

FOUNTAIN BANK ROBBER IS SENTENCED TO PRISON

Joe Berry Given From Seven To Ten Years In Criminal Court Here

Jury Remains Out Only Fifteen Minutes Before Returning Verdict Against Berry; Both Men Submit to Connection With Effort to Enter Bank of Winterville; Poole to Face Trial Here After Hearing In Three Other Counties

Convicted of complicity in the attempted robbery of banks at Fountain and Winterville, Joe Berry of Raleigh was sentenced to from 7 to 10 years in state's prison by Judge Henry A. Grady in the criminal term of court here late yesterday afternoon.

Prayer for judgment was continued in the case of T. C. Poole also of Raleigh, held in connection with the Winterville robbery, until he could be tried on charges of breaking and entering in Martin, Chatham and Wake counties.

Both Berry and Poole previously had submitted to the charge of attempting to enter the Bank of Winterville during the early part of December.

The trial for Berry consumed a short time and the jury remained out only fifteen minutes before returning the verdict of guilty.

Between eight and ten witnesses from Goldsboro and Fountain were put on the stand by the state, and they described the capture of Berry in a bullet-riddled car near Goldsboro a few days after the attempt to enter the Fountain bank in which Chief of Police Bryan was shot through the leg in exchange of gunfire with five men who escaped in an automobile.

Citizens of Fountain said they had identified the car used by Berry when captured as the one used in the Fountain affair, and said also Berry as dressed as one of the robbers who exchanged gunfire with them.

Poole, who was captured about a month ago, was said to have been riding with Berry at the time of his capture near Goldsboro but escaped. He was said to have joined the convicted men after the attempt at Fountain, although they admitted connection with the Winterville case.

Seeing a car drive up to the front of the Bank of Fountain one night about the middle of December, policemen Bryan suspected something was wrong and summoned three citizens from their beds to help him investigate the operations of the visitors. When he returned to the bank district he found two men standing on guard on the outside with two others on the inside attempting to burn their way into the vault with acetylene torches.

Bryan ordered the outposts to "halt," but instead of obeying the command they opened fire with shotguns and pistols.

Bryan was felled with a bullet in the leg, but his companions continued firing on the bandits who jumped into the car and fled. The remainder of the bandits are still at large.

Day overtook the would-be safe-crackers in the Bank of Winterville during the first of December and they were forced to give up their attempt. The safe was badly damaged as they tried to burn into the vault with acetylene torches and other implements used in the robbery were left behind as the robbers, frightened by appearance of citizens on the street, gave up the attempt and fled in an automobile.

OPPOSES NEW TAX MEASURE

Wilson Tobacco Man Says Motor Tax Would Injure Tobacco Industry

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 25.—(AP)—Wilmington is to get the shipment of export leaf tobacco of the Wilson tobacco man, amounting to something like 750,000 hogsheads of leaf annually, the General Assembly's Committee on Roads was told today during a hearing.

Willis Hackney, Wilson tobacco-ist, told the committee that the export of leaf from the market had formerly been sent to Norfolk, but that arrangements had been made whereby it would have through Wilmington. Transatlantic shipping companies have already made provisions for handling the business.

Hackney was opposing the Moore bill to put a tax of a half mill per gross ton mile on all motor vehicles operated for hire in this State.

He said imposition of the tax would seriously hurt the tobacco industry which does much of its hauling by truck.

Turning to discussion of the tobacco movement, Hackney told the committee that shippers had been charged sixty cents per hogshead at Norfolk, Va. The annual export value has been 750,000 hogsheads of 1,250 pounds each, value at $150 per hogshead or more, he added.

Under the new arrangement, which Hackney indicated was a completed deal, the port of Wilmington will get 35 cents per hogshead on the total volume handled each year.

TRUE BILL IN RAPE CHARGE

Several Others Indicted in Important Cases Before Criminal Court Yesterday

Continuing to delve vigorously into the two score or more bills coming before it at this term of criminal court, the new six-months grand jury yesterday returned indictments in some of the most important cases scheduled for consideration at this term of court.

True bills were returned against James Davenport, Herbert Rogers, Windsor Taft, Ison Vines and Jesse Moore.

Davenport is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Robert Clayton, 10-year-old school child of the Grimesland community who was killed when struck by a car driven by Davenport.

The child had left a school bus and started across the street when he was hit by the car driven by Davenport, who was said to have failed to stop in violation of a state law requiring all vehicles to halt when a school bus is taking on or discharging passengers. He was also alleged to have been driving in a careless and reckless manner.

Given preliminary hearing here several days ago, Davenport was bound over to criminal court under bond.

Herbert Rogers, colored, is charged with criminally attacking Mrs. Mattie Waters, mother of several children, in the Chicago community several weeks ago. He was captured by county officers several days after the crime was alleged to have been committed and has been held in jail here since that time.

Said to have entered the home through a window, the negro tossed Mrs. Waters through a window, carried her to an outhouse and committed the crime. He was tracked to his home and arrested. He was said to have been identified by the woman as the man who committed the crime.

Windsor Taft, colored, is charged with the murder of another negro several months ago.

Ison Vines is held on a charge of embezzlement.

Jesse Moore is charged with having carnal knowledge of a child under 13 years of age.

Judge Grady ordered a venire of twenty-five men from which a jury will be chosen to hear the case against Rogers. The case is set for hearing tomorrow.

RAILROAD NOT ABLE TO PAY

Southern Unable to Meet Taxes to State Due on The First of February

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 25.—(AP)—Allen J. Maxwell, State Revenue Commissioner, said today that he had been informed that the Southern Railway System will not be able to meet its tax obligations to the State and counties on February 1 when they are due.

Maxwell said Haddon Johnson, tax official of the railroad system, told him yesterday that every possible effort to meet the taxes had been made, but they can't be paid February 1. Total figures for the counties and State were not available today, but Maxwell estimated that the average tax placed on the roads would be $1.50 per $100 of the assessed valuation.

On this basis with the railroad's assets valued at $90,000,000 on the State's books that delinquent taxes will approximate $1,350,000.

Maxwell said Johnson added that the railroad expected to have to pay the usual delinquent tax penalty of 1 per cent after February 1.

O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the Senate committee today that unless something is done for the farmer "we will have revolution in less than twelve months."

O'Neal replied that the fundamental need is inflation by reducing the gold contents of the dollar and that the present bill would go far toward bringing back faith and confidence in the country.

There were no witnesses to the shooting.

Sheriff C. J. McDonald and Corporal Fry, of Carthage, held, after an investigation, that Mrs. Edmondston came to her death by accidental shooting, and that there was no need for an inquest. She leaves motherless seven children, the oldest being fifteen years of age. At a late hour today the funeral services had not been arranged. PROVIDE FARMS FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

While apparently we are making a very good job of taking care of the unemployed this winter, there seems to be one feature of it that is being overlooked and that is the future of the unemployed here. Some months ago we suggested to the local committee, that arrangements be made to place numbers of our unemployed on some of the idle farm lands in the various communities of this county in order that by tilling the soil these persons might become self supporting. There is, we believe, plenty of idle land in this county that owners would be glad to turn over to the committee in return for the taxes and the county could arrange a remission of these taxes as a donation to the relief fund. These lands could be worked by the unemployed and devoted to the production of food crops making enough for those unemployed on the lands and the surplus to be distributed by the committee to others being used in other relief projects. If this project could be started at once the farms could soon begin to supply fresh vegetables to supplement provisions now being distributed by the relief committee, making a more balanced diet for those who are now living from the commissary. Then one of the greatest benefits from the project is the fact that these persons so engaged will have the consolation of knowing that they are doing their part in supporting themselves rather than living wholly on charity.

Many other counties in the state already have these farm projects under way, and certainly it should prove a good move in our own community. The majority of our unemployed people do not wish to be objects of charity but prefer an opportunity to provide for themselves and this is one way that it can be made possible.

Nations that paid will be dealt with in a lenient way but it is impossible to say what the attitude will be toward those which positively declined to pay. It is a complicated situation and one that must certainly will mean much to the eventual recovery of this country from strained economic conditions.

More charity toward those who are unemployed and unable to find work is recommended by Judge Henry Grady of Clinton, presiding over court here.

With conditions worse than they have been in years and people suffering indescribably from lack of employment, the jurist believes that the more fortunate of the population should do what they can to alleviate the suffering. The trouble is, he believes, comes from the lack of realization of the seriousness of the situation.

He told Kiwanians and Rotarians here Monday night that crime would continue to increase as long as abject poverty and despair exist, and urged more attention to government so that representatives of the people and not of wealth should direct affairs of the administration. Judge Grady has made a thorough study of conditions, and his observations concerning the crime situation should cause people to give more consideration to the matter.

Poverty begets crime, and crime unburied means eventual annihilation of principles and traditions upon which this government was founded.

Farmers are talked to probably more than any other class of people in the world, and it is difficult to understand how they find their way into the light from such a maze of discussions.

But there is one kind of advice they must accept and abide by if they would obtain improved prices in the future. We refer to curtailed tobacco acreage during the coming planting season. Another normal crop would only serve to intensify a situation unparalleled in the history of American agriculture, and instead of effecting improved times only pandemonium would result.

Reduced production is the cry of leaders of agriculture in all parts of the nation. This pertains exclusively to principal crops and not to foods. By planting surplus acreage in food after cutting money crops growers will be able to meet the demands of their families during the long winter months, and money usually spent for products from other sections will remain in their pockets.

Tobacco prices were some better last season in the face of a fifty per cent crop reduction, yet the market is still hopelessly glutted and will remain so if we produce a small crop for the next five years. Planting of increased acreage would mean ruin for the growers and those depending upon them and we cannot urge too strongly the importance of curtailed acreage this season.

From Fayetteville comes word that relief forces there have refused to give further aid to the unemployed who refuse to plant gardens by the 15th of next month.

It is a drastic attempt to impress upon the people the necessity of helping themselves and one that should be followed in other parts of the country.

Gardens help reduce the cost of living and certainly those who have nothing to occupy their time would find diversion in work of this kind as well as satisfaction to the knowledge they are doing something to help themselves.

Federal relief funds are being used in every community to diminish want and suffering but this is not inexhaustible and will give out sooner or later if something isn't done to call a halt on the demand for public aid.

OWEN D. YOUNG

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the thirteenth of a series of articles picturing briefly possible members of the Roosevelt Cabinet.)

A top tier name in all the talk about the Roosevelt Cabinet is that of Owen D. Young, business executive of international renown. Many observers have speculated that only his disinclination to serve would prevent his assignment to a major post in that group. Less than a year ago he was mentioned frequently as a "dark horse" prospect for the Democratic Presidential nomination despite his statement that he was not interested in such preferment. High in his party's councils and much-sought in industry, finance, education, the service of his govern-

Buying Barbara

By Julia Cleff-Addams & Author of "YOU CAN'T MARRY"

SYNOPSIS: Barbara Quentin, arbitrarily summoned to London by her arrogant fiancé, Mark Lodely, arrives in the midst of a revel to which she is not asked. He even draws a malicious caricature of her. As she runs from the house she overhears a man she believes to be Farrell Armitage, Mark's host, call Mark a bounder. She breaks by letter the agreement that she had with Farrell (who loves her) that he might try for a year to establish Mark as an artist so that Barbara could choose between them without prejudice. Then she demands that Mark meet her at the National Gallery.

Chapter 39 THE CRASH

So sure was Barbara of Mark's coming, that she did not appreciably lengthen her pace and it was five minutes past eleven when she turned into Trafalgar Square.

As she looked across to the people scattered upon the steps of the building, a car passed her with Mark inside.

She watched it sweep up to the steps but Mark did not descend. Her heart misgave her suddenly, suppose he had brought Judy? She came steadily on and presently drew level. He was alone.

"Rotten of you to keep me waiting!" he exclaimed, the moment his eyes fell upon her.

"You haven't been here two minutes," she returned, and got in. The car was very roomy, very plainly equipped.

"Is this Farrell Armitage's car?" "One of his cars, child. You have no conception of the resources of a millionaire, evidently. Just as well, perhaps, for your poor, neglected true love, Michfield is waiting for you to tell him where to drive to."

"To the outer circle of Regent's Park, please, and drive slowly round."

The car rolled away, a smooth, obedient movement that seemed to make speech flow more easily.

"You wired me to come to you, Mark. Why?"

"Because I hungered for the sight of you."

"But last night," she countered and, to her dismay, there was a sob in her breath, "last night you insulted me before your friends."

"Last night? You weren't there."

"That's futile, Mark. You saw me. You know I was there."

He had let himself slip towards her and now laid his face against her shoulder.

"I'd had oceans too much to drink. Don't loathe me for it, beautiful. You looked so prim and dull and hard-working, standing there, gapping at all the naughty people. And you know I can't stand it when you look like that."

"You hurt me too much, Mark."

"Really too much, Barbara?"

Again she turned and looked down at him. The car was alongside the curb.

"People will see you, Mark. Sit up."

He lifted her hand, drew off the loosely fitting glove and raised her palm to his lips.

"I have missed you so, beautiful."

Mark at his most kind, most dear. How could she ever, for one instant, have wondered—have doubted? She relaxed a little. The traffic jam broke and the car started forward again.

"Oh, darling Mark, I ought never to have let him take you away from me. Let's be married at once, Mark. This week?"

He flicked aside her hand and, hauling himself erect, sat back in his corner.

"Him?"

"Farrell Armitage. It sounded so splendid, his offer to house you and help you work and perhaps improve your health. But this is taking away with one hand what he gives with the other."

"This? Do you mean my party?"

"All your parties, all you go to and ment and in the settlement of international problems, he often has been called into conference by President-Elect Roosevelt. President Hoover also has requested the counsel of the one-time agent general of reparations.

Mr. Young, tall, unassuming and of calm demeanor and measured speech, was born at Van Hornesville, N. Y., fifty-eight years ago. In addition to degrees from St. Lawrence University and Boston University, where he studied law, he has honorary degrees from well over a dozen colleges. His decorations from foreign countries are imposing.

ance, I suppose?" "No, Mark, no! I put it too sweepingly, perhaps. I know I'm naturally bossy—people have told me so. But I do want to take you away from Farrell Armitage before he utterly spoils you and I think that whatever you say, you do really want to come."

Mark glanced out of the window. He waved a hand languidly to an acquaintance. He watched a dog frisk across the road.

"Mark," she begged, "I don't know what is in your mind."

"This. That when we marry, and don't forget that last time I asked you, you refused me, when we marry, it will be I who decide where and how I shall live afterwards. I may or may not be a cripple, by then, but if I were twisted into twice the funny knots I am already, I will be absolute master of my own life. If that doesn't suit you—get out of it!"

"You don't know what you're saying. You don't mean it. You would be living one kind of life, I another."

She tried to smile. "It wouldn't be real marriage, at all."

"And yet," pursued Mark, "no other kind of marriage would be possible with you, Barbara. You're bossy, as you say yourself. I won't either boss or be bossed."

"Then—?" she said, still smiling.

"The whole question is shelved indefinitely," he suggested. "Or no. You're one of those people who insist on being given a date. Let's shelve it, then, for a year. In the meantime, you can leave me to step myself in vice under Armitage's guidance—"He laughed amusedly—"and you can go back to Toxeter. Excellent place for good little girls to be good in, Toxeter."

She put her hand to the speaking-tube. "Stop, please," she requested.

"Getting out, Barbara?"

The car drew into the curb and the chauffeur came to the door.

"Should you really be so very final, do you think?" Mark went on. "I mean, won't you have a terrible lot to unsay when you want to be engaged to me again? All that tin-chapel talk about Armitage—"

She looked at him blindly. "Michfield had returned to his wheel and she held the open door in her hand. In a moment she would shut it upon Mark and his cushions and his laughter and let him go."

"—when one of the most satisfying things about my party was that it drove him out of his own house in gentlemanly disgust! He didn't come back to Brandish Place until an hour ago!"

Her hand tightened on the door. She said, almost violently:

"You're mistaken. I saw him standing in the doorway of your studio about 2 o'clock, looking on I heard something he said about you."

"You saw him clearly?"

"Not clearly, no. From behind."

"His build is very like Poole's, his secretary. It was Mr. Watchdog Poole you saw. And the only reason I'm troubling to mention all this—"

Mark's voice thrilled suddenly, "the only reason is, that before you ever dare to talk marriage to me again, you'll apologize for believing that a cash-minded clod like Armitage could ever begin to influence me!"

"Armitage vulgarizing my career on the sly? Armitage choosing the wrong kind of friends for me? That—that clerk!" His free arm swung wildly and he tore the door from her grasp and crashed it shut.

Through the window her eyes hung upon his for another moment and then the car slid into gear and he was gone.

But Barbara was beyond response. Dimly aware of someone at her shoulder, she turned. It was as if the emptiness and the sunshine turned with her; the world spun, jolted and then slanted into space. She slanted with it and the sun went out.

I don't spend very much on Myself

BUT, believe ME, when it comes to what I smoke, I want it right!

You know how it is when a fellow is accustomed to smoking a good cigarette and he gets hold of one that isn't right. He's likely to get in a bad humor.

I am a great believer in the old saying that "quality will tell," and I have noticed that the things which come to stay are good things.

You can buy a package of good cigarettes for 15c. Six cents of this goes to the Government. So that outside of the 6c paid to the Government, you get a little over two cigarettes for one cent.

The right kind of tobacco, the right sort of paper—a cigarette that's pure and good-tasting and mild—that's the kind I want.

I have been smoking CHESTERFIELDS for a long time. They are mild and yet they satisfy.

OWEN D. YOUNG

Franklin D. Roosevelt evidently means to get a closer understanding of the debt question when he goes into the White House, judging by action inviting Britain and Italy to the debt conference to be held in America in the near future. Other countries which did not default their obligations to this country last December 15 will also be invited to attend. No action is indicated, has been determined toward defaulting countries. Roosevelt realizes this is one of the foremost questions of the times and hopes to be able to chart some definite course of action at the conference.

Social and Personal

Mrs. Clifton Bridge Hostess. Mrs. J. Thomas Clifton was a charming bridge hostess yesterday at her home in College View.

The Valentine idea was effectively carried out in the decorations. Places were marked with Valentine hearts and baskets of red and white mints and salted nuts were placed on each table.

Concluding a number of spirited games of contract, Miss Jane Hadley was awarded an attractive hand painted nut basket for high score.

For high score, Miss Hensale long was awarded a very attractive prize. Mrs. Graham Flanagan and Mrs. W. H. White assisted the hostess in serving a tempting salad and sweet course.

Mrs. James Club Hostess. Yesterday afternoon at her home on Greene street, Mrs. Larry James was a gracious hostess to her bridge club and a few other guests.

GARDEN CLUB TO SPONSOR BIRD HOUSE CONTEST. At the January meeting of the Garden Club, held at the home of Mrs. J. Key Brown, it was decided to sponsor a contest in building birdhouses.

Other business connected with the department was quickly dispensed with and the program chairman took charge. An interesting paper on the First Garden Club in America was given by Mrs. P. G. Dennis.

Mrs. Dennis told of the work of this pioneer club, which included vegetable gardens as well as flower gardens. Mrs. E. W. Harvey talked on early spring flowers and told us how to force the blooms of many of our common trees and shrubs.

This giving us a variety of blossoms before the regular blooming season. One aim of our chairman, Mrs. Hart is that each member of the club shall know the name of all plants and shrubs growing in Greenville.

To this meeting she brought branches of 18 different evergreens. Pen, dills and paper were distributed and each member asked to write the names of the evergreens represented.

Mrs. E. W. Harvey and Mrs. J. H. B. Moore tied, each having named correctly 17 of the 18. The prize, one dozen cowslips, donated from the garden of Mrs. Hart, was divided between them.

At the conclusion of the program Mrs. Brown, assisted by Miss Lillian Purvis, served an ice course with salted nuts—reported.

LITERATURE DEPT. HAS INTERESTING MEETING

Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. A. Darden, Miss Eunice McGee was hostess to the Literature Department of the Woman's Club. Spring flowers and an open fire added cheer to the gathering.

The business of the department was quickly acted upon, and Mrs. Darden presented Miss Wahl whose subject for the afternoon was "Women in the Educational Field."

Miss Wahl reminded us that there has been a time, not so long ago when it was very unpopular for women to seek an education.

The following rhyme was quoted to show us what one bachelor thought of educated women:

"One did commend to me a wife both fair and young That had French, Spanish, and Italian tongue. I thank him kindly and told him I loved none such. For I though one tongue for a wife too much. What! love ye not the learned? Yes, as my life. A learned scholar, but not a learned wife."

There are others, however, who did not share this viewpoint with the bachelor. As early as 1897 DeFoe was advocating higher education for women.

In North Carolina in 1734 we had John Baptista Ashe providing for his daughter's education in his will. Even though a few of our leaders showed the spirit of Mr. Ashe it was after the Revolutionary War before any definite move for the liberal education of women developed.

This movement started in the New England states. All honor is due to the efforts of Mrs. Emma Willard and Catherine Beecher in establishing seminaries for women in Troy, New York 1821, and in Hartford, Conn., in 1822.

Miss Wahl told of Mary Lyon who gave of her time and strength in establishing Mt. Holyoke College and of the fine work Mt. Holyoke is doing today under the splendid leadership of Dr. Mary Woolley.

Alice Freeman Palmer and her efforts to make Wellesley College become one of the leading colleges for women makes an interesting study. One marvels at the many things accomplished at Wellesley and other educational institutions by this woman.

The development of Moonlight schools and education of adults as conceived in the mind of Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart of Kentucky was interestingly told. Mrs. Ella Plagg Young of Chicago, did a notable piece of work in transforming the schools of her city, from the narrow academic type to cosmopolitan schools adapted to meet the needs of a fast changing world.

Other women who are today exerting a great influence in the educational field were mentioned.

Miss Wahl said she could not finish a talk on Women in Education and omit the colored women. The work of Mrs. Frances Hawkins Brown of Seafala, N. C., and the Alice Freeman Palmer School of Seafala founded by her, was given as an outstanding example of the educational work being done by the colored women for the women of their own race.

Talk was brought to an end with the following definition of education for young girls:

Education of women for the home is a great good, but in educating a young girl we must feel that her future is too uncertain, too much beyond her own control, to venture to train her for a position that may never be hers. The only safe course is to hold up individual perfection, as far as such a term may be used—as the aim of education; in other words the harmonious development of all her powers as her own individual right and duty; to train her, in short, as God's creature, not as man's subordinate.

At the close of this interesting program the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Darden, served delightful refreshments—Reported.

Pitt Well Represented. Greensboro, Jan. 24—Pitt county was well represented at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina during the semester which closes Friday of this week.

PLAYMAKERS AT COLLEGE THURSDAY EVENING

The Carolina Playmakers who will present three one-act plays tomorrow evening at East Carolina Teachers College are playing in only two other places in the eastern part of the state. They are traveling in a private bus bringing all their stage equipment with them.

There are 18 traveling with the company, including the actors, directors and stage managers. Many of these act in more than one capacity. Miss Marion Tatum has a part in "Davy Crockett," and is stage manager, and she also designed some of the costumes.

Dr. Koch himself will travel with the group and will be perhaps the only one of the group well known to Greenville audiences. The personnel of the Playmakers may change every time but with Dr. Koch at the head the Greenville public knows the Playmakers will measure up to their high standard. A number of times they have appeared in this city and always have been given a cordial reception.

The hour tomorrow evening is 8:30 and the place is the campus building of East Carolina Teachers College. The three plays to be presented are: "Davy Crockett," "Three on a Heath" and "Stumbling in Dreams."

Notice of Junior Order Meeting. The members of Greenville Council Order of United American Mechanics cordially invite all suspended members of said council to meet with them in the Pythian hall on Evans street Thursday night, Jan. 26, at 7:30 o'clock.

Brother E. L. Harris, past state councillor and field representative, will be with us and show moving pictures of the Lexington Home and other activities of the order.

The Junior Order is a purely American organization and stands for America and Americans first in all things. They uphold the Bible and the reading of the same in the public schools, stand squarely behind the free public school system and have sponsored and had introduced every bill which has passed the United States Congress for restriction of emigration whereby the criminal, diseased, ignorant and pauper hordes of Europe and other countries are kept away from our shores.

The public and ladies especially, are invited to be present at eight o'clock when Brother Harris will talk and show the picture.

BLUE MOLD DISEASE OF TOBACCO. There is not a satisfactory control measure known for blue mold. Observational results indicate that certain practices may be worked to advantage in obtaining plants despite the prevalence of the disease.

Since it is not known where or how the disease lives over from one year to another, it would seem advisable to select new plant bed sites each year and to burn or sterilize the beds.

Warm areas for plant beds apparently maintain conditions that favor the quickest and greatest recovery of plants.

The seeding of two or more plant beds at intervals of two to four weeks seems advisable as offering opportunity to escape serious infection in all beds at critical periods.

Where growth is normal and the plants do not need stimulation, nitrate applications, in addition to the regular fertilizer, are not advised. However, where plants have been seriously injured by the disease, waterings at four day intervals with two or three pounds of nitrate of soda in 50 gallons of water to the 100 square yards are advocated as a means of facilitating recovery. This application should be made early in the morning so that the water will dry quickly from the leaves.

Experience shows that in 1932 it was best to allow the diseased plants to recover in the beds before transplanting to the field.

Blue mold or downy mildew disease of tobacco is caused by a specific fungus that attacks the leaves on the under side only.

This fungus is air borne and the spore seeds are readily carried from one bed to another and from one area to another by air currents.

Approximately 90 per cent of the plant beds throughout the state showed blue mold infection during 1932. These beds were in a variety of locations and the plants were growing under many soil and climatic conditions. Despite these facts the disease developed.

It is conceivable that various types of fertilizers were used throughout the state on these plant beds. There seemed to be no relationship between the kind and amount of fertilizers used and the development of the disease.

Bordeaux mixture would control the disease if it could be sprayed well on the under side of the leaf. However, many growers reported that Bordeaux seriously injured the plants and for that reason we hesitate to recommend its use.

ROCHESTER MAN. My liver was all out of order and I became so constipated that I had to take some kind of a purgative nearly every night. I suffered with bilious headaches—my appetite was poor, and everything I ate disagreed with me. Sargol Soft Mass Pills have made me feel like a new man. They regulated me perfectly. Myron P. Harwood, 70 Lenox St., Rochester, N. Y. During the last fifty-three months, 143,000,000 Sargol Soft Mass Pills have been sold. This phenomenal record has been accomplished because Sargol Soft Mass Pills are a new and revolutionary product in the field of laxative medication. They are not like any laxative you have ever taken. They are so gentle and thorough in their action that there is nothing about them to remind you that you have ever taken a medicine, and most recall for a gradual reduction of the dose until the point is reached where you no longer require a laxative of any kind.
