Methodist Conference Held Here Yesterday Was Largely Attended

Powerful Sermons Delivered by Bishop Mouzon and Bishop Kern

The Methodist Conference in this city yesterday was largely attended and according to Bishop Mouzon was one of the best meetings of the series recently attended by him.

Miss... Speaker

BISHOP PAUL B. KERN.

Bishop of the Orient, addressed the closing session of the Methodist Mission Conference at the college last night.

VOTE AGAINST THE REPEAL OF PROHIBITION

Church Gathering Adopts Resolution Opposing Any Change in Dry Laws

A resolution against repeal of the prohibition laws in North Carolina was adopted among delegates from 28 counties present here yesterday at the Methodist Conference.

Because of the efforts now being made in the Legislature toward the repeal of the dry laws in this State, in case national prohibition is repealed, the church people and other groups of this State have begun a determined campaign against the movement.

"We, the citizens of the counties of Currituck, Camden, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Dare, Gates, Chowan, Northampton, Halifax, Edgecombe, Warren, Nash, Wilson, Wayne, Lenoir, Greene, Craven, Carteret, Hyde, Washington, Tyrrell, Bertie, Jones, Martin, Beaufort, Hertford and Pitt in conference assembled, are opposed to any changes in our prohibition laws."

Workers Fight To Hold Ground In Scandinavia

Stockholm.—(AP)—Backed by political power, as a result of their organized strength, the workmen of Sweden, Norway and Denmark are fighting to keep up their standard of living.

The employers, also organized, are becoming more determined on readjustment.

Denmark, recently threatened with a lockout which would have involved 125,000 men and which had the earmarks of a lengthy struggle has the most visible evidence of the unity of the working class in Scandinavia.

In Sweden the situation is being revealed, indirectly, by political opposition to plans of the new social-democratic government to float large loans for payment of standard wages on unemployment relief projects.

Norway, with memories of the general strike in 1931, is moving cautiously in seeking legislation to make practically all forms of boycott impossible.

Finland, by contrast, with a decided lack of organized labor, has managed to cut production costs to the bone, but has lowered the standard of living.

WELCOME PLAN OF MORE POWER FOR PRESIDENT

Washington Writer Says Solons Will Embrace Idea With Sigh Of Relief

By BYRON PRICE Some of them may protest, raising a public clamor about the constitution and the dignity of Congress, but most senators and representatives privately embrace with a great sigh of relief the plan to give President Roosevelt sweeping powers to reorganize the government, eliminate waste, and balance the budget.

For months now, the necessity of doing that job has been the chief nightmare among the numerous and dreadful company of hobgoblins stalking on Capitol Hill, raising a cold sweat and fraying congressional nerves almost to the breaking point.

Everyone has known for a long time that the job would have to be done eventually, by somebody. Congress has tried it over and over, under the urgent prodding of its constituency and has arrived nowhere. Yet, largely as a matter of pride, it has hoped against hope the day would not come when it would have to openly confess defeat.

That day appears at hand, says Speaker Garner, who probably comes

CONFIDENT OF WET MAJORITY

Garner Promises Repeal of Prohibition By House Vote on Monday

Washington, Feb. 17.—(AP)—House leaders were confident today that they could summon full strength and throw the Democratic majority solidly behind the prohibition repeal approved by the Senate yesterday in the Blaine resolution. Speaker Garner promises a House vote on Monday under the drastic measure of suspension of rules. The repeal resolution was carried yesterday in the Senate by a vote of 63 to 23. A Democratic caucus is called for late today to summon the party support for the repeal. Representative Snell (R., N. Y.) gave assurance of more than 100 Republican votes for the measure.

Just what legal machinery for control of ratification, if and when submitted to the people may demand state legislative action. Should the House follow the Senate the repeal would go to state conventions for ratification. This method was favored by both party platforms in the last election, but never before has a constitutional amendment been ratified by the convention method. Always it has been by the legislature and there is a difference of opinion at this time over the plan.

Some believe that Congress must create the conventions while others believe it to be a state function.

Late News Flashes

Today In The Legislature. Raleigh, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Legalized Sunday baseball for profit in North Carolina was rejected by the General Assembly today as its members charge that sinister influence is delaying legislation for the relief of the overburdened taxpayers. The House vote was 84 to 25 against the Sullivan bill for Sunday baseball.

Representative Williams of Duplin county, read a statement to the House in which he asserted that the legislature is being restrained by the power of an unseen hand from giving consideration to the question justifying its existence, that of giving relief from unbearable taxation. Representatives Harris of Person, Barden of Duplin, and Moore of Guilford, expressed resentment of the remark and Moore termed it a "libel upon this house." Williams later amplified his remarks by saying that he meant no reflection upon the representatives.

The Senate defeated the Hinsdale bill that would prohibit legislators from filing jobs created by a General Assembly of which they were a member. The McLean bill to allow

FINISH PLANS MAN DIES BY SUFFOCATION LAST NIGHT

Interesting Program Arranged For Celebration to be Held March 4

Plans for Founders' Day at East Carolina Teachers College, to be observed on March 4, are already settled. The speaker, T. Wingate Andrews, superintendent of High Point schools has accepted. Mrs. Kate R. Beckwith hopes to be able to attend. The tree to be planted will be dedicated to her in recognition of her sixteen years of service at lady principal. Mrs. John Thompson, formerly Miss Lillie Mae Dawson, vice-president and acting president of the alumnae association, will preside.

Mrs. Mavis Evans will sing a solo. Dr. Meadows will have charge of the tree-planting exercises, and Mrs. L. P. Thomas, formerly Miss Patay Spencer, of Farmville; Miss Louis Pittman, of Greensboro, and Mrs. C. M. Warren, will take part.

A large gathering of alumnae is expected. Those at a distance are invited to be overnight guests of the college. All alumnae are invited to the luncheon.

The local alumnae is sponsoring the celebration. Miss Elizabeth Relfe Hobbs, a college senior and a graduate of the two-year course, is chairman of the celebration. Others of the committee are: Mrs. A. B. Corry, Mrs. C. M. Warren, and a faculty representative, Miss Maria D. Graham. Miss Elizabeth Smith, the president of Pitt County chapter is ex-officio member of the committee.

BISHOP DARST HERE SUNDAY

Will Consecrate New Episcopal Church Building on Fourth Street

The beloved Episcopal Bishop of East Carolina, the Right Reverend Thomas C. Darst, will preach at St. Peter's Episcopal Church Sunday morning. In addition to presiding over the morning service, the bishop will consecrate the new church building, which is entirely out of debt, and will confirm the class of those joining the Episcopal Church at this time.

MAN DIES BY SUFFOCATION LAST NIGHT

Frank Lathinghouse, white man about 30 years of age, was the victim of suffocation last night about midnight when he was in his room at his residence on Reade Street was destroyed by fire. Lathinghouse's body was found on the floor of the room fully clothed after firemen called to the scene, had extinguished the flames.

According to available information, Lathinghouse had apparently fallen asleep across the bed smoking when he removed his clothing, and when the bed was ignited he had struggled to the floor but was unable to make his way from the room. He was in the house alone at the time, his sister with whom he lived being away on a visit.

Lathinghouse has been in this city some time as sales representative for the L. B. Price Wholesale Company with headquarters at Charlotte. The body was taken to Williams Funeral Parlor pending word from relatives as to funeral arrangements. A coroner's inquest this morning rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death by suffocation.

Joseph B. Cannon Dies Early Today

Joseph Benjamin Cannon, age 37, died this morning at 6:45 at the home of his brother, D. C. Cannon on Greenville Route 6, near Forbes school house.

Mr. Cannon had been critically ill for the past two months.

Funeral services will be held at the home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Walter Nobles, pastor of the Free Will Baptist Church of Winterville. Burial will follow in the Byrd family burying ground near Winterville.

The deceased is survived by one brother, D. C. Cannon.

He was well known and will be missed by a large circle of friends.

PROHIBITION BE DISCUSSED HERE SUNDAY

Topic For All Sermons Sunday Morning. Dr. W. L. Potat Speak Sunday Night

Prohibition will be the chief topic of discussion in this city and county Sunday when all the ministers of the city preach against the evils of alcohol and the dangers of repeal of the dry laws, at the Sunday morning preaching hour and then all congregations join together at the Eighth Street Christian Church in the evening service to hear Dr. William Louis Potat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College, deliver an address on the same subject.

While this program is being carried on in this city Sunday, representatives of the Anti-Saloon League will deliver similar sermons in other churches of the county and then on Monday and Tuesday the messages will be carried to the various schools of the county.

Official announcement of the campaign was made this morning by the local Ministerial Association in the following notice:

Union Service of the Greenville Church, February 19, 1933, 7:30 p. m. Eighth Street Christian Church. Speaker: Dr. William Louis Potat, president-emeritus of Wake Forest College.

Dr. Potat will address the people of Greenville in the interest of the matter of "Prohibition." This important subject is again being forced upon the attention of the right

MIAMI VICTIMS RESTING WELL

Physicians Report Little Change in Condition of Cermak and Mrs. Gill

Enroute with President-elect Roosevelt. Franklin D. Roosevelt was notified as he traveled across Virginia today that marked improvement had occurred in the condition of Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, and Mrs. Joe Gill, two of his would-be assassin's victims he left behind in a hospital at Miami. The message brought a smile of gratification to the president-elect who is keeping in constant communication with Miami.

Miami, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, and Mrs. Joe Gill, who stopped two bullets meant for President-elect Roosevelt rested well last night and their condition was reported little changed at 8 o'clock this morning.

The mayor's condition is reported as satisfactory with no complications, while Mrs. Gill was reported as holding her own. Other victims of the wild shooting were said by hospital attendants to be resting nicely and progressing.

Seek Aid Of United States and Other Nations in Bringing About Peaceful Settlement

Geneva, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The League of Nations report on Manchuria sent today to all nations on the league-owned wireless station denounced the Japanese policy in that territory and fixed the aid of the United States in the settlement of the dispute.

It declared against maintenance of recognition of the State of Manchukuo, proposed new negotiations between China and Japan with the league again assisting and extended an invitation of participation to Soviet Russia as well as America. The report has already been subscribed by 19 of the leading memberships of the league and will be submitted Tuesday for ratification by the full league assembly to be debated Friday or Saturday of next week before a final vote is taken.

In asserting that Manchuria must be retained under Chinese sovereignty and in opposing recognition of the state of Manchukuo, the report takes the position along side that of the United States as enunciated by Stimson, that the powers would not recognize territorial gains procured by the use of force. The report based its findings upon the conclusions of the Lytton commission which under the league investigated the situation in Manchuria not long ago. The assembly report goes even further than that of the commission in that it censures the Japanese military aggressions and defends China's rights to the provinces. As a sequel to the Lytton report the assembly's document presents the most ambitious international effort ever exerted to regulate a war-like situation by peaceful means and embodies the most severe and arresting indictment of policies of a great power ever undertaken.

BERT CARROLL IS RETURNED TO JAIL HERE

White Man Held For Working Fraud Scheme On Local Bank

Bert Carroll, young white man, held in this city sometime ago on a charge of operating a fraud upon the State Banking and Trust Company of this city and later sent to state hospital in Raleigh, for observation, was returned to this city yesterday and placed in jail to await trial at the April term of court.

Carroll, a native of Wake county, processor of several aliases, is said to be wanted in several states from Maine to Florida on similar charges to those upon which he is held here.

Appearing in this city several months ago he opened an account in the State Bank and Trust Company, depositing a certain amount of cash and several checks on banks out of the city. Several such deposits were made and in the meantime Carroll drew on his account, taking out more than the actual Geneva, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Yoshino Matsuka, Japan's senior representative at Geneva, said today that his government would not accept the League of Nation's recommendation for settlement of the Manchurian dispute.

There never was a question of Japanese acceptance, the report said. He declined to discuss the details but defended preparations for a Japanese invasion of Jehol.

Tokyo, Feb. 17.—(AP)—A cabinet meeting today to decide if Japan should secede from the League of Nations and withdraw from the painstakingly elaborate post-war peace machinery of the western world, recessed until tomorrow without taking action upon the question.

It is understood that it reached four decisions including the rejection of the league's recommendation in the Manchurian situation and withdrawal of Japanese delegates from Geneva in event the league passes the report condemning Japanese policies.

Monarchists See Hope In German Election

Berlin Germany, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Monarchists of Germany, the two dozen former royal rulers and those who still cling to that system of government as ideal, are at the listening posts.

Their ears are cocked for sounds from the parliamentary election campaign trenches in the hope that letory in the campaign will perch upon the allied banners of Adolf Hitler's nazis, Alfred Hugenberg's nationalists and Franz Seidte's steel helmets.

A new reichstag under control of a coalition of these elements would hearthen the enemies of the republic system.

The Weimar republic has not played in luck in the fourteen years of its existence. Fate has dealt it several "bust" hands culminating in the general depression that has made many Germans who honestly wanted to give the republic a chance, think that the old times were more comfortable.

And what, after all, they ask, is today there would be a majority "right" government and "kaiserism"? Dr. Friedrich Everling, noted monarchist advocate, recently replying to a pointed question, said: "If a popular secret vote were taken today, there would be a majority for a monarchy." And Philip Scheidemann, pro-

Mrs. Roosevelt To Cut Expenses At White House

New York, Feb. 17.—(AP)—In line with her husband's policies, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is laying plans to cut the expense of the White House 25 per cent, she said today upon her return from Titus.

"Of course, I can't say positively what I am going to do until I get there and see how my plans work," said Mrs. Roosevelt, "but Franklin asked me to do this according to his policy to cut all government expenses 25 per cent that is my aim."

Doorn messages repeat from time to time that the former emperor "won't come back until his people call him." But despite denials from various sources that the call is awaited, it is a common belief that he would answer it even though the summons might be limited to a place of residence in Germany.

Recently nine monarchist groups formed what they called a "working alliance." The list included Everling's "League of the Upright," the "Black-White-Red Boyer," the "Society for the Propagation of the Hohenzollern Idea," and other organizations. Their joint program says:

"The more we see government by party in Germany being displaced by the 'authoritarian' idea, the more it becomes plain that law and order in the reich and its states can be firmly established only on the basis of a restored hereditary monarchy." Plans about the ex-crown prince becoming regent preparatorily to one of his sons, probably the eldest, 26-year-old Wilhelm Frederick, occupying a restored imperial throne, (Continued on Page Four)

Drunk Tears House Down

Wilmington, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Police answered a call shortly before dawn here today and found that a modern Sampson had done a bit of heavy work. As the officers arrived in a residential section, they heard a noise that sounded like a house falling down. Upon investigation it was found that Willie Murray's mother had set in the drink. She said her son came home drunk, and when doted admittance to the house, tore down the front porch, roof and all.

IT SHOULD BE STOPPED

Several days ago we called attention to a pending investigation of the slot machine situation in this city with its accompanying open gambling. Just how far this investigation has gone so far we do not know, but we do know that there has been no apparent let up in the open gambling that is surrounding the operation of these machines. It is probable that the machines themselves might be in compliance with the laws, but if this is the case there is still a way to get rid of them by holding drug store, filling station, hotel and other operators of places where the machines are installed, responsible for any gambling permitted on these machines.

We reiterate, there is no use of having a law against gambling and undertake to arrest poker players and crap shooters while open gambling on machines is permitted in public places, even among boys, there being no age limit as to those who can play the machines or place bets on the side while others operate the machines.

LET THE MAJORITY RULE

Previously we have voiced our opinion that it is the right of the majority of the people of North Carolina to determine by a vote whether or not the dry laws of this state should be repealed and that this action was not necessary until, and if, national prohibition is repealed.

We are pleased that others in the state feel the same as we do about it as is evidenced by the following editorial from today's News and Observer:

Representative Cox of Forsyth, favoring the Governor to call a special election to vote on the Murphy-Bowie measure if Congress authorizes the sale of beer.

Undoubtedly the people have a right to say whether they wish prohibition or wish it repealed. In 1908 by a majority of 48,000 the people of North Carolina voted to prohibit the sale or manufacture of "spirituous, vinous or malt" liquor. That law will stand until repealed by North Carolina. Mr. Cox is right in saying it should only be done by a vote of the people.

The Senate of the United States yesterday voted to submit a repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment to a convention to be called in the 48 States. If that measure passes the House as is predicted, the question of national prohibition will be settled in the conventions to be called in the States. If the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, then will be time enough for North Carolina to decide by a vote of the people whether they wish the State laws repealed or modified.

The people have a right to say what policy shall prevail, and they will be given the opportunity when the national attitude is determined after the contests in the several States.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren

SYNOPSIS: Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion, his head full of plans to emulate his namesake, makes a traitorous agreement with the powerful Kaid of Mekazen. Years before the Secret Service had found Riccoli out and forced him out of the French regulars. Now the man who came to the major from the Kaid, though apparently an Arab, is in possession of a password that identifies him as a colonel of the Secret Service to Otho Belme, English gentleman enlisted in the Legion. Bombelli, orderly to Riccoli, is apparently known to the Arab as "Langeac"—and Bombelli deserts immediately after the Arab leaves. Riccoli discusses plans with his crony Bittorelli.

Chapter II

"HOW SHOULD I FAIL?"

"We shall really burn our boats behind us by doing that," mused Sergeant-Major Vittorelli, still perhaps a little doubtfully, as he stood before Major Riccoli, the same day, in the hut used by the latter when he visited the post.

"We shall. Are you afraid, Vittorelli? You—a Corsican?"

"I am afraid of nothing, mon Commandant," replied Vittorelli, with more truth than modesty. "But it would break my heart if you failed."

"Fail! I am a Man of Destiny, and how should I fail? Once inside the citadel, everything will be easy. Getting inside has been the difficulty—for the last thousand years. Nature's handiwork. . . . And we are going to march in unopposed. Not merely unopposed either—but actually invited."

"A spider's web, mon Commandant?"

"Well? Are we flies? Or are we wasps, hornets?"

"And the men, mon Commandant?" ventured Vittorelli, who though ignorant, rash, egotistical and impetuous as well as being the fantastically devoted and admiring disciple of Riccoli, was sane and possessed of a shrewd peasant mother-wit and common-sense. "Can we be certain that all the N.C.O.'s, corporals and legionnaires will be amenable, obedient?"

"It will be a bad day for anyone who is not, Vittorelli," smiled Riccoli.

"It would be a bad day for us, mon Commandant—the day on which some of them, even a minority of them, decided to remain—er—true to their—er—"

"Decided not to throw in their lot with mine and seize their glorious chance, the chance of rising from slavery to power, position, wealth? Only fools, clods, cowards, weaklings."

"There are such people, mon Commandant."

"Yes—as Captain Boulet discovered when he tried to found his Empire of the Sahara in 1897. But he was mad of course. Hopelessly mad. A megalomaniac. And then he had a partner, too. Captain Chanoine, who failed him. That was where Voulet went wrong—one of his mistakes, anyhow."

"And we can learn something from the mistakes of Voulet. And then again he was dealing with stupid unambitious officers, and was compelled to show his hand too soon. Bad luck and bad management ruined his scheme, and part of it is bad luck that he had no inaccessible impregnable base from which to operate. He simply went out into the blue—out into the desert—and you cannot found an Empire on sand, and direct it from under a palm tree."

"Here we shall have for our base and the heart of our empire—a citadel, a city, and a country that has never been conquered."

"Yes, Captain Voulet was both unlucky and a fool. I am a Man of Destiny and not a fool. Fate has led me here to the very spot, and created the very circumstances necessary for the fulfillment of that destiny."

"Without doubt, mon Commandant. But the men? It seems to me that success will depend upon one of two things: on the one hand whether the legionnaires are kept in ignorance long enough; or, on the other hand, whether they can be won over to—er—abandon their old allegiance and follow you."

"Of course, mon enfant. I know all about that: I intend first of all to get them inside the Citadel. They will simply obey orders and carry on. In the ordinary course of duty, till the moment comes for seizing the place. The garrison of this post will march as escort with me across the Mekazen country to Mekazen, and into the Citadel. All they will know or care—if they know or care anything at all—is that their Commandant is on a diplomatic mission to parley with the Kaid."

"When the time, and my plans, are ripe for the seizing of the Citadel, they will simply obey orders."

"When I am master of Mekazen, and have garrisoned it with the rest of my command, will be the time to find out who is for me, and to make it clear that he who is not for me is against me. Also the exact fate of him who is against me."

"And the other detachments, mon Commandant? When will they arrive?"

"When I send for them. When I have completely won the confidence of the Kaid, so that he believes that they are marching to join his banner under my command."

"Why not assemble the whole column before marching from here, mon Commandant?" asked Vittorelli, eager, hopeful, but not yet wholly convinced.

"Ah, why not, indeed, mon enfant? Because the Kaid will not hear of it. If I cross the border with one man more than the garrison of this post, it is war. We shall be surrounded, cut off, am-

SAYS WINTERVILLE NOT COUNTY CHAMPIONS

Winterville, N. C., Feb. 17, 1933.
To The Editor of The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N. C.
Dear Sir:

We wish to make a correction of a serious error, stating that Winterville High School had won the "County Cage Title." This statement was unauthorized, false and absurd. We sincerely ask the coaches, players and schools concerned to disregard this statement which was submitted by an over-enthusiastic spectator.

We know very well that the mistake was not made by your paper. But we hope that you will explain this in your next issue.

Respectfully,
JAMES WILLIAM WEBSTER,
Coach Winterville High School.

MISS MARY HARDING SPEAKS TO JUNIOR WOMAN'S CLUB

The Junior Woman's Club held its regular meeting at the Woman's Club building last Friday afternoon. The hostesses for the afternoon were Miss Helen Gray Jones, Miss Margaret Fleming and Mrs. Marvin Surr.

The club is having a series of talks on the History of North Carolina by its club members. Miss Mary Harding had as her subject "Legends of North Carolina." Among some of the most important legends in North Carolina the speaker referred to the legends of Virginia Dare, Captain Kidd and Treasure, Glimpses of Castle at University of North Carolina, and the Old Dram Tree at Wilmington.

The meeting was then turned over to the president, Mrs. C. C. Hilton. The roll was called and then the report of the secretary. Reports were read on the Blount-Harvey Day and the Kelvinator show, sponsored by the club. Miss Mary Harding asked that old clothes for the children's home be ready by Tuesday and she would come for them.

Mrs. George Hadley read the number of points each member had made.

Refreshments were served.

Visitors for the afternoon were Mrs. Julian White and Mrs. R. C. Planagan, Jr.

RED OAK NEWS

There will be a meeting of the Grange at Red Oak Church next Monday night at seven o'clock. The people of all the surrounding territory are invited to attend and learn more about this organization. C. K. Holmes will be with us and we hope that every farmer and farmer's wife and farmer's wife will be present. The Grange cooperates with the church, the school and every other local institution that aims towards better living. It has a membership of one 800,000 in the United States. It embraces in its membership the whole family—father, mother, sons and daughters. Ever watchful of the public interest, the Grange has inaugurated or actively supported numerous legislative reforms and measures which have been written into state and national statutes. The Grange asks none to join them who cannot see good in their fellow beings, but those interested in agriculture, who have generous hearts and open hands to help the needy, raise the fallen, and aid in making the labors of this life cheerful, are welcomed to the Grange.

Go to the next meeting of the Grange in your neighborhood and give it your support.

Miss Inez Allen has returned from a visit in Vanceboro.

Miss Virginia Allen entertained about a dozen of her friends Valentine night. Games and songs were enjoyed after which delicious home made candies were served.

Rev. M. A. Woodward and family and the faculty of Arthur school spent last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis Tripp.

Mr. Elias Crawford is getting along nicely now. He was kicked by a mule about two weeks ago and has been suffering intensely with several broken ribs.

Mrs. Kid Tyson is still confined to her bed. We hope she will soon be out again.

Mrs. Hazard May is getting along nicely in Pitt Community Hospital. We are hoping she may soon come home.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Allen and children spent Tuesday in New Bern.

Pick Your Name New Game Under Turkish Reform Act

Angora, Turkey—(AP)—"What's your name going to be?" is the current question in Turkey.

Name choosing has become the chief parlor game of the nation since an announcement by Mustapha Kemal's minister of the interior that family names soon will be required by law.

Patronyms never have been used in Turkey and the result frequently has been chaotic.

Under the Turkish republic there was a famous case of one of the Kemalist tribunals of independence (corresponding to the Soviet chekas) in which all five judges were named Ali.

The only means of distinction now used is that of locality, such as "Hussien of Broussa," or an occasional "Mustapha, son of the bald-head," or "Mehmed, son of the hunchback." Women are not even given that much tag, but are simply Fatimas, Gulistans, and nothing more.

The word "hanim"—meaning Mrs. or Miss—which follows feminine names, gives foreigners the impression that Turkish Julia O'Grady and colonel's ladies are indeed sisters—but it's merely a misleading title.

The patronymic law which the Angora parliament will pass this winter will require that names must be chosen within six months.

Thousands probably will grab the Turkish counterparts of America's Lincolns, Washingtons, Vanderbilts and Astors. Kemals are already numerous.

Japan Adds Trio To Elite

Tokyo—(AP)—By imperial ordinance three "recruits" have been added to a group of unique distinction, those Japanese leaders who have attained such ripe old age and such eminence by service to the nation that they are permitted to carry canes or staves in the presence of Emperor Hirohito.

The number of this venerable and illustrious company is constantly changing, as death removes some members and the infirmities of the late seventies and later years add others. With the three additions, the total became 15.

To gain this proudly-won privilege, which must be conferred by special order of the sovereign, a Japanese subject must have lived through a distinguished career to an age when it is assumed growing enfeeblement makes support necessary for lagging footsteps.

Included in the present list are the last of the "engro" or "elder statesmen," Prince Kinmochi Saionji, now 84, and the empire's hero of heroes, Admiral of the Fleet Count Heihachiro Togo, victor of the battle of the Sea of Japan in 1905, recently turned 85.

There are also three former premiers, Prince Saionji, Admiral Count Gobei Yamamoto and Count Keigo Kiyoura. Others are Baron Yussu-buro Kuratomi, president of the privy council; Viscount Kentaro Kaneko, Viscount Chuchoku Ishiguro and Baron Yuzuru Kubota, privy councillor; General Noamichi Asano, 90 years old; Count Koken Tanaka, Viscount Yujun Saga and Baron Sadami Ando.

The three "recruits" are all octogenarians, Baron Kimitake Furuchi, privy councillor; General Naomichi Goto and County Ujimoto Toda.

Talks to Parents

HELPING THE CHILD
By Alice Judson Peale

Since nothing is so good for a child as a series of successes, it is well to pause a moment before one assigns him a task and to consider whether it is one which he will be able to carry through.

The child is likely to finish a task only under certain conditions. The work assigned need not be too long or too difficult. He must be interested in it.

At its conclusion either the finished work in itself must give him pleasure or through it he must earn either approval or a reward.

Children also must be guided in their voluntarily assumed undertakings so that at least the large majority of them leave behind a feeling of successful accomplishment. Children often have ambitions far beyond their abilities.

When a six-year-old sets out to build a house for his dog or his rabbit we can be certain that he is bound to fail unless he receives a liberal amount of help.

When an eight-year-old girl sets out to make herself a dress we know that she will not be able to wear the result unless some grown-up directs and corrects her at several stages of the progress.

Usually it is best for the child to undertake a task that he can carry out alone. Occasionally, however, when for some reason or other a child has utterly fixed his heart on doing a particular thing, it is better to let him make the effort and to keep him from failure by more help than one normally would consider it wise to give.

Sometimes it is possible to modify the child's own too grandiose scheme in such a way that he can carry it out without undue help and yet feel that he has done what he originally wanted.

WALKING WITH CHILDREN

What more melancholy sight is there than the nursemaid dragging her unwilling charge along while both look bored and dreary?

But nursemaids are not the only ones who look so when they go walking with children. Fathers and mothers often present to the casual observer an expression quite as glum and vacant as any nursemaid.

Certainly such walks may be painfully uninteresting if one permits them to be so, yet it is impossible to make them quite the opposite.

It is a good idea, for one thing, to walk with some definite objective in mind, towards a particular spot in the woods, toward a lake or a view, or in the city to a museum, or to a spot where building and excavating is going on.

On any walk, no matter where, there are plenty of things to observe along the way.

In summer in the country or in city parks there are trees and flowers and all sorts of living creatures to be watched for, recognized and observed.

A little preparation with books and pictures at home, the incentive of collecting specimens of leaves, insects, stones cause the child to walk with eyes and ears wide open and a ready pleasure in everything he discovers.

To some types of children the city streets can be at least as fascinating as the park or country. Store windows, the flow of traffic, building operations, trams and subways all suggest questions, new ideas, new interests.

If the adult makes up his mind to see things with the inquiring and unspoiled gaze of the child, if he can school himself to getting pleasure out of watching and encouraging his child's interests, walks need never be dull and boring.

APPRECIATING HIS WORK

A mother has made it a point to hang up on a strip of green baize on the dining-room wall the pictures, maps and especially good writing and spelling lessons which her eight-year-old proudly brings home from school.

The products of the sewing class and the modeling class are appreciatively used or placed on exhibition.

In every home a child's school work should receive some sort of recognition.

When parents hardly take the trouble to notice something which has cost the child all sorts of effort and concentration, and which at last he regards with a proud feeling of success, the effect is withering to his pride and enthusiasm in his work.

If father does not bother to look at it, if mother sweeps it out as so much trash at the first opportunity it is not strange if the child himself soon accepts his parent's valuation of his work.

Especially is this true if the child attends the conventional sort of school in which he has to do most of his learning out of books and where his tasks are arbitrarily assigned. There the chief satisfaction to be gotten out of work well done lies in its winning adult praise.

When this is lacking the better part of the incentive to industry has been lost. In the modern school the work has so much intrinsic interest and satisfaction that it matters less what other people think of the results.

Making a point of appreciating the child's good school work should not, however, imply a correspondingly critical attitude of his work which is not so good. It is best either merely not to notice that or to make a constructive criticism if any.

Beauty Hints

CITRUS FRUITS VALUABLE BECAUSE OF VITAMINS

Washington.—Citrus fruits are particularly valuable in the diet, and the orange most of all, say Federal food experts. They all include vitamins B and C and the oranges include in addition vitamin A.

Vitamin A is needed to build resistance to infection. Vitamin B gives good muscle tone in the digestive tract; vitamin C is necessary for tooth nutrition.

Bleeding gums, loose teeth, sore joints, loss of weight and appetite are symptoms when the diet is low in vitamin C.

Guard Against Rickets Early

Since rickets most often begins in babies in the first months of life, measures to prevent it should begin very early. So many babies have rickets before anyone knows it that every baby should be given sun baths and cod-liver oil for protection.

By VIVIAN TOBIN
(Screen Actress)

My only beauty secret, if it can be called one, is to wash my face with soap and water at least once a day.

Occasionally, if my skin seems to be dry, I rub a little olive oil on to correct the condition.

The reports were met by a prompt official denial. But quite a section of the public considers some such arrangement at least a possibility, even if it is not immediately probable.

As for the other ex-rulers, they are taking their cues from the Hohenzollerns, sitting tight and awaiting "the call."

In Bavaria, Crown Prince Ruprecht, the hope of the legitimists, omit no opportunity to show himself in dress uniform at patriotic reunions, and is widely popular.

In Wuerttemberg, the pretender, Duke Aybrecht, resides conveniently near Stuttgart, living comfortably on revenue from real estate in that capital and 316,000 acres of farm land.

Crown Prince George, eldest son of the late King of Saxony, because a Jesuit priest and is out of the running. His brother, Friedrich Christian, has not the personal contact with the people for which his bluff father, who abdicated by telephone, was famous.

In Baden, Margrave Berthold, son of the last heir, the "Socialist Prince," Max last imperial chancellor, wrote in an English paper not long ago that although he was not a Nazi, he thought many features of the republican regime were not consistent with national dignity.

The grand duke of Hesse and the duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha are "hood mibers" and enjoy considerable popularity. The latter, Charles Edward, recently married his daughter Sybil to the son of the Swedish crown prince. He is said to be aspiring to become "grand duke of all Thuringian states."

BERT CARROLL IS RETURNED TO JAIL HERE

(Continued From Page One) cash he had deposited and then the checks deposited were returned to the bank unpaid. By this time Carroll had passed on to another city to work this sort of skin game and was later arrested in South Carolina at the request of officers from this county.

When returned to this city to face charges, Carroll feigned a lapse of memory and would have it appear that he knew nothing of the crimes he had committed. He was remanded to state hospital in Raleigh for observation and upon official reports from the hospital that apparently there was nothing mentally wrong with him, Carroll was returned to this city yesterday and placed in jail for further court action.

VOTE AGAINST THE REPEAL OF PROHIBITION

(Continued From Page One) laws in North Carolina. We are against liquor and the liquor trade and all the hurt it brings. We are especially opposed to the wine and beer bill now pending in the Legislature, and we do appeal to the members of the General Assembly not to enact a law that would make possible wine shops and beer saloons over State of North Carolina.

PROHIBITION TO BE DISCUSSED HERE SUNDAY

(Continued From Page One) thinking people of America by Congress, and also upon the citizens of North Carolina by our legislators when they ought to be using their time more profitably in solving the problems of the day.

METHODIST CONFERENCE HELD HERE YESTERDAY WAS LARGELY ATTENDED

(Continued from page one) The New Testament is a book of testimony. It was written because they were sure that Christ was the Son of God and salvation of the world. Orthodox theology came by an orthodox experience. Most of us still use the language of the early church, but it is second hand. We must have a living experience. So many of us have a mild type of religion that is harmless. The world that is contagious. The early Christians overcame by an unlimited sacrifice. We are not able to overcome and sacrifice unless we first get self off our hands, then the spirit will bear witness with our spirit that we belong to Christ.

We are not going to overcome by education, reformation and politics, but when we bear witness and through self-sacrifice, suffering love is able to change the future. The future is in the hands of love and suffering. When the Spirit bears witness with our spirit then love takes hold in spite of self. The early Christians refused to compromise. If they had compromised their theology we would have had no Christianity. Love not the world nor the things in the world, whenever we compromise with the world we are lost. If we will incarnate these principles in our life we will conquer.

THIS IS AN HOUR OF DESTINY

By Bishop Keane Just as these geographical forces of power in Japan that are moving toward eruption, so there are underneath the life of Japan crumbling forces of power that are moving toward eruption. We may witness a change in the social landscape just as there have been changes in the geography of the land. It is hard to describe these electric currents of life these things are bringing. It is a critical hour, and it is doubtful if there was ever a more critical hour than the one now facing us. Something is going on in the Oriental country that will determine the future. We have to consider the relationship of religions to the Orient. Christianity has become one of the most important factors that govern the life of Japan. It means vastly more than Westerners can discern.

This is an hour of destiny. Why? First, because of the practical collapse of the non-Christian religions. The Orient is not bereft of religions, but they abound on every hand. The summits of the hill-tops are covered with altars of worship. There is a large and unsatisfied capacity for religion. The traditional religions are inadequate to meet the lives. Buddhism meets only part of the needs. Confucianism serves only the intellectual class. There are large armies of men who have been educated in our own American universities who are bringing back to their homeland a spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction. They are leaving their old codes and are in search of something that meets their needs on an intellectual level.

China has a far greater respect for Christianity than she does for her old religions, they are not adequate for her thinking people. But on the other hand, superstitions abound to a great extent. If Buddhism has nothing more to offer than it has given then there is only one alternative for life, atheism and materialism. The problem of the Orient is simply to bring Jesus to the people who have cut loose from the moorings of their old faiths.

This is an hour of destiny; secondly, because of its peculiar divergence. It is an electric hour, the mightiest forces that will determine the future of the Orient are:

(1) The emerging of materialism. There is a struggle for a conception of life that will give an adequate basis for living. The general conception that the West has of Oriental students is that they are dull, but that is false, they are on an intellectual level with any students. The women students are keeping the same intellectual standard as the men. The students come to American universities to discover the secret of America's power. They admire us greatly and want to bring back the material splendor and transplant it in their own land. They miss the invisible forces of spiritual life. New York speaks for America to them. They center the educational process around atheism and materialism. We Americans think this is an indifferent situation to us, but it is a serious thing that concerns us.

The hunger of the Chinese for knowledge is insatiable. They read a tremendous amount of books, they read books because they want new ideas. What happens when people think like that? Their book shelves are not lined with American novels, but with books on theology, finance, economics, banking, etc. Is China not facing the problem of whether she shall follow materialism or the Star, which is the Light of the Way? Since they have become intellectually awakened we withdraw as though our religion cannot meet the situation.

(2) Communism hangs like a dark cloak over the Far East. China has five provinces that are largely under the control of Communism. For the last five years there has been an even more between Communism and Christianity. E. Stanley Jones says that "the next five years will tell the story as to whether China will be Communist or Christian." Communism is no solution to the question as to whether we are going to sit idly by and let these people stray into their darkness. Communism is no solution to the problem. If Communism from Russia comes into northern China, modern civilization will face the greatest disaster since the World War.

(3) The problem of peace or war. The Japanese army is employing every modern device for war. The real question is, What is coming into the thinking of the people. So Japan moves on with her militaristic preparations with a national debt whose interest will exceed her income of the next four or five years. China is concentrating her armies, training her men and getting ready for the conflict that she feels is inevitable in the future. Is there no way to settle the struggle except through bloodshed? Was there ever a time that Christian idealism was more needed?

This is an hour of destiny, thirdly, because the work that has been done in the last three-fourths of the century borders on a verge of collapse. We must determine that the men who have given their lives to the spreading of the gospel shall not have died in vain. The impossible must be undertaken to win the world for Christ. There is still in the church today that victorious spirit that will share with the world. We cannot have a spiritually minded church until we have a missionary minded church and heed the call to preach the Gospel. There is still the assurance of One who says: "Go, ye, into all the world—Lo I am with you always."

"Congress either hasn't got the incenuity or the disposition to do it." It will take something besides ingenuity and disposition. It will take courage of the highest order. It is a tremendous responsibility to put on one man, who immediately will feel from all directions the pressures of those same organized minorities who have blocked action on the hill.

But Mr. Roosevelt has asked for it, and it may be assumed that with his background of practical politics he knew what he was asking for. His advisers say he realizes fully that he cannot accomplish an effective economy program without making many enemies, not only among powerful organizations, but in the ranks of Congress whose support he will so much need in other matters.

Every congressman has his pet theories, his special interest in this or that expenditure. When his toes are stepped on he will complain—and probably retaliate. Some of those who now are most ready to vote power to the incoming executive may be expected to be in the front rank of the avvil chorus later on.

The one plausible explanation of Mr. Roosevelt's buoyant readiness to accept this load of trouble is that he believes the American people, as a whole and regardless of party, are more interested in the end than in the means.

The incoming President has been a painstaking student of the careers of three other presidents—Thomas Jefferson, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson. He has learned that it is possible, on occasion to go over the head of Congress, sometimes almost over the head of the constitution itself, to help the people, and get results.

His philosophy appears to be based on a supreme confidence that if he really does stop up the leaks in the dike of federal finances, the plaudits of the rescued will outdo the inevitable howls of the injured. It will be interesting to see whether he's right.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 17.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, four to eight points higher in response to higher Liverpool cables and foreign buying. Prices later rose to 6.07 for March and 6.34 for July on early trading, or 10 to 15 points net higher on active positions. Later the demand tapered off and prices reacted a few points from the best. The reaction from the early advance carried the market off to 6.14 for May, or eight points from the early high. At midday May was holding at 6.15 with the general market showing a net advance of eight to nine points.

Stock Market

New York, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The securities market again brightened today throwing off the somewhat gloomy aspect of previous sessions. Stocks responded to the Senate vote on the repeal resolution with a rise in wet issues and the rest of the market generally firm, although trading was quiet. Principal commodities remained steady and pressure against the buying market abated.

National Distillers rose more than two points, and gaining a point or more were Crown Cork, Owen Illinois Glass, U. S. Industrial and Alcohol. The list eased off fractionally from the first hour but held most of the advance.

Allied Chemical, Case, Union Pacific, and Santa Fe advanced as much as a point. American Can, International Harvester, Westinghouse, DuPont, New York Central, Goodyear, American Tobacco and U. S. Steel registered fair fractional gains. Earlier gains were maintained in the late trading.

Democrats In Caucus

Washington, Feb. 17.—(AP)—The House Democrats in caucus today bound themselves to vote for prohibition repeal under suspension of the rules Monday. The vote was 115 to 46. This insures more than the necessary two-thirds vote necessary for repeal of the prohibition laws.

REFEREE NAMED TO HEAR DAMAGE SUITS

Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 17.—Ten suits, each of them brought by owners of farm lands near the High Point sewage disposal plants and each for several thousand dollars alleged damage from fumes from the plant, were ordered referred to B. Lee Pentress, local lawyer, by Judge A. M. Stack in Cullford Superior Court today. The city of High Point is defendant in each of the suits.

ASKS FOR PERMISSION TO ABANDON RAILROAD

Washington, Feb. 17.—(AP)—J. F. Gray, receiver for the Tallulah Falls Railway Company, today asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to abandon the railroad. The road is fifty-seven miles long and runs from Cornelia, Ga., to Franklin, N. C. It has been in receivership since June 20, 1923.

BOY SCOUT TROOP GETS MUCH COUNSEL

Scotland Neck, Feb. 17.—Boy Scout Troop No. 1 of Scotland Neck is in proud possession of an award given by President Hoover to troops showing reasonable progress toward working for the goal of the Tenth Year Program of the Boy Scouts of America. The award is in the form of a deep blue banner bearing gilt letters. The local troop unit under the direction of Scoutmaster Ben Bracy did an interesting piece of work last summer in digging out and filling up a swimming pool on the edge of town in a beautiful natural beach grove.

SUITS FOR $80,000 SETTLED FOR $6,950

Fayetteville, Feb. 17.—Compromise judgments totalling $69,950 were signed by Judge W. A. Davis in Superior Court here yesterday afternoon in five cases brought by members of the McBennett family against Mrs. Anita Derossett White as a result of an automobile collision in which P. J. McBennett was killed last summer. An agreement was previously reached by counsel, but the case was called in the court and the issues submitted to a jury. Damages originally asked for were $83,000.

Mr. McBennett was fatally injured in a street intersection collision between his car and Mrs. White's automobile driven by her minor son, Justin White.

SUBMITS PLAN FOR RELIEVING OF SLUMP

Elizabeth City, N. C., Feb. 17.—A plan which he thinks would alleviate the present business slump has been advanced by J. H. LeRoy, Elizabeth City attorney.

Mr. LeRoy suggests that the government redeem outstanding bonds in the sum of approximately eight billion dollars, either Liberty bonds or the "dollar" bonds, both of which are placed in the same class, and issue greenbacks.

JUDGMENT DEFERRED IN RUM CASE HEARING

Wilmington, N. C., Feb. 17.—(AP)—Louis Goodman, Wilmington attorney, and A. M. Stone, steward of the Eagles Club here, were given a preliminary hearing today on charges of violating the prohibition law in connection with the seizure of thirty-six gallons of liquor at the club-house, but Porter Hufham, United States Commissioner, reserved his ruling until Saturday. Goodman, a former United States Commissioner, is president of the Eagles Club. Testifying today, Stone said he added that Goodman had warned him not to sell it.

Hollywood, Calif.—Movie makers will continue to use the wax museum as a setting for comedy and melodrama, I am sure, as long as pictures are made. The fascination of the life-like, frozen figures, is uncanny.

But I think you don't realize their power to make you feel foolish until you've met them first-hand on a busy movie set. After that, you understand why all any director needs for a comedy is a museum and a shy comic like Harry Langdon.

Entering Harry's set the other day, we met first a group of Indians sitting around as extras do. Facing the entrance was a beautiful smiling Indian maiden. We smiled back.

Let's Meet the Princess "Ah!" we thought. "The Indian princess, Aa-Na-Wake, the White Flower of the Cheerokees, who is making a movie career for herself. We must meet her."

"Tur'em over—quiet!" yelled an assistant director, and we tiptoed to the center of action to see Langdon embroiled in waxes difficulties.

Around the spacious set were waxen groups—Marie Antoinette, a sultan's harem, Sir Walter Raleigh, Washington, Lincoln, Sir Francis Drake, a wizened Chinese at prayer in a shady cloister—all so real they seemed to breathe. Suddenly we darted a suspicious glance back to our Indian princess. She sat immobile, smiling, staring. We gulped and said nothing—certainly nothing about wishing to meet the White Flower.

The wax figures, we noted, were made up in the reddish brown shade worn by the players, for the same photographic reason. So we maintained composure when one of them blinked and moved. Our guide led us around a corner to see a waxen representation of a court-room scene—a judge pronouncing sentence on a trio in tow of a policeman. The four, amazingly life-like, were statues of Lita C. Chevet, Matthew Betz, Nell O'Day, and Vernon Dent.

Foiled Again! "Remarkable!" we exclaimed, and the figures broke out laughing. It was just a gag. But the judge at least was honest wax.

Anyway, we learned a lot about wax figures. The movie's only real them, but they come high on sale. The Lincoln, for instance, is valued at $800—a historical figure being worth more than a layman because of the painstaking detail.

Even more expensive—around $1,000—would be a model of Garbo or Wallace Berry.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington (AP)—Senator "Hi" Johnson of California probably will think carefully in the future before he makes a wager with some of his press gallery friends on how they treat him and his speeches in their papers.

For the joke is on the senator right now and he'll have to pay and pay. It all happened like this: Senator "Hi" a few weeks ago arose on the floor of the Senate and delivered a speech in which he had some rather harsh things to say about those countries which have defaulted in their debt payments to the United States or are seeking a way of getting out of further payment.

The next morning in a committee room he ran into a friend of his in the press gallery and proceeded to chide him in good-natured fashion.

"Well, well," said Senator "Hi." "I see that you treated me handsomely. I got three inches of space from you on my war debt speech yesterday."

credit on a Washington haberdashery for the bet.

Winning bets from a senator don't come around so very often, so this young man lost no time in going down to cash in.

After looking over the entire stock at the haberdashery, he could find no hat that suited him that cost more than $5.00.

"That'll never do," he told the clerk. "Don't you realize this hat is to be paid for by a United States senator? Man, show me a real hat."

Such a hat was not to be found in the store. The clerk suggested that he could order one which would meet the required specifications. He was told to do so.

So—the senator may not know it at the moment but he is going to get a bill pretty soon for $10.00 and it will carry the notation—"For bet on war debt speech."
