Late News Flashes

Today In The Legislature Raleigh, March 28.—(AP)—Beer and appropriations overshadowed other legislative activities in Raleigh today. Citizens from all parts of the state were converging on the capital for public hearing on the Francis beer bill before the Senate committee this afternoon and scores of petitions bearing thousands of names were sent forward in both branches of the assembly. The gap between the Senate and House over appropriations for 1933-35 biennium widened as the upper division adopted its committee recommendation for a number of state departments in preference to the lower House allotment. The allotment from more than a dozen administrative offices were put at higher levels than the House figured. The House is considering the bill in a committee of the whole. The Senate bill carries about $82,750,000 for the next biennium compared with $78,970,000 carried in the hybrid appropriations measure carried by the House. Changes in the set up in the state hospital standardization to provide to three doctors and three nurses was voted on by the House when it passed on second reading to change requirements for becoming a registered nurse in the state. The House passed the Smith bill to allow trial of cases for violation (Continued on Page Four)

Beer is the chief topic of discussion at Raleigh today and no doubt by the time this appears the legislative committee will have taken some action on the matter. Again we urge that this entire prohibition question be handed back to the people of the state for their decision in the matter.

CLEAN-UP WEEK

This is clean-up and paint-up week in Greenville and residents can aid greatly in the appearance of the city by joining in the movement and cleaning up their premises. The movement by the Garden Department of the Woman's Club in tree planting along the highways approaching the city and in beautifying public premises in and about the city will mean much in the future appearance of the city and similar attention by individuals will add much to this movement already under way.

AN AGRICULTURAL EXAMPLE

By executive order, President Roosevelt has consolidated all the various agricultural agencies into a single unit at a saving to taxpayers of around $2,000,000 a year. This is important to North Carolinians as Federal taxpayers and more important as an example in the consolidation of agencies which today are performing duplicate or overlapping functions.

Not more important to the nation is the agricultural merger in Washington than would be to the State the proposed merger of the State Department of Agriculture and the State College at Raleigh which was offered as a bill early in the session but which has not made any perceptible advance toward enactment into law. In fact, of several bills along this general line introduced, one has received an unfavorable report, and others are somewhere all but lost in the legislative machinery.

It is to be hoped that the example of President Roosevelt will give new life to the proposal for wise economy in consolidating the two North Carolina agricultural agencies. That example would be followed by the passage of an act transferring everything from the Agricultural Department, except regulatory powers, to the College of Agriculture and Engineering.

At present the college has the direction of practically all matters pertaining to agriculture. All should be concentrated there, leaving to the Commissioner of Agriculture only regulatory duties. Today if anybody wishes to know anything about agriculture in North Carolina he does not know whether to go to the college or the department. Much of the college now is done at the college now. It should be the one and only agricultural training agency in the State. This transfer would add considerably money to the funds of the college for research, teaching, and extension work. It would prevent duplication and save money for the taxpayers.

President Roosevelt's program of consolidation should be an example to the Legislature of North Carolina, which while talking much of economy seems to have lost sight of some of the means by which without injuring the essential functions and services of the State economy may be secured.

VALIANT DUST by Perceval Christopher Wren

JUST BEFORE MAJOR Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion was ready to seize the Citadel of Mekrazan as the first step in making himself Emperor of North Africa, Colonel Le Sage of the French Secret Service captures Riccoli. Le Sage explains to Riccoli how knowledge of Riccoli's double treachery to France and to his supposed ally, the Kaid of Mekrazan has reached the ears of the Kaid's heartless son Raisul.

Chapter 44 RICCOLI "CRACKS"

Riccoli sat up suddenly. "Le Sage!" he said sharply, "did you talk to me to Pedro Maligni?" "Oh, quite a lot. Oh, yes." "Le Sage, you'd never hand me, a fellow white man, a compatriot, a brother officer, you'd never hand me over to this devil, Raisul, to be tortured."

"You're looking quite pale, Riccoli," Le Sage remarked. "Look here, Le Sage, for God's sake tell me plainly, and let me know the worst."

"The worst, Major Riccoli, is that you, a French officer, are, for your own private gain, a traitor to France."

"Answer my question, Le Sage. Have you betrayed me to Raisul? And are you going to let him torture me?" "Betrayed you to Raisul! No, Major Riccoli, not intentionally. Nor do I propose to hand you over to him. I am going to deal with you myself."

A look of cunning came into the eyes of Riccoli. "The Kaid," he said, "Raisul may have told him? Warned him?" "Possibly," agreed Le Sage. "Almost probably, in fact. But Raisul takes his own line—and it may cross that of the Kaid."

"And you have an appointment with the Kaid?" "Tonight," agreed Le Sage. "Now, in fact."

Riccoli said nothing, but his face spoke volumes. "Oh, no," laughed Le Sage in answer to Riccoli's unuttered thought. "He won't get me, Riccoli—though I'm banking on my belief that he thinks he will. Now I really must go."

Picking up Riccoli's pistol from the table, Le Sage went to the door. "Bellemel!" he called. "Otho entered and saluted. 'Which of your three is the staunchest, steadiest man?' he asked. 'The man with the best head as well as the coolest courage.' 'Legionnaire Mummery, sir,'" replied Otho.

"Fetch him in," Le Sage said to Mummery, as Joe halted, saluted and stood rigidly at attention before him. "He is not to leave this room—alive. Look the door after me, and do not open it until I knock—three times, then twice, then once, like this. If anyone else knocks in the ordinary way, take no notice whatever. If force is used, and the door is burst open—shoot this officer instantly—and then defend yourself. Understand?"

"Yes, sir," Le Sage turned to Riccoli. "You'll find this man incorruptible, Major Riccoli," he said. "Also prompt in executing orders. So let's hope none of your friends or followers knocks the door down, in search of you. If all goes well with me, I shall see you again later. If not—I am afraid the door will be burst open by someone or other, eventually."

"Follow me, and move quietly," ordered the Colonel, and led the way to the barrack-room. "Attention!" ordered the senior sergeant, as Le Sage entered, followed by Major Langeac, who had joined him at the door. "Absolutely all right. Loyal, to a man," was the report of the latter. "I don't say that a few of them wouldn't have thrown in their lot with Riccoli, if he had brought it off and then declared himself. Anyhow, they're spoiling for a fight—as always."

"Well, I want three more, for my job," said Le Sage. "You, Bellemel, pick me the three best men here—men you'd like to command for a forlorn hope, or have with you in a tight corner."

Otho called three names. Petrovitch, Poussin, Soif. "Good. Fall in outside—the six of you."

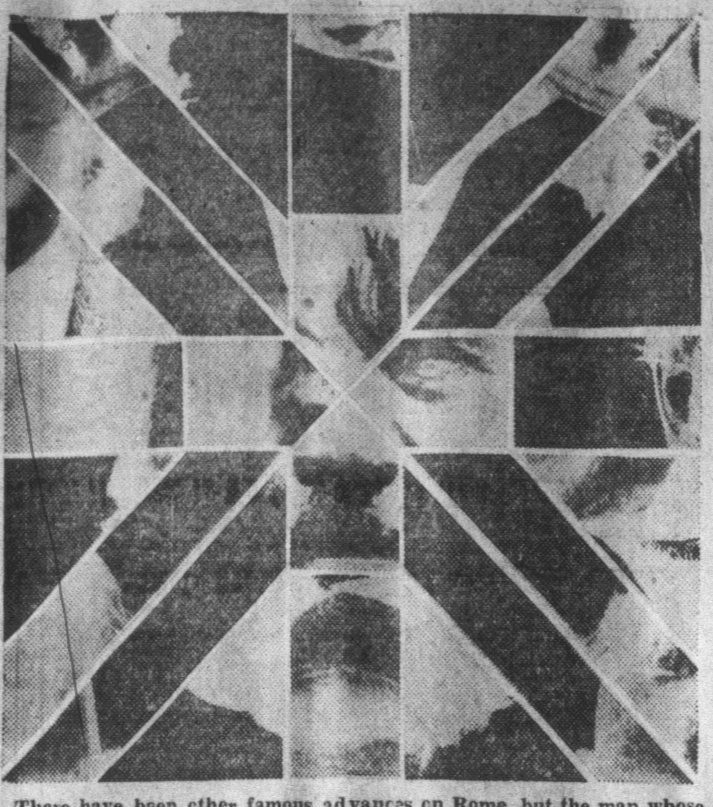

"Carry on, Langeac, and good luck to you. The Kaid and Raisul think Riccoli is not going to double-cross them until the rest of his column arrives. And as they don't connect me with Riccoli's show at all—I think we shall bring it off without firing a shot."

"Got it all clear? I go and collar the Kaid and Raisul—before they collar me; and you seize all strategic points meanwhile, main gate, magazine, store-houses, water-tank, barracks, and all exits and entrances—gently relieving all sentries and substituting our own. Unless Maligni is playing a game of his own, the pass-word is 'Sheshuan,' and I doubt if in the absence of the Kaid and Raisul, you'll meet with any opposition. Everybody will be too flabbergasted—especially as you have the pass-word."

The two officers shook hands. "Good-bye, sir," smiled Langeac, "but I shall meet you again within the hour, at the flag-staff on the Sultan Tower." Le Sage joined his chosen six. "Now follow me in single file," he ordered, "and step like—er—ballerinas."

A few minutes later, at the foot of a flight of winding stairs, Le Sage signalled his men to halt and gather round him. "Listen," he said, "and make no on to the next engagement nearby."

THE NEWS JIGGER

There have been other famous advances on Rome, but the man whose jumbled likeness appears here probably was the first to set to work on a mission of peace for all Europe. Cut apart and reassembled, and then check with the solution on the back page.

The first step was to send out a thousand circulars. Time brought just three acceptances, from the Y. M. C. A. of Portland, Oregon; the University of Kansas, and the University of Florida.

Then they bought a couple of bicycles—they would see the country anyway. But the bicycles were too much trouble to push up the hills of Yosemite park. So the look of walking and hobbling on trains.

But in Montana they hit a real snow storm, and their wanderings were over. Justin Miller decided to study law (now he is the dean of the law school at Duke University), and Frank Hill got a job as a country school teacher. Later he took advanced work at the University of Illinois.

A husky six-footer, he did some wrestling there, and there he received the only tribute which he repeats in these days. The captain of the wrestling team commented: "Never have I seen such a strong neck."

Frances Perkins, who brings the banner of feminism to the new cabinet, and Sinclair Lewis are old friends. Paderewski finds a game of bridge soothing after a concert. Hall Skelly used to be a circus clown. A music critic remarks of William H. Woodin, symphony composer who has taken over the treasury. "Of course, it is to be expected that he will stand for 'sound' money."

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—(AP)—On the third floor of a downtown federal office building in the capital there is a pleasant, bespectacled, soft-spoken man of whom you'll likely hear a lot now that 3.2 per cent beer has been legalized.

He's Dr. James M. Doran, chief of the bureau of industrial alcohol, and the man charged with the responsibility of seeing that the alcoholic content of beer is kept strictly within the legal limit.

The doctor, a native of North Dakota and the son of a Methodist minister, is an old hand at the game. Since as far back as 1907 he has been doing this sort of work for the government.

In 1920 he was head of the chemical and technical division of the treasury department, in 1927 commissioner of prohibition, and now chief of the bureau of industrial alcohol.

At his desk, in a big sunny room looking out over Pennsylvania Avenue, puffing slowly on a big black pipe, he talks at length and understandingly about beer and alcohol.

He draws diagrams of various parts of a brewery to illustrate what he is trying to explain. He spells out the queer-sounding chemical terms.

The instrument called an "ebullimeter," destined for such an important use in the days ahead, he explains in detail.

The contraption that will be employed to determine the alcoholic content of the beer, before it leaves the breweries is an ingenious device. Almost the exact quantity of alcohol in the liquid tested can be determined.

One of Dr. Doran's favorite jokes concerns the instrument. He never misses an opportunity to tell it.

When prohibition went into effect the "ebullimeter" was looked upon with curiosity, and by some with disdain. One writer, in describing its operation, says Dr. Doran, wrote as follows: "When the liquid registers exactly one-half of one per cent, the instrument flashes a red light. When the alcoholic content is less than one-half of one per cent, a blue light goes on. "But the moment the indicator passes the one-half of one per cent mark, 'Poof!'—the 'ebullimeter' blows a fuse." Confident that his forces can control the situation, Dr. Doran is settling down for some hard work after midnight of April 6. He doesn't expect any trouble. "When we get 'greased up,' he says, "there's be nothing to worry about."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and snaky and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine. For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a skin, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blotches. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned. It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, soothing when it comes to making the bile flow freely. But don't take liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Demand a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

ILLUSION: A "strong man" once gave public performances in which he stopped a 9 lb. cannon ball shot from a fully charged cannon. The audience gasped when the gun flashed and the human Gibraltar stepped forward out of the smoke uninjured, with the 9 lb. shot in his hands.

EXPLANATION: The trick lay in the way an assistant prepared the cannon for the performance. He used the regulation amount of powder and wadding, but placed the greater part of the charge of powder ahead of the shot. The cannon ball was propelled only by the small charge behind it which was just sufficient to lob the 9 lb. ball over to the strong man.

NO TRICKS .. JUST COSTLIER TOBACCO'S IN A MATCHLESS BLEND

It's fun to be fooled — ...it's more fun to KNOW

A performance sometimes staged in cigarette advertising is the illusion that cigarettes are made easy on the throat by some special process of manufacture. EXPLANATION: All cigarettes are made in almost exactly the same way. Manufacturing methods are standard and used by all. A cigarette is only as good as the tobacco it contains. It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

In costly tobaccos you will find mildness, good taste, throat-ease. Smoke Camels critically, and give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction offered by the more expensive tobaccos. Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after.

REAL ESTATE MOVES SLOWLY

The movement of real estate slowed up here during the last several days and records in the office of the Register of Deeds showed that only seven deeds were filed for registration. The largest transaction was that of J. J. White to Mrs. Florence P. Clifton, one lot for a consideration of $3,650.

The next most important was from H. H. Bishop and wife to O. H. Barnhill and wife, two lots for a consideration of $1,544.

The remainder of the deals follow:

J. J. White to Florence P. Clifton, one lot, $3,650.

Mary L. Harding to J. E. Green, 197 acres, $10.

L. O. Mills et als, to Mary L. Harding, 197 acres, $100.

C. S. Forbes and wife to W. L. Best, one lot, $100.

O. H. Bishop and wife to O. H. Barnhill and wife, two lots, $1,544.44.

Charles D. Laughinghouse to Helen L. Stokes, four lots, $750.

W. J. Little to K. R. Wooten, 127 acres, $1,500.

D. A. R. MEET WITH MRS. ROBESON

The Colonel Alexander McAllister chapter of the D. A. R., at their March meeting last Saturday afternoon, March 25, was delightfully entertained by Mrs. E. T. Robeson.

The special features of the meeting were the reports from the state conference in Charlotte, reports of various committees, music by high school students, and an instructive and thought-provoking talk by Dr. Carl Adams on the signs of the times.

Mrs. W. B. Murphy, the regent, presided and, in the absence of the chaplain, conducted the devotionals. She has recently been appointed by the state regent, a member of the house committee for the national meeting to be held in Washington City in April. The chapter voted to join the other chapters in the district in extending the invitation for the next annual state meeting to be held in Goldsboro.

Dr. Adams in analyzing conditions today, went back into causes and showed that straight-thinking beforehand and anticipating troubles might have prevented many of the evils existing today. Drastic cures, such as technocracy, he said, and the bank holiday, have been resorted to because the troubles became acute before remedies were applied. He showed that there is great discrepancy between the methods of thinking people employ in the solution of public problems and their own affairs. He further pointed out that no one set of people can solve public problems, for they require unbiased, clear thinking all around questions, in an impersonal, unselfish way, and this can be done only by co-operation.

The two boys who furnished the musical program for the meeting were pupils of E. T. Robeson. Ben Herring played two trombone solos, and Harold Sugg played two flute solos. Miss Eva Hodges played the accompaniments for both.

Mrs. Robeson was assisted in the serving of refreshments by her daughter, Miss Mary Shaw Robeson, and Mrs. L. L. Rivers. These were a delicious salad course and coffee.

The guests were Mrs. E. W. Myers of New York, Mrs. L. C. Arthur, Mrs. R. W. Harvey, Miss Eva Keeter, Mrs. A. A. Henderson, and Mrs. L. O. Cross—Reported.

"Reality" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 26.

The golden text was from Psalms 33:11: "The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, the thoughts of His heart to all generations."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise." (I Cor. 3:18).

The lesson-sermon also included the following from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "In this struggle for supremacy, semi-metaphysical systems afford no substantial aid to scientific metaphysics, for their arguments are based on the false testimony of the material senses as well as on the facts of mind. These semi-metaphysical systems are one and all pantheistic, and savor of Pandemonium, a house divided against itself."—(Christian Science Committee on Publication.

President's Plan To Make 250,000 Jobs Aimed At Huge Soil Waste From Erosion

WANTED! 250,000 MEN TO SAVE THE SOIL

EROSION—AND ITS CURE

DRAINAGE WEARS AWAY SURFACE
TREES RETAIN TOP SOIL

SOIL EROSION AREAS

The administration's project for erosion prevention and flood control through reforestation is directed at providing unemployment relief on a large scale. Erosion, the wearing away of the top soil through drainage, has rendered 34,000,000 acres of land unfit for agriculture. Approval of the project would result in such a call for men as that suggested above.

By F. B. COLTON (Associated Press Service Writer)

Washington, D. C.—(AP)—President Roosevelt's plan to put 250,000 unemployed men to work on prevention of erosion of farm lands and related reforestation and flood control projects represents an attack on a farm problem regarded by experts as more serious than low crop prices.

Erosion, or the wasting away of soil by water, is wasting farm land in the United States faster than in any other civilized nation in recorded history, says H. H. Bennett, erosion specialist of the Department of Agriculture.

He estimates that of the 350,000,000 acres of land under cultivation in the United States, between 100 and 125 million acres have lost all or most of their valuable top soil through erosion.

Slopes Aid Erosion—Three-quarters of all cultivated land is sloping and hence subject to the erosive action of running water. About 34,000,000 acres of farm land have been totally destroyed by erosion so that they are useless for growing crops. Most of this destruction has taken place in the last fifty or sixty years.

Much valuable work could be done by unemployed men, Bennett believes in protecting remaining good lands from erosion, restoring partially eroded land to usefulness, and planting trees or pasture grass on lands too badly eroded for further growing of crops.

Good Land Decreasing—Erosion is steadily decreasing the amount of good farm land, says Bennett, and represents a permanent loss to the farmer. Low prices for farm products may some day rise, but rich soil washed from fields never can be replaced.

In some sections of Northern Missouri, in fields planted to corn year after year, erosion has been known to wash away in twelve years, the rich seven inch-deep top soil, leaving only unfruitful sub-soil below. Nature would require about 3,000 years to build back this seven inches of top soil.

The Tennessee valley, where President Roosevelt has proposed a great water-power, reforestation and flood control development, "is one of the most seriously eroded sections, explains Bennett. Fifty per cent of the land in the valley, he estimates, is too steep or too badly eroded for cultivation, and unemployed labor could be used in turning this land back into forests or pastureage.

Forests Retain Water—Forests on the steeper slopes of ridges help retain water in the soil and prevent erosion of the more level slopes where crops are planted. When steep slopes are cultivated the topsoil is quickly washed away, making the land unfit for further use, or at least, capable of growing only small crops.

The increasing amount of eroded land, from which water flows more easily and quickly, is resulting in larger floods than formerly in streams and causing them to dry up in summer instead of maintaining a uniform year-round flow.

The "clean-cultivated" crops, such as corn, cotton and tobacco, are most favorable to erosion because there is a minimum of plant material to bind the soil in place and help it absorb water.

A complete new series of Vatican stamps will appear soon. The 5-centesimo design contains Pope Pius' coat-of-arms, surmounted by the tiara and surrounded by grain and eggs, the substances used in making the eucharistic wafer.

The 10, 12-1/2, 20 and 25 centesimo show in the background the apostolic palace where the pope lives, and in the foreground the central part of St. Peter's square.

The 30, 50, 75 and 80 centesimo show the Vatican gardens, with the dome of St. Peter's looming in the background.

The 1, 1.25, 2 and 2.75 lira reproduce a portrait of the pope with olive branches in the corners.

The 5, 10 and 20 lira depict the facade of St. Peter's, with part of the Berlin colonnade.

The express stamps, of 2 lira for Italy and 2.50 for abroad, give an aerial view of the whole of Vatican City.

He's 110 And Plowing Still

Holdenville, Okla.—(AP)—Hale and hearty at 110, Pat Ryan, whose little mud-chinked cabin occupies a mountain "clearin'" near Holdenville, is still able to do his spring plowing.

He and his 64-year-old "boy" Bill have been puttering around, working with hand made tools to repair his crude implements for that purpose.

Everything about the Ryan cabin is rustic, plain and without a touch of any "new-fangled ideas." Pat says a man doesn't need "all the fancy things to get ahead."

He still whets his scythe on the stone wheel of his two-wheeled cart. Looking back to his boyhood, Pat remembers the historic shower of shooting stars in 1933 when many persons thought the world was coming to an end.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—(AP)—Henry Garat looked out the window at the streaming flood of sunshine which Californians sometimes mention and his eyes surveyed the flowers that in the spring and summer, fall and winter, too bloom in the beds of the studio gardens.

But to his lips came no ecstatic "tra-la" to herald the season. Instead he sighed.

"Such weather—and I must go back right away, almost before I have chance to enjoy it!"

He will be gone shortly after the completion of his first Hollywood picture, "Adorable," in which he romances opposite Janet Gaynor. A contract with UFA calls him back to Europe. For one picture only, and then he will be back in Hollywood in August. But spring will be gone then. He sighed.

And then he laughed, pacing up and down, Gallic exuberance rising. He twirled around his finger a long chain laden with good luck charms — "I carry these always, never make a picture without them."

One of them, a miniature photograph disc which opens to reveal a picture of his English bride, he explained was presented him because his record sales totaled $75,000.

"In France they buy records because the radio is not so good as here. In France you turn on the radio and you get pst-pst-pst-sput to much; so many people buy records. There I make sometimes more money from records than from pictures," he said.

He has been asking talkies abroad, between stage appearances, for five years. He has been a star for four. Working in Hollywood is a picnic compared to working in studios abroad, intimated Henry—and that despite his arrival for Hollywood's most exciting weeks in years, weeks marked by a bank holiday, a string economy fight, and an earthquake.

Garat, like his countryman, Chevalier, came from the stage into pictures. Both once worked with Mistinguette, the celebrated dancer.

There the similarity ends. Garat, 30, is younger, more the "romantic star" than Maurice—if that, considering the latter's fan mail, can be possible. His name is pronounced Ga-rah, and Henry, not Hen-ri—at least in Hollywood.

He learned a little English when in New York eight years ago, for a revue. He had to learn all over again when he came to Hollywood, but found it easier.

But to return to those signs for spring. Romantic sighs! No—"It is golf," he said. "I'm learning to play, with an instructor.

"My game is terrible! But it is fun. I would like more time to play golf before I go."

JOBLESS HOPING FLOWS TO THEIR MUSIC

St. Louis, Mo.—(AP)—Beer will bring back beer gardens, and beer gardens will bring back employment to 100 or 150 St. Louis musicians, officials of the musicians' union here believe.

Of the 1,190 union musicians in the city, about 250 have been employed recently.

Before prohibition, a union official said, beer gardens provided one of the greatest sources of employment for their members.

Tips on CONTRACT

FIFTH WITH PARTNER (By Tom O'Neil)

The ace is thin unless partner can support a suit you bid or the suit is of such length and strength it needs no bolstering.

Conversely, when the bidding clearly shows support in certain suits and strength in others also, it is time to make hay while the sun shines.

Here are two slam hands in which the support theme was not given due recognition. In one of them a little slam was bid when a grand slam was possible without unwarranted chance-taking.

In another the declarer bid a little slam and took all the tricks on a four-card trump suit to the astonishment by the aid of a finesse and an opponent's failure to make the right lead. The proper contract, a bare game affair in another suit, could not have been defeated.

A grand slam was missed in the following hand in which Mrs. Elsie Prichard sat South:

(DEALER) NORTH

▲K74	▲A1072	▲Q964
▲52	▲SOUTH	▲643
▲62	▲K8653	▲NONE
▲AJ10987

Mrs. Prichard, who has played considerable successful tournament tennis, is among the outstanding players of the Deschanelles Club, New York. She has never been known to be timid at bidding with the proper encouragement; but, lacking such encouragement, she will desist readily.

North opened the bidding with a spade. East and West never said anything but "pass." South called two clubs and North offered three diamonds, one more than necessary, in order to compel the bidding to go on.

South went to three hearts and then came four no trump from North, showing two aces and the king either of spades, diamonds or clubs. South bid five clubs, North five spades and South six clubs, which ended the auction.

Since the king of spades lay at the left of the declarer there was nothing to the play. The declarer took all the tricks.

South could not have bid the grand slam, since she was uncertain whether there was club support North, other than by inference from North's forcing bids. To her the hand seemed to be possibly a bad misfit.

The WORLD of STAMPS

By QUINTON JAMES

Although Washington's headquarters at Newburgh, N. Y., are still standing, the design for the Newburgh three-cent stamp will be taken from a photograph of the old Dutch farmhouse but from the engraving of it by James Smillie, who emigrated to this country from Scotland in 1829.

First to be issued under the new administration, the stamp will commemorate the proclamation of peace with the British issued by Washington from the house on April 19, 1783. It will be placed on sale at Newburgh on April 19 and at the post office philatelic agency in Washington a day later.

The stamp to be printed in purple ink will have a narrow double-line border. "U. S. Postage" will be printed in a panel at the top. Underneath, in small Gothic letters will be "Washington Headquarters, Newburgh, N. Y., 1783-1933."

Farm Income Rise Aim of Tennessee 100-Acre Program Greenville, Tenn.—(AP)—A plan for agricultural development of Greene county which proposed to give farmers a net cash income of nearly $3,000,000 annually has been launched here.

Devised by J. H. Radler, the plan has been worked out as to detail by County Agent J. C. Powell, in conjunction with J. C. McAnis and E. R. Callahan of the University of Tennessee.

The program is for a farm of 100 acres, of which there are 3,250 such units in Greene county, situated in East Tennessee in the mountainous area.

The Greene county plan is based on a farm of 100 acres divided as follows: House and garden, 2 acres; barn and lots, 2 acres; woods and waste, 16 acres; permanent pasture, 20 acres; rotation pasture, 15 acres; crops 45 acres.

Crops are distributed to corn 13 acres; tobacco 4 acres; potatoes 1 acre; wheat 10 acres; bar 5 acres; oats 3 acres and alfalfa 9 acres. Yields anticipated from this acreage are: Corn 520 bushels; tobacco 5,000 pounds; potatoes 150 bushels; wheat 200 bushels; barley 175 bushels; alfalfa 27 tons.

Livestock would include 2 work animals, 11 cows, two heifers, 10 calves, 100 hens and two pigs. The standards set for yields, the experts say, and the production of livestock are above the average but not above the average of the best paying farms.

The program has been received with enthusiasm and its sponsors expect wide support for it in the county.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

For as long as most Fordham men can recall "Jake" Weber, who might double for "Baron Munchausen" in an emergency, has been massaging the aching muscles of Maroon athletes, attending to their bruises on the gridiron and either consoling or cheering them in dressing-rooms heavy with the aroma of arnica.

He is perhaps the most famous "rubber" in amateur athletics. He has been overseas with the Olympic teams. When foreign stars first come to this country they generally call "Jake" to ease their muscles.

He was once quite an athlete himself, known to professional wrestling as "Young Hercules." He once refereed a celebrated match in Baltimore between one "Shad Link" and a bull. The bull hoisted the "Shad" into the gallery.

Twice, under extraordinary circumstances, Weber was charged with the responsibility of running Fordham's football team, back in pre-war days, and the stories of these episodes are among his best.

The Thorp Mystery "We were taking the team up to Worcester to play Holy Cross one time when Tom Thorp was head coach," recalled Jake. "So Tom told me to go with the boys by boat and he said he would join us next day.

"There was no sign of Thorpe all morning and I began to get worried. We stalled in the dressing-room until after 2 o'clock. Still no Thorp. Finally the referee came in and demanded to know what was the matter. I told him we were waiting for the coach. He said: 'Get out there, coach no coach.' I said: 'Boys, it looks like we will have to do it. Who started last week? Al Wright, you fellas line up.'

"We took a 59 to 0 licking that day and still no sign of Thorp. I figured he must be in a hospital or something, but I am reading the 'sport page' the next morning and I see in the Harvard-Yale summary: 'Referee, Tom Thorp.'

Rules Is Rules "Frank Gargan was coaching us when we went down to play Rutgers another time," continued Weber. "I took a load of stuff down in the truck with the boys and when we got there it was raining buckets. They showed us our quarters, under the stands, and it was just like taking a continuous shower-bath.

"I never saw a worse day. There wasn't a person in the stands, but we waded out to play, anyway. I'm with Gargan when we go over to see Foster Sanford, the Rutgers coach, and I'm suggesting to Frank to cut the periods in half or do something like that when Sanford overhears.

"He turns around and roars: 'We will play the regular 15 minute periods. That's the rules! Who's running this team, anyway?' So Gargan turns to me and says: 'Jake, you're running things today.'

"Instead of getting better it comes down worse. It seems like the boys are playing in a foot of water. Even Sanford weakens, because he comes over between halves and suggests we cut it short. He starts to talk to Gargan, but I butts in and says: 'No, we're playing 15 minute period. It's the rules.' With that he roars again, 'Who's running this team?' and Gargan shoots back, 'Jake is.'

"That time we didn't get beat so bad, only about 43 to 0."
