Buying Barbara by Julia Cleft-Adams & Author of "YOU CAN'T HUNT"

SYNOPSIS: The arrogant Mark Lodely has sent his fiancée, Barbara Quentin, two curt telegrams to join him in London. Barbara refuses, until a third, more conciliatory, arrives. She dashes for her train, and would have missed it but for the lift given her by Sir James Cane. Sir James appears ill at ease. Mark is living in Farrell Armitage's house, and Farrell is launching him as an artist and trying to cure his lameness so that Barbara, whom Farrell loves, can choose between painter and benefactor on an equable basis.

Chapter 36 UNWANTED GUEST

"Here's y'are, miss," said the taxi-driver. Barbara got reluctantly out, dismissed the cab and stood at a loss in front of Farrell Armitage's house. It was evident that there was merry-making within. The house was brilliantly lighted. Barbara gripped her suitcase firmly and attacked the front door. "Mr. Armitage?" "Mr. Armitage is not at home, madam."

"She had put down the suitcase and now suddenly wished that she could sit down on it. "Then I should like to see Mrs. Lodely." A woman in a wonderful evening gown was talking to someone at the back of the hall, someone who gleamed and glittered and who seemed faintly familiar to Barbara. How wonderfully these two were dressed! Her own grey tweeds and the pretty scarf that had looked so charming on a railway journey now seemed merely dowdy. The footman was evening her doubtfully.

"Mrs. Lodely has retired, madam." "Then please tell Mr. Lodely that Miss Quentin is here." Barbara, growing irritated, had given her name with intense clearness—and one of the gorgeous figures in the background turned.

"Barbara, what in the world—?" It was Lelia who came darting towards her in a very magnificent gown in a filmy green gown powdered with gold. "I came because Mark wired for me," explained Barbara, feeling more than ever out of place as the sound of music came throbbing down from the upper part of the house. "He said he wanted me to come at once. Your father was awfully kind; he sent me by road to Taunton."

"Mark said he wanted you? What the devil for?" "It is not unusual for a man to want to see his fiancée," Barbara reminded her coldly. Why was Lelia so hostile? "I came because Mark wired for me," explained Barbara, feeling more than ever out of place as the sound of music came throbbing down from the upper part of the house.

"You look tired out," commented Lelia, very nonchalant on the opposite side of the hearth. "I imagine you'd like to rest here till the party has gone home—if you insist on seeing Mark tonight. You know it's midnight already?" "If it is Mark's party, I don't see why I shouldn't go to it. He probably expects me."

"Have you brought a gladder rag than that with you?" Lelia's glance at the tweeds and the scarf was quizzical. "No, I haven't." "Then I advise you to stay down here, my dear. Mark has no use for the stains of travel at the moment. Let me tell him you've arrived."

"Very well!" Barbara knew she was being ungracious, but she did not care. "I'll wait here till he comes. Judy's in bed, I hear? Is she ill?" "Not in the slightest. She was huffy because Mark wouldn't introduce her to his friends. I'll go and tell Mark."

She lounged off and the terriers simultaneously leaped on to Barbara's lap, turned round three times and settled themselves to sleep. She must have dozed, too, under the warm burden of the sleeping dogs. For when she struggled upright in the creaking old chair the clock on the mantelpiece told her that it was nearly two.

dences of such personages as Nelson A. Rockefeller, Otto H. Kahn, Nicholas Murray Butler, A. C. Blumenthal, Joseph P. Day, and Philip Le-Boutillier.

But don't think that just because they do appear in the book, anyone can call up and get a cheery "hello" from Pierpont or Owen D. right off the bat.

Pint of Gold Speaking of A. C. Blumenthal—his wife, Peggy Gears, former chorus girl, has been coming right along as a Broadway producer. All of the billing has given her entire credit, but it is noticed the other day when Lenore Ulric brought suit over the "Peggy Gears productions," she sued—A. C. Blumenthal.

Here is one of the most interesting little bundles in town, by the way—this Blumenthal. Great wealth in a small package. At least, that's the general understanding and evidently it's the truth. One of the favorite Broadway rumors is to the effect that A. C. (or "Blumie") can show more ready cash than most of the town's millionaires of longer established reputation.

Blumenthal stands only 5 feet, 4 and weighs no more than 125 pounds. In a crowd (and he manages to appear in swanky crowds, night after night) he is completely hidden by the circle of gushers that envelops him. The supposition is that if A. C. speaks the word, he can work magic in the theater or the movies.

Meet Peggy Peggy Fears, his second wife, was one of the Ziegfeld show girls. They met on the west coast, when Peggy had movie ambitions. She is one of the town's fashion plates and beauties, with a frankly manufactured blond streak through her brunet, long-bobbed locks. She's taller than Blumie. Clever, too, as anyone who ever talked to her must admit.

The diminutive Blumie is rather backgroundish, so far as the glamorous Peggy is concerned. This dark haired serious faced little man seldom laughs, but is pleasant, dapper and alert. The Blumenthals were great friends of ex-Mayor James J. Walker.

Beauty Hints By DOLORES GRANT (Stage Actress) Although many women continue the old-fashioned custom of keeping sachet bags in their wardrobe, I find that flowers may serve the same purpose. After wearing a corsage, or returning home I always place the fading flowers in my wardrobe and the odor of the blossoms saturates my clothes.

Cows Are Heavy Drinkers Raleigh, N. C.—(AP)—An average cow requires 70 pounds of drinking water daily, says Dr. C. D. Grinnells, in charge of dairy investigations for North Carolina experiment station. Lack of pure water, he says, is the cause of many of the ills of the dairy cow.

Little Town Makes Big Claim Loyalton, Calif.—(AP)—This little town of 821 population has laid claim to being the third largest city in California, exceeded only in size by Los Angeles and San Diego. The claim is made on area rather than population with 78.84 square miles in the town's boundaries.

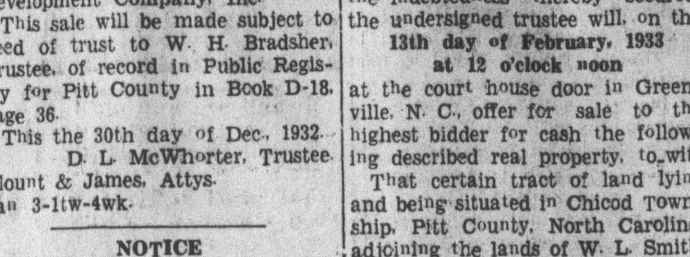

FANS CHEER AS DEALS FOR DIAMOND STARS FAIL Seattle, Wash.—(AP)—For once Seattle baseball fans agree that President Bill Klepper or the Seattle Baseball Club of the Pacific Coast League did a good stroke of business at the annual major league meeting.

Against her will, Monday, Barbara is forced to appraise Mark at his true value.

After a business session that lasted about an hour, Mrs. Ficklen, in a few appropriate remarks, introduced Miss Sallie Joyner Davis of East Carolina Teachers College who entertained the committee and a dozen invited guests for half an hour.

She discussed doctors and medicine in the colonies of North Carolina. Her interesting presentation of the subject showed a thorough knowledge of history of medicine and of North Carolina colonies.

After this program the guests were invited into the dining room where they were greeted by a beautifully appointed table with a centerpiece of pink roses, Roman hyacinths, winter chrysanthemums and sweet peas.

At each end of the table, coffee and tea were graciously served by Mrs. L. C. Skinner and Mrs. E. B. Ferguson, respectively, while a delicious salad course, decorated cakes, nuts and conserve grapefruit peel were served buffet style.

Mrs. E. W. Myers of the Greensboro committee, Mrs. L. C. Arthur of Greenville, and Mrs. Hyman Phillips of Tarboro, who belong to the Wilmington committee, were other Dames invited to the social meeting.—Reported.

Mrs. Warren Club Hostess. Mrs. B. S. Warren was hostess at a very delightful meeting of her bridge club yesterday afternoon at her home on Fourth street.

Japanese quince, sprays of pussy-willow and trailing ivy were attractively arranged in bowls and vases.

For high score, Mrs. A. J. Moore was awarded dusting powder.

The hostess served a tempting salad course with coffee.

Mrs. Rose Ill. Friends of Mrs. J. H. Rose will regret to learn that she is ill at her home on East Tenth street.

MISSES PHILLIPS AND CRAWFORD ENTERTAIN. Misses Lillie Dean Phillips and Mamie Crawford delightfully entertained a host of friends at the home of the former, last Thursday night, in honor of Bernice Crawford.

Pine was artistically used in decorating the home. Dancing and games were enjoyed throughout the evening.

The hostesses served salted nuts and candies.

Mr. Hadley Recovers. George B. W. Hadley who has been confined to his home on Evans street with the flu, is able to be out again.

NOTICE MEMBERS CITIZENSHIP DEPARTMENT. The citizenship department of the Woman's Club urge all club members to be at the court house Monday morning at 10 o'clock to hear the lecture on the Institute of Government by Judge Crady.

CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS TO BE HERE JANUARY 26

One of the three one-act plays which the Carolina Playmakers will present when they come to East Carolina Teachers College Thursday evening, Jan. 26, will be "Stumbling in Dreams," a folk comedy of Tin Pan Alley, written by George Brown of New York.

To him the natives of Tin Pan Alley are home-folks. Just as the Carolina folk-plays are cast from students who know the people they are to portray, so has "Stumbling in Dreams" been cast from students who come from New York and know the types and manners of their characters.

Mr. Brown himself plays the juvenile lead in the play.

"Stumbling in Dreams" is not Mr. Brown's first composition. He comes from a musical and theatrical family, and is the nephew of Lew Brown, well known impresario of New York musical show bits.

One of the features of the play will doubtless be the singing of "Stumbling in Dreams," a song written and sung by the author. Since he composed his song for the play he was writing in Prof. Kock's playwriting class at the University of North Carolina, he has received a contract from De Sylva, Brown and Henderson, music publishers of New York, for publication, and it will be on the music stands before long.

Grimesland P. T. A. To Meet. The January meeting of the Grimesland Parent-Teacher Association will be held in the high school auditorium Monday night, January 23.

The guest speaker of the evening will be Supt. H. H. McLean of Beaufort county. The public is cordially invited.

RADIO BULLETIN BOARD AT LIBRARY. On Friday and Saturday of each week notices of special week-end radio features will be posted on the bulletin board at Sheppard Memorial Library. Be sure to read the item on the board today and then listen in at the hour mentioned.

Ballard's X Road. We know our friends have missed us for there are lots of people interested in these little items of everyday life. Some who were born here—some who lived here for just a short time—many who are now living far, far away—still they love this community and feel a keen interest in all that affects us.

A little flu has interfered with our weekly visit, but many interesting things have happened. Some of our citizens have moved into other neighborhoods and some have moved into our community. Among the former are Messrs. Fred Crawford, Lester Melawhorn, S. C. Flake, Fordyce Baldray and Jasper Baker.

Among those who have recently moved here are Messrs. Wooten, Hardy and W. H. Elks. We bid them all welcome.

The wedding bells rang for Mr. Hubert Hagens and Miss Annie Briley. They were married by Rev. Mr. Mason, pastor of the Free Will Baptist Church of Ayden. They will make their home near here. Our best wishes.

Mrs. Cleveland Williams, who was spending some time with Mrs. Elbert Tyson was called home Tuesday evening by the illness of her daughter. We hope she soon recovers.

Mr. Thomas Pilgreen visited his son, Mrs. Edward Pilgreen, who has recently had a stroke. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Talks To Parents

FRIGHTENING OTHERS. By Alice Judon Peale. One of the unpleasant tricks which children often practice is that of frightening others. Leaping out of dark corners with blood curdling screams, dressing up in sheet and masks and playing ghosts, telling baby brother that the bogie man is after him—such odd ideas of fun are bound to be familiar to every mother.

Why do children do this sort of thing? Is it sheer cruelty toward the younger or timid child? Sometimes it is perhaps just that, especially where motives of jealousy enter into the picture.

Often, however, the child's attempt to frighten others is to be understood as an expression of his wish to conquer his own fears.

Because his sudden loud noises, of bogie men, wild animals and fire he conjures up these things in an effort to familiarize himself with them, to live through them from the angle of the agent rather than the victim.

Thus by identifying himself with these terrifying visions and by frightening others with them he triumphs over his own fears, and experiences extreme pleasure in the process.

Since this is so, probably the best way to stop such behavior is to give the child insight into his motives. It will be necessary, of course, patiently to point out to him again and again the meaning of his actions. Only when he has thoroughly assimilated the new self-knowledge will his conduct be affected by it.

Meanwhile he should be encouraged to talk freely of his fears, or merely unburdening himself to a loved and trusted individual tends to diminish them.

In conclusion: the public conscience has been played upon; our system of public education is impractical in many ways; it has, furthermore, become a "racket" thru the abuse of rapacious politicians who profess to be educators. CHARLES SHUFF.

Thedford's Black-Draught

"We have used Thedford's Black-Draught in our home for about 20 years and have found it to be a reliable medicine," writes Mrs. Joe G. Roberts, of Forterville, Ala. "A friend recommended it to me a long time ago and it has proved its worth to me. Black-Draught is good for constipation and to rid the system of bodily poison. I find that taking Black-Draught prevents the bilious headache which I used to have. I take a dose of Black-Draught, dry, as I need it!" Thousands of men and women have found how well Black-Draught works in the relief of many little common disorders due to constipation. Costs only 1 cent or less a dose.

GOLDSBORO DROPS TWO GAMES HERE

Last night in the high school gym the girls' basketball team, inspired by their "chic" new uniforms, defeated the girls' team from Goldsboro 34 to 14 and the boys' team took a 14 game from the Goldsboro boys' team.

In the girls' game Lillian Etheridge was the high scorer with 17 points to her credit; Doris Crawford was next, with nine. Particularly outstanding was the guarding by Isabelle Whitehurst and Captain Gladys Gaston. A girl named Privette and another, Adams, did most of the scoring for Goldsboro, each netting six points.

Cliff Madrin, in our opinion, played the best game on the floor last night, excelling in every department of the game. Gibbs was again high scorer, this time shooting six field goals. The whole team played so well that it is hard to choose any outstanding player. Roger Taylor and J. T. Windham played fine games, and so did David Hardee, particularly good in breaking up the opposing team's offense.

It has been a long time since so perfect an exhibition of basketball has taken place here. Both Goldsboro teams played well, and it must be taken into consideration that the service of a regular coach.

Girls' Game
Greenville—Forwards: Lucille Hill (6), Lillian Etheridge (17), Lynette Dixon (6).
Guards—Isabelle Whitehurst and Ada Hearne; Gladys Gaston (captain).
Goldsboro—Forwards: Davis (2), Privette (6), captain; Adams (8).
Guards: Massey, Edgerton and Peacock.
Substitutions—Greenville: Crawford (9) for Hill, Gaylord for Dixon; Woolard for Hearne; Dunn for Woolard.
Substitutions—Goldsboro: McBride for Adams; Simon for Massey.

Cadet Quint To Appear At U. N. C. Soon

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 21.—V. M. I.'s Cadets almost monopolize Carolina's schedule for next week, being scheduled to send their teams against Chapel Hill and the Tar Heels in every winter sport on Carolina's calendar except freshman basketball.

The two schools will meet in varsity basketball here Friday night at 8:30 o'clock, and in freshman boxing here Saturday night at 7:15 and in varsity boxing at 8:30 o'clock.

The basketball game between Carolina's flying Tar Heels, who are undefeated in the Southern Conference, and the strong V. M. I. team is commanding special attention. The Cadets beat Maryland which in turn defeated Duke, and the Blue Devils appear to be Carolina's strongest rival for honors in the Big Five.

An outside attraction on next week's calendar will be the appearance here Thursday night at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of Coach John Kenfield and the Carolina tennis team, of Big Bill Tilden and his party of professionals in a series of exhibition tennis matches.

Tilden is looked to meet Hans Nusselein, probably the greatest player Germany has produced since the war, in singles. In doubles Tilden and Bruce Barnes, who is a former national intercollegiate champion and who holds the professional doubles title of the country with Tilden, will play Nusselein and Emmett Pare, who is a former National Claycourt champion.

The only Carolina contest not with V. M. I. next week will be a basketball game which the Carolina Freshmen and Oak Ridge quints will play preliminary to the V. M. I. game Friday night and which is scheduled for 7:15 o'clock Friday night.

Campbell College Here Tonight

Although the E. C. T. Teachers lost a close game to High Point College Thursday night, they feel as if they will be able to stage a come back against Campbell College tonight.

The Teachers have won four out of the six games played this season and hope to hold the percentage in the win and lost column tonight.

Campbell has lost only one game this year and will come here fresh from Langley Field where they doubled the score on the Quantic Marines.

All things considered, the game will be exceptionally close and fast. It will start at 8 o'clock in the campus building.

Prof. E. E. Blosson reports that the Orion stars are the most massive and hottest of all the stars. Their surface temperatures are believed to be at least as high as 20,000 degrees.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

Gus Welch, the old Carlisle Indian quarterback, didn't win the "Brown Derby" contest this winter for the simple reason that the football coaches didn't conduct their famous story-telling competition, but he regaled his gridiron associates with a yarn about "Sweetcorn," famous around the East twenty years ago as a running guard at the Indian school, then coached by Pop Warner.

"This Sweetcorn was a very rugged Indian," related Gus, "although he only weighed about 160 pounds and probably nowadays would just be turned over to the intramural department."

"He first began to get troublesome because of Pop's newspaper clippings. Sweetcorn liked to have the writers talk about his spectacular play as a running guard so he devised his own system for attracting more attention. Instead of taking out the man he was supposed to, Sweetcorn would go ripping around an end, legs and arms flying, making gestures at everybody but taking out nobody."

"I took him aside to find out what was going on. Shyly he whispered to me: 'Gus, that's psychology. I keep 'em all worried and guessing and then they say, 'My, what a great running guard this Sweetcorn is.'"

Attention—Plenty
"Well, we went down in our day coach one time to play the Navy. The papers were all filled with talk about the game. There was some mention of Thorpe and a lot about Sweetcorn. At Annapolis, the Navy people anxiously inquired about our famous running guard."

"Then came the game, and soon I found out they were concentrating on Sweetcorn along the line. He would get up groggy and bloodier after each play. When we went out for half-time, Pop came to me, worried about Sweetcorn. He suggested we might make a substitution, but I said: 'No, this Sweetcorn is just joking. Let him stay in.'"

"This sort of thing went on for the next few games," continued Welch. "Sweetcorn was taking a terrific mauling, as a result of publicity and his psychology. He began to realize something was wrong, but he didn't know just what it was. We kept him in the game."

"One afternoon, after a play, I noticed Sweetcorn had about reached the limit of punishment he could absorb. He was laid out flat and breathing with difficulty. He mumbled something about 'needing medicine man.' I replied: 'Never mind medicine man; send for priest.'"

Over-Emphasis
They tell another football yarn about the time "Pat" Spears had a quarterback difficult to arouse to the proper pitch of fight and enthusiasm before a game. After giving his signal-caller a brisk working-over before a hard game, Spears tapped him gently on the chin for emphasis.

"Maybe I had a little too much behind that one," Spears commented later, "for he was groggy the rest of the afternoon."

Football coaches and leaders went away from Broadway somewhat groggy from a week of lobbying and argument, job-seeking and half-backing.

Chief among the items that drew most attention from the gridiron gathering were:

(1) A desire to "do something" about making the coaching profession more stable, with a view to preventing ousters in mid-season or without due cause.

(2) Suggestions for a revision of the football scoring system, including a point for every first down, or two points for the try after touchdown, if made by a rush or pass.

(3) The need of more protection for the players, through stricter enforcement of the new rules and improved equipment being developed by such leaders as Fritz Crisler of Princeton and Major Ralph Sasse of West Point.

(4) The advantage of some curb on forward passing, to give the defense more chance of breaking up the aerial game which many coaches believe has converted football into a modified form of outdoor basketball.

Antidote
Since each has its individual merits or demerits, the football coaches are not likely to do anything about the "firing" or their associates for one reason or another, before or after a season closes.

"Some have talked bravely about a 'coaches' union,' that is generally regarded as far-fetched and impractical. The issues are always between the college and the coach in the football business, which does not happen to be standardized on a basis similar to bricklaying or type-setting. Contracts offer as much protection as can reasonably be expected by either party to a football coaching arrangement."

Quick One-Two
Mal Stevens bore up quite bravely under the circumstances of being relieved of two jobs in one afternoon. While Yale was making the announcement he was being replaced as head football coach for 1933 by Reggie Riel, he was also being succeeded by Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt as president of the Amer-

Ask Return of Lees
Asheville, N. C., Jan. 21.—Solicitor Zeb Nettles, said today he had already required requisition papers asking the return to this State of Luke Lee and his son, Luke Lee, Jr., and would send them to Governor Ehringhaus in the Lees do not surrender here when court opens Monday.

Will have them called when court opens. Nettles said. "If they do not surrender I shall forward requisition papers to the governor and ask the court to forfeit their bond."

The governor will send the papers to Tennessee, and it will be up to the governor and court of that State to say whether or not they will be returned.

Faces Swindle Charge
Jacksonville, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Returning here from Wilmington to face State charges in connection with $131,000 swindle of Alcorn Securities, Inc., Dave N. Chadwick, Jr., today was bound over to Federal custody on a Federal indictment charge in national bank act violation.

Senate Ends Filibuster.
Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—By adoption of an amendment to the Glass banking reform bill limiting power to its branch banking authorization the Senate finally ended the long filibuster but the bill still faced much trouble and its eventual fate was doubtful.

The Senate action, however, slightly improved prospects for other legislation caught at the short session for which hope had been abandoned.

More trouble for the Glass bill shaped up in the House side with the banking committee registering opposition to it.

The agreement between President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt to give Britain a hearing on war debts was assailed by Senator Robinson, Republican, as exceeding presidential power but it was defended by the Democratic Robinson from Arkansas.

The Senate also passed a measure to extend for one year the Glass-Stegall act permitting Federal Reserve banks to issue notes using government securities as collateral.

The House was still working on the war department appropriation bill and received a new money bill carrying funds for labor, commerce and state departments.

Accept Salary Cut.
Raleigh, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Members of the state judiciary whose salaries are protected by the constitution, voted here today to accept a voluntary pay cut of $1,000 annually for the next two years, 1933 and 1934. Nineteen superior court judges and five members of the high court attended the meeting called by Chief Justice W. P. Stacy of the high court to consider the salary question.

The reduction will apply to all judiciary.

Superior court judges have been getting a total of $8,500 annually including expenses and reductions will save them on a basis of $7,500 annually.

Supreme court justices get $8,000 and will be cut to $7,000. The cut will save the state about $25,000 annually.

Stock Market

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The stock market was more inclined to surge upward today than otherwise, but on the whole was stagnant.

Trading was in extremely small volume with a turnover of 350,000 shares and fractional gains and losses mixed through the list at the finish.

Average net changes were unimportant.

The market sowed a trace of firmness during the first half of the session and numbers of issue gained a fraction to more than a point.

Some selling appeared in the leaders in the late trading and the close was steady.

Wall Street estimates placed the 1933 net around $7 a share, but substantial portions of that represented dividends paid from surplus by subsidiaries or the actual earnings well under $9 rate.

POLITICS

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

All that has been said in recent months about the need for leadership at Washington—and it would fill volumes—appears now to have fallen short of fully stating the case.

On the administrative side, the Hoover regime takes the attitude that its hands have been tied effectually with respect to foreign affairs and its efforts at reconstruction at home blocked in advance by a hostile Congress.

On the legislative side, every major project except the routine appropriation bills has fallen into serious trouble. Hope of doing a single constructive thing during the short session has about disappeared.

The upshot is that Mr. Roosevelt will be faced on March 4 with a situation of government disorganization much worse than most persons expected.

He will be called upon from the first hour of his administration to exercise, not merely the ordinary leadership of the Presidency, but also a legislative leadership of a far higher order than most Presidents have been able to achieve.

Must Await March 4
Evidently the nation must wait for inauguration day for any visible, undeniable demonstration of how Mr. Roosevelt will measure up to the test.

For a time it appeared he might assume effective guidance of demoralized Democratic forces on Capitol Hill and pilot a legislative program through the present session. That prospect has largely disappeared.

Some hints and suggestions have reached Washington, but as yet there is no sign of an effort to crack the whip of party control.

Even those Roosevelt followers in Congress who have failed to be regular apparently have heard no word of reprimand or entreaty.

Tax Parley Inconclusive
The inconclusive New York tax conference presented only one of several instances where the President-elect either has declined to take responsible action before he takes office or has stopped short of making that action effective on his own followers.

During the Senate bank bill debate Senator Carter Glass told his colleagues that "I feel authorized to say that the President-elect wants this bank bill passed."

No one who knows Senator Glass would suppose he made such a statement unadvisedly. Yet Senator Huey Long, who campaigned as vigorously for Mr. Roosevelt as any other man, tied up the bill with a filibuster.

A personal representative of Mr. Roosevelt helped draft the farm bill. At least two persons were killed last night when a tornado swept a 35-
