NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVES The F. Clark Co., Inc., New York, Chicago, Indianapolis, Philadelphia, Kansas City.

As we recall it, there was introduced into the Legislature during the early part of the session a measure that would repeal the tax exemption on stocks in foreign corporations. Since then we have heard nothing from it. In this another case of its being intentionally buried in committee to die a natural death?

It is to be hoped that President Hoover will give his approval to the Smith cotton plan as a means of reducing production this year with the resulting increase in prices to the farmers. Certainly if the farmers ever needed help it is now, and this seems to be one feasible plan by which the cotton farmers at least can be helped by the government. At any rate it is worth a trial and we hope that Mr. Hoover will permit it to be put into effect.

SALES TAX NOT NECESSARY

The legislature gathered in Raleigh again yesterday after another week-end recess and the talk about the general sales tax being inevitable was taken up where it left off last week. As we have previously stated we do not believe that our people would object to a sales tax or any other kind of tax they could pay in order to balance the budget if it were necessary but certainly we can see no necessity of adding to the burdens of the poor so long as the rich with their money in foreign stocks and the power companies and similar industries making millions are permitted to continue without bearing their proportionate share of the burdens based upon earning and ability today.

Again we urge each of the legislators from Pitt to stand four square against any kind of sales tax until there has been a production tax upon the power companies and a repeal of the present law that exempts stocks in foreign corporations, and similar injustices that now prevail in our tax system. After including these sources if the revenue is not sufficient then the next move should be toward the luxury tax and this seems to us as far as the matter should go for if the legislators have the courage to put this program into effect there should be no need of a general sales tax. We do not believe that our people want to shirk their just part of the tax burdens and we believe that they are willing to go just as far as their means will permit and even more but certainly we don't

VALIANT DUST by Percival Christopher Wren

STORIES: The deeper Jules Maligni sinks into drunkenness, and into the intrigue of the Citadel of Mekazzen, the more desperate becomes the situation of Margaret Maligni, his English wife. All about her, treachery afoot toward France, plotted by Major Napoleon Riccoli, of the Foreign Legion, encamped not far away. Raisal, son of the Kaid, having gotten Jules drunk, slips into Margaret's room.

Chapter 20

WHERE WAS JULES?

"Do you call this behaving like a man?" "Like a man in love," said Raisal. "Like a man who knows exactly what he wants, and intends to get it. If you had fifty husbands and each one had an army, I would get you—and keep you."

Margaret yawned audibly, tapping her open mouth with her hand awhile. A brave effort. "Very interesting, Raisal," she said. "Getting quite a big, boastful boy, aren't you? But won't you tell me the rest of the story some other time? I want to go to sleep again, and little as I like boastful boys, I should hate to see my husband come and throw you over the balcony. Three hundred feet, isn't it? You'd be a nastier mess than you are now."

Again Raisal laughed and drew a step nearer. Margaret turned to the bed behind her, and a faint sound was audible as she moved the pillow. "Don't move again," she said, "except in the direction of the door, or this pistol will go off—and I hate the noise they make in a room."

"Oh! Little spit-fire has got a pistol, has she? What a liar Jules is!" "As it happens, Jules doesn't know I've got it," replied Margaret—with perfect truth, for she had no pistol, and had never touched a pistol in her life.

"So we don't tell our husband everything, do we?" "I shall have something to tell him as soon as he comes" answered Margaret bravely. "If he doesn't come while you're here and break every bone in your body."

Again she laughed. "Well, you tell him, darling—and then tell me what he says, will you?" said Raisal. "I think I can tell you that, now," he added. "He'll say, 'Oh, you must not mind young Raisal. The boy will have his joke.' He will..."

"Look here," Margaret interrupted him abruptly, making her voice as hard and harsh as she could. "Get out—or I'll shoot you. Go on. Get out, you cur."

"That maddening mocking laugh again. You wouldn't shoot me just for standing here—and telling you that you're the loveliest woman on this earth, or in Paradise; and that I worship you, would you?" he asked softly.

"Unless you go instantly, I will shoot you for coming into my room in the middle of the night, and making love to me. Now go."

And this time it was Margaret who took a step forward. Laughing, Raisal drew back. "Oh, splendid! I love you more than ever, darling. And I shall love you still better without the pistol. Ever so much. I don't want to die for you, darling, not a little bit. I want to live for you—and with you."

"I'll count ten" said Margaret. "One... two..." "Buckle my shoe," said Raisal. "Three... four."

"I'll shut the door," said Raisal. "after me," and Margaret saw him pass between her and the balcony archway.

"Good night, darling," he said from the door. "We've got all life before us, and there is no hurry. We'll have another jolly talk when there are no nasty pistols about..."

The door shut, Margaret rushed across the room, thrust home the huge clumsy bolts, tottered back to her bed and collapsed upon it.

She awoke to find herself lying across the over-cushioned, faintly unpleasant, dubious, slightly musty, fusty, frowsy bed, in her dressing-gown.

She sat up. Had she had a horrible nightmare? No. It was not a dream. She must get out of Morocco—at once.

How? How could she get away from this awful place? Where was Jules? She had bolted the door. Had he come up and found it fastened?

Why hadn't he hammered and wakened her? What time had it been when that vile beast had come to her room? She must get a pistol and learn to fire it.

But how utterly absurd in the twentieth century. Such things don't happen. But this wasn't the twentieth century here in Mekazzen; it was about the fifteenth, and such things don't happen.

What would Jules do to Raisal? And what would he do to Jules if he killed him? Something terrible, something unthinkably, for Raisal was the apple of the Kaid's eye. He positively worshipped him and, according to El Isa Beth el Ain, the Kaid was a monster of cruelty and savagery when his anger was aroused, and very often when it wasn't.

He'd torture Jules to death if Jules injured Raisal. Perhaps she had better not tell Jules after all?

But she must, for several reasons. If she didn't tell him, she could produce no sufficient reason for insisting that they should leave Mekazzen instantly.

If she didn't tell him—it might happen again. If she didn't tell him, Raisal would not get the horse-whipping that he deserved if ever a man did. If she didn't tell him, Jules would not understand her wish for a pistol, and her demand that he should never leave her unprotected.

Of course she must tell him... But she must insist on his keeping his temper and controlling the indignation rage that would lead him to thrash Raisal within an inch of his life.

She must point out to him that Raisal was all-powerful here, and that by coming here they had put themselves completely outside the pale of civilization and all that civilization stands for.

She must remind Jules of the terrible dungeons and torture chamber here, and of the Kaid's bestial worship of his son, and of his unbridled savagery and ferocious cruelty to those who offended him. And if Jules turned a deaf ear to her prayers, advice, and warning, she would use his love for her as a conclusive argument, and point out that if anything happened to him, her plight would be terrible indeed.

TAXATION

(Chamber of Commerce Bulletin) Tax the people: tax with care. To help the multi-millionaire. Tax the farmer, tax his fowl. Tax the dog and tax his howl. Tax the hen, and tax her egg. And let the blooming mudsill beg. Tax the pig, and tax his squeal. Tax his boots, run down at heel; Tax his horses, tax his lands. Tax his blisters on his hands. Tax his plow, and tax his clothes. Tax the rags that wipe his nose; Tax his house, and tax his bed. Tax the bald spot on his head. Tax his "Henry," tax the gas; Tax the road that he may pass. And make him travel o'er the grass. Tax his cow and tax his calf. Tax him if he dares laugh. He is but a common man. Tax the laborer, but be discreet; Tax him for walking on the street; Tax his bread, and tax his meat; Tax his shoes clear off his feet; Tax the pay-roll, tax the sale; Tax all his earned paper kale; Tax his pipe, and his smoke; Teach him government is no joke. Tax their coffins, tax their shrouds; Tax their souls beyond the clouds. Tax all business, tax the shop; Tax their incomes, tax their stocks. Tax the living, tax the dead. Tax the living, tax the dead. Tax the unborn, before they're fed. Tax the water, tax the air. Tax the sunlight, if you dare. Tax them all, and tax them well. Tax them to the gates of hell.

But close your eyes so you can't see The coupon clipper go tax free.

Another important question is where shall the people live? In congested or unplanned cities or dispersed outward from urban centers? How large should our cities be? It has been thought that people would solve these questions by living where they found it most comfortable since they were free to move. But the answer is not quite so simple. Regional and urban planning which would lead to a better distribution is greatly needed.

There also is a problem of the quality of population as truly as a problem of quantity. On the physical side there are Jack Dempseys, Babe Ruths and Babe Didriksons, athletes of marvelous physical equipment. On the other hand there are the large number so physically unfit that they were not permitted to enter the army.

On the mental side there are Einsteins, Michelsons and Justice Holmes. But also there are inmates of feeble-minded institutions. It matters a good deal from which of the groups our future generations come.

It is partly a question of research because we do not know very much about the inheritable traits a particular person carries. But it is a practical question of controlling mating and procreation. Breeders of horses and cows can select for mating much more effectively than human beings are likely to do voluntarily, especially in the face of sentiment and lack of knowledge.

Both the quantity and the quality of population are questions of immense importance for human welfare.

GIRL DISAPPEARS IN THIN AIR

ILLUSION: The Oriental girl reclines on a sheet of plate glass supported by two slaves. The magician waves a white sheet in front of the pretty maiden... pronounces a few magic words... Presto! She has disappeared in thin air.

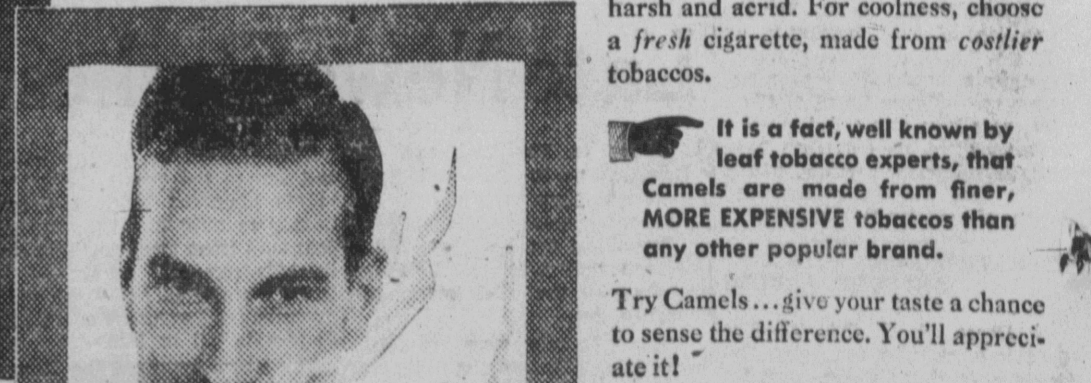

EXPLANATION: "Disappearing" acts are among the most popular in the repertory of the magician. Dogs, horses, girls, whole rooms disappear—whisked into wings, dropped through trapdoors, hidden by mirrors. But this "disappearance" is a bit different. One of the "slaves" is a hollow dummy. When the magician holds up the sheet the little lady disappears completely—into the convenient figure of the dummy.

IT'S FUN TO BE FOOLED ... IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

There is also a trick of cigarette advertising, whereby a few magic words are used to create the illusion of "Coolness." EXPLANATION: Coolness is determined by the speed of burning. Fresh cigarettes, retaining their full moisture, burn more slowly... smoke cooler. Parched, dry cigarettes burn fast. They taste hot. This makes the method of wrapping very important. Improperly wrapped cigarettes begin to dry out as soon as packed. Camels are cooler because they come in the famous Humidor Pack of welded, three-ply, MOISTURE-PROOF cellophane... and because they contain better tobaccos. A cigarette that is fresh, full of natural moisture, and blended from choice, ripe tobaccos tastes cooler than one that is harsh and acrid. For coolness, choose a fresh cigarette, made from costlier tobaccos.

believe that they are going to readily submit to the heaping of more taxes upon them by taxing the necessities of life so long as the rich and privileged classes continue to enjoy special privileges at the hands of our government. The general sales tax is not necessary.

By WILLIAM FIELDING OGBURN (Written for The Associated Press) For the first time in history it is a practical question to ask how many people we should have. In the past the population increase from immigration, but not that from births, could be regulated. It is not year clear that the size of our population can be dictated by public policy, yet the nations are tending that way. England, Japan, Italy and France are actively developing population policies. But do we know how many people we want? If we do not have enough people we cannot develop our industry and natural resources. If we have too many we may have unemployment and the standard of living will be low or it will be raised more slowly than it would if there were fewer people. For the manufacturer a large population means a market, for the real estate owner a higher value for land. For the imperialist a large population probably means more power. For the individual the problem may be that of providing education and economic advantages. For the wage earner it is likely to mean a lower standard of living. The increase of population in the United States is rapidly slowing down. By 1975 we may have a stationary population of, say 165,000,000 or even a declining population.

BARRERE SYMPHONY TO BE AT COLLEGE FRIDAY EVENING

The Barrere Little Symphony, which will give a concert at East Carolina Teachers College on Friday evening, March 3, in the campus building auditorium, appears at Duke University tonight and is heralded there as one of the greatest attractions of the day.

Some people are asking what a "little symphony" is. It has the same organization and the same kind of instruments as the larger symphony orchestra, and is really a cross-section of it, possessing all of the qualities of the larger orchestra except volume. Barrere's Little Symphony is composed of thirteen men and eleven different instruments, and every player is an artist.

The smaller orchestra is much more informal and has a wider range of choice in the selection of its program. Its concerts are almost as intimate as those called "chamber concerts."

Georges Barrere, who conducts the orchestra bearing his name, makes delightful comments introducing the numbers. He was the first to organize a little symphony and the idea proved so popular that they have sprung up all over the country.

GOD LIVES IN KENTUCKY

God is good to Indiana
As a father to his child
But he made our old Kentucky
And he looked on her and smiled

Then he made the "broad Ohio"
Circled round the land so fair
As a mother hugs her baby
To her heart with tender care

Yes, God went to Indiana
And he blessed each hill and glade
But he came down to Kentucky
And he sat down here and stayed.

And he raised up here "Abe Lincoln"
In the hallow of his hand
And George Rogers Clark
He sent with his Kentucky rifle band.

To release his Indiana
From the English tyrant yoke
And he carried God's own message
And he heard him when he spoke.

So we believe that God will tell you
Though forever you may roam
That the nearest place to heaven
Is our old Kentucky home!

SCHOOL NEWS

Friends.
At a time when many young men and women will leave their childhood friends to rally forth in the world of business it is very appropriate that we should think about the choice of friends. The business world and the success therein are the prime matters of importance at this time. We all regret the leaving of our childhood associates; however, there is no time to stop and mourn.

"A person is judged by the company he keeps," is an old saying. Today, more than ever, we realize that it is impossible for one to live alone. We also know that probably nothing else influences a man so much as his friends—his social environment. But when confronted by a world of strangers whom shall we choose? Choose your ideals! Everyone has an ideal—one whom we can look up to and admire. Not only choose your ideal for your friend but try to live up to him. You'll unconsciously become more and more like him each day. Be not a snob; carry nothing to the extreme. Yet remember that the cultivation of good friends is far more important to an individual than the ability to read Greek or a hazy notion of Einstein. Good friends, to the average person, come natural but history dates do not.

It is easy to choose those whom we desire as friends but to win and keep them is a more difficult task. Let us make a set of resolutions for the forwarding of that aim. Do not allow yourself to become discouraged though the whole world seems to be pulling against you—hold your head high though your hear be low. Develop—honesty, dependability, frankness, appearance, sportsmanship, sociability, etc.—in short, "give the world the best you have and the best will come back to you."

Junior Kiwanians.
Wilbur Mayo and James Savage have been chosen to serve as Junior Kiwanians for the next four weeks, because of their good records and high merits. During this time, they will be regular members of the Kiwanis Club. Both boys have done outstanding work since they entered high school.

Off To Raleigh.
Thursday, March 2nd, the boys of the high school basketball squad will go to Raleigh where they will enter the play-offs for the championship of the state. Championships will be determined by an elimination series. If Greenville loses one game it will not have another chance.

Much interest is being shown toward these games, as a state champion team would boost Greenville High very much.

The squad is anticipating the tournament at Raleigh with keen interest, and intends to fight for championship honors for Greenville.

Senior Class Meets.
A meeting of the senior class was held Monday at home-room period. Although short, a splendid spirit prevailed and the class quickly buckled down to business. It was unanimously decided that the class will not use caps and gowns. The costume worn will be decided later. Several forms of invitations to the graduation exercises were presented. The approval of the class was also given to a proposal that President Joyner appoint a committee who, under Mrs. Picklesimer's direction, are to choose the senior play.

Wins Attendance Contest.
Miss McArthur's freshman assembly won the contest in punctuality for the past four weeks with an average of 99.24 per cent present. This is the first time this year that this assembly has won the contest and everyone in that room is very pleased.

Mrs. Gardner's second grade won the contest for the West Greenville school with an average of 97.33 per cent present during the past four weeks.

Music Contestants At Work.
The musical organizations of the Greenville High School are getting down to work following their highly successful opera "The Marriage of Figaro." Last year at Greensboro the music club won first place with Lenoir. This year they hope to win first place by a large margin.

There will be an elimination contest in Greenville about the middle of April for all the schools of Eastern North Carolina. The contestants that win here will go to Greensboro for the finals on April 27-28.

The following are the numbers with which Greenville will compete in the elimination contest and hope to carry to the state finals—mixed chorus, "The Singers," by Gaul; girls' glee club, "Louis a Merchant," by Caren; boys' glee club, "Dedication," by Franz; girls' trio, "Faith, Hope and Love," by Shelley; boys' quartet, "scitily the Shades" by Wilson; mixed quartet, "Hope Carol," by Smith. There will be an elimination contest among the soloists of Greenville to decide who will sing in the elimination contest. The solos are: bass, baritone, tenor, soprano, alto and unchained voices. Band: "One Beautiful Day" by Hildebreth.

Coast Jumper Preparing For Next Olympics

Los Angeles, Calif., Feb. 28.—(AP)—A two-year campaign which took Cornelius Johnson, 18-year-old Los Angeles high school negro boy, to fourth place in the high jump of the Tenth Olympiad will now serve as background for the tall lad as he campaigns for the 1936 games in Berlin.

In 1931 Johnson opened his jumping career by figuring in a three-way tie for the city championship at six feet. Before the year was out he had cleared 6 feet 3 1/2 inches. A season later he won the title at 6 feet 4 1/4 inches.

From there Johnson went right on to the Olympic games, winning the Southern California and California championships en route. The Pacific Coast regional trials saw him tie with Walter Marty, Fresno College and national A. A. U. champion, at 6 feet 5 inches. He tied with George Spitz and Bob Van Osdel in the final trials at Palo Alto, clearing 6 feet 6 7/8 inches.

In the Olympic games, Johnson tied with Duncan McNaughton, Canada, whom he had previously beaten, Simeon Toribio, Philippines, and Van Osdel, United States, at 6 feet 6 inches, but placed no better than fourth in the jump-off.

Johnson is a senior this year. He hopes to enter the University of Southern California next fall and be at top form for the games in 1936.

Besides being a high jumper, Johnson is something of a sprinter. He has run the quarter mile in 47.8 seconds, but he would rather confine his activities to hoisting his 6 feet 3 inches of muscle over the bar.

Teachers To Play Final Game At College Tonight

The Teachers hope to finish the season with a continuance of the snappy play which has been characteristic of their game for the last several weeks.

Barrett, star forward, who has been out of the game for several weeks with a sprained ankle, has now fully recovered and tonight should mark the re-establishment of the Barrett-Bostic combination which has been one of the highlights of the locals' play.

Greenville High School To Enter Raleigh Tournament

The Greenville High School basketball team will leave here Thursday morning to enter the State College eighth annual invitational tournament which opens Thursday afternoon. This tournament is to be held in the Frank Thompson gymnasium at State College. The local cagers will play in the Class A pairings and will play the strong team from Lumberton Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Out of a total of 15 games played the local cagers have won ten games and lost five. Of the games lost two were by a very close margin. In the game with Goldsboro the local basket-keepers lost by the close score of 20-23 and in the last game of the season they were beaten by Roanoke Rapids by the score of 29-26. The local cagers lost three other games of the season, losing to Raleigh, Wilson and Tarboro. In each of the above games that was a return game, Greenville defeated each of the above teams by decisive scores. SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

There would no doubt have been fewer skeptics at the ringside of the Carnera-Schaaf fight if more of them had been familiar with the story of the tragic bout in which Luther McCarty died after being knocked out by Arthur Pelky in the first round of a match for the "white heavyweight championship" at Calgary, Alberta, on May 24, 1913. I have just read the detailed account of it.

This fight was of great interest at the time because it was a climax of efforts to establish a "white hope" challenger for Jack Johnson, the world champion. McCarty was regarded generally as the "white champion." He was just 21, a native of Nebraska and a relay fine prospect.

There were difficulties to be overcome in making the match because of the objections of reform elements, led by ministers. The promoters so far succeeded that before the principals began the main bout, a Calgary pastor entered the ring to deliver a short talk. He commented on the absence of brutality in the preliminaries and asked the crowd to think they were daily engaged in a similar fight in life. They were perhaps the last words McCarty heard. He was pronounced dead ten minutes later.

A Strange Parallel

The first punch to hurt McCarty was a "jolt to the jaw, driving him to the ropes" but it was a solid right to the body, over the heart, that put him down and out.

"McCarty settled into a crouch," the reminiscence account continues. "For the moment no one paid much attention, believing it was merely a fighting pose. McCarty settled lower and lower and at last dropped to the floor. He gasped for breath and his eyes rolled. Instantly the referee stepped in between Pelky and the fallen fighter and began tolling the count. . . . The crowd, too, was ignorant of the tragedy it was witnessing. . . . In McCarty's corner, Billy McCarney, the man who brought him out, stood with his body halfway through the lower rope pleading with the fallen man to get up. Water was splashed on him. . . . Then came the realization that this was not an ordinary knockout. When McCarty stiffened out and changed color Referee Edward Smith called for a physician. He was soon pronounced dead, but the physicians worked over

Punch Wasn't Fatal

As in the case of Ernie Schaaf's death, it developed after an examination that Pelky's final blow to the heart was not the fatal punch or anything more than a contributing cause to McCarty's downfall.

The autopsy disclosed that death was caused by a dislocation of the neck and that the heart was found. A clot of blood had developed on the brain. The dislocation caused a rupture of the spinal cord and a hemorrhage of the spine.

At Pelky's trial for manslaughter, which resulted in his acquittal, a Dr. Dunlop testified he thought no blow had been received by McCarty of sufficient force to cause serious injury, but admitted serious accidents sometimes had similar results, and that there might have been conditions of which physicians knew nothing which caused McCarty's death. Another physician testified that McCarty had suffered his injury in a previous fight.

him for more than an hour."

Richmond, gave the House two resolutions asking that the finance committee be instructed to include the 15 cents ad valorem tax for school purposes in the revenue bill and that the appropriation group be instructed to provide only a state school term of six months. Both measures were placed in the calendar to be taken up tomorrow.

Thirteen Injured

Thirteen relief workers were injured, one of whom is expected to die, when two motor trucks crashed at the intersection of Martin and Fayetteville Streets here. William Vorbett sustained a fractured skull and hospital attaches said there was little hope that he would live. The relief workers were on a large truck used to transport unemployed workers to projects where they were to be put to work. Carl Ragland, relief workers, was driver of one of the trucks while the other was driven by O. E. Harthcock, local dairyman. Police placed Harthcock under $200 bond pending investigation of the accident.

Knows His America

Dr. Sze should prove to be especially valuable to his government in Washington at this particular time. He knows Americans and American customs.

His English is excellent and his acquaintance with taxi drivers and waiters know him and call him by name. Friends made in his younger days at high school and later when he was student interpreter at the Chinese legation still remember him. As chief delegate to the Washington Arms Conference in 1921 for China also he became well known.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 28.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady unchanged to three points decline on Liverpool cables and commission houses selling. There was little Southern selling. After dropping to 5.96 May sold up to 6.02, and active months showed net gains of one to five points at the end of the first half hour. Prices later eased off a little but after a little selling were back to yesterday's closing.

The market steadied on trade buying with net advances of one to two points a midway.

Stock Market

New York—Feb. 23.—(AP)—The securities market continued to give a good account of itself today and stocks worked a little higher on quiet trading. The bond market acted fairly well and many shares moved up fractionally to more than a point.

There was little inclination on the part of stock traders to go short at the market for it was felt that the first sign of financial progress dealt with the banking situation might bring a good rally.

In light sales Union Pacific pushed up to points and 1/2 for a point or so included San a Fe, New York Central, Southern-Pacific and Louisville and Nashville. Miscellaneous shares up around a point included American Telephone, Coca Cola, American Can. Case, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, American Tobacco B, and Liggett and Myers B.

The turnover was approximately 950,000 shares.

Richmond, gave the House two resolutions asking that the finance committee be instructed to include the 15 cents ad valorem tax for school purposes in the revenue bill and that the appropriation group be instructed to provide only a state school term of six months. Both measures were placed in the calendar to be taken up tomorrow.

Fight On Cotton

Washington, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Sponsors of the cotton pooling bill were victorious in their first House test today by winning a 193-179 adoption of a rule forcing consideration of the relief plan until final disposition. The vote came after a debate during which the measure was vigorously attacked by Republican Leader Snell after it was called before the House by Rep. Bankhead, Democrat of Alabama. Snell first sought to kill the measure by a parliamentary point of order but it was overruled by Speaker Garner.
