OFFERS DATA TO FARMERS

Congressman Lindsay Warren Offers Bulletins Dealing With Farm Problems

Bulletins from the United States Department of Agriculture dealing with the raising of vegetables, fruits and poultry have been made available to the people of this community by Congressman Lindsay C. Warren of the First Congressional District.

In a letter to The Reflector today, Mr. Warren said he had noticed the garden campaign in progress in Pitt County, and as he thought the plan a very good one, he would be glad to supply agricultural bulletins to the people.

Mr. Warren also said he had a number of Agricultural Yearbooks and would be glad to send them to any farmers who desire them as long as they last if they will write and make their wishes known.

The bulletins cover all problems dealing with agricultural development and should be of invaluable assistance to persons contemplating gardens as well as those engaged in agriculture.

Copies of the bulletins may be found at The Reflector office, and persons desiring to see them are invited to visit the office and inspect them.

Mr. Warren's letter follows:

"I have noticed in the various daily papers published in Eastern North Carolina that free seed are being distributed and families are being encouraged to plant gardens this spring. I think this a very good idea, and the thought occurs to me that some of these families would like to have some bulletins from the Department of Agriculture which give information on the growing of fruits and vegetables and the raising of poultry. I shall be very glad to supply these bulletins if any of you subscribers desire them provided they will drop me a card stating which ones they wish. I also have a number of Agricultural Yearbooks, though not enough for general distribution, and I will be glad to send them to any farmers who desire them, as long as they last, if they will write me requesting same."

BERNARD SHAW IN AMERICA

Noted Englishman Makes Plea For Tom Mooney on Arrival In San Francisco

San Francisco Cal., March 24.—(AP)—George Bernard Shaw, the 77-year-old British playwright, arrived on the mainland today for the first time with the abrupt announcement that he knew more about America than its inhabitants.

He told a mass of interviewers and cameramen that America elected their public officials because candidates had their pictures taken with a baby in their arms.

During discussion of the Tom Mooney case (Mooney was convicted of participation in the Preparedness Day bombing at San Francisco in 1916), Shaw said Americans were romantics in their treatment of the whole criminal system.

"You Americans can get romantic about a 20 to 30 years in prison, but to the man in prison six months is a terribly long time. I hesitate to give an opinion of Mooney. Generally I would say to bury a man alive in a vault for seventeen years is foolish. I am a foreigner and as such would not criticize your court or police. But if Mooney is not fit to live, have the courts to shoot him. It would be a relief to me if the governor of your State would pardon Mooney. He has been a political mark, and I would like to see him, but my interference would only harm him."

BREWERS TO SPEND HUGE SUMS IN U. S.

Estimated $65,000,000 Will be Spent by The Industry in Next Few Months

New York, March 24.—(AP)—Seth Fehnlman, chief statistician of the S. W. Dodge Corporation, estimated today that more than $65,000,000 will be spent in the next few months for breweries and also for alteration of old ones.

The estimate was based on reports from thirty-seven States east of the Rockies and on statistical calculation from the western States. The figure did not include expenses for buildings and rehabilitating retail establishments.

It covered only a small portion of the sum to be spent for brewing equipment and none of the expense incidental to the industry. The total estimate of the U. S. Brewers' Association was placed at $400,000,000.

Fehnlman said that 170 reports of brewery construction had been received since December 1 covered 37 States. The total for the States was $59,000,000 and another $7,500,000 would be required for the Western States.

PLAN TO SHIP POULTRY SOON

Farm Department Announces Resumption Of Hog Shipments Next Week

Poultry and hog shipments, abandoned in this county during the banking holiday, will be resumed next week, it was stated at the Farm Department this morning.

The market will resume operations with three poultry sales in as many sections of the county, with one hog shipment being made from Greenville about the middle of the week.

Poultry sales are scheduled for Aiden, Wednesday; Greenville on Thursday, and Bethel, Friday. Carload shipments will be made from each of these places and the pocketbooks of growers were expected to be swelled to no little extent when they realize from the sales.

Several shipments were scheduled in various communities during the beginning of the state and national banking holiday, and owing to the seriousness of the financial condition at the time, E. F. Arnold, director of the farm department, ordered postponement of all sales until the financial situation improved.

Mr. Arnold, in making known the resumption of shipments today, said similar shipments would be made every two weeks and it was hoped to greatly swell the pocketbooks of the various growers.

Although the date for the revival of hog shipments has not been definitely decided upon, the farm director said it probably would be next Wednesday or Thursday. Several carload shipments of hogs were expected to be made during the months of April and May with more to follow later in the year.

CLINICS GET MANY CASES

Hundred and Fifty Children Operated On in Tonsil Clinics In County

Over a hundred and fifty children have been operated on for adenoids and tonsils in the series of clinics being conducted in Pitt County at this time, it was revealed by records in the office of the Department of Health today.

The public health forces went to Bell Arthur today where a clinic will be held at the consolidated school there and the regular program of two clinics a week will be followed next week.

The largest number of children were operated on at Grimesland where two clinics were necessary to take care of the situation. Dr. R. S. McGeechey, director of the department, said there were more children suffering from affected tonsils and adenoids in Grimesland than any school so far visited, and this made it necessary to confine more attention to that school.

The next largest number was handled in Winterville where twenty-nine children underwent operations. Fountain came third with twenty-six operations, Stokes fourth with twenty-one, and Pictolus fifth with twenty.

The maximum number of operations set for each clinic was placed at twenty at first, but owing to the seriousness of the situation existing in some of the sections, the health workers had to go beyond that mark to take care of those needing attention.

Public health authorities are being assisted in their work by nose and throat specialists of Greenville, and the money is being provided through funds of the Reconstruction Corporation.

FARMERS BUSY IN PITT COUNTY

In traveling about the county it is found that many farmers in Pitt and adjacent counties along with breaking and harrowing land, are engaged busily in picking weeds from their plant beds, which, with the exception of a few beds that were destroyed by worms and various insects are doing nicely. On the average plants are in a healthy state at this time of the year.

In a few instances, worms and insects have destroyed beds, even after crushed mothballs were applied as a preventive. Many farmers of the county have resown their plant beds after they were infested earlier in the season by the insects. Many of the farmers state that resown beds show no sign of infestation by insects and are getting along nicely.

TEACHERS GO TO RALEIGH

Several members of the faculty of city schools went to Raleigh today to attend the annual meeting of the North Carolina Education Association. The majority were expected to return tonight while some may remain over until tomorrow.

TEACHERS GO TO RALEIGH

The convention, described as one of the most important in years by reason of the serious situation confronting the public school system, opened last night with an impassioned plea from President Clyde A. Erwin of Rutherfordton, that the teachers "stand by their guns" in their fight for the thousands of children attending public schools.

Other speakers at the initial session were Dr. Douglas Freeman, editor of the Richmond, Va., News-Leader; and Dr. W. D. Reeve of Teachers College, Columbia University.

One of the highlights of tonight's session will be an address by Dr. William John Cooper, United States Commissioner of Education, who will appear at the Hugh Morson High School at 8:30 o'clock.

Local teachers were greatly interested in the sessions of the convention by reason of the fight now going on over school appropriations in the State Legislature. Similar interest was being manifested by educators from all sections of the state and indications were the sessions would be the largest attended in recent years.

FIRE DESTROYS FARM RESIDENCE

The home of Carman Cox in the Cox Mill community was destroyed by fire yesterday, according to reports reaching here today, but the extent of the damage nor the origin of the blaze was determined.

Cox, it was said, had gone to inspect tobacco beds quite a distance from his home when he noticed flames coming out of the roof. He raced back to the house but the building fell in by the time he reached there. Practically all of the furnishings were destroyed.

NINE HUNDRED AFTER LOANS

Nine hundred applications for government seed loans have been filed by Pitt county farmers since the beginning of the filing period here nearly three weeks ago, it was revealed today by E. F. Arnold, director of the Pitt County Farm Department, filing headquarters.

Eight hundred of this number have already been sent into Washington for final consideration, and the remaining hundred was to go in during the latter part of the week.

Although the rush to file applications subsided somewhat during last week a sufficient number of farmers are on hand each day to keep the department working at full steam to take care of the demand.

The handling of applications has been speeded up considerably the last several days, and the office is capable of filling out sixty, having the local committee pass on them at night and then forward them to Washington the next day.

The number of applications this year has already far exceeded last year's crop and when the filing period is over it is impossible to say what the total will be. That it will be in the neighborhood of 1,500 and 2,000 is not doubted and employees of the farm department were prepared to continue their swift pace until the situation has been taken care of.

Mr. Arnold said the average loan requested here was around $175 although it is possible for individual farmers to obtain as high as $300 and farm owners $1,200.

For the first few days after filing period opened around five hundred people visited the courthouse in an effort to be among the first to get loans through, and the department was forced to add extra employees to take care of the demand.

WOULD TAKE U. S. FLEET OUT PACIFIC

New York, March 24.—(AP)—Youseke Matsuo, head of the Japanese delegation to the League of Nations, arrived in America today with five fellow delegates and asserted that Japan was not appealing to anyone for it is not a vassal state to America or any other nation. He also suggested that Japanese-American feeling might be improved if the United States should withdraw her fleet from the Pacific Ocean.

He said he did not know whether or not Japan intended to withdraw from the League of Nations.

A crowd of Chinese were gathered in the street outside the pier as the Leviathan docked with Matsuo and his fellow delegates. They had congregated to protest against what they said was Matsuo's intention to engage in mapping out propaganda while in America. A police guard of about 250 were in line and detectives had been assigned to prevent possible order.

One Chinese, Lin Nat Hin, student, was held for questioning after police found he had a revolver with him. He displayed a permit to carry the weapon.

GERMANY MAY EXPEL JEWS

Berlin, March 24.—(AP)—Adolph Hitler's legalized four-year term as dictator of Germany began today with one western German state taking action which is expected to lead to expulsion of all eastern Jews in its borders.

The legislative bodies of both the German Reichstag and its greater unit Prussia have been indefinitely suspended.

The signature of President Von Hindenburg to the decrees which Hitler may desire is no longer necessary as result of the Reich's action yesterday in granting absolute power to the Chancellor.

The Hitler government commissioner, Polinne, lying between the Rhine and French frontier and ordered that no bank or postal funds be delivered to eastern Jews.

The ban invoked was taken to foreshadow a general expulsion order.

THE SENATE RUNS TRUE TO FORM

By its action yesterday in refusing to place an ad valorem tax on stocks in foreign corporations the Senate has again displayed its determination to continue its policies of special privileges to the favored few while the masses of the people of the state suffer under an unbearable tax burden.

Last night Carl Goerch took opportunity to comment upon the legislator who yesterday lost his pants. As we see it, if the Senate continues its action in behalf of the special interests in this state the rest of us will soon find ourselves in the same predicament as the legislator awoke to find himself yesterday morning.

ANOTHER WARNING

Now comes a warning from the Progressive Farmer to the tobacco growers against overproduction this year and believing that we cannot too strongly stress the necessity of smaller money crops if the growers are to receive a living price for them we pass this warning to our farmers.

ADMINISTRATOR SUES FOR $75,000 DAMAGES

Winston-Salem, N. C., March 24.—(AP)—The Southern Railway Company and F. T. Duggins, locomotive engineer, were named defendants in a $75,000 damage suit instituted in Forsyth by J. L. McGaw, administrator of the estate of W. R. Pendry, railroad flagman, who was killed by a train at Barber, April 17, 1932.

This warning as to the dangers of overplanting tobacco is typical of others that are coming to our attention. The thoughtful farmer will consider his ways and be wise. This year more than ever before money crops should be surplus crops. And under present marketing conditions the growing of tobacco is more nearly a sheer gamble than growing any other staple crop.

VALIANT DUST by Percival Christopher Wren

It was a pool of intrigue that filled the ancient Citadel of Mekazzen. Margaret Maligni is taken to see her girlhood sweetheart, Otho Belleme, lying bound and wounded. He has been betrayed by Ralsul, son of the Kaid, Margaret's husband. Ralsul has threatened Otho, private in the Foreign Legion, and Margaret as well. Jules is no protection. In desperation Margaret remembers Colonel Le Sage of the French Secret Service, who is trying to unravel the intrigues of Mekazzen.

A NEW MISUNDERSTANDING CHAPTER 41

Rising from the cushioned mattress that served him indifferently as arm-chair, couch and bed, Colonel Le Sage strode to the heavy iron-plated door of his room. That wasn't Major Langear's knock, but it was the knock all right. Warily opening the door, Le Sage saw a Moorish woman, or rather a cloak which presumably concealed a Moorish woman, for no face was visible.

"Yelverbury?" he inquired in a whisper. "It's I, Margaret," she whispered in reply, as she slipped into the room, and Le Sage locked the door. "Oh, I am in such trouble, Colonel Le Sage. I've come to you for help. You will help me, won't you?"

"What is it?" asked Colonel Le Sage. A little coldly, Margaret thought. "Could it be that he was another of those people who promise everything and perform nothing? Had he cultivated her solely for his own ends or for her possible usefulness to him?"

"You will help me?" she asked him urgently, seizing his arm. "What is it?" again asked Colonel Le Sage. "Yes, definitely unenthusiastic. He had been very different from this when it had been a question of her being useful to him."

"I did my best to help you, Colonel Le Sage. And I'll help all I can. I'll do anything you ask, if only you'll help me now, just this once."

Margaret fought back her tears of pain, misery and disappointment. Was there no one in the world she could trust—except Otho? And yet she had felt such confidence in this man. An instinctive liking and trust.

What was he saying about Yelverbury? Why talk about that now? "Oh, Colonel Le Sage, do listen to me and help me. My oldest and dearest friend is..."

"One moment, Mrs. Maligni. You must answer my question before we go any further. I must know where I am."

"Oh, Colonel Le Sage, I trusted you. Yes, Mrs. Maligni. And I trusted you absolutely, although it's not my custom. Now, tell me why didn't you give me the pass-word when you came to my door? And when you have told me that, just tell me where you got it."

"I don't understand, Colonel Le Sage." "You don't? At the end of our talk together, you suddenly shot it at me, and I admit you made me feel something of a fool. What was the idea exactly, Mrs. Maligni, in concealing the fact that you knew all the time who I was?"

"But I didn't... I..." "And I wonder how the devil your husband got hold of it. And I'd have sworn that that legionnaire lad was honest, too straight, too fine. I suppose he gave me the pass-word and the password away to Riccoli, and Riccoli told it to the Malignis, and Jules Maligni told you."

"Told me what?" cried the bewildered Margaret. "Look here, Mrs. Maligni. There's the small matter of my life at stake and you can believe me when I say that it is a very small matter in comparison with my success. That is an enormous matter, and I stick at absolutely nothing when I am working for my country."

"How long have you known who I am? Who else beside your husband and his father know who I am? And who was it told you a pass-word that I'd have sworn only I and one other man ever knew? It's important."

"Was it your noble husband, or was it Riccoli himself?" "Colonel Le Sage, what are you talking about? What has happened since I saw you last? My husband told me you were a German Secret Service officer, Carl von Mittengen, masquerading as Herr Schlacht, and hoping to get something out of the Kaid. I never dreamt you were anything else until you told me so, the last time I saw you."

THE NEWS JIGGER

Striding forward, the Arab seized the astonished Otho by the arm. "Yelverbury!" said he. "Listen," he continued, speaking English. "Follow me without appearing to do so. Don't keep too close, I mean."

"Now then, Otho Belleme," said Colonel Le Sage, as he locked the door of his room. "Tell me. Are those three English friends of yours staunch and loyal?" "Absolutely, sir."

"And if I told them to obey you, and to follow you in any undertaking, would they do so?" "Absolutely, sir."

"Good. Now for how many others can you answer in your own section? I mean, as being staunch and loyal, and entirely uncorrupted by—er—Sergeant-Major Vittorelli."

"Three, for certain. Two old soldiers of France, and a very fine Russian who was Regimental Sergeant-Major of a guard regiment."

"Good. Now listen. I want you and your three compatriots to come to this room after roll-call tonight. Parade dress, rifles, bayonets."

"Sergeant-Major Vittorelli would begin Otho." "Sergeant-Major Vittorelli will—er—be elsewhere," replied Le Sage. "Simply bring your three men here, telling them that now they really can do something helpful and useful in the matter of—er—shall we say Margaret of Yelverbury?"

"And Colonel Le Sage laughed. "Sir?" Otho ejaculated the startled Otho. "Oh, yes. Mrs. Maligni and I are old friends. She is helping me, and I, her. If all goes well tonight, she'll be safely out of this place quite soon."

Rising, Colonel Le Sage strode to the door, and after suddenly opening it, glanced to right and left along the dim-lit stone tunnel-like passage.

"Good," said he, placing a kindly hand on Otho's shoulder. "Your chance—and mine—comes tonight. Good luck, Belleme."

INVESTIGATE DEATH OF J. FAIR RUSSELL

Canton, March 23.—(AP)—J. Fair Russell, 30, farmer and former Canton tax collector, and a brother of A. G. Russell, chief of police of Canton, met death Wednesday under circumstances that have mystified officers who are investigating. Russell was last seen in Canton Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock when he talked to his brother, Chief Russell, at a drug store and visited the office of Dr. M. H. McCracken. At 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon two men rode into Canton in Russell's own car, with the body of Russell in the rear seat.

The two men, James Sorrells, 38, a farmer who lives two miles north of Canton, and Burt Gregory, 55, a farmer of the Canton section, later were placed under arrest. They said Russell died in the car. Officers said both were intoxicated.

Bailey escaped.

MARBLE SIDEWALKS IN TOWN OF MARBLE

Marble, N. C., March 24.—(AP)—Sidewalks of marble in some communities may be deemed extravagant but here—so the town board of aldermen enacted a law that the stone be used as paving material, making the town live up to its name. Marble is situated within the area of immense marble deposits of Cherokee County and because of the ease with which the stone can be obtained, the aldermen believed the idea was a good one. Laying of sidewalks with marble is to begin at once.

Brewers See Selling Field Widened; Boost Production To Meet Demands

ESTIMATED ANNUAL OUTPUT LEADING BEER PRODUCING CITIES. CHICAGO 1,800,000 BARRELS. ST. LOUIS 2,100,000 BARRELS. MILWAUKEE 2,400,000 BARRELS. NEW YORK CITY AND BROOKLYN 4,000,000 BARRELS.

Brewers have been increasing their capacity to meet the demand expected to follow legalization of beer. Here a brewing master inspects a vat at one of the large Cincinnati breweries. The barrels indicate the possible output of some of the larger brewing cities.

By J. R. BRACKETT

New York.—(AP)—More states may have beer than in any year since 1917, study of the status of the liquor laws since 1914 indicates. Twenty-two states have no prohibitory laws at present, compared to 14 in 1920; 16 in 1919; 21 in 1918; 25 in 1917 and 39 in 1914.

What effect this greater apparent "wetness" will have on consumption of beer brewing authorities will not predict, except to point out the fact and to remark also that population of the country has increased. Whether thirst has increased proportionately remains to be seen.

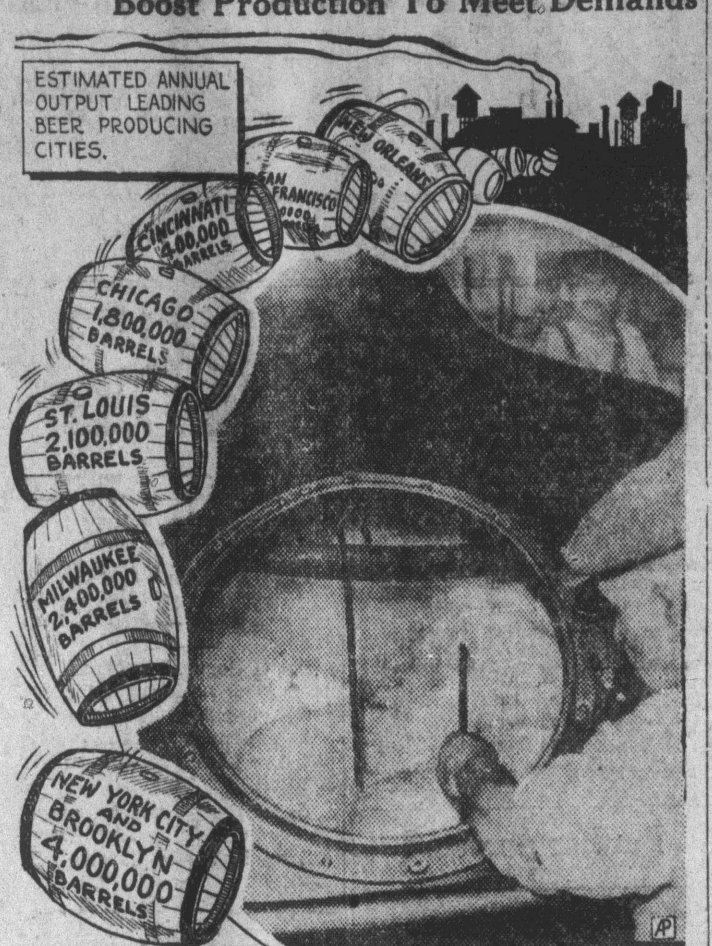

The industry is moving as rapidly as possible to step up production, reports to the U. S. Brewers Association indicate. At the end of 1932 about 211 breweries were in a position to brew legal beer. No figures are available to show how many have been rehabilitated since then.

Here are the highlights as to potentialities from several leading beer centers: New York and Brooklyn: In 1918 there were 54 breweries in these two centers compared to 12 at the end of 1932. Several more have been reconstructed since the first of the year.

One brewery estimates it can produce 1,000,000 barrels in 12 months; another between 250,000 and 400,000 barrels; another about 350,000 barrels. In 1918 these two centers produced about 8,600,000 barrels. A brewer who would not be quoted estimated New York and Brooklyn might make 4,000,000 barrels in the year following legalization.

Philadelphia had 43 breweries in 1918, only 7 as the year ended; Paterson and Newark, N. J., had 23, only 4 as the year ended. Milwaukee: The city's breweries are to operate at about 60 per cent of their one-time capacity. In 1916 nine Milwaukee breweries produced about 4,000,000 barrels. They hired 6,670 men and paid about $5,195,000 wages. Eight breweries will be able to operate to varying extents after legalization, and the brewery workers' union estimates 4,500 men and women will be directly employed by them.

Chicago: Chicago's beer thirst will be quenched by a production which promises to approach 1,800,000 barrels a year. Six major breweries, plus smaller units with less definite plans, aspire to skyrocket their output immediately. The Illinois Manufacturing Association estimates 35,000 will be employed in allied industries, while direct employment will be about 3,000.

Cincinnati: About 20 of Ohio's 108 breweries are to operate, according to the Advisory Commission for Liquor Control. They have a potential capacity of about 400,000 barrels.

St. Louis: Before prohibition St. Louis produced about 3,000,000 barrels, one plant alone having a capacity of about 2,000,000 barrels. The Industrial Club of St. Louis estimates 70 per cent of this capacity will be available.

New Orleans: Three breweries are ready to manufacture legal beer. Louisiana produced about 500,000 barrels in pre-prohibition days, but probably will produce considerably less this year.

San Francisco: West coast population has almost doubled since prohibition and brewers expect a correspondingly larger business. California's production averaged 1,350,000 barrels for eight years prior to 1918.

Breweries ready to operate on coast are: California 6; Washington 4; Oregon 2; Nevada 3; other far western states, about 7. The California Brewers Association believes far western demand will approximate 5,000,000 barrels this year.

"Swimming" of the Head From Constipation

"I used to suffer from spells of swimming in the head," writes Mrs. Carrie Brown, of Meridian, Miss. "Everything would go round and round. When I stood upon my feet, I would be almost blind with dizziness. My stomach was upset. These spells, I believe, came from constipation. I suffered torture from the effects. My mother had taken Theodore's Black-Draught for a long time, and she suggested to me that I try it. While I was feeling so bad, I took half a teaspoonful, but it in some way did not seem to do me any good. I found it was just the thing to relieve the suffering from constipation. Now I always keep it in my house. I take it whenever I need a laxative. I have used Black-Draught in my home now for twelve years, and feel it is a great help in keeping my family in a healthy condition."

College View section: At the home of Vernon Parrish, 407 Biltmore St.; Deacons J. H. Boyd Jr. and E. S. Hamric will be in charge. Evans and Ninth Streets section: At the home of Berry Bostic, 512 E. Come, let us pray together.

End Of The Century Club Meets

The End of the Century Club met Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 with Mrs. E. W. Harvey on Latham street.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. R. H. Wright, vice-president, presided over a short business session, after which the books were exchanged.

The program for the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. E. L. Carr, who gave a most interesting paper on "The Olympic Games." She told of the origin of the games and how they were celebrated in Greece and then gave an account of the Olympic games held in Los Angeles last year. She gave a most graphic description of the marathon race, which is the crowning event of the contests. The distance of the race is 26 miles, which was completed in two hours and a fraction. This most interesting paper was much enjoyed by all those present.

Current events were given by the club members and consisted chiefly of intimate glimpses of our new President and his wife, "the first lady of the land," in whom all are interested.

At the close of the program Mrs. Harvey served an ice course.

The guests of the afternoon were Mrs. H. B. Hall and Mrs. Dana Horton.

Separation of Doug, Jr. And Joan Finds Moviedome Prepared For News

Hollywood, accustomed to such things, is reported little surprised by the separation of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Here Joan and Doug, Jr., as shown following their return from abroad, hardly looking as though they contemplated parting.

Hollywood, Cal.—The separation of Joan Crawford and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., wasn't much of a surprise to Hollywood.

As for the reasons for and the way chosen for announcing it, this film gossip center finds in them another manifestation of what might be called the Ann Harding manner of giving out such information.

Thus it was not entirely unprepared for the respective statements which Joan and Doug, Jr., issued, declaring the separation the only means of preserving happiness.

Young Fairbanks, while these domestic difficulties have been making the headlines, has been co-starring with Leslie Howard in "Fellow Prisoners," a picture which, by the way, gives Philip Faversham, son of the stage's William, an initiation into the films.

Romance enters in the person of Patricia Ellis, journalism student and daughter of the policeman who sent Danny to jail. Alice White, flippant, romance-minded sob sister on the sheet, tries to complicate matters, getting for her efforts Cagney's cold shoulder.

Eventually Cagney goes to another and less sensational newspaper.

Before this happy denouement, Cagney, in zeal for glory and promotion in order to marry Patricia, has caused her father's demotion through sneaking a camera into the death cell.

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES
New York—(AP)—"I have the secret of Antonio Stradivari," said the graying little Julius D. Horvath, the violin maker of the Yorkville section, "and I want to give it—free of charge—to the violin makers of the country."

"Here in America I want to see them make violins the equal of the fine instruments of Cremona. I can tell them how."

Horvath, small and frail, is 73. "I am very old now," he said. "My chemical experiments have had their effect, as you can see. My doctor says he gives me six months."

We were in his second story establishment, which is his home, his work shop and his place for displaying the results of his experiments. This is on East Eighty-fifth street, in the heart of Yorkville, where so many of New York's Germans and Hungarians are assembled.

Horvath is from Hungary. He came to this country 42 years ago.

I don't know anything about violins. I merely quote an old man who has given his life to them; who started making violins when a boy back in Hungary—inspired by the gypsy musicians.

Design and age have little to do with the supremacy of the "Strad" he says.

Antonio's secret lies in the fact that the pores of the wood of a Stradivari are hollow, according to Horvath, who says he has learned how to achieve this hollowness of pore—has developed a filler and a varnish to accomplish it.

"I had the filler worked out years ago. The varnish formula I only completed about 1920."

After he applies his filler, which goes into the pores of the wood, he says, he puts on his varnish, which contains ammonia.

"This soaks all the filler out of the pores and charges the varnish." If anyone wants his formulae, they are welcome to them, he says.

But Horvath is discouraged about the prospects of Americans buying violins made in America because as soon as they learn to finger the strings they become ambitious to possess the instruments of Stradivari and boast of paying thousands of dollars for them.

"There are 50 bench trained violin makers in this country—that is, men who learned their craft as boys, from worthy teachers—and 450 amateur makers. None of them has any market for his product. Yet the department of commerce figures show that we go on and on, importing violins."

Horvath imports his maple and spruce, which he uses for his instruments, but Edison once wrote to him that there are suitable woods in this country. And, says Horvath, strings as good as any that can be procured are made by a New York establishment.

When he went abroad in 1908 he

MISSING COUPLE FOUND IN MORRISTOWN, TENN.

Zebulon, N. C., March 24.—W. M. Prince, who with Mrs. C. L. Long, disappeared from this place about a year ago, has been located, arrested and locked up in Wake County jail.

About December 10 Chief of Police Baker learned that the couple were living together as man and wife in Morristown, Tenn. They were operating a filling station and lunch room. Warrants were sent for Prince's arrest. About two weeks ago Policeman Tharrington went after Prince and brought him back. Mrs. Long was left in Tennessee. U. N. C. TRACK MEN HAVE BIG FIGHT AHEAD

Chapel Hill, March 24.—The Carolina track team has a number of last year's best performers back again, but several others graduated leaving large gaps for the coaches to fill.

Those best marks of 1932, which incidentally will give this year's trackmen much to shoot at, were as follows:

100-yard dash, Charlie Farmer, 9.9; 220-yard dash, Farmer 21.0; 440-yard run, Ken Marland 49.4; 880-yard run, Tom Watkins 2:1.1; mile run, Clarence Jensen 4:28; two mile run, Bob Hubbard 9:58.3; 120-yard high hurdles, Crook Stafford, 2:14; 220-yard low hurdles, Rip Slusser 24.6.

High jump, Crook Stafford, 5 feet 11 3/4; broad jump, Floyd Higby 22 feet 9 1/4; pole vault, Wick Smith 12 feet 6; shot put, Oscar Mullis 46 feet 2 1/4; discus, Theron Brown 138 feet 11 1/2; and javelin, Ralston LePore 208 feet 7.

Farmer, Marland, Watkins, Slusser and Brown passed off the stage last year. The other seven of these boys are back. Around them as a nucleus Coach Bob Fetzer hopes to build another strong team.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

There are some extenuating circumstances to be taken into account, but it nevertheless is striking that the close of the indoor track and field season finds the new kings of the athletic boards coming, not from the ranks of our Olympic champions, but from the larger galaxy that failed for one reason or another to figure among the collectors of gold medals at either Palo Alto or Los Angeles.

Here's a large part of the picture: Pole vault—Keith Brown, Yale sophomore and holder of the new world indoor record of 14 feet, 1 3/4 inches, did no better than a tie for seventh in the final Olympic trials and failed to make the U. S. team. The same goes for his teammate, Wirt Thompson, who cleared 14 feet in his last indoor meet.

High jump—George Spitz, a disappointment in the Olympics, although a pole winner, won the national indoor title with a leap of 6 feet, 8 1/4 inches, a trifle short of his own world record.

Mile run—Glenn Cunningham, fourth in the Olympic 1500 meter race and the first American, at that, ran his best race last, 4:12, in the indoor race last, and despite Gene Venkze as the board-track king.

Sprints—Ralph Metcalf, beaten in both Olympic finals, and Emmett Toppino, who made only the Olympic relay team, shared honors.

All-around—Barney Berlinger, in retirement during the Olympic year, staged a great comeback to beat Jim Bausch, Olympic decathlon champion and record-holder, in an abbreviated indoor test.

Barney Comes back From the way Berlinger performed in the "spathlon" at Madison Square Garden on the night Bausch was forced to withdraw with a knee injury, the former University of Pennsylvania all-around star is about ripe for the best decathlon showing of his career.

Big Barney seems faster than ever, which is not to say he will give Bill Carr anything to worry about in the quarter mile. He also has improved in the jumps and still can hoist his huge frame over almost unbelievable heights in the pole vault. He clears 13 feet 4.

Outdoors Bausch would be able to cash in at his favorite events the shotput, discus and javelin throws, but Berlinger's unexpected comeback offers him a chance for some real decathlon competition. It would provide a spectacular duel if these two could be brought together in the Penn Relay Carnival the end of April.

Vaulting Monopoly Speaking of pole vaulting, there's still no break in the old monopoly. If it isn't a Southern Californian on top, like Lee Barnes or Bill Graber, you are pretty sure to find the Yale boys up there in the athletic stratosphere.

Neither Brown, assisted by Wirt Thompson and Frank Pierce is keeping the Eli reputation up where it belongs. When he displaced the indoor record Brown merely inserted his name where that of another Yale product, Sabin Carr, had been.

Of the nine athletes in the world credited with soaring over fourteen feet with the bamboo pole, four are Yale boys—Carr (the first anywhere to clear this height), Sturdy, Brown and Thompson. The others are: Bill Graber of Southern California, present world record-holder at 14 feet, 4 3/8 inches; Lee Barnes, former Southern Californian, and former world record-holder; Bill Miller of Stanford, Olympic champion; Charles Hoff of Norway, now a professional; and Shaihei Nishida of Japan, Olympic runner-up.

New York Cotton

New York, March 24.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, two to five points lower on disappointing Liverpool cables and liquidation. The prices dipped to 6.25 or six points net lower. Later month end in a point or two of steady.

At the end of the first hour May was selling around 6.31 and October 6.68, or net to three points lower on these positions. Except for some further near-month liquidation and switching the market remained quiet later in the morning.

At midday May was selling around 6.34 and October .69, or about net unchanged to one point higher. (Courtesy Speight & Co.)

Stock Market

New York, March 24.—(AP)—The stock market was waiting after today with prices backing and filling in desultory trading with an irregularly downward trend.

The sweeping improvement shown in Federal statements had been anticipated and indications in mercantile reviews of a pick up in trade was inadequate to generate new enthusiasm.

Selling carried a number of issues up, including American Telephone and American Can, although these were reduced in some instances and cancelled by early afternoon. Rails fluctuated, but in the main showed a good tone.

Union Pacific rose more than a point, lost its gain and again pushed up a point. Food stocks and some of the merchandising issues, web shares and New York traction had intervals of firmness.

Among several others. After Senator Clement of Rowan had told the upper division that he favored the original appropriation bill of $33,000,000 for 1933 the House gave the Hybrid bill allotting $73,919,000 for two years with instructions to report it back for consideration next week. The appropriations committee will study the question this afternoon. The revenue machinery act which does not set rates for taxation was sent back to the House minus a requirement for ad valorem taxation of foreign stock and containing limitation of reduction of property valuation.

The House voted to provide for ad valorem taxing of stocks exempted since 1923 and for unlimited valuation. The Senate reduction limit set at 50 per cent.

A bill to allow Greensboro to issue tax anticipation notes the equivalent of scrip passed through both sections under suspension of rules. The Senate also lifted the rules to

Politics

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

One remarkable thing about the first weeks of the Roosevelt administration was the alacrity with which public attention was diverted from the troubles of international politics, and riveted on the tangle of problems here at home.

To this shift of national thought the bank crisis, of course, contributed greatly. A nation dotted with closed banks of its own would have found it difficult to continue an interest in that much-blamed bank in Vienna or such matters as England's struggle to rehabilitate the pound sterling.

Mr. Roosevelt, himself, however, gave a tremendous further impetus to what the banking emergency started. His proposals for economy, beer and farm and unemployment relief all captured and kept the headlines because they dealt with subjects in which average citizens were deeply and directly interested.

War debts, the world economic conference, the Far Eastern trouble and the gravely dangerous general European situation, all faded into temporary eclipse.

Striking At Once For the ushering in of Mr. Roosevelt's administration it had been his hope to strike, and strike at once, in a direction which would impress upon the American people the neces-ity of putting their own house in order without too much concern as to what other peoples were doing. He felt that only thus could the maximum results be attained.

During the campaign he had disputed repeatedly Mr. Hoover's thesis that European mauling had contributed measurably to America's depression. After the election he refused to join with the old administration to hasten consideration of war debts. In his inaugural address he devoted but two short paragraphs to foreign relations.

Even if there had been no bank crisis, it is altogether likely Mr. Roosevelt would have found a way to center the mind of the nation immediately and almost entirely on domestic problems.

On its face, the evidence hints at a foreign policy program of nationalistic rather than that of recent years; yet Mr. Roosevelt's many references to the value of world co-operation would seem to classify him as anything but an isolationist.

Victim of Accident in Serious Condition

Goldboro, N. C., March 24.—The condition of Roy Lee Champion, 44-year-old white man of Jonesboro, was injured in a truck accident near Goldboro late Tuesday afternoon, is critical, X-ray pictures taken at the Goldboro Hospital having revealed that his back is broken and little hope is held for his recovery. He also sustained lacerations and contusions about the face and head and bruises about the body and limbs.

D. W. Cox, 49, white man of Manners, who was with him, was painfully cut and bruised and is in the Goldboro Hospital. Eurrell McGugald, 28-year-old negro of Broadway, who was with them, received cuts and bruises, but was able to leave the hospital on the day after the accident.

Forest Fire Destroys Remnants of Village

Jackson Springs, N. C., March 24.—About thirty-five years ago Craigrovia was a village in its prime. It was located four miles south of here on the Moore County railroad in the southeastern corner of Montgomery County, near enough for one to carry on a conversation with others in Richmond and Moore counties.

The remains of this thriving village went up in smoke Sunday afternoon when a raging forest fire swept in to the undisturbed village. All buildings were destroyed.

This erstwhile village which had been without a railroad for more than three decades once boasted of many establishments besides the depot. It was a seat of industry with its stores, hotel, whiskey and turpentine distilleries and the Patterson's Bridge postoffice. The property was owned by the Jackson Auman heirs. A heavy rain put the fire out which threatened several farm houses.

a brain concussion. The truck in which he was riding was demolished, killing the driver, Laurence Navis, also of Asheville, when it struck another truck parked on the highway between Washington and Baltimore.

At an inquest into Navis' death yesterday, the coroner's jury ordered Henry P. Strickland, driver of the other truck, held for the grand jury on a manslaughter charge. The jury found him negligent in leaving the truck on the road while he went to Washington for repairs to damaged parts. A bond of $500 was fixed.
