CONEY ISLAND AGAIN SWEEPED BY DISASTROUS FIRE

Riding On Heavy Gale, Fire Demon Destroys Amusement Buildings

WIND CHANGE SAVES NUMBER BATH HOUSES

Conflagration Two Hours Before Dawn, Wrecks Ferris Wheel, Caterpillar Ride, Motordome and Other Buildings; Blaze Discovered With Temperature Standing at 12 Below Zero; Portion of Board Walk Saved As Wind Veers

New York, Feb. 6.—(AP)—Fide, a constant plague of Coney Island, struck again today at the amusement resort, riding along the boardwalk on a biting southwest gale and destroying several amusement places. In the black hush two hours before dawn, and with thermometers registering 12 degrees below zero, fire burst from the wooden-smashed Tunnel of Love in that section of the amusement place known as the Bowery.

The gale howling through empty skeletons which in summer are gay with life, picked up the fire and swept it through the ferris wheel, caterpillar ride, motordome and two wooden concessions.

Bath-houses were in the path of the fire, but suddenly the wind, as if repentant of its destruction, swung sharply to the north.

The charge saved the bath-houses and a portion of the boardwalk.

HOOVER SIGNS NEW LOAN BILL

Measure Makes $90,000,000 Available For Farmers of The Nation

Washington, Feb. 6.—(AP)—A bill hailed by its congressional sponsors as the only credit recourse for many a hard-pressed farmer today became law by President Hoover's signature.

Authorizing $90,000,000 for loans to farmers to help them produce their 1933 crops, the measure was approved by both houses of Congress last week.

Opponents, including Rep. Snell, (R., New York) minority leader of the House, attacked it on the ground it would serve to increase agricultural surpluses, already large and burdensome. The bill provides that the secretary of agriculture may lend the money to farmers in return for a lien on their crops. Formulation of rules and regulations is placed in the hands of the secretary.

A cut in production is as much as 30 per cent may be required by the secretary in return for a loan but the law does not compel him to make that stipulation. The measure also provides $10,000,000 for loans for livestock feed in drought ridden areas, the borrower to give a lien on the livestock.

The 26-year-old prince already had 90,000 kronor a year, but his marriage, it is claimed, doubled his expenses.

NEGRO KILLED ON HIGHWAY

Arch Russell, Drunk, Meets Death When He Falls in Front of Car

Arch Russell, colored, was instantly killed when hit by an automobile driven by J. L. Smithwick of Core Point on the Greenville-Washington highway, three miles below Grimesland, last Saturday night.

The negro was said to have been drinking and fell in front of the car. Smithwick was exonerated in an investigation conducted by highway patrolmen and Sheriff Sam Whitehurst of Pitt County.

The accident occurred in Pitt County near the Beaufort County line and was witnessed by several people who happened to be at that point at the time. Russell was said to have been drinking heavily and was staggering along the highway and suddenly fell in front of Smithwick's car.

Smithwick said he saw the negro staggering along the road and was driving carefully to prevent hitting him when he fell directly in the path of the machine.

The negro's skull was crushed by the impact and death was instantaneous.

Russell, officers said, was employed as tenant on the Faucett farm in the Grimesland community.

DELAY ACTION IN LEA CASE

Governor McAllister To Make Known Extradition Decision Tuesday

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Governor Hill McAllister today postponed until 3 o'clock tomorrow his decision on the request of North Carolina for the extradition of Colonel Luke Lea and son, Luke Lea, Jr. The governor said he was deferring action at the request of North Carolina representatives who had written him stating that there is "another angle of the case which we desire to call to your attention."

NEGRO NABBED FOR ROBBERY

Jack Moore, Who Escaped From Jail 17 Years Ago, Arrested Here Yesterday

Hunted by police for seventeen years for robbery of a freight car here, Jack Moore, colored, was arrested yesterday following the robbery of two negro houses and the severe cutting of a negro Saturday night.

The negro, who escaped from the city jail with five others after his arrest on the freight car robbery, was being held on a charge of the robbery of the homes of John and Herbert Whitehead, and the cutting of Sarah Gardner, who, police said, came with him from Richmond.

Clothing, meat and lard were taken from the home of John Whitehead and $3.25 and a purse from Herbert Whitehead's.

Some of the stolen property was recovered when the negro was arrested, police said.

Given a preliminary hearing in police court this morning, Moore was bound over to the next session of County Court under bond of $1,000. He was unable to provide bail and was remanded to the jail.

Three of the negroes who escaped with Moore in his break from the jail seventeen years ago are dead, police said, and the remainder have not been heard from since their escape.

Moore was believed to have spent a major part of his time in Virginia and nearby States since his escape, but his appearance here last week was the first time he had visited the community since he made his hurried exit.

Police said he was a bad character and probably was connected with crimes in other sections of the country, although no notification to this effect had been received today.

Although the woman who was traveling with him was badly cut, her injuries were not considered necessarily serious, officers stated.

BARRY FACES SENATE BODY

Former Sargeant at Arms Answers Charges of Selling of Solons' Votes

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Appearing in his own defense before the Senate Judiciary Committee today, David S. Barry, Senate sergeant-at-arms, cited charges of congressional bribes in support of a magazine article in which he said some members of Congress sold their votes for money.

Holding his derby hat and came in one hand, the nattily dressed official now under suspension, presented a prepared statement to the committee considering what punishment is to be meted out to him.

He sighted the statement made by Senator Glass in the Senate last spring that banking interests hire some Congressmen to oppose banking legislation.

The committee was inquiring into Barry having said in an article that "there was not many crooks in Congress" and also that there "are a few Senators and Representatives who sell their votes, and it is pretty well known to those who are."

Congress Holds Memorial Service For Calvin Coolidge

LEGISLATURE PREPARES FOR HEAVY WEEK

Attention Focused on Action of Two Committees Handling Appropriations

Palestine N. C., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Legislative eyes this week will be focused on the two major committees of the General Assembly—Finance and Appropriations. Whether the appropriations group will see fit to approve recommendations for allotments for the University of North Carolina, low it or raise it—is the prime question.

Just what form of sales tax it seems generally accepted that such a tax is inevitable—the Finance Committee will offer for legislative digestion is another question.

The form assumed by bills from two committees likely will determine how long this Legislature will be in session. While a majority of members have resigned themselves to the inevitability of a sales tax, there apparently is still enough opposition to make for healthy floor fight on such a proposal.

Prevailing sentiment among Appropriations Committee members appears to be for holding within the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau. If such is the case, there is likely to be a movement to raise it.

Public hearings of State-wide interest are scheduled for two bills. Tuesday the House Judiciary Committee will consider a bill to provide safer regulations for motor vehicle traffic.

The Sullivan Sunday baseball bill was re-referred to the House Judiciary Committee on motion of its sponsors who said other interests wished to be heard on it.

COLD WAVE VISITS CITY

Coldest Weather of Years Following Snow Flurry Here Yesterday Morning

People who looked indifferently on the antics of the groundhog several days ago probably realize now that the little animal was justified in returning quickly to his hole in the ground after seeing his shadow.

Completely vindicating the groundhog theory, King Winter, with ice in his whiskers, blew his breath over this part of the State yesterday afternoon and last night and sent the mercury hurtling to the lowest stage of the winter.

B. T. Clark, local government weather observer, states this morning the mercury tumbled from a fairly comfortable 40 degrees yesterday morning to 16 this morning. It was the most pronounced fall of temperatures of the season, and brought the coldest weather of the winter to the city and community.

Several weeks ago the mercury dropped to 24, bringing the coldest weather in three or four years, but the reading today shatters records in the memory of some of the oldest inhabitants.

The citizenry was greeted by sun-drenched skies when it awoke yesterday morning. At 11 o'clock it was snowing, and while the tiny flakes failed to stick because of the warmth of the earth, they formed a fitting prelude for the intense cold wave that followed.

The sun peeped brightly from behind the clouds in the afternoon, but it was too late to give any comfort to mother nature already in the grip of King Winter's icy fingers.

Bursting water pipes, frozen radiators, and hurried telephone calls for coal were the order of the day this morning, and coal dealers, carvers and plumbers were kept busy the most of the day attempting to meet the demands of their patrons.

The weather men held out hope of early relief from the cold attack with prediction of mounting temperatures accompanied by rain tomorrow.

SOLONS PAY TRIBUTE TO LATE LEADER

Long Drawn Out Debate on Appropriations Bill Continues After Joint Memorial Ceremony; House Plans Adjournment After Service; Garner Says Useless to Continue Work With Other Side Stalling

Washington, D. C., Feb. 6.—(AP)—Congress is resigned to accomplishing virtually nothing of consequence in the short session, but it continued today its normal activity broken only by a memorial service for former President Calvin Coolidge in a joint session of the Senate and House.

This formal ceremony in the House chamber, not intended by leaders to interfere with resumption of long drawn debate on the billion dollar appropriations bill for the treasury and postoffice and the committee of both branches returned to regular hearings.

The House planned adjournment after the memorial service. Speaker Garner already has proclaimed the uselessness of the House putting through legislation, having seen a bumper crop of important bills run into a hopeless jam at the other end of the capitol.

For the rest of the week the House business will consist of minor legislation.

ABOUT TOWN

It was right that President-elect Roosevelt should have decided to inform Congress concerning the deliberations on debts to be held in March.

Congress is entitled to such action and its members may be able to offer helpful suggestions looking to solution of the debt problem with other nations.

The solution of the debt puzzle is one of the most important questions confronting the government in recent years, and it is probable that all nations it is probable better trade relations will be established with other countries.

That, at least, is the object of Mr. Roosevelt and should he succeed the rest of the county will have him to thank for what others were unable to accomplish.

The expression that "Greenville is one of the best towns in this part of the State" has been heard frequently in recent years, and will be heard probably more frequently in future years.

The importance of this city as an agricultural and shopping center is recognized more completely by surrounding communities at this time and this has been instrumental in the spotlight being turned on activities of the community.

The distinction of being the largest, bright leaf tobacco market in the world has been of the utmost importance to the section, in spite of the enviable place held by the city in this industry in past years, and that it will mean the coming of more people and more industries in future years is not doubted.

People always want to go where they see others making progress in an industrial and business way, and while this is not as pronounced at this time as it has been in their years, it is of sufficient scope to justify faith in the community.

Greenville is destined to be one of the leading cities of the state and its success in the field of business and industry is going to mean much in the realization of the dream in years to come.

The high school had a successful time last week in the capture of the majority of basketball games played, and if somebody doesn't speed up other games will be added to the spring of victories this week.

Cochman Porter's proteges are beginning to show real form in this field of sport and it is believed attendance will be much better during the last part of the season.

If there is anything in the world the high school athletic department needs at this time it is financial support, and every person attending the games will help them realize the pressing need. It is discouraging to be on the red side of the ledger all the time, and while the high school has done well in the face of the handicap, they believe they would be able to make a better showing if relieved of at least a part of the financial worry.

Basketball is one of the best diversions in the field of sports and patrons of the schools who spend an evening watching the two teams attempt to bring laurels to the city will find their time well spent.

Relief money received in this community is being well spent, as an inspection of the city and county will indicate. Scores of men are employed in improvements of a public nature in all parts of the county and this means that they have been able to at least keep the wolf from their doors until the planting season begins, affording employment for hundreds of laborers.

Streets in the city of Greenville have been improved considerably by groups of workmen sent out by the street department. Many of these improvements were badly needed and they were made possible when the city found that Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans could be used for labor in such projects.

Other cities of the state and nation have resorted to this method of public improvement and each has been benefited immensely.

The improvements serve a twofold purpose in that they open a way for the unemployed to provide for their families until better times come and also open a way for the community to put through work programs needed for some time.

Advertising is going to play an important part in the eventual recovery of business from the period of depression and the merchants and business men who make the first start will find themselves in the forefront of the business-getters in the new era of prosperity.

Greenville business men know what advertising has done for them in past years and they realize that it is going to play a conspicuous part in their future comeback.

Proper display of stocks along with advertising is bound to get results and those taking the lead will find themselves reaping benefits from the undertaking.

If the courts of our land are to be respected they must mete out equal justice to all rather than punish the poor white man and negro and let others off with a fine that is never to be paid.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren Author of "BEAU GESTE"

Chapter I

The news spread like wild-fire throughout Cantonments that big Lieutenant Le Sage, returning from furlough, had brought his notably beautiful, extremely fascinating and provocatively charming and intelligent wife with him to Morocco.

The joy of the officers of the garrison of Mellerat was unconcealed; that of their wives well concealed.

Within a month, the popular, brilliant and successful Lieutenant Riccoli made no secret of the fact that he was head over ears in love with her.

Indeed, he boasted of it—loudly; and bade folk watch.

Folk did—and speculated in messes, clubs, and drawing rooms, as to whether the gay spark Riccoli had taken the measure of the giant Lieutenant Le Sage as accurately as Lieutenant Le Sage had taken that of the accomplished Riccoli.

Most intriguing.....

The moon drenched African night was very hot and very still, the air electric with presage of thunder; a

"I did not come here to discuss the weather," said Riccoli.

brooding, bedevil night, disturbing and unsettling.

"Do sit down, darling..... Come and sit here," begged Lieutenant Napoleon Riccoli, patting the cushions of the divan on which he was sprawled.

Madame Le Sage stepped out on to the veranda and looked forth into the night.

"Although the stars are so huge and near, and the moon so wonderful, I feel that we're going to have a storm," she said.

"I did not come here tonight.... To discuss the weather," replied Riccoli.

"No!" said Madame Le Sage, turning and eyeing her guest steadily.

How extraordinarily handsome he was, this Corsican, in spite of his high narrow forehead, too large and limpid eyes, and girlish mouth. And how terribly charming, in spite of his amazing conceit and self-satisfaction.

"No," repeated Riccoli, "I did not come here, and I'll tell you why I came."

Rising to his feet, Riccoli put his arms about her, and as she threw back her head, whether in invitation or alarm, drew her to him and kissed her passionately on the lips.

"That's what I came for," he said unsteadily. "Now sit down by me and I'll give you further—reasons."

Wiping her lips with a tiny lace handkerchief, Madame Le Sage obeyed.

"Before producing any more—reasons," she said, "will you tell me why you think they should interest me?"

"Well," drawled the ardent officer, placing his right arm about the waist of his hostess, "you are a clever woman as well as a lovely one, and I am the Lieutenant Napoleon Riccoli."

"And therefore what else could I do but fall in love with you?" laughed Madame Le Sage.

"Precisely, my angel. What else should happen? I fancy I am worthy of you.... And you—are worthy of me...."

"Have you given yourself the trouble to consider what might be my husband's views on that?" asked Madame Le Sage.

"No, they do not interest me."

"They might."

"The views of Lieutenant Le Sage?" laughed Riccoli.

"But he is Lieutenant Le Sage, you know, and my husband."

"But I am Lieutenant Napoleon Riccoli, and your love."

"You are?"

"I am. I declare it here and now. And I am going to be something even more than that."

"Really? More than...?"

"Yes. More than the good Le Sage ever even dreams of being. I am going to be a great soldier, a General, a Field-Marshal, a Conqueror able to buy you is that he has too much money."

Madame Le Sage opened wide eyes of admiring wonder—of wonder at any rate.

"Yes, and more than a great soldier.... A great leader of men.... A great ruler.... A Dictator.... Is not this the day of such men? Look at Russia.... Look at Turkey.... Look at Poland.... Look at Italy.... Look at Spain.... Were not those Dictators once Lieutenants, and less than Lieutenants? Was not Primo De Rivera once a Lieutenant? Was not Marshal Pilsudski once a Lieutenant? And what were Lenin and Trotsky? Guttersnipes...."

"And you?" interrupted Madame Le Sage, at this, perhaps, unfortunate point.

"I? A Corsican," was the portentous reply.

"Like the other Napoleon," observed Madame.

"Like the other Napoleon," agreed Riccoli.

"And, like him, a lieutenant..... Poor, obscure, ambitious, but a brain.... a brain...."

"And a heart," he added, turning

Madame coughed.

Lieutenant Le Sage placed the muzzle of the revolver against his own temple.

"Ah—" gasped Riccoli.

Madame covered her face.

Le Sage pulled the trigger.

A sharp click fell upon the silence of the room.

"Your turn," said Le Sage, and again offered the pistol to Riccoli.

White-faced, the Corsican glared at his friend.

"Take it, man," said the latter, with quiet patience.

"I will not commit suicide," cried the Corsican at length.

"A chance or a certainty?" replied Le Sage. "Take your chance, or I will give you a certainty."

Riccoli drew a deep breath thru nostrils that quivered slightly, and extended his hand.

"I am protected," he whispered as he took the pistol. "I am a Man of Destiny."

"Pull the trigger then, Man of Destiny," said Le Sage quietly.

With a dramatic gesture, a flourish of the left hand and eyes turned heavenward, Riccoli placed the muzzle of the pistol to his temple, closed his fine eyes, whispered:

"Nothing can hurt me." Then he clenched his teeth and with visible effort, a snudder, and a grimace, pulled the trigger.

Again a sharp click broke the breathless silence.

Riccoli relaxed, sighed deeply, and lowering the pistol, reversed it and handed it to Le Sage.

"One each...." breathed Riccoli.

"A fair duel.... Honor is satisfied."

And he smiled almost affectionately at his friend and brother-in-arms.

"Don't you believe it, my son," replied that gentleman, and promptly pointed the pistol at his own forehead.

Honor demands, tomorrow further satisfaction from Lieutenant Riccoli.

ANOTHER SKATER INJURED

Again we call attention of parents to the dangers in children skating on the street and highways. Just a few weeks ago there was a serious accident here when a small boy on skates was run down by a car and probably permanently injured. On Friday afternoon there was a similar accident on the highway just across the river, this time a girl skating home from school being struck by a car and painfully injured.

We would not try to take away from the children the pleasure and exercise they derive from skating but we do urge parents to caution their children against the dangers of skating on the paved streets and highways.

THE JUSTICE OF THE COURTS

The News and Observer yesterday pointed out the injustice of the Wake court in sentencing three negroes to prison for stealing $18 from an insurance agent and the same court meting out a $200.00 fine to an insurance agent who had embezzled $1,078 from one policy holder and then giving the agent an extension of time in which to pay his costs and fine. As is evidenced by our recent editorial calling attention to more than six thousand dollars in uncollected costs and fines in our own county, it would appear that justice has not been altogether the order of the courts in our own county, and no doubt similar conditions will be found throughout the state.

As a small boy, the writer attended a session of court here when a lawyer in addressing the jury in an effort to convict a wealthy white man charged with murder, remarked: "If this man is not convicted the sign on this court house should read, 'This is where the poor white man and the negro gets punished for his crimes.'" Many times since hearing that remark we have watched the courts and realized just how much truth that lawyer had spoken.

If the courts of our land are to be respected they must mete out equal justice to all rather than punish the poor white man and negro and let others off with a fine that is never to be paid.

Beauty Hints

(Screen Actress)

A lot of valuable time can be saved in care of the hands if one wears gloves, not only out of doors, but also at night.

With the hands thoroughly creamed before the night gloves are slipped on the fingers the hands can be kept soft in texture from wrists to finger-tips.

stammered Barbara.

"Oh, nonsense you heard me perfectly," returned the vicar. "Get up and run along and find him; your brain will begin to work once you are moving. I left him right at the top of the house packing up a case of little fancy dress dolls. A wedding present, I gathered, for you and Mark."

"You swear this isn't pity, Barbara?"

"It isn't pity."

"Because I'm no Mark. I don't want support. I never will let you carry me along with your career. I'm down now, but I'll be up again. I'll give you pearls yet, and I shall loathe it if you can afford them before I can. I suppose it's pride, but I'm not used to poverty."

"You gave me a year to learn that I should be happier married to you than to Mark. Now the year is up, and I've come to tell you you were right. I want to marry you. Do you still want me? Or not?"

"Do you love me, Barbara? As I love you?"

"I love you—in my own fashion. I can't love otherwise. Isn't it enough?"

In this empty room nothing seemed to register as real and articulate except, for some reason, Farrell's hands. "He is—very easily hurt just now. Yes, his hands were the hands of a man easily hurt. Whereas Mark's hands were strong and greedy and clever, these were trained only to physical combat or to social ease. They looked helpless, now, fumbling with a tiny silk-clad doll."

"No, better get it clear," said Barbara, as though the old vicar were at Farrell's elbow. "Perhaps my kind of love isn't enough for you. I can't pretend, you see, to be other than I am. Farrell that first night, when we found Lella's portrait in the Toxeter house, you said that when Mark was well and rich and enjoying life I should be free to choose. Spirit-free. That's come true. But you said I'd choose you. That didn't come true until now that you may have need of me."

"Then it is pity?"

"What if it is? If I can't love you until I can help you, why should you be hurt by that? You say you fell in love with me at first sight, but I think you loved your own idea of what you were to make me. I am not like that. I can't be hung with pearls at the end of our battles. I must be in the battle too. And I think that if all that is pity you will just have to endure it as I shall have to endure your pride and your stupid little sorenesses."

"But perhaps," added Barbara, suddenly all gaiety because of the surrender in his empty hands, "you would like a year in which to come to see that I am right?"

A 6 o'clock punctually Lella ceased to be the best-dressed girl at Malavae's and, stepping westwards, became rapidly more and more out-moded. Bond Street saw her in definitely last year's garb, and when a car drew up beside her as she waited to cross Piccadilly and a voice spoke her name she wondered only which it was of the De Capo dragon flies that hovered for a moment to tease her and then be gone.

"Get in, please, Lella!"

It was Mark. As she got in she reflected that she had not seen him for months. She sank back upon the pale cushions of his car and, pushing her hat further from her face, passed her hands over her face in an effort to rub away some of her fatigue.

"What's the matter?" demanded Mark, instantly querulous. "You aren't going to cry, are you? If you are, get out again, that's all! Crying women look like hens."

"I'm moved, but not to tears," Lella assured him. "I sent my congratulations by Barbara, Mark. Did you get them?"

Mark immediately became angrier.

"Are you talking about this?" He thrust a crumpled paper? "D'you know I've only just read it?"

Lella eyed him over the top of her powder-puff.

"Well, another time ask them to wake and call you earlier, call you earlier, mother dear."

He flung the paper to the floor.

"You stupid fool. I was with Patsy last night at the De Capo, and we went wandering off into the country afterwards. I forgot why. Only came back to St. John's Wood an hour ago. I've been trying to get hold of Barbara."

"You sound as though you were not pleased that she has chosen you, after all."

"Chosen?" Mark was livid. "Of all the blazing, sickening insolence, whistling me up in front of all my friends like that!"

"Are you trying to tell me that you didn't send that announcement to the papers?"

"I certainly didn't!"

"But you've been hanging round her ever since your cure, you've been trying to cut out Farrell Armitage, you've been—Don't you want to marry Barbara?"

"Yes, I do. At least I suppose I do. In a way. But when I choose. Not when she chooses."

"Barbara didn't send that announcement, Mark. She thought it was your doing."

Mark gaped. For a moment he looked like his mother.

"She was angry about it," continued Lella slowly. "So angry that she went off early this morning and definitely promised to marry Farrell."

"That's a lie!"

"No, it isn't. And, anyway, you won't help any by burning my wrist. She phoned the senior partner at Jacques Malavie's and asked him to tell me. Apparently she and Farrell are going to join Kenneth Poole in South Africa.... Oh, Mark!"

Mark had let her wrist go and was huddling into his corner of the car. His shoulders trembled.

"Oh, Mark, don't! Aare you crying, Mark?" Sight and sound became fluid for Lella, merging into the desperate hope. Don't care so much, Markie; marry me instead, we'll have lots of fun yet. You won't find me boring, you know."

"Get out!" ordered Mark thickly.

He swung open the door, but he did not order his chauffeur to stop. Lella, her eyebrows very ached, waited. Mark shut the door sulkily.

"All right!" he grumbled. "We'll get married, then, and before they do. That'll be something. Did you know Armitage has gone broke? He told me yesterday. Do you imagine he sent the announcement?"

"No, I don't."

"What, then?"

She shook her head. Patsy? Judy? No. No. Her chaotic mind rejected both of them. Mr. Frere? Just possibly, Mr. Frere?

Then Mark, too, was saying something about Mr. Frere.

"—told me I ought to marry you, not Barbara. So that naturally I decided I'd be damned if I did. But probably we shan't have enough money to stay married long. It's a pity you threw away that emerald. I might have sold it back to Barbara."

BLACK DRAUGHT

Sales Record for Past 54 Months Is Announced

Dayton, Ohio, January 3, 1933.—A record of achievement which is possibly without parallel in business history was revealed here today when officials of the Sargon Laboratories, Inc., reported that fifty-four months ago their medicines, Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills, were first placed on the market, and that up to date 7,417,428 packages of these two medicines have been sold.

In explanation of this truly remarkable record Mr. J. J. Gibson, Secretary of the Company, said: "We spent two years' time and a considerable fortune in developing these medicines before they were placed on the market, and we had good reason to believe that as soon as the public became acquainted with their effects there would be a very large demand for them. This is what seems to have happened during the past fifty-four months."

"As evidence of this," he continued, "thousands upon thousands of individual endorsements have literally poured in from all parts of the country, and we are shipping our medicines throughout the United States, Canada, and Hawaiian Islands, Porto Rico, the Philippine Islands, Cuba, Jamaica, and several Central American countries. Only yesterday we received an order from Nice, France. Indeed a large part of our business comes from sections where our advertising has never appeared. This indicates that people who use our medicines are writing or telling their friends about them."

When asked for a brief statement of what effects Sargon and Sargon Pills have on persons who take them, Mr. Gibson replied: "These are new medicines and they actually accomplish many things which the older remedies were supposed to do. For instance, it is now conceded by the medical profession that colic and other laxative drugs have no effect whatever on the liver. Our medicines actually stimulate the liver to cleanse itself by increasing its production of bile. Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills also promote general glandular activity; build up the red blood cells, and correct the most prevalent causes of indigestion and constipation and the many ailments resulting from these disorders."

Buying Barbara

by Julia Cleft-Addams Author of "YOU CAN'T MARRY"

Chapter 49

THE SOLUTION

There was a long silence. The vicar's stick leaned idle against his knee. Barbara began to wonder whether the old man had gone to sleep. When he moved, however, and eyed her from under the wide shadow of his hat, she saw that he was very much awake.

"What's in the back of your head, my dear Barbara, is that, in the end the only reason Farrell has not been able to buy you is that he has too much money?"

She frowned.

"Well, in a way. Yes. Perhaps. Yes. I suppose his strength is, fundamentally, money."

"Then I have a piece of directly heaven-sent news for you. Most of the Armitage fortune went in the Metric crash last week. Farrell isn't penniless, but he will have to fight his way up the ladder again, and as he was born quite half-way up to start with he is going to find climbing a very humiliating and bitter thing."

There was another long silence. Then—

"What did you say about Farrell?"

Miss Tessie At College. "Public School Art," as presented by Miss Louise Tessie, art editor of "American Childhood," and a frequent contributor to "School Arts Magazine," at East Carolina Teachers College on Saturday afternoon, is a topic of great interest and importance. She did not spend much time in discussion of theory in abstract art and said little about the child and art, but she showed her audience examples of public school art that made them draw their own conclusions about its importance.

Her experiences in various countries in Europe where she studied trying to find the secrets of the remarkable work being translated into practical work in America. She first told of some of these experiences, especially in Vienna, Germany, and Switzerland. She gave as the secret of the artistic work in the schools these people have been art-minded for a thousand years. I giving the steps by which children are taught drawing she showed samples of work with every step so that the uninitiated in the audience felt they had the first lessons in drawing. She had mounted samples of every type of work she talked about and passed these around the audience. She took up the various types of work done in the grades, or in practical art, explained the printing whenever it touched commercial art, and the audience had a chance to compare the first sketches with the finished product. Samples of etchings, borders, action figures, stenciling, spatter-work, and wood-cuts were shown, and the various steps in each process were explained. She also gave some good practical suggestions for making "depression materials," such as colored flour paste as a substitute for the expensive material. Not all of Miss Tessie's time is spent in editorial offices and the studio, for she goes into every part of the country, visiting the schools and seeing what is actually done and bringing the best principles in art and ideas she has gained from other nations to children of America.

"Spirit" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Feb. 5. The golden text was from John 4:24: "God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other; so that ye cannot do the things that ye would." (Gal. 5:17). The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "When false human beliefs learn even a little of their own falsity, they begin to disappear. A knowledge of error and of its operation must precede that understanding of truth which destroys error, until the entire mortal, material error, finally disappears, and the eternal verity, man created by and of spirit, is understood and recognized as the true likeness of his Maker."—From the Christian Science Committee on Publication.

How to Wash Knit Underwear

Artificial silk knitted underwear should be washed in lukewarm water with soapsuds. Hot water makes the fabric tender. Pure soap is essential. The fabric should not be rubbed but squeezed and rinsed repeatedly. Hang on a line to dry, avoiding too hot an iron.
