Beer or no beer, is the question and we still insist that it is a question to be settled by the people of North Carolina at the polls rather than by the legislature. And the sooner the people are given the opportunity to settle this question the better it will be for both the wets and the dries.

It is gratifying to note that the Senate has adopted the state-wide eight months state-operated schools measure. Now if both bodies of the legislature will see to it that the money for such operation of the schools is derived from a tax on foreign stocks and further taxes on the power companies and other industries making large profits on watered stocks the masses of the people in the state will realize some real tax relief. So long as the privileged classes continue to escape their just share of taxation there should be no sales tax or other form of taxes passed on to the other property holders of the state.

IT PAYS TO RAISE FOOD (Wilson Times)

A study of the towns and counties of North Carolina, which are recipients of the Federal relief as well as local assistance proves what we have been saying for years, that if the farmers of the state would raise their living first and then pitch their tobacco and cotton crops this section would be correspondingly healthy and prosperous.

For instance Greene and Pitt counties with a comparatively small city population has used a much smaller amount of money than Wilson and the other counties of the state where there are large city populations depending on relief for subsistence.

For instance Greene used $3,707.00 during February while Wilson spent $24,000.00. Forsyth $91,078.00, Wake $54,284.00, and New Hanover $43,043.

President Roosevelt proposes to minimize this situation as far as possible that obtains in every large center, and especially the industrial centers. How fine it would be if these people could be taken out to the country and given a small piece of land, and their potato patches and their house rent, and then put to work to reforest lands which the President desires them to do and thus settle this great question of feeding and housing them. Besides they would be growing a crop of trees which adds to the wealth of the country.

All of this makes us say that if a man gets his living he is getting the bulk of the cost, and that if our people would stick to making their living on the farms they would be better off, for they would make and save the amount they pay out for living expenses.

VALLANT DUST by Percival Christopher Wren

Comrade Le Sage of the French Secret Service has captured Major Riccoli of the Foreign Legion just as he was about to seize the Counsel of Meazren in a traitorous plot against France. Then Le Sage's party hits the powerful Kaid of Mekazen himself with the treacherous Maligni. But Pedro horrified, seizes that Raisal, son of the Kaid and the intended next victim of the Maligni traitor. Pedro's son, Le Sage catches Otho Balaena down a swing rope on the castle wall to meet the secretary.

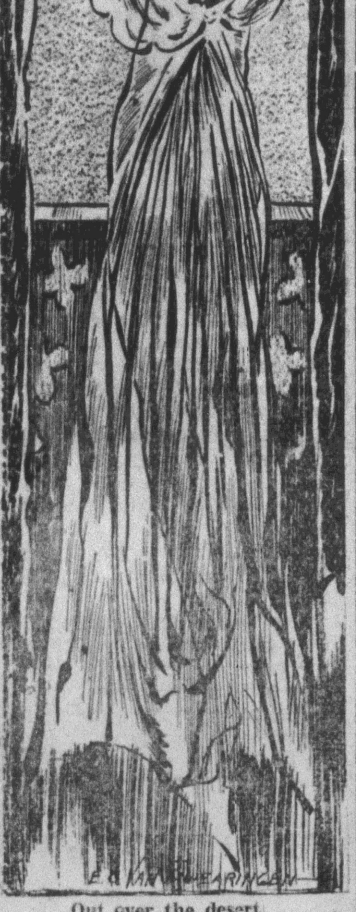

Chapter 46 ANOTHER PLOT

"Coffee, Hassan, quickly," said Jules and Sily made a secret sign. Swiftly Hassan departed, and a few moments later, was seated in his near-by stone cell, before a small brazier wherein a fire perpetually smoldered, and water was ready for the making of coffee or mint-tea at any time.

Having set the coffee to boil, Hassan el Misken now departed from his accustomed unchanging ritual. Pulling a stone from the wall, he put his hand into the aperture thus disclosed, and brought forth a tiny amulet-box.

And smacking his lips, Hassan el Misken stirred the brew once more, and then hurried with laden tray to his master's room. When Hassan el Misken entered, he found his master seated cross-legged upon a divan, a bottle of brandy and a glass upon

And having obeyed, Hassan el Misken departed from the room, and sat himself down within sight of the door, to watch and wait.

Would that human devil actually die there in the room? Might Hassan be called, to go quickly for help, and looking into the room, might he actually see him comforted and writhing in the throes of death, with his own eyes see him dying there in dreadful agony, even as he had caused so many others to die in agony?

"Aren't you going to have a little drink, Jules?" he asked, nodding towards the brandy bottle.

"Whassyou say?" "I said, 'Come along to my room now.' I'm going to show you something. Something really good. I'll give you my word. Come on with you."

"Rope!" observed Raisal to Jules Maligni as they sat in the former's room a few minutes later.

"Bear your weight, wouldn't it, Jules, if it were round your neck?" "I should shay sho," laughed the other, less vacantly.

"Yes, a very nice rope," continued Raisal, "and it gives me a very nice idea. Strong enough and, I think long enough."

"For what?" asked Jules Maligni. "I'll show you, as I promised. Great idea. Come along," and going to the door, Raisal bade Jules Maligni bring the rope.

"I say, you know, old chappie, you don't think you're going to—hic—hang me, do you?" "No, I am not going to—hic—hang you. Come along, will you?"

And followed obediently by his companion with the rope, and soon by Hassan el Misken, Raisal proceeded, by devious ways, to a distant part of the Citadel.

"This is the place," said Raisal at length. "At least, I think it is. I want you to lean through that embrasure and hang over, and tell me what you can see straight below. Be very careful, and don't lean out too far."

Jules Maligni obeyed his cousin, as always. "Nothing there. Can't see anything—hic—thing. Only rocks." "Ah!" observed Raisal. "All clear, eh? Right. Now stand up like a man, straight and steady, and look at the horizon. What can you see?"

"Nothing. Can't see anything—hic—thing." "Well, you will in a moment," replied Raisal and, standing behind Maligni, he swiftly bent over backward and raised his foot as does the savage fighter with back-drawn knee.

Suddenly, with tremendous force and swiftness, the foot shot out the sole taking Maligni squarely between the shoulder-blades, and hurling him forward.

His legs struck the edge of the low embrasure, and with a gasping cry he threw out his arms and clutched wildly at the embrasure sides, as, head foremost, he fell—and disappeared over the castle wall....

Down...down...down... turning and turning in mid-air, to strike the jackal-haunted rocks in the deep ravine, three hundred feet below.

Raisal turned away. "And now for the little rope-trick," quoth he, and smiled his own especial smile.

What was to be the end of it all—the end of her—Margaret wondered as she again assured herself that the huge key of her door was turned as far as it would go, and that both the great heavy bolts were shot home.

Having undressed, she went to the little stone verandah-balcony built out from the walls of the room, that vast wall, ten feet thick even at this great height, which was part of the outer wall of the castle itself.

Yawning heavily, for sleep of late had been light scanty and broken, Margaret flung herself down upon the over-cushioned bed, and once again tried all the sleep-wooling devices of which she had ever heard.

But what folly to think that she could sleep while Otho was lying bound and gagged, perhaps maimed for life.

What was that? A cry? (Copyright, 1932, F. A. Stokes Co.) A terrible situation follows, tomorrow, upon that eerie cry.

With the job finally completed, Crisp turned his eyes to a seat in the Senate caused by the death of one of Georgia's Senators. He went back to Georgia, made a bid for the post and was defeated.

Meanwhile Collier, now recovered, had run into trouble in his own state. He failed to enter a primary because a lower federal court had ruled the Mississippi reapportionment law invalid, and when the supreme court held otherwise, it was too late for him to run.

Thus both found themselves without jobs after years of public service. Collier had been in the house 24 years, Crisp 22.

It wasn't long before announcement was made by President Hoover that he had named Crisp as a member of the tariff commission. The Democrats, however, flushed by the November victory, had laid down a policy that the Senate would refuse confirmation to any of Mr. Hoover's major appointments.

This forced Crisp into private life. Now President Roosevelt comes along and names Collier to the same position.

GRANGE FINDS FRIENDS

The National Grange has come to the old North State, and has found many friends. The Grange is the oldest American farm organization, and the only rural fraternity in the world. It is an organization of farmers, by farmers, and for farmers.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington, D. C.—It's a strange reversal of positions and one of those queer twists that politics so often takes that two old-time cronies and former key men for their party in Congress are just now experiencing.

For years the two men had worked side by side on the powerful Ways and Means Committee in the days when the chances of the Democrats ascending to power in the House looked rather slim.

Collier was one notch higher than Crisp in ranking, with the result that when the tide did swing in favor of the Democrats in the 1930 Congressional elections and put them in control of the House, the Mississippian became chairman of the committee.

Crisp moved up into second place. Fight Won, Job Lost

Came the first session of the seventy-second Congress, however, and Chairman Collier was stricken ill. The tremendous task of furnishing the leadership for balancing the budget by the raising of additional revenues fell upon the shoulders of Crisp.

DRIVE FOR OLD CLOTHING SATURDAY, APRIL 1st. As R. F. C. funds are dwindling faster than the needs of the indigent persons of the county, the County Welfare office is asking the people of the city to give any shoes and clothing not actually needed at home for use among these people. It is possible that there are old shoes cast off by the school children of the town that will make it possible for some other children to attend school the remainder of the school year.

The colored teachers of Pitt county are donating a month of service this year, thereby extending the term and the need for clothing in the colored schools is very urgent. If some clothing is not supplied these children they will not be able to take advantage of the extended school term.

The local Boy Scouts will assist in this drive and everyone is asked to get up any clothing, especially shoes and give it to the Boy Scout representative who will call sometime Saturday.

MRS. HILTON RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE JUNIOR WOMAN'S CLUB

The Junior Woman's Club held its regular meeting at the Woman's Club building Friday afternoon. The hostesses for the afternoon were Mrs. B. E. Corbett, Jr., Mrs. Garland Woolard, and Mrs. W. R. Minshew.

Miss Frances Norman gave a talk on the outstanding men in North Carolina history she chose for her subject George Durant, William Gaston and Colonel J. Bryan Grimes. In referring to George Durant, she told her hearers that he had much to do with the early history of the state. That he was the first leader in the forming of a government for North Carolina. He always wanted the people to have a voice in the government. In referring to William Gaston, the young lawyer from New Bern, he became one of the outstanding lawyers of America. It was through his efforts that we have the public school system in North Carolina today.

In the work of General Bryan Grimes, of Civil War fame, she told her hearers that too much praise could not be given to such a courageous leader.

At the conclusion of this interesting talk delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses.

The regular business meeting was then called to order by the president. The roll call and the minutes of last meeting were read and approved. The president welcomed Miss Mary Langston and Mrs. Frank Jolly as visitors to the club. Miss Minnie Gable Bland was welcomed into the club as a new member.

It was voted and passed that the minutes of the club be put in book form and Mrs. H. R. Goodall, Mrs. R. C. Flanagan, Jr., and Miss Evelyn Hart volunteered to do this work.

The following officers were then elected for the coming year: Sponsor, Miss Jesse Moye; president, Mrs. C. C. Hilton; vice-president, Mrs. Jesse Moye; recording secretary, Mrs. J. J. White; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Pat Patterson; treasurer, Mrs. Ralph Pendergraft; corresponding secretary, Mrs. George Forbes Hadley; reporter, Mrs. Durwood Tucker.—Reported.

ROUND TABLE CLUB MEETS WITH MRS. GULLEY. The Round Table Club met in regular session with Mrs. O. G. Gulley Tuesday afternoon, with fifteen members present. Guests for the afternoon were Mrs. Wiley Brown, Mrs. J. H. B. Moore and Mrs. Pitt.

Following a short business session a most interesting and instructive paper on "Foundations Promoting Fine Arts," which was prepared by Mrs. Lewis, and in her absence from the city, was read by Mrs. ReBarker.

It is said Americans do not have any art wholly their own, but do have Foundations promoting fine arts, excellent that of any country in the world. These include drawing, painting, sculpture, etching and music in all of its higher classical fields.

Financial resources from these Foundations range from a few thousand to several million dollars. Today America leads the world in doing for its neighbors. Several of the organized Foundations working successfully in their efforts to help and encourage the promotion of fine arts were ably and concisely treated.

The newest and only Foundation in the south for fine arts is the School of Fine and Applied Art of the John and Mable Ringling Art Museum of Sarasota, Florida, opened in 1931.

The Ringling Museum contains possibly the most comprehensive collection of art by old masters that is found in America, also the largest privately owned collections of poetry and sculpture. Closing the paper was a beautiful definition of music:

"Servant and master am I; servant of those dead, and master of those living. Through my spirits immortals speak the message that makes the world weep and laugh, and wonder and worship.

"I tell the story of love, the story of hate, the story that saves and the story that damns. I am the incense upon which prayers float to heaven. I am the smoke which falls over the field of battle, where men lie dying with me on their lips.

"I am close to the marriage altar, and when the graves open I stand near by; I call the wandered home, I rescue the soul from the depths, I open lips of lovers, and through me the dead whispers to the living.

"One I serve as I serve all; and the king I make my slave as easily as I subject his slaves. I speak through the birds of the air, the insects of the field, the crash of waters on rock-ribbed shores, the sighing of the wind in trees, and I am even heard by the soul that knows me in the clatter of wheels on city streets. I know no brother, yet all men are my brothers; I am father of the best that is in them, and they are fathers of the best that is in me. For I am the instrument of God. I am Music."

Ballard's Cross Roads

"What's in a name?" Would not a rose smell as sweet by any other name?

How does the personality of a man dead these many years still live in a name? Ballard's—so called from a former owner, Joseph Lemuel Ballard, born and reared in Martin county, twice married in Pitt county; planter, merchant, in his younger days a teacher. None of his name are living anywhere around; his only descendants in this county are the children of Mr. J. S. Congleton of Greenville; yet his memory and name still live in this place.

Her many friends will be pained to know that Mrs. N. E. Tucker is so very sick. She was taken to Pitt Community Hospital today. We all hope that she may soon be well and at home again.

Mrs. W. H. Edwards is spending some time with her brother near Ormondville. She will be away about two weeks.

We regret to know that Mrs. Clarence Stepp is able to be out again.

Miss Rubelle Dickerson spent the week-end with Miss Verma Joyner. We are sorry to note that Mr. Edward Sutton is on the sick list. Hope he is soon out again.

Mr. Charlie Tucker of Warrenton was visiting his mother Monday. While here he called on the Peoples Supply Company to thank Mr. J. S. Elks for his kindness in tendering the use of his phone in calling the doctor for his mother.

It seems that there is an unusual amount of illness in our community. Sure the warm spring weather "just around the corner" will change all this.

Speaking of spring—have you been out in the garden or yard and dug up any flower beds yet? If not, do so at once, for you cannot know the joy of living unless you dig the soil and plant things and watch them grow!

My Beauty Hint

By VIRGINIA WHITMORE (Stage Actress) For a woman with naturally curly hair, I find that walking in the rain can be not only a pleasant diversion and exercise, but a beautifier for her locks as well, the damp air bringing out the waves. This beauty aid is applicable only if the curls are natural—not if they are machine-made.

By WILLIAM GAINES. New York.—The proprietors of hoity-toity New York restaurants, and the headwaiters in them, must be as tactful as diplomats, as understanding as high court judges, as familiar with the ways of society as family servants, and as close-mouthed as ethical physicians.

That is what Peter tells me, and Peter operates one of the better places on Park Avenue. He ought to know.

The man who takes upon himself, or has thrust upon him, responsibility for seating the patronage at such an establishment must, according to Peter, be familiar with society divorces.

Headwaiter's Headache. If the first Mrs. Brown, who now is the second Mrs. Green, and the second Mrs. Brown are in the restaurant at the same time, they must be seated where they cannot even see each other.

The first Mrs. Green, however, may be seated near the second Mrs. Brown, since they have a bond in common.

The pretty, blond dancer who is being favored by Mr. Watts de Fault may not be seated near Mrs. Watts de Fault's second cousin from out-of-town who comes to New York once every week to learn a bit of gossip. But the same blond dancer may be seated near that noted dress-maker who knows a good client when she sees one.

Every smart restaurant, says Peter, knows its patrons, their backgrounds, their likes and dislikes, and caters to them in the same way a hostess caters to them in her home.

In every good dining place (that is, where there are Social Register mix-ups), he says, there are sections where the social higher-ups are seated and other less desirable sections for the tumbling-away of climbers, nothings-at-all, and so on. But so diplomatically must each guest be seated that he feels he is being given the most select spot in the room.

Manhattan Memos. Bellevue, the largest municipal hospital in the world, established the first ambulance service in this country in 1868.... Catbirds, for some reason or other, haven't nested in Central Park since 1904, but they still make their warm weather homes in the city north of Harlem.

There is grand European atmosphere for the cameraman under the shadow of Queensboro bridge, on the south side, on your right (Manhattan end) a couple of old-worldish brass shops, a silversmith, and a few other quaint establishments, and on your left the soiled gray stones of the ramp, broken by the heavy-hanging arch of the First Avenue

KIDNAP VICTIM HOME 'AGAIN'

Peter Meyers, Jr., 15, surrounded by members of his family and for the moment happily engaged in fitting together a jig-saw puzzle, resumed his home life after being held captive eight days by three armed men who kidnaped him from his home in Masury, Ohio. By ROBBIN COONS. Hollywood, Calif.—If enthusiasm brings success, Cary Grant is going to realize his aim to be a top-notch actor.

That quality marks everything he does, whether it's waiting for a set collapse on him as it did the other day—he isn't so enthusiastic about the scars and bruises—or just talking.

"I've always wanted to be an actor," he declares, "a really first rate actor, with a reputation like—like Frederic March's. As a kid I used to stand in the wings of the stock company, and watch performances, trying to learn what to do and what not to do. I learned a lot, I think, and I'm still trying to learn."

When Cary Grant was Archie Leach, a Bristol, England, lad who ran away from school to join an acrobatic troupe, he made $200 a week and his keep.

There were bad breaks, in plenty, before Hollywood singled him out for favor.

It was his desire to be an actor, speaking lines, rather than an acrobat that brought on his starvation period. Nobody, it seemed, would give a part to an acrobat. Archie discovered that after he came to America with the troupe and forsook it to go dramatic.

The nearest he came to drama was walking on stilts to advertise a Coney Island concession, but he saved enough to get back to England and join a stock company. In a second conquest of Broadway he fared better, got into vaudeville, and at length came to Hollywood unheralded, looking for an opening, and found it.

Talks To Parents

FILIAL GRATITUDE By Alice Gudson Peale. A generation ago one had said almost the worst that it was possible to say about a child when one called him ungrateful to his parents.

Indeed many a boy coming into manhood thought of himself as actually standing in money debt to his father for the education received at his expense.

Today there is a growing opinion regarding filial gratitude that views it quite different with the result that gratitude as such is largely pushed out of the picture of an ideal of the parent-child relationship.

For the child to feel grateful implies that he owes something to his parents for the fact that they brought him into the world and for the protection and care they supplied during his years of helplessness and dependence.

The counter argument is that, since the child did not ask to be born but was brought to life without his own willing, there is not the least reason why he should feel indebted to his parents.

Having brought him to life naked and helpless, it is argued that the very least they can do is to provide the nurture which eventually will enable him to become a mature independent grown-up.

The fact that this process of nurture becomes more complicated, ex-

TRACK MEET DUKE AND N. C. TO BE PRELUDE NET PLAYERS AT CONFERENCE MEET MONDAY

Durham, N. C., March 30.—The annual North Carolina track and field meet will serve as a prelude to the seventh annual Southern Conference meet this year. The State affair will be held in Duke stadium on Saturday, May 13, a week before the conference meet is scheduled for the same place. The conference meet will run for two days, May 19-20.

With the first three teams separated by a fraction under five points, the hottest race in history is being staged for the lead in Duke University's intra-mural race for the campus championship.

The Kappa Sigma fraternity boys are ahead with 148 3-4 points, the Phi Delta Theta team second with 145 3/4 and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon group in close third place with 144 points.

The S. A. E.'s won the campus title last year and pulled into this year's race by winning 41 points in the campus swimming tournament in which the Kappa Sigs took only 11 1/2 points and the Phi Deltas, 9 1/2.

In the first spring contest between teams of the two institutions, the Duke and Carolina golfers will meet Monday over the Hope Valley links here.

A great battle is in prospect since both teams defeated Washington and Lee by the same score and are undefeated in two matches this season. Duke has whipped Rollins and Washington and Lee; Carolina has beaten Richmond and the Generals.

After congratulating himself he is coming out of the automobile smashup with every assurance of a complete recovery, Carr can reflect upon the fact that anything he did or could have done, after his magnificent summer of foot-racing in California in 1932, would be in the nature of anti-climax.

No sweeter trio of performances ever were turned in over a stretch of a few weeks than Carr furnished in taking the measure of Stanford's great Ben Eastman three times running at Berkeley, Palo Alto and the Olympic Stadium, all in world record time.

Eastman won't have his chance for "revenge" over Carr, but that may be just as well for the blond, lanky California boy, Carr won't be able to prove his worth at the 100 and 200 yard distances, as Robertson had planned, but that seems relatively unimportant, too.

Certainly the chances were slim that Carr would have added any dash records to his 400 meter and 400 yard achievements.

If it's any satisfaction, then, to that rim little fellow who thrilled the athletic world not once but twice in a single season, we'll count him "in" on a full share of the foot-racing honors for all time and wish him luck in the longer race where they don't sit up in the stands and howl encouragement.

From 400 meters on up to any distance you care to chose, we will take Bill Carr, Douglas Lowe and Paavo Nurmi and let any other combination try to match their performances.

For speed, rhythm and class, they top our list for all time.

Even the old timers, those who can recall quite clearly runners like Lon Myers, Maxey Long, Alf Shrubbs and Hannes Kolehmainen, will not agree with me in recognizing that it wasn't alone the time standards Carr, Lowe and Nurmi established, but also the manner and margins by which they turned in their greatest triumphs.

All three produced their best when the going was toughest and the spotlight at its brightest. Nurmi in 1924 at Paris and 1925 in New York, Lowe in 1928 at Amsterdam and Stamford Bridge, Carr at Palo Alto and Los Angeles in 1932.

NEW RULE IN FORCE IN RURAL POLICE STATION

"That means," he said, "no cussin' too."

Who forced the new rule was a master of conjecture—the night crew, blamed it on the day crew and the day crew said the night side was responsible.

realizes, probably above all others, that he is starting on a momentous adventure, along that stony trail of experimentation described by the President himself as "an untrodden path."

Whether he reaches his goal is another story. The impressive thing just now, for what it may be worth, is the extraordinary atmosphere of trust and respect in which he sets forth.

Poultry and Swine Shipments

The Pitt County Mutual Exchange is moving its third carload of poultry this week, shipments being made from Ayden, Greenville and Bethel.

They are also shipping two carloads of hogs this week and other cars will move next week.

The poultry is being placed on the New York market, and the hogs will be disposed of on the Richmond market. Due to price declines, shipments will be smaller than the past year.

Farmers generally, however, are not disposing of their breeding stock due to the fact that they are hopeful that the market will improve during the coming seasons to the point where their herds and flocks will be profitable again.

South Paws are short at N. C. State

Sometimes Coach Doak goes on the mound himself during practice games, but even he is right handed. So the Coach is out looking for any sort of student who can throw a ball with his left hand.

POLITICS

BY BYRON PRICE

(Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Whatever else it may mean, the readiness of so many members of Congress to vest sweeping farm powers in Secretary Henry A. Wallace represents one of the most remarkable personal tributes ever paid a newcomer in public life.

Six months ago the name of this intensely earnest young man from Iowa was almost unknown in Washington. He had been heard of as a farm editor, of a well-known family, who had left the Republican fold to help elect Roosevelt.

Now he is nominated as final arbiter of agricultural fortune in a vast scheme of control proposed to give the Federal Government a power hardly dreamed of before. A good many of those in Congress who voted for this arrangement still are rubbing their eyes about it.

As many said on the floor, and many more privately, they fell into line largely because they had faith in Wallace.

Those who had seen him were impressed with his serious, almost evangelical devotion to a new deal and a square deal for the farmer. Those who had not seen him had been hearing much lately about his part performances, and liked what they heard.

The Vital Sentence

The number of Senators and Representatives who really understood the technical language of the farm bill probably was very small; but they all did understand one sentence of it, and after they had read that they understood also that the rest of the involved phraseology probably wasn't very important. For that sentence said:

"The Secretary of Agriculture shall have power to provide for reduction in the acreage or reduction in production for market, or both, of any basic agricultural commodity, through agreements with producers, or otherwise."

Personal Tribute

Of course the peculiarities of the times cannot be overlooked in assessing the reasons why the bill rolled up, for instance, that tremendous majority in the House.

The feeling of crisis in the air and the urge of discipline doubtless brought in many votes. Yet when all is said and done, and every discount made, the thing simply could not have happened except for the existence of a very high non-partisan regard for the purposes, the zeal and the judgment of Wallace.

As one House member expressed it privately afterward:

"I don't know what this bill means, except that we are putting agriculture in the hands of one man. I do know that that principle is right and that there are no better hands for the task than those of the present head of the Department of Agriculture."

The Test's Ahead

The Secretary's real test still is ahead of him. He must undertake to do by regulation what successive Congresses and Presidents have failed to do by law.

His daily associates know that he

Evidence that a fight would be made to have the Senate recess its action taken in committee of the whole on the school bill was seen when Senator Patton asked reconsideration of the vote today. He was told his motion was out of order but that he could present it when the bill was on its readings in regular session.

By unanimous consent the Francis bill to allow sale of beer after May 15 and to levy a tax on the beverage was to be taken up after passage of the appropriation bill.

The Senate shoved aside the money bill to join the House in enacting into law the biennial revenue machinery act under the compromise affected ad valorem taxes of foreign stocks was omitted at present and county commissioners were given unlimited power to reduce the valuation of property for taxation.

Farm Bill Near Completion

Washington, March 30.—(AP)—Opponents of the administration farm bill today privately conceded the measure probably would be passed in the Senate about as it was approved by the House.

Peanuts and flax were added to the commodities to be aided by the measure by the Senate agriculture committee as members continued consideration of the broad Roosevelt agricultural aid bill and proposed substitutes.

After voting in flax and peanuts the committee cut out of the bill a section giving Secretary Wallace authority to consider in determining the proposed processing tax what effect it would have on unemployment, wage scale and consumption of the product.

This section was eliminated by an 8 to 6 vote.

The committee changed its action of yesterday in making the base price of tobacco as it was from Sept. 1919 to August, 1928.

Smith said the committee would vote on his proposal to substitute curtailing powers sought by the administration for Secretary Wallace and that it would decide then also the fate of the so-called Simpson amendment.

Greensboro, N. C., March 30.—(AP)—Cyrus P. Frazier, 80, retired educator, manufacturer and prominent in North Carolina business circles, died at his home here today after a long illness.

Frazier, the father of Clifford Frazier, Republican candidate for governor last year, taught at several colleges in the State for many years.

Seek Probe in High Finance

Washington, D. C., March 30.—(AP)—Investigation of the House of Morgan, titan of American finance, was sought by the Senate Banking Committee, which also succeeded in getting jurisdiction over the Roosevelt bill for Federal regulation for issuance of stocks and bonds.

The decision in regards to J. D. Morgan and Company was made known in announcement that the committee would seek increased power for the Senate in continuing its long stock market probe.

The committee decided to leave affairs of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company in the hands of the Justice and Treasury Departments now desiring a probe to delay prosecution of former Chairman Joseph Harriman.

Senate Passes Unemployment Bill

Washington, D. C., March 30.—(AP)—The Senate today accepted the House amendment to the forestry unemployment bill and sent it to the White House.

Final Congressional approval was given when the Senate adopted the House amendment without a record vote.

The action was taken in the midst of Senate debate on the second measure in the relief program a ballot to create $5,000,000 fund for relief grants to the State.
