Earth Horizon," Octave Aubry's "The King of Rome" and (although it is not exclusively biographical) Bernard De Voto's "Mark Twain's America."

RAINEYS ARE A GOOD TEAM, TOO

Speaker and Mrs. John N. Garner are not the only congressman and secretary team in Washington. Rep. Henry T. Rainey, democratic floor leader and candidate to succeed Garner as speaker, has been aided by his wife's secretarial assistance for years. This is the first time Mrs. Rainey has permitted the camera to catch her at work. The two are shown in Rainey's offices in the capitol. (Associated Press Photo)

TALKS TO . . . PARENTS

TEMPTATIONS

By Alice Judson Peale

Two boys were left alone on a Saturday afternoon.

The elder forthwith buried himself in an arm-chair to enjoy the undisturbed reading of the adventure stories which were his passion.

The younger roamed restlessly upstairs and down until he opened his father's tool chest (a thing strictly forbidden in that household) and used saw and hammer to make himself a sled.

On the parents arrival home earlier than expected his disobedience was discovered and he was severely punished. Why, his mother wondered unhappily, couldn't he be good like his brother? He certainly never would have thought of doing such a thing as touching father's tools the moment he was left alone.

The answer, one suspects, is that to the little boy who sat absorbed in his adventure stories the idea of making a sled offered no burning temptation. A given situation rarely offers an equal temptation to any two children, for every child has different wishes, different tastes and different interests.

Besides, some children by nature want what they want far more passionately than others. It is more passionately difficult for a highly emotional child to control his impulses than for one whose temperament is more cool and reflective.

For this reason it is folly to reproach one child for doing wrong with the shining example for another who did not. In judging a child's transgressions one must try to get his point of view and feel with him the degree of temptation to which he was subjected.

Maybe the little boy who used his father's hammer and saw deserved praise rather than punishment for having refrained from making free with auger and plane as well!

RICH LITTLE POOR GIRL
May's father and mother are not rich, they are not even well off. They cannot buy for May all the toys and clothes they would like. They live in a small apartment, and May has not even a room to herself.

And does May have a melancholy time? Not a bit of it. Mother enjoys her. She does not mind a littered floor and does not find 3-year old help in the kitchen a nuisance. To May the kitchen is a place of wonders. Everything from cleaning vegetables and baking cakes to washing dishes and sweeping is profoundly interesting.

And then there are so many things with which to play. There are things with which one can play tea-party. Mother saves boxes. They become beds, chairs and tables and sometimes trains and boats. She has a bag full of all sorts of bright colored materials. They make fine wrapping blankets for May's doll and table covers and bed covers.

There are lots of old magazines from which May can cut out pictures and May has blocks to build with, fine brick size floor blocks cut out by a carpenter under mother's direction and sandpapered smooth by her.

And mother can tell stories, nice every day stories that she makes up out of her head about a little girl just like May.

But best of all, May's parents are really fond of each other, and of her. There is no nagging, no fussing, no nervous, grouchy and mother isn't nervous. So May for all the lack of money in her home has an environment which offers the most essential elements for growth and happy learning.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 28.—It looks as if the screen's second big invasion of the territory of the radio is on.

The imminent return of Rudy Vallee to Hollywood to appear in a feature picture is another step in the movie annexation of names made famous over the air.

The assembling of a galaxy of radio stars in one feature, "The Big Broadcast," proved profitable enough at the box-office to spur its producers to further attempts at cashing in on the personalities behind the voice on the air.

Kate Smith At Work
Some of the stars in that feature, such as Burns and Allen and Bing Crosby, periodically have appeared in screen shorts and continue to do so. One of them, Kate Smith, is engaged on a second feature and has another on the slate.

Mack Sennett's most pretentious offering in years, the feature "Hypnotized," stars Moran and Mack, those two Black Crows who rose with their "Early Bird."

Whether the present revived interest in ether names is traceable to a desire to retrieve the fans believed lost to radio or is simply one of the straws at which producers are clutching in their effort to present the novel in film fare, one thing is certain—much more attention is being given to the stories used to exploit the radio people.

Rudy Vallee's first feature, "The Vagabond Lover," was disappointing to many—including the studio that made it—and so was "Check and Double Check," the Amos and Andy film, "The Big Broadcast," too.

thrived on its variety of talent rather than on its story strength.

Rudy Only One of Stars
For Kate Smith's new vehicle, Fannie Hurst, successful in screen writing, concocted the yarn, and Rudy's return to pictures will be made in "International House," a film which apparently will not be fabricated for the sole purpose of presenting the crooner, since Rudy is to be one of three stars in the cast, and the picture will have a plot.

Beck's Malloy, although her first picture was "Walking Down Broadway," will be seen first in "Handle With Care," in the role that Lita Gray Chaplin would have played had Charlie Chaplin not court-vetted the idea of his sons' movie debut.

By JOHN L. COOLEY (AP Financial Writer) New York, Dec. 28.—(AP)—Post-war accumulations of goods and debts in a world of pre-war prices kept the economic scales far off balance in 1932.

SARGON SOFT MASS PILLS ARE THE IDEAL LAXATIVE FOR OLD FOLKS. THEY ARE MILD AND GENTLE, YET THOROUGH IN ACTION.

Unlike ordinary cathartics Sargon Soft Mass Pills do not shock or upset the system. They do their work by gently stimulating the liver to cleanse itself by increasing its production of bile—a more natural and thorough laxative than can ever be devised by man.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills are not like any laxative you have ever taken. They are so gentle and thorough in action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most remarkable of all, their directions call for a gradual reduction of the dose until the point is reached where you no longer require a laxative of any kind.

This remarkable medicine may be obtained from For Sale by Hill Home Drug Co.
