ECONOMY IS KEYNOTE OF LEGISLATURE

Every Measure Heard So Far Has to do With Lower Cost of Government

(By The Associated Press.)
Considering the fact that it had to take time out to change governors, the 1933 General Assembly is off to one of the fastest starts in the history of North Carolina law-making. Economy is the watchword—Abolish it is the slogan and a balanced budget is the aim of a line out of ten men here, and the length is keeping very, very quiet. The legislators arrived in Raleigh with blood in their eyes and began to wield the knife even before the Assembly convened when at the Democratic caucus Tuesday night a move was made to day away with the assistant sergeant-at-arms.

Mr. Overman declined to pay cash in advance but told the young man he would guarantee payment for the tube if the young man would have the service station operator call at the Overman home.

LEGISLATURE HOLDS SHORT SESSION SAT.

Only Few Members Present for 15-Minute Session held This Morning.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 7.—(AP)—The General Assembly of North Carolina "rested today," although the records will show that the House and Senate worked. The House had 27 of its 120 members present when the session opened, and six more came in before it adjourned fifteen minutes after it started. The Senate also lacked a quorum and met less than fifteen minutes. Both Houses will meet again Monday night.

In the House the Sullivan-Martin bill to fix the pay of the presidential electors was taken up as a special order, and after being amended to provide payment at the rate of $10 per day for not exceeding three days, was passed. Mileage was also allowed. When the pay of the legislators was changed from $4 per day to $600 per session, the section of the law providing for electors to receive the same pay as legislators was not changed, and for today's change the electors could have demanded $600 each plus mileage for their services that will require probably only one day. Representative Wombles, of Wake, sent up the amendment.

The House also passed a Senate resolution authorizing the printing of 3,000 copies of the inaugural address of Governor Ehringhaus.

Former University Men Engage In Geological Work

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 7.—Back from Washington, where he and Kenneth R. Byerly of the University Department of Geology and Dr. Crittenden of the Woman's College of the University attended the annual sessions of the Association of American Geographers, Dr. Collier Cobb reports that he learned the University has twenty-five men engaged in geological or geographical work in the various governmental departments of the United States, the service of many running back as much as thirty-five years, and some even longer.

"I made me feel proud when I saw the fine record these men are making," Dr. Cobb said. "They are doing excellent work and are making good salaries."

These men got their start here in Chapel Hill under Mr. Cobb, who, until he went on a part-time teaching basis recently, had been head of the Department of Geology for forty-five years. Dr. W. F. Prouty is now acting head.

W. H. Fry, a former soil scientist who died last week, after correcting the proof of important studies extending over twenty-one years, was one of Dr. Cobb's former pupils.

Bennett, another former student, a soil scientist, who has been conducting and directing studies of erosion, presented a paper entitled "The Technique of the Quantitative Study of Erosion, and some early Results of this Study," which brought out more favorable comment and discussion than any another paper presented.

JOINT CELEBRATION AT CAMPBELL COLLEGE

Bule's Creek, Jan. 7.—Friday, January 13, is the next big day at Campbell College.

NEW OFFICERS KIWANIS CLUB ARE INSTALLED

Rev. E. L. Hillman Is New President of the Organization; Committees Named.

The installation of officers of the Greenville-Kiwanis Club for the year 1933 last night was an occasion for a most interesting and enjoyable meeting. Guy Smith, president for 1932, turned over the gavel to J. Frank Harrington who was in charge of the meeting and directed the installation of E. L. Hillman as president, Dr. R. S. McGeachy, vice-president, and Dave Moore as secretary and treasurer. Chairman Harrington requested the incoming officers to retire from the room and an interesting portrayal of the objectives of the Kiwanis Club was arranged in their absence.

Upon the return of the officers they were first escorted to a table containing two under-privileged children, showing in their dress and appearance the effects of poverty and inattention, and emphasizing the need and opportunities for work among under-privileged children. The new officers were then escorted to a second table showing children better dressed and of a healthier appearance after they had been taken charge of and helped by the work of the Kiwanis Club. The third table contained three bright, healthy children in their teens, very happy and in the best of physical condition as the result of the fine assistance of the Kiwanis Club.

The club had as guests A. B. Sheffield, a member of the Norfolk, Va., Kiwanis Club, and R. L. Powell, secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Powell made an interesting talk on the program for the Chamber of Commerce and asked the co-operation of the Kiwanis Club and other civic organizations.

Rocky Mount, Jan. 7.—Ivey Woodcock, 30, and his wife Country Club road residents, are the possessors of a lusty-lunged baby boy apparently about a month old, who Woodcock said was found on their doorstep, neatly arranged in a basket, at 3 o'clock Thursday morning.

Woodcock told police he had no idea who the parents of the child might be or why they chose his house as the place for leaving the child.

Woodcock lives in a double house, the other half of which is occupied by Dewey Bradley, and he expressed the opinion the child might have been intended for the Bradley doorstep instead of his own. Bradley, however, was quoted as saying he had a house full of children and had no desire for increasing their number by taking charge of the foundling.

Woodcock has several children of his own and will not undertake to continue in charge of the foundling, he said.

ABOUT TOWN

County schools go through their annual terms this year it is going to be necessary for taxpayers to settle their taxes during the next two months.

This was the sentiment of a recent conference between members of the Board of Commission and Board of Education.

It has been stressed all along that schools would not be able to operate through extended terms without prompt settlement of taxes and officials, facing dwindling revenue, have been forced to call the matter to the attention of the people again.

The state runs the schools for the regular term of six months, but the county must provide money for the two months extra term. This places the proposition directly up to the taxpayers.

If they do not want it promptly, if they do not want it then, schools will stop at the expiration of six months more than twenty.

The Democratic leaders of Congress working in conjunction with President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt are planning to balance the budget if such a thing is possible and it is possible if proper sources of taxation are tapped along with sufficient reduction of expenses.

The leading party members at a recent conference with the incoming president agreed to cut $100,000,000 from federal appropriations. That is lots of money, and it is going to be decided more than that to balance the budget. However through such success as beer, gasoline and increased income taxes it was believed the situation could be greatly improved.

Roosevelt will enter the White House in one of the most difficult and trying periods in the history of the nation but that he will put the ship of state on his feet is not doubted after he has been afforded an opportunity to ascertain where to strike.

Building fell off sharply in Greenville during the past year, but even at that there was much repair work going on with erection of more buildings than ever thought.

The city spent over $50,000 for year construction during the year and numbered among this were several new buildings including number of residences.

Fifty thousand dollars isn't much when compared with the five hundred thousand spent in 1929, but in the face of existing business conditions it is a whole lot of money.

While no distinct improvement may be noted in the building field this year, it is believed an upward trend will be in evidence at the end of the year and that the coming of the new year will find much activity in this field.

The rest of the state will rejoice with the Alberman section in sending her first governor to Raleigh in the last hundred years.

The way the people of that section rallied behind Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus in a three-cornered race for the honor was commendable and now that they have achieved the honor which they sought they may all back and pride, fully watch his achievements in one of the most trying times the state has ever experienced.

Mr. Ehringhaus is committed to making the 15 per cent school tax of land and thereby relieve the oppressed landowner of the burden he has carried for so long, but just what he is going to find enough money to make up the deficit is hard to understand.

Yet there are lots of sources untouched by taxation in this state and when they are properly covered it is possible some of the shortage will be relieved.

At any rate, the people will look on with interest, hoping that something may be done to lift the state out of the hole and place it back on the firm ground of financial safety.

The death of former President

Buying Barbara

SYNOPSIS Cruel, crippled, arrogant Mark Lodely settles himself in the London house of the millionaire Farrell Armitage, ready for Armitage to make good a promise to establish him as an artist. He even takes Farrell's room, although Farrell has fitted an expensive suite for Miss Barbara Quentin, Mark's fiancée, has agreed to postpone their wedding a year; Farrell hopes to win her in that time. Meanwhile Leila Cane, who loves Mark, has paid Patsy Raoul, eccentric actress, to have an affair with Mark.

Chapter 24 ENCOUNTER NO. TWO

It was not on that evening but the next that Mark Lodely sat in the Novelty Theater and watched Patsy Raoul.

He sat at the back of the box, his eyes keen with excitement. Down below on the stage, bare except for a table and a chair and a screen, Patsy Raoul, thin, plain, draped in greenish black, was being a whole dispensary full of women; all of them were under-nourished, some dandled infants, one confessed to being 'nearly as drunk as I was last Christmas.'

Patsy Raoul was also the dispenser, the nurse and the policeman who came in once to restore order and once to fetch the drunken woman home because her child had just been burned to death.

'Doctor, you'll 'ave ter gimme a drop o' something fer me nerves now, woncher?'

Then there was the crash of hand-clapping and the wondering murmur that lifts a success to a sensation. Mark did not clap, but he leaned forward, trying to will her to look up.

She had eyes for no one yet. She nodded, curly enough, to the packed house and then moved the screen, revealing a piano. She sat down to it and began to talk, to muse aloud to the hissing comment of the music. People began to smile; suddenly she was singing in French and smiles broadened, those who could not understand her showing a rather more open appreciation than those who could.

Then she sang, surprisingly true and sweet, a little country 'love-plaint. Mark peered at his program and discovered that this was a composition of her own. He had some how thought it might be.

When she had finished and taken her last call, he had to sit back. She had not looked up. He waited for the interval, then summoned an attendant.

'I want to see Miss Raoul before she leaves the theater.'

'That will be all right, Sir—will you see me.'

He waited, smiling to himself, tapping a parcel with his long fingers. The next 'turn' was over before the attendant returned with the message that Miss Raoul would see him. Even then he did not hurry. He adjusted his crutch, his parcel and himself with care. It was fully ten minutes later, after an unfurried journey up and down stairs and along passages in the wake of a sympathetic dresser, that he entered Miss Raoul's room.

It held a good many people, none of whom paid his particular attention. He did not resent this—he sank down on a couch and undid his parcel. From the welter of conversation he gathered that amongst those present were a woman writer, a man-dressmaker and an individual in a bowler-hat who was to have been settled last Monday. On an opposite couch a man younger than Mark craned forward to see Miss Raoul and then huddled back again and drew frenziedly what he had seen.

Mark watched him without rancor. He was quite sure his work was very bad.

After a reasonable time, as the cross-crisp of talk showed no prospect of abating, Mark dragged himself along the couch, and, bending a little, swung his parcel neatly on to Miss Raoul's table. It displaced some jars and bottles and the mandrill-maker turned to stare; but Miss Raoul, still arguing with the bowler-hatted one, picked it up and mechanically began to undo it.

Her screech of excitement when Mark's sketches of her lay open to her gaze, stamped her forever an artist. For these were not caricatures, they did not display her art but only herself, her ugliness, her unwomanliness. And yet they did not make her just any ugly scarecrow of a woman. She was magnificently—someone.

She pushed the admiring circle aside.

'Go! Be away! I have not money now, not anything. I am break. Which way should I check write when I have not any money?' There was a great deal of noise, but she Calvin Coolidge was received with profound regret in this and other countries. Occupying the White House during the greatest period of prosperity the nation ever knew, President Coolidge was the cynosure of all eyes, although he seldom ever said anything to attract attention.

London considers him fortunate that he did not come along at a later date when the financial fabric of the entire world crumbled, leaving each nation in despair and dismay.

London is right in this connection. As it is Mr. Coolidge, despite his unimpressive stature, will go down in history as one of the nation's great presidents—great because he had sense enough not to talk when talking might have made his administration comfortable instead of supremely comfortable.

Mark seized a curious chance to torture his hostess, Monday.

By QUINTON JAMES That collection which recently brought less than $1,000 at a London auction although it had cost the late czar of Russia $250,000 seems to be a unique one.

It is a pictorial record of the Romanoff dynasty for 300 years, consisting of artists' proofs, color trials and essays made in preparation for the issue in 1913 of a set of stamps for the issue of the tercentenary of the Russian imperial family.

Four years were spent in making the collection, which comprises every step in the process of producing a stamp. Each stamp bears the portrait of a monarch, from Michael Theodore-vitch to Nicholas II.

'Little Father' The original does and plates were destroyed at the time of the revolution.

The czar is said to have valued the collection highly for he took care to have it with him in exile at Tobolsk and it was smuggled out of Russia after the revolution by a young Russian flying officer.

Concerning Sales The government's business with stamp collectors has grown to such proportions that plans for the new post office department building include a room to be devoted to the department's philatelic agency, and the office may be extended to the larger cities.

Michael L. Eidsness, jr., chief of the stamp division, says that sales to collectors for the year closing June, 1932, amounted to $337,237, an increase of $83,000 over the previous year. 'And indications are that the sum is only about 35 per cent of the sale to collectors,' he said, 'for many buy straight from their local offices.'

Prescott Thorpe of the editorial department of Scott Stamp & Coin Co. Ltd., says that in the past year the values of United States stamps have held their own or have gone ahead, while there has been a 15 per cent drop in the value of foreign ones.

'The market's stability,' he said, 'can be laid to the fact that there has been no dumping of large collections during the depression. He believes that on an average a collection will increase in value about five per cent annually, but he says the average collector considers the game as a hobby rather than as an investment.'

No Party Programs The fact that neither side had presented any inclusive party program is traceable directly to the absence of recognized and effective leadership.

The Republican old guard, in control of the party organization in Senate and House, took no steps to support President Hoover's recommendations because it did not care to rehabilitate him as the controlling force in the party as a whole.

The Democrats had been divided and hesitant because they were uncertain how far President-Elect Roosevelt wanted them to go, and in what direction.

The Congressional gesture toward remaining on the job during the Christmas holidays may have saved some criticism back home, but actually the accomplishments of record were not impressive. The Senate, where the real log-jam always occurs in short sessions, mustered only a corpora's guard at its infrequent five-minute meetings.

The whole performance was deg-

NORTH CAROLINA QUALIFIES FOR "BIG TEN"

It is with real pleasure that it is announced that national headquarters of the American Legion has just announced that the tabulation of all department records cards and dues that were mailed within the time limits designated, show that the North Carolina Department of the American Legion has qualified for membership in the "Big Ten" Legion departments this year. Legionnaires throughout the old North State, who have been and still are doing their utmost to speed up the complete re-enrollment of their respective posts, will rejoice in knowing that by such devotion to duty and by putting that same old fighting spirit of '17 and '18 into action in their respective posts their department has won this coveted honor among the 58 Legion departments in the United States and foreign countries.

Department Commander Bryce P. Beard and all the other department officials are rejoicing with the active post and district officials and the individual go-getting Legionnaires all over North Carolina who helped make possible this achievement. This is a real accomplishment of which every active Legionnaire in North Carolina may justly feel proud, for, as Kipling has so well said: "It ain't the guns or armament Nor the army as a whole. But the everlasting team work Of every bloomin' soul."

that enabled the North Carolina department to qualify for which there is such keen competition on the part of the 48 Legion departments within the continental limits of the United States and by the ten foreign departments of the Legion. The national organization has conducted four annual telegraphic roll calls in the past four years and the department of North Carolina has qualified for membership in the "Big Ten" during two of such roll calls.

The "Big Ten" departments, all of which have gotten away to better starts of the other state departments, are expected to set the pace for all the other Legion Departments during 1933. What it takes to set the pace the Legionnaires of North Carolina have those other states that are looking to the old North State Legionnaires to set the pace will not look in vain.

There were no better soldiers who served in the late World War than the soldiers who went from North Carolina, and there are no better Legionnaires anywhere than the Legionnaires of North Carolina.

"BILLION DOLLAR SCANDAL" EXPOSES GIGANTIC SWINDLE. A shocking exposure of the scandal that rocked a nation will be seen when "Billion Dollar Scandal" opens Wednesday at the State. The film is a melodrama dealing with a sensational expose of a gigantic swindle, conceived and perpetrated by a group of men high in financial and executive councils of the government. Based on a play called "The Truth Racket," it tells how the whole crooked structure carefully built up by this group crumbles when one apparently unimportant man—a masseur and gym teacher—dares to tell the truth.

About NEW YORK By WILLIAM GAINES New York, Jan. 9.—P. C. Christmas snows are accountable for those wide smiles on the faces of New York sled dealers.

For the first time in recent years, so far I recall, sleds had the featured spots in toy windows here. For the last several Christmases, the stores had offered them, of course, but sort of half-heartedly and incidentally. This Christmas almost every youngster, spurred by the fun of a couple of grand snows, wanted a sled.

Al of which recalls a talk I had with a representative of a prominent toy manufacturer several months back. The firm was putting on the market, for the first time, a sled on wheels, for coasting down pavements.

"We expect to sell a lot of these here," he said. "New York kids haven't seen enough snow lately to make much of a market for regular sleds. Now all they'll have to have is a brisk day and a good imagination."

In three families of my acquaintances, while the household pet still is in the age of innocence, the letters to Santa were headed by requests for bright, shiny sleds with regular runners.

Wouldn't it be just like New York weather if we went snowless from now to June?

Lady, How Could You? Charged with energy by one of the recent snows, I got out in the backyard and fashioned snow men and animals of heroic proportions—yes, there was that much snow; the drifts were two feet deep in spots. My masterpiece, I thought, was a dinosaur. Oh, I admit the neck was a trifle short; otherwise it looked very fine to me. But an upstairs neighbor spoiled my day. Herself imbued with rosy-cheeked enthusiasm, she popped her head out the window and said of my dinosaur: "Isn't that just mar-vel-ous! It's a big old turtle, isn't it?"

Street Scenes Rushing along Forty-second to catch a train at Grand Central station becomes a matter of side-stepping and stiff-arming almost as many sidewalk peddlers as pedestrians.

Many of the hawkers have noise-producing toys—balloons that make noises like goats or sheep as they deflate, bird whistles and such things.

Near the Ritz there are two dog shops just a few steps from each other, one on Madison and the other around the corner on Forty-seventh. They stocked up with alluring exhibits of pups for the holiday trade, and people clustered in front of the windows at all times.

The farm brought right to Forty-second street!

Think of it, 12,000,000 people, or approximately 10% of the population of the United States have accepted Building and Loan as a method of saving.

Such general recognition proves its merit.

EIGHTH STREET CHRISTIAN CHURCH Tomorrow morning the members of the Greenville Ministerial Association (with the exception of the rector of the Episcopal Church) are exchanging pulpits as an expression of friendliness, fellowship and goodwill. No intimation has been given concerning the churches to which the various ministers will go. Each congregation will have as its guest speaker who was chosen by lot. This is a fine thing to do. We talk so much about fellowship and unity but do so little about them that one wonders that the world has listened to us as long as it has. The divided churches of Christendom will not be united by this friendly exchange of pulpits tomorrow but it will be a friendly gesture in the right direction. The Eighth Street Christian Church, both its minister and its members, extend to the guest who comes to us tomorrow a most cordial welcome and the minister of this congregation goes to his appointment confident that the same friendly welcome awaits him.

LOCAL HIGHS BEAT RALEIGH

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 7.—Greenville High School cagers got a chance for revenge on Raleigh's high school basketball team last night—and the Pitt boys secured revenge for a defeat handed them in a pre-Christmas game.

Coach Soup Porter's crew registered a 21 to 13 win over the locals in the Broughton High School gym last night to even things for Raleigh's 20 to 23 win in the earlier meeting at Greenville.

Silly Gibos set the pace for the visitors and bagged three of the seven field goals made by his team. However, top scoring for Greenville was by David Hardee, with one field goal and five free throws for seven points.

Chappell Named Captain
Theodore Chappell, who was elected captain of the local unit at a meeting of players preceding the game, was Raleigh's best performer and led the locals with a pair of field goals. Chappell went out of the game because of too many personal fouls. Bagwell's defensive play featured for Raleigh.

The teams fought on close terms until late in the second quarter when, after breaking a six-all tie, Greenville pulled in front to hold an 11 to 7 margin as the half ended.

TAR HEELS OPEN BIG FIVE RACE

WEATHERS - FORWARD

Chapel Hill, Jan. 7.—The Carolina quint will open its Big Five season with Davidson at Charlotte tonight. Pictured above are Bo Shepard, youthful coach, and the three regulars back from the 1932 team, which went to the finals of the Southern Conference tournament, losing the title to Georgia 26-24.

Wilmer Hines is captain. He led the scorers last year and was All that somp'n? I ask you."

CAPTAIN HINES - FORWARD

Southern second team forward, while Vergil Weathers made the first All-Southern at the same position. Hines is also a ranking tennis player and a former national junior champion.

Dave McCachren is a flashy guard and will be playing in his home town when the Tar Heels open their Big Five card with Davidson tonight.

It has been a tough year and looks like a tougher winter for the sport of thoroughbred horse-racing. It may be an uphill proposition all the way to keep going, but the proof of the persistence and confidence of the sport's backers is that the horses are still galloping.

Take New Orleans, for instance, since the struggle there precedes the probability of another at Miami before the winter is over.

"Jefferson Park," across the Orleans Parish line," writes Harry O. Martin, sports editor of the New Orleans States, "cut their purses to $400 and opened the gates free to the public. They did this as a last resort to get the people to the track. The play in the mutuels the first week was terrible, but it is now up to about $50,000 daily.

"The running will shift to the Fair Grounds from January 23 to March 18, inclusive at a time when the winter tourists are headed for New Orleans and the Mardi Gras.

The Original Optimist
"Joseph A. Murphy, who has charge of the Hawthorne track in Chicago, has practically the same men from Chicago interested in the Fair Grounds now. They've taken over control of Col. E. R. Bradley's interest.

"Murphy is the original optimist. He has outlined what we think here a splendid winter program. For a long time Colonel Bradley tried to hold up the minimum purse offering to $1,000, but last year came down to $800. The minimum purse this year will be $500.

"The idea of running the Louisiana Derby as the last event of the season is a zone to keep up interest and at the same time try and develop a candidate or two for the Kentucky Derby.

"As you know, Omar Khayyam and later Black Gold were Derby winners here and later went up the line and won the Kentucky Derby. Bagenbaggage, which finished second to Bubbling Over in the 1926 Kentucky, was developed here. So was Boot to Boot.

"Fair Grounds has one of the most beautiful tracks in the country, made so by the generosity of Colonel Bradley, who made it a show-place and called it the Horsemen's Playgrounds."

Five-Day Week
There has been some talk that the New York season in 1933 would have to be curtailed and some of the smaller tracks closed, due to the shrinkage in receipts and a system of "oral" wagering which benefits neither the management, the state nor the bettor.

Due to the legal technicalities involved, there is no chance for any restoration of horse-racing wagering in New York on a pari-mutuel basis. The agitation to rit, prompted by business depression, has been too dilatory to be effective. Opposition too, would be difficult to overcome. Meanwhile, however, a re-trenchment program and perhaps a "five-day" racing week will be in order for the new year.

Farm poultry records kept in Tennessee indicated that 75 per cent of the income from poultry was from egg sales.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

"While U. S. C.'s vaunted power and running attack of yesterday—when Pinckert, Shaver, Druary, Williams, Duffield and Kaer were toting the on-load—has not been displayed by the present band of Trojans, the 1932 outfit is a much more DANGEROUS team when it gets the ball than ever before," writes Frank Finch from Santa Monica, Calif.

"Figures don't lie, and they tell you that although U. S. C. hasn't 'hogged' the ball so much in its games this year, when the Trojans do get possession of it, they go places!

"The best example was the Notre Dame game. Statistics show that the Trojans had fifty-six plays from scrimmage, as against seventy-nine for the Irish. Then, the Irish had twenty-three more chances to score, but were unable to, while Howard Jones' athletes scored twice!

"U. S. C. beat Washington State's strong Cougar team 20 to 0, yet U. S. C. only had 68 plays from scrimmage as compared to 67 for the Cougars.

"The Trojans had 19 more plays from scrimmage than Utah (88 to 69), yet the Rocky Mountaineers were massacred, 35 to 0!

"Oregon State was defeated, 10 to 0, although the Trojans only had seven more scrimmage plays than the Beavers.

"The Trojans might be compared to Jack Dempsey. A boxer might land a flock of love taps on Dempsey's chin, but when Dempsey saw an opening, he SOCKED!

Faging Dr. Dickinson

"Southern California rooters were pretty well 'burned up' when Professor Dickinson awarded the Rockne Memorial Award to Michigan.

"Perhaps Professor Dickinson can explain how a champion (and the Trojans won the Rockne Award in 1931) can have his crown snatched off his noble brow after he has defended it against all comers.

"Another thing: While Ernie Smith has proved his worth as an All-America star, observers think that Ernie is just one wee bit better than Captain 'Tax' Brown, Aaron (Pat) Rosenberg and Ray Sparling.

"Although the Trojans walloped Pittsburgh, 47 to 14, three years ago, they don't figure themselves 'overwhelming favorites' in the forthcoming encounter with the Panthers. Er Trojan is set for a great battle, and there is every reason to believe that such will be the case."

102-Yard Pant

"Get a load of this," writes Jimmie Heffron from Anaheim, Calif. "Anaheim's Colonists playing Corona (high schools): Anaheim's ball on own 30-yard line. Bert Kidd 153 right end, left foot punter, dropped back to his own 18. Kicked, ball hit ground on Corona's 12-yard line, rolled behind goal lines. Was picked up 10 yards back of goal posts.

"If I can add, that is 102 yards from kicker's toe to where ball stopped. And, not a breath of wind stirring, not enough to lift the stars and stripes from the flag-pole. Ain't

HELPS for HOUSEWIVES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—(AP) The fact inactive people need less food than active should be watched by elderly persons, the Bureau of Economics says, since excess quantities of energy food are stored as fat.

A weekly food budget for a couple in the seventies should include: Flour, six pounds; milk, 12 quarts; potatoes, five pounds; dried beans, peas, nuts, 1-2 pound; tomatoes, citrus fruits, 2 pounds; leafy green and yellow vegetables, 3 pounds; dried fruits, 12 pound; other vegetables, fruits, 2-3 pounds; butter, other fats, one pound; sugar, molasses, one pound; lean meat, poultry, fish, one pound; eggs, one dozen.

Toys Cure Baby's Bad Habits

Thumb sucking or finger sucking often begins soon after the birth of a child. It must be stopped early. One of the best ways to break the habit is to keep the child's hands occupied with some toy. Do not punish the baby, as it will only keep his attention on the habit and may strengthen it.

Beware of Cold Germs

Washington, D. C.—Clothes used by a person with a cold should not be washed with the general washing for the family. Eoline is the simplest method of sterilizing such garments. Another way the clothes may be treated is by immersion for an hour in one of the following solutions: a five per cent solution of formaldehyde; a one per cent solution of phenol; or a 1-2 per cent solution of cresols compositus.

If Dresses 'Cup,' Try This

When the skirt of a dress "cups" in back, raise the skirt on the belt at the back so the gathers will hang straight from the belt to the hem. If a one-piece dress needs the alteration, raise the entire back at the shoulder seams.

A Washington Day Book

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, D. C., Jan. 7.—Those who sat in the Senate gallery during the last few minutes before the Senators quit for Christmas saw enacted one of the most delightful bits of comedy of the short session.

It was one of the Senate's prize showmen, Ashurst, of Arizona, who provided the fun. And it was the scholarly, dignified Bingham, of Connecticut, who was his foil.

Bingham was making a desperate effort to push through a bill turning over some cotton to the Red Cross. He occupied the floor through the courtesy of Jim Watson, of Indiana. Through some rather skillful maneuvering Ashurst obtained the floor and began to explain his views on prohibition.

Bingham Disgusted
Bingham looked disgusted, more so perhaps because earlier in the day his beer bill had been side-tracked by Democratic votes, among them that of Ashurst. In the midst of the Arizonaan's speech, Bingham turned to Watson and in sotto voce said something about people always making alibis.

Ashurst wheeled on him and charged.

"Mr. President," he shouted, "I didn't hear that, but by the peculiar snarl and sneer which seemed to accompany what he said, I assume that it was not complimentary. Will the Senator repeat?"

Bingham would not, and Watson, a bit alarmed, tried to get back the floor, but Ashurst wouldn't hear to it. In a thundering voice, he continued:

"I admire the scholarship of the Senator of Connecticut. I admire him as a man. We are friendly in the extreme. But the great fault with him, the great defect of his political career, is that he judges other men's motives by his own.

"The country knows his own.

'Diamond Dick' Today

"The country knows me. The country knows the Senator from Connecticut. I am content."

A Laugh All Around
Joe Robinson doubled up with laughter. Even the usually serious Sheppard, of Texas, chuckled.

To that group on the Democratic side so amused, Bingham unsolicited, made his way. He and Ashurst soon had their arms locked, laughing as heartily as the others.

"I didn't hear what you said, Hi," said Ashurst, laughing.

"It wasn't meant for you, Henry," replied Bingham.

"But, ho! ho! ho!" interjected Robinson, "Henry caught the snarl and sneer all right."

BERLIN CANARIES THRILL IN CHAMPIONSHIP TEST

Berlin, Jan. 7.—(AP)—Resembling a prodigy's audition before an opera impresario, tests will be made here late in December to pick the best singer among 136 selected canaries.

At their annual show 45 organizations of canary breeders in Berlin will each submit three entries for the championship. The scores are based upon the tone of seven standard trills.

There also will be exhibited a parrot which is reported able to sing four classical German lieder.
