PLANS GIVEN PUBLICITY IN FLORIDA AREA

President-Elect Will Keep Congressmen Informed Concerning Every Phase of Deliberations; Just What Kind of Committee Will be Named by Congress For Purpose Not Made Known

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 4.—(AP)—President-Elect Roosevelt will consult with a committee of the Senate and House during the British debt negotiations to keep them advised of progress of the deliberations.

Roosevelt intention to keep in close touch with Capitol Hill was disclosed here today just as he sailed for a ten-day shing cruise.

He still regards the actual negotiations on debt settlement and executive functions and will go ahead with his talks with foreign treasurers.

Congress would ratify whatever comes out of the March conference and Roosevelt intends to talk progress of the conversations with members of a Congressional committee.

Just what nature of committee will be sent by Congress has not been made known.

LARGE SHAD CATCHES REPORTED IN NEW BERN

New Bern, Feb. 4.—Kinston fishermen who report small runs of shads in Neuse River now must not know how to catch them, it is asserted by New Bern fishermen, who say that contrary to Kinston reports of small shad runs there are in reality more shad now running in Neuse River for this time of the year than during the past ten years.

Local fishermen are reporting large shad catches, according to Mack L. Lupton, local veteran fish dealer, who says that his records show the largest catches so far this year than for any similar period during the past decade.

Dr. Pepper is widely known as an officer of the State Medical Society and a civic and religious leader here. Mrs. Pepper was said to have inherited recently a considerable sum of money from a relative.

LADIES NIGHT ENJOYED HERE

Kiwanians Entertain Wives and Sweethearts at Annual Program Last Night

Ladies' Night, one of the most important occasions of the year was observed by members of the Kiwanis Club at the Woman's Club building last night.

The banquet room in which the meeting was held was appropriately decorated to carry out the Valentine idea, and bright red hearts predominated on the tables and in other parts of the room, reminding the Kiwanians and their guests that the season of love is "just around the corner."

Kiwanians, their wives and sweethearts attended almost one hundred per cent strong, and everybody entered into the program in a way that added much to the enjoyment of the evening.

The program was in charge of the inimitable W. S. Brown and O. B. Matthews, and the various contests which they provided throughout the evening kept interest at the boiling point.

Rev. E. L. Hillman presided, and graciously welcomed the ladies, declaring that members of the club always looked forward with eager anticipation to Ladies' Night, and many were regretful because it did not come several times a year instead of one.

The only disconcerting thing about the general scheme of things was the fact that when a fellow entered with his girl on his arm, he was immediately relieved of her and didn't have an opportunity of seeing her—only at a distance—the remainder of the evening. Of course, lots of the boys liked the novelty of talking with the other fellow's girl and everything, but the youngster, keen on one woman alone, didn't relish the idea, although he grinned a mile wide and permitted himself to be a victim of circumstances.

Every lady was awarded a gift supposed to be representative of the (Continued on Page Four)

ARMY MOVES TO NEW HOME

Salvation Army Changes Buildings Along With Other Changes Here

The Salvation Army announced today that the organization had moved its home from Greene Street to the building formerly used by Judge Wooten for law offices on the courthouse square.

The new home is not as large as the old one, but Ensign Mary Anderson and Lieutenant Nadine Summers stated they were confident it would meet demands of the organization here. They also said the change would result in a considerable saving from the standpoint of rents.

The two officers said they were working on plans for opening a woman's emergency home here in the near future to take care of wayward women and children. This will greatly increase the scope of the organization and fill a need which has long been felt by the community, it was said.

Miss Summers, who is the daughter of Ensign Summers, who has charge of the Salvation Army work here several years ago, also explained plans of the district organization to provide a boys' farm colony for this part of the State. The Salvation Army at Kinston, New Bern, Wilson, Goldsboro and Greenville are co-operating in the movement, and it was hoped to rent a tract of land in the near future to carry out the purpose.

TALK PUBLIC HEALTH HERE

Tuberculosis Situation Discussed at Public Meeting at Court House

The tuberculosis situation in this county was discussed at length at a public health conference held at the court house here yesterday afternoon.

Representatives of public health work from Goldsboro and other parts of the state were present and joined in the attempt of the local health authorities to clarify the tuberculosis situation in this and other parts of the county.

The meeting was sponsored by the public affairs committee of the Kiwanis Club, assisted by representatives of the Pitt County Department of Health.

Rev. E. L. Hillman, president of the Kiwanis Club, presided, and explained the nature of the meeting and the purpose of Kiwanis to improve the health conditions of the community as much as it was in its power.

Dr. R. S. McGeachy, director of the Pitt County Department of Health, and chairman of the Kiwanis public affairs committee, explained the spread of tuberculosis among the young colored women of the county and expressed the need of physical examinations of colored nurses and other domestic help used in the home of the city.

He asserted that if every child born at this time could be kept away from tuberculosis, the country would be free of the disease in the next hundred years.

He warned against employment of people affected with the dread disease especially where they are used in the home, and declared the need for precautionary measures was never more pronounced than at this time.

K. T. Furbell, director of the Pitt County Welfare Department, gave a comprehensive picture of what his department is doing to relieve tuberculosis sufferers of the county. He said at least ten patients were receiving hospital treatment through funds from his office.

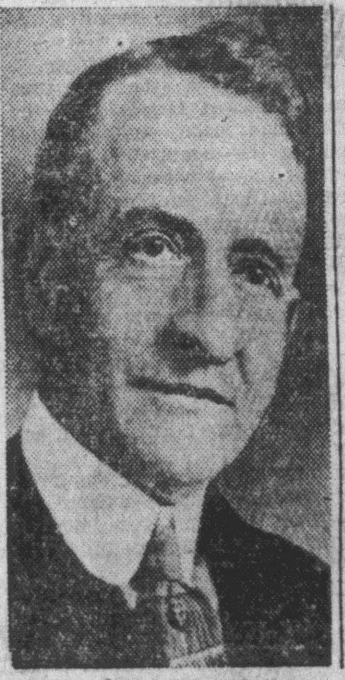

Dr. Corbett Howard, recognized tuberculosis expert of Goldsboro, spoke of the early recognition and cure of tuberculosis, showing that the disease when taken in time could be positively cured.

Miss Marie Farley, public health worker of Wayne county, stated what was being done in that county to relieve the situation, and said they were having probably as much trouble as other counties in handling the spread of the disease.

Dr. Broadway, public health officer of Edgecombe county, also spoke of the danger of the spread of tuberculosis and expressed the necessity of more concerted effort to curb the inroads made in the various counties of the state.

C. M. Epps, principal of colored schools, deplored the increase of tuberculosis among his race. He attributed it to living conditions which resulted in closer contact of members of the race than in the (Continued on Page Four)

POSSESSIONS NOW IN HANDS OF JAPANESE

Three Groups of Islands Involved in Action; Alloted to Japan by League of Nations in Charge of Control of Mandate; Japan Threatens to Withdraw From League Because of Lytton Report

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—(AP)—Adolph Hitler's government is expected by international observers to star a vigorous campaign in Geneva for a return of former German colonies—a step which may stir up the entire mandate problem in the League of Nations and throw additional light on the status of the Equatorial Island in the Pacific mandated to Japan.

The question in the minds of the German pacifist leaders and officials of the territory is what disposition might be made of the island should Japan carry out her threat of seceding from the League because of the Lytton Commission condemnation of her aggressiveness in Manchuria.

The Nationalist government is particularly interested in the future of the island because of its nearness to Guam, the Philippines and Hawaii.

The German island consists of three groups known as the Marianas, the Carolines and the Marshalls, and were alloted to Japan by the League which is charged with control and execution of the terms of the mandate.

IT CAN AND SHOULD BE DONE

Agreeing heartily with those who believe that necessary revenue is available to go a long way toward balancing the budget if the Legislature is of a mind and has the courage to "get the money where the money is," we pass on to our readers an editorial from today's News and Observer to which we add our loud "Amen."

Under the heading "Thank God For South Carolina," the Observer says:

Many years ago when Governor Aycock was leading the campaign to eradicate illiteracy in North Carolina, the statistics showed that there was a larger percentage of illiterates in North Carolina than in any other State except South Carolina. This caused Governor Aycock to say with gratitude: "Thank God for South Carolina, because it prevents this State from being on the bottom."

Those legislators who really wish to "get the money where the money is," and to secure a large amount to "balance the budget" can find light by turning their eyes to South Carolina. In the Legislatures of both the Carolinas in 1931 bills were pending to impose a tax on power companies of a certain sum per kilowatt-hour generated or sold.

In North Carolina, the opponents of the Ewing bill, led by attorneys of power companies and backed by a powerful lobby, organized to prevent the imposition of the tax, first by delay, and then by indefensible methods. They succeeded in preventing the passage of the bill levying a kilowatt-hour tax on energy produced or sold. The paid lawyers of the power companies argued that such a tax was unconstitutional and urged that its imposition would "drive capital from the State," and "lead like bank. They won. Their victory caused a large portion of the deficit which now troubles the 1933 General Assembly.

In South Carolina the power legislators and the power lobbyists tried to employ the same tactics that succeeded in the North Carolina General Assembly. But they failed. The Legislature of the Palmetto State passed an act imposing a tax of one-half mill per kilowatt-hour on energy generated or sold in that State. What was the result? The power companies contested the imposition of the tax in the courts. The Broad River Power Company carried the case to the Supreme Court of the United States. That body held the tax valid. As a result South Carolina collected $237,733 from the Duke Power Company, while North Carolina collected nothing. The score stands:

North Carolina ..... $000,000
 South Carolina ..... 257,733

It is probable that some part of the sum which North Carolina did not collect went to the high-priced lawyers and lobbyists who exerted large influence in defeating the bill in North Carolina. In South Carolina the money went into the public treasury and helped to reduce other taxes.

"Thank God for South Carolina." It joins the way to this State which desperately needs all the revenue it can properly secure.

ABOUT TOWN

President Hoover thinks the country is suffering from overlapping taxes. Some of the people probably feel the same way about it as they beggar themselves to meet the demands of city, county, state and federal governments. Some of the people probably will take some action to improve the situation, and he is not by himself by any means.

There should be a pronounced shifting of the burden of taxation off the shoulders of those who have been carrying the load for so many years and the country cannot hope to get back to normalcy until this has been accomplished.

The decision of the board of aldermen to ask the Legislature to permit it to amend the city charter to provide for the election of aldermen in the First and Fifth wards every two years instead of one is a commendable undertaking.

It will mean the saving of an additional election and saving of any kind at this time is to be appreciated.

If the people in the other wards can go two years without voting for new representatives, certainly those in the First and Fifth will be ready to do the same.

It is difficult to understand why the economy of such a move was not realized long ago, especially with the beginning of the depression when the saving of every cent was uppermost in the minds of the city fathers.

The board is trimming expenses wherever possible without impairing the efficiency of government and if they could find a few more sources of reduction like the election of aldermen the public would be deeply grateful.

A report of the financial condition of the city at the expiration of the first six months of the present fiscal year shows the department heads are sticking close to the budget and are unwilling for the year to end with them overdrawn.

The spirit is to be highly commended. If there is anything a city or county needs at this time it is thrift, and as both the city and county governments are practicing it, everybody may rest easy on the subject.

Mark and Barbara. After that first swimming moment in her mother's room Lella had felt nothing emotionally new about it. There had been so little hope, really, that Farrell Armitage would be able to come between them. She had not seen him since that day of climax, nearly a year ago, when he had pushed the emerald into her hand, but Patsy Raoul spoke of him sometimes.

She went up Malavie's dark stairs and into the room where she had to leave her hat. She had taken a cab, and her extravagance had made her almost the earliest arrival. She walked through the empty, sunny work-rooms and through a door lettered "Miss Quentin." She knew there was a telephone there, and she thought it would amuse her to ring up Barbara before she left home. "Wish her luck and all that."

But Barbara was not at her hotel; she was here in the big, bare room. She leaned, palms downward, upon a pile of sketches, her pose absorbed and intent, her eyes blank.

"Oh! Sorry!" said Lella. The sketches toppled and she straightened them before she spoke.

"You're early, Lella. All well?" "All excellent, thanks. If you don't hear glowing reports of my progress, it's only because I don't seem to be making any." She paused and added: "I came in to use your phone in your absence, as a matter of fact."

"Breath of discipline," twinkled Barbara. "Good thing I'm here to stop you."

They regarded each other easily and pleasantly across the littered table.

"Well, I hope you know what I would have said to you on the phone," managed Lella at last. "I don't know why it always sounds so much thinner done face to face. But there you are—I wish you happiness. Both of you."

Barbara lifted her head sharply. The movement brought it into shadow, and immediately the silvery gold deepened and darkened, wave upon wave. Her eyes darkened, too, and grew wary.

Judging by the way every city department is functioning at this time they will come out within the budget limits, and this means a big reduction of expenses with the previous years.

Discussion of the tuberculosis situation here yesterday afternoon shows county health authorities realize the danger of the disease and are trying to get the public to co-operate with the effort to improve the condition.

Physical examination of public servants would go a long way toward solving the situation, and it is hoped some plan may be worked out to make this possible. This can be done if everybody employing nurses should demand that they undergo rigid examination before being accepted for employment.

With tuberculosis on an increase among young negro women it is highly imperative that something be done to minimize the danger and it is hoped parents will consider the matter seriously and take action for the protection of their homes.

The college here will observe the 26th anniversary of its founding on March 4 and as customary hundreds of alumnae from various parts of the state will be on hand to take part in the celebration.

The college has won an enviable place in the field of education since its establishment and it is destined to take even higher rank as the value of such an institution is realized.

Young women now filling important posts in various schools of the state are products of this school, and they are hearty in their praise of the splendid attention which they received while training here.

Greenville and Pitt county people are proud of the institution and hope it will continue to grow in importance and value to the educational world.

Buying Barbara
 by Julia Cleft-Addams • Author of "YOU CAN'T MARRY"

SYNOPSIS: The large fortune Sir James Cane took from Barbara years before he was restored, and Barbara has divided it equally between herself, the Canes, and Mark Lodely and his mother. Mark is a successful London artist; Barbara a successful London Decorator. Their long-standing engagement was broken and Farrell Armitage, wealthy Londoner, was Barbara's announced suitor. Now, without warning, a newspaper prints the news that Barbara and Mark will marry. Lella Cane, who loves Mark, reads the article just as she starts to work.

Chapter 48
BARBARA'S SURPRISE

Mark and Barbara. After that first swimming moment in her mother's room Lella had felt nothing emotionally new about it. There had been so little hope, really, that Farrell Armitage would be able to come between them. She had not seen him since that day of climax, nearly a year ago, when he had pushed the emerald into her hand, but Patsy Raoul spoke of him sometimes.

She went up Malavie's dark stairs and into the room where she had to leave her hat. She had taken a cab, and her extravagance had made her almost the earliest arrival. She walked through the empty, sunny work-rooms and through a door lettered "Miss Quentin." She knew there was a telephone there, and she thought it would amuse her to ring up Barbara before she left home. "Wish her luck and all that."

But Barbara was not at her hotel; she was here in the big, bare room. She leaned, palms downward, upon a pile of sketches, her pose absorbed and intent, her eyes blank.

"Oh! Sorry!" said Lella. The sketches toppled and she straightened them before she spoke.

"You're early, Lella. All well?" "All excellent, thanks. If you don't hear glowing reports of my progress, it's only because I don't seem to be making any." She paused and added: "I came in to use your phone in your absence, as a matter of fact."

"Breath of discipline," twinkled Barbara. "Good thing I'm here to stop you."

They regarded each other easily and pleasantly across the littered table.

"Well, I hope you know what I would have said to you on the phone," managed Lella at last. "I don't know why it always sounds so much thinner done face to face. But there you are—I wish you happiness. Both of you."

shook her head protesting. She loved her life, the life of these last twelve months, but just because she loved it she desired its fulfillment.

"Mr. Frere! How in the world could I have passed you! Oh, I am so glad to see you! I suppose you are staying at Brandish Place with Farrell?"

"Well, I thought I was." The bright eyes snapped mischievously at her. "But I'm not at all sure now that I'm not staying at Brandish Place with Mark."

"Barbara looked amusedly at the distant pile of Farrell's house, just visible from this part of the Park.

"Ah, a year ago you would have apologized for him," commented the old man. "You would have rushed to his defense."

"He doesn't need defending any more."

"He never did; but you wouldn't see it! Now let us just sit down for a few minutes on this sunny bench. Don't say that you haven't really time to stop and talk to me, because I know nobody else has. Were you going to Brandish Place?"

"Yes. I have a bone to pick with Mark. About the announcement he put in this morning's papers."

"Well, then you will be disappointed, because he is not at home."

"Where is he, do you know?"

"I understood him to say last night that he was dining and supping with Miss Patsy Raoul. Let us hope," added Mr. Frere noncommittally, "that her hospitality will include a morning paper, too."

Barbara watched the vicar's stick tapping and churning there in the loose earth, a poor substitute for his pond.

"Mark does almost everything deliberately," she said after a while. "He guessed I should come straight to Brandish Place this morning, and I expect he wanted to show me—"

She broke off, retreated along the ordered line of her thoughts and began afresh. "I felt with him, you know, because I love I bored him."

"Go on."

"It was a wrench for me. I had been so many years that I'd loved Mark. And Farrell saw it and didn't want me to feel—rejected. So he promised me he'd make Mark want me again. And he has."

"Things very often come too easily to Farrell," said Mr. Frere.

"It was my money, at first," went on Barbara, painstakingly clear about it. "When I could afford beautiful clothes, when I could afford to be amusing and careless and really young, then Mark wasn't board with me any more. Then I bought a partnership in Malavie's; I thought Mark would call that stuffy of me and drop me again. But he didn't. He is spoiled. He can't bear the thought of my marrying anyone but him; whether he really wants me himself or not, he can't bear it. And so for the last year he has—"

"Wooded up," suggested the vicar as she hesitated. "A very pleasant old word. I wish I could find as pleasant a one for his—breakfasts with Miss Raoul."

"You must requah food. You had a heavy day yesterday, remembah."

"I know. But I've some private business to attend to this morning." She pointed to a paper open at the social column. "I didn't authorize that announcement, Mr. Malavie."

"No?" Jacques Malavie, Ltd., like Lella, was not impressed by the denial. "Ah, well, the day will come, nevertheless." He added with genuine dignity: "You know how greatly you could honor me if you would crown our collaboration—"

"It is I who am honored," she replied. "But it isn't possible."

Jacques Malavie, Ltd., allowed a smile to lift his austere lips.

"I congratulate you," he said, "on having—ah—definitely eliminated one of us."

From the beginning he was an active advocate of the budget system whereby all appropriations for departments are passed on by the appropriations committee, systematizing government expenditures.

The existing budget system is attributed largely to work which he began ten years before the passage of the bill in 1921.

CAROLINA TO PLAY RETURN GAME AT DUKE

Chapel Hill, Feb. 4.—Carolina teams face a hard schedule of ten events with some of their strongest rivals next week, featured by the return meeting of the Carolina and Duke basketball teams here Saturday night at 8:30.

The Blue Devils won the first game on their own floor, a 36-32 thriller, halting a Carolina winning streak of seven games. The Tar Heels will be out for revenge and with the home court advantage on their side and Big Five and Southern Conference leads hanging importantly in the balance, all indications are for another great scrap.

The Carolina boxers will meet one of the strongest teams in the country at Penn State Saturday night. The freshman mittens will fight at Oak Ridge the same night.

The Tar Heel wrestlers, freshman and varsity, will also meet their traditional rival at Duke on Thursday.

The Carolina basketball team will also play important games at V. M. I. Monday night and at Washington and Lee Tuesday night, concluding its 1932 game tour through Maryland and Virginia.

Chowan College To Play College Cagers Tonight

Tonight in the Campus building local basketball fans will have an opportunity to see Chowan college return game with the E. C. T. C. quint.

The local collegians disposed of the Chowan aggregation quite handily in Chowan several weeks ago since then the Chowan team has been strengthened by the addition of their star center and captain who was out the first of the season with flu.

The Teachers have fully recovered from the Wake Forest game and will be in good shape for tonight.

Chowan college has been preparing for tonight's game hoping for revenge for the first defeat, so both teams will be on their metal. The game should be decidedly interesting from the spectators view point.

LOCAL GIRL CAGERS TRIM NEW BERNIANS

Another win was added to the Greenville girls record when they defeated the New Bern girls 42 to 24 in New Bern, Friday night. This totaled three victories out of four conference games and the girls expect to win from Wilson next Friday night the remaining conference team.

No individual player starred, but the entire game was marked by nice team work and accurate shots.

Greenville scored the first goal and continued to hold the lead. At the end of the first half the score was 16 to 12 with New Bern on the short end.

Although New Bern was defeated, their pass work was admirable. The Greenville guards played a very fine defensive game and the forwards were never more quick and accurate.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

Maybe you have heard enough about college football and its systems of mathematical rating, but because there have been some "squawks" and some caustic comment following Southern California's slaughter of Pittsburgh, I think it is worth having a short summary of the long rebuttal submitted by P. B. Williamson, alumnus of Auburn, consulting engineer, geologist and gridiron analyst at infinitum.

Mr. Williamson does not, as you may have suspected, merely beat the tom-toms again for dear old Auburn, though he has justification for that. He does, however, stagger us with the mathematical range of his analysis of football performances and he emerges with a formula based on very sensible factors, which rates the major teams for 1932 in a fashion quite different from the Dickinson System or the Dunkel Rating.

The factors in the "Williamson Formula" chiefly are: Season's average consistency of performance, "real" scoring ability, "real percentage" of the season, "gameness" as associated with "hardness" of schedule, weight of schedule, and some consideration of "football psychology," with notes on the factors of illness, weather, etc.

Skipping lightly through the magnificent equations involved, with a bow to such industry and thoroughness, we find Southern California clearly on top, within two points of perfection, at 98.12, with the result of the Rose Bowl game considered.

Pittsburgh, due to the rout at Pasadena, drops from second to fourth on the list from 87.57 to 78.12, beneath Michigan (86.87) and Auburn (82.79), but just ahead of Purdue (77.79).

Beginning Monday night they meet Wake Forest in Raleigh at the Memorial Auditorium and on Friday and Saturday nights they engage Davidson and South Carolina on the home courts of the two schools.

Starting their invasion of Virginia Monday night the Red Terror quint moved down the teams of V. P. I., Washington and Lee, V. M. I., and the University of Virginia, in the order named, meeting perhaps the strongest of the quartet on the last night of the trip. Doc Sermon's charges defeated V. P. I. and V. M. I. by comfortable margins but had more difficulty in disposing of Washington and Lee and Virginia, having to be content with advantages of two and four points, respectively.

The trip served to fatten the conference average of the Terrors and bring them from near the bottom of the heap to a challenging place among the leaders. At the start of the week, the State College team rested in ninth place among ten teams of the loop but the four wins placed them in firm possession of at least fourth place.

The score at the end of the first half was 23 to 7 in Greenville's favor. Each team in the final half made exactly ten points, but the lead obtained by Greenville in the first half was too much for the visitors. In the third period the entire second team of the locals went into play and were not taken out until the final period.

Hardee, forward of the locals was high scorer of the locals, making a total of twelve points. Gibbs, who holds the other forward position, was close second with ten points. For the Tarboro lads Jenkins, forward, was the high scorer with a total of seven points and Burnett, the other forward, a close second with six points. The passing of the local boys was as pretty as could be found anywhere, and it so bewildered the Tarboro lads the first half that they did not know what it was all about.

with foreign governments. His conference with the British ambassador at Warm Springs surprised no one who knows his desire that he shall be his own master in the White House.

A Capital Institution But the unauthorized agent unquestionably will continue to play on the impressions of the gullible, despite all handicaps. He is, in reality, more of an institution in Washington than the gold-brick artist, in fiction and tradition, in New York.

A much-repeated capital story tells how one of the species collected a fee running into four figures from a newly-arrived Latin-American diplomat by "arranging" for a display of pomp and gold braid when he presented his credentials at the White House—a display which goes with all such ceremonies automatically.

One President now dead, once told this writer that he had learned an important New York business house was paying a certain man-about-town an annual retainer of $10,000, simply because it believed that he "is close to me."

"And," the President said, "I never heard of him until I heard about this arrangement."

Don't Trust Them It is a pretty good rule, as any experienced political reporter will tell you, to trust least the man who publicizes himself most. If a man "lets it leak out" that he is acting or speaking for "the big boss," the chances are he isn't.

And it is an even better rule for the readers of political news to take with two or three grains of salt whatever they may be told about a public man's views by third parties.

The crew escaped in a dory. They had been clear of the vessel only a few minutes when it blew up and sank.

No Endorsers For Cabinet. Washington, Feb. 4.—(AP)—The North Carolina House delegation in a statement today said it had not endorsed anyone for a cabinet position because custom and good taste forbid. The statement was issued by the state delegation and all are Democrats in the House.

Would Balance Budget Raleigh, Feb. 4.—(AP)—Rep. Douglass told newspapermen this afternoon he planned to introduce a bill in the General Assembly Monday night which would balance the state budget if the legislature would pass it.

He said he would propose a tax of 15 cents on every 1,000 cigarettes manufactured in the state and tax of 25 cents on every 1,000 cigars made in N. C., a provision which also is included to tax snuff and other products he said.

"Get the money where the money is," he said.

"I'll sit here and rot before I'll vote for a sales tax or luxury tax unless I am shown the money need cannot be obtained where I know the money is."

"One tobacco company in this state declared dividends of $33,000,000 and I would like to know how many other concerns are able to declare dividends."

Halted By Illness Collier had scarcely assembled his committee and started work before he became ill and was forced to step aside. Crisp, of Georgia, became acting chairman and wielded the gavel for most of the session winning for himself a national reputation while pinch-hitting for Collier.

Then came last summer and election time. Mississippi politics was in a snarl over redistricting. Collier found himself having to run for reelection against a sitting member. He claimed that the redistricting act was unconstitutional and made his plans to run as a candidate at-large.

A few days before the primary the Supreme Court upheld the State's redistricting act. Collier withdrew and is now serving his last few weeks as a member of the House.

At the beginning of the present short session his health was such that he was able to resume the chairmanship of his committee.

He hasn't had much opportunity, however, during this session to make a name for himself.

A Break Maybe But gossip has it that he'll get a break yet. His friends are said to be urging Roosevelt to appoint him to a vacancy on the Tariff Commission.

If he gets that perhaps he'll forget the hard luck that has dogged him so persistently since he took over one of the prize jobs in Congress.

He could hardly have hoped to escape taken for a ride by Republicans on that statement. It came while he was debating his own proposal to cut a half billion dollars from federal appropriations in an effort to help balance the budget.

The next morning, following a Democratic caucus on the question Tydings arose in the Senate and requested permission to withdraw his resolution on the subject.

The Senate agreed, but not before the Republicans put him on the spot for his crack.

What tickled the Republicans the most was that Tydings' remark on the floor did not appear in the Congressional Record as he made it. What the Record quoted him as saying was:

"If we cannot vote reasonably on our own sentiments, then who wants the position?"

Vandenberg and Bingham were the Republicans who rode him hard. Vandenberg expressed disappointment that he couldn't find the statement in the Record. Then as the Senate chuckled and Tydings blushed he read it from a newspaper.

Bingham then arose with a copy of the Record in his hand. He invited the Senate to turn to page 2694 and in a grandiose manner declaimed: "If we cannot vote reasonably on our own sentiments..."

He paused for a moment, looked up appealingly, then in a voice scarcely audible concluded "..... who wants the job?"

The Senate and galleries roared and Tydings with them.

A WASHINGTON DAYBOOK By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, D. C.—(AP)—The chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, one of the most coveted positions in Congress, may yet bring a stroke of good luck to Jim Collier of Mississippi.

It's been a sort of jinx to the Mississippian a great part of the time he has held it. Bad luck has been his in big doses.

At the beginning of the Seventy-second Congress when the Democrats took over the House, chairmanship of Ways and Means was Collier's part of the spoils.

His committee at the time was about to take up legislation as important as any ever before Congress. There was the task of balancing the budget, new tariff legislation and numerous other vital problems.

Halted By Illness Collier had scarcely assembled his committee and started work before he became ill and was forced to step aside. Crisp, of Georgia, became acting chairman and wielded the gavel for most of the session winning for himself a national reputation while pinch-hitting for Collier.

Then came last summer and election time. Mississippi politics was in a snarl over redistricting. Collier found himself having to run for reelection against a sitting member. He claimed that the redistricting act was unconstitutional and made his plans to run as a candidate at-large.

A few days before the primary the Supreme Court upheld the State's redistricting act. Collier withdrew and is now serving his last few weeks as a member of the House.
