U.S. AKRON CRASHES AT SEA DURING STORM

All But Few Of Crew Of Seventy-Seven Men Perish As Lightning Hits Craft

NAVAL CHIEF AMONG THOSE NOW MISSING

Admiral Moffett, Chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, Who Perished With Ill-Fated Ship The Largest in The World; One of Survivors Dies After Being Rescued; Lieutenant-Commander H. V. Wiley Executive Officer, Rescued; Greensboro Man Among Those Who Perished

New York, April 4.—(AP)—The three survivors of the Akron disaster arrived at the Navy yards this afternoon, one having to be removed to the hospital on a stretcher. The others walked ashore from the coast guard destroyer Tucker.

Washington, D. C. April 4.—(AP)—Commander Herbert Wiley, only officer known to have survived the Akron crash, reported today that a few minutes after midnight the ship shifted violently, descended and was demolished on impact in the water off the New Jersey shore.

"In a lightning flash I saw many men swimming," his cryptic report said.

New York, April 4.—(AP)—The U. S. Akron, the largest airship in the world, crashed in flames at sea early today with 77 men aboard.

Ten hours after only four of those men had been found and one of them died later, making this apparently by far the greatest tragedy in the whole history of lighter-than-air flight history which has been dotted within many major tragedies.

The Akron was caught in a violent electrical storm after midnight last night, 25 miles off the sand dunes of the New Jersey coast in the region of Barnegat.

The coast guard station at Asbury Park reported receiving S.O.S. signals from the giant aircraft, but the air was filled with static and they were not heard elsewhere.

The German tanker Phocbus saw flames in the dark. It was supposed the ship was hit by lightning and set afire. Among the missing was Admiral Moffett, chief of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics.

The coast guard destroyer Tucker, after abandoning hope of finding further survivors, started back to the Brooklyn Navy Yard with the body of the dead man and the survivors. A wireless was sent ahead to have an ambulance ready for the injured.

The tragedy occurred in the worst of flying weather. Besides the peril of the electrical disturbance, visibility was poor and the flying ceiling close to the sea level.

Dirigible Crashes While in Search of Akron Victims

Beach Haven, N. J., April 4.—(AP)—The naval non-rigid dirigible J-3 of naval air station at Lakhurst crashed into the sea about 1,000 yards off shore.

Two members of the crew believed to have been still alive were taken from the water by rescue workers in surf boats and waiting ambulances were sent to the hospital at Lakewood.

Commander Simon R. Sails, commandant of the fifth coastal guard at Asbury Park, said 11 men were on board. He said he had received word of the crash of the ship. It was 400 yards off shore and opposite the coast guard station.

Three seaplanes were standing by at once to deflate the bag, he said. To the 500 or more persons on the beach watching the search for the Akron wreckage, it seemed impossible that the members of the crew could have survived the crash.

Hundreds of persons had been watching the maneuvers of ships for two hours. Spectators said the high east winds became stronger as the ship crashed into the ocean with a terrific impact.

The gondola sank into the waves with the wreckage of the non-rigid bag close in upon it. Surf boats put out and two men were hauled from the water. Other bodies were not seen immediately.

Funeral Services Conducted From Home Here This Afternoon At 3:30

Jacob Wilson, 53, died at his home on East Twelfth Street yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Death followed illness of three weeks from a complication of diseases.

Funeral services were conducted from his late home this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock by his pastor, Rev. W. A. Ryan of the Eighth Street Christian Church. Burial was made in the family burying ground on Mrs. Willoughby's place near Arthur.

Mr. Wilson had made his home in Greenville since 1911, coming here from the Bell Arthur community where he was born and reared.

He is survived by his wife and one son, Kelly; three sisters, Mrs. Lizzie Willoughby and Mrs. Jennie Lettgett, of Greenville Township, and Mrs. H. B. Forbes, Morehead City; three brothers, George and Isaac Wilson, Greenville Township, and Willie Wilson, of Fountain. Surviving also are two half-brothers Jim Wilson, of Greenville, and Latham Wilson, of Ayden.

IN NORFOLK UP GOES ICE BACK TO SUMMER PRICE

Norfolk, Va., April 4.—(AP)—Ice, retailing during the past winter months at 30 cents a hundred pounds, bounced back to its summer level of 50 cents Saturday.

The increase in retail prices, it is stated, is accompanied by a corresponding boost of wholesale prices from $1 to $5 a ton.

Dealers emphasized that the advance is merely a return to normal price levels. The low price during the winter, it was explained, was merely for the purpose of stimulating trade during a season when ice consumption ordinarily drops off very sharply.

It was absolutely impossible for wholesalers or retailers to do more than break bare even under the reduced prices," one prominent distributor explained.

WILL LOWER TAX VALUES FIRST OF MAY

Board Orders Horizontal Cut of 33 1-3 Percent in Session Yesterday

Beginning May 1 people of Pitt County will begin to get relief from property taxes.

The Board of County Commissioners meeting in regular monthly session here yesterday ordered a horizontal reduction of 33 1-3 per cent on all property of the county, and this will actually begin when lists start their work the first of next month.

The commissioners over a month ago ordered Auditor John Coward to prepare for revaluation but they had to wait for the legislature to act before finally ordering it. The legislature passed on the matter several days ago and the commissioners acted as rapidly thereafter as possible.

The flat reduction of values will affect every property owner in the county, and adjustments of excessive values will be made wherever necessary, it was said.

The horizontal cut will save the county a considerable sum of money it was stated, compared with the straight-revaluation plan and will be completed much quicker.

Revaluation has been a bone of contention in every county in the state since the day of inflated values, and the decision of the board to grant a flat cut was greeted with more or less interest throughout the community.

The board also accepted the report of B. E. Perkinson and Company, auditors, who completed the audit of county books sometime ago.

Coroner V. C. Martin said no inquest into Langley's death was necessary as there were a number of eye-witnesses to the shooting.

Luther Langley told officers he did not know the shotgun he pointed at his brother was loaded.

Boycott Will End In Berlin On Wednesday

Berlin, April 4.—(AP)—The Jewish section in the east section of the city inhabited by poorer classes was raided by large police forces today assisted by Nazi auxiliaries.

The streets were closed and pedestrians were halted while houses were searched for weapons. Worshippers leaving synagogues were searched, and all not carrying double identification cards were arrested. The government announced that the anti-Semitic boycott would not be resumed Wednesday. The Nazi party which called the boycott last Saturday reserved the right to reinstate the boycott in event the atrocity campaign is resumed abroad.

CHURCH BODY HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING HERE

Between Two And Three Hundred Women Attend Presbyterian Meet

Between two and three hundred delegates were here today attending the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Althermarie Presbyterian Auxiliary which was being held at the Presbyterian Church at the corner of Pitt and Fifth streets.

The meeting opened this morning and will be featured tonight by a pageant "The Path of Peace," and an address by Rev. A. P. Hassell, missionary to Japan. The closing session will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Mrs. H. L. Hicks, the retiring president, presided over the opening session, which was marked by greetings from the pastor of the local church, Rev. W. S. Harden, the address of welcome on part of the local auxiliary by Mrs. S. M. Crisp, and the response for the auxiliaries by Mrs. A. J. Crane of Tarboro.

Mrs. Harden was happy in his greetings to the visitors, assuring them Greenville was always glad to open her gates to such a fine gathering of leaders of religious thought of the eastern part of the state.

Mrs. Crisp declared the local auxiliary was glad to have the opportunity to play host to the auxiliaries representing 32 churches of Eastern Carolina, and Mrs. Crane expressed the pleasure of the visitors in the fine reception accorded them.

The morning session was confined largely to discussion of business and at 1 o'clock the visitors were guests of the women of the Greenville church at the Woman's Club.

A communion service was conducted by Rev. W. S. Harden, assisted by elders of the church at 2:50 and the remainder of the afternoon was given over to business.

The pageant tonight will be a very colorful affair under direction of Miss Ruth Hillhouse, director of young people's religious education of the local church, assisted by college girls and members of the congregation.

The address by the missionary to Japan was being looked forward to with considerable interest in view of the troubled situation existing between Japan and China, and he was expected to throw much light on the progress of religious effort.

SELECT JURY FOR TRIAL IN FLORIDA

Jacksonville, Fla., April 4.—(AP)—Selection of a jury to try Mrs. C. F. Frazier for the murder of her husband's secretary, Miss Manona Murrell, was completed in Federal Court here late yesterday.

The box was filled with twelve men. Two alternate jurors were chosen.

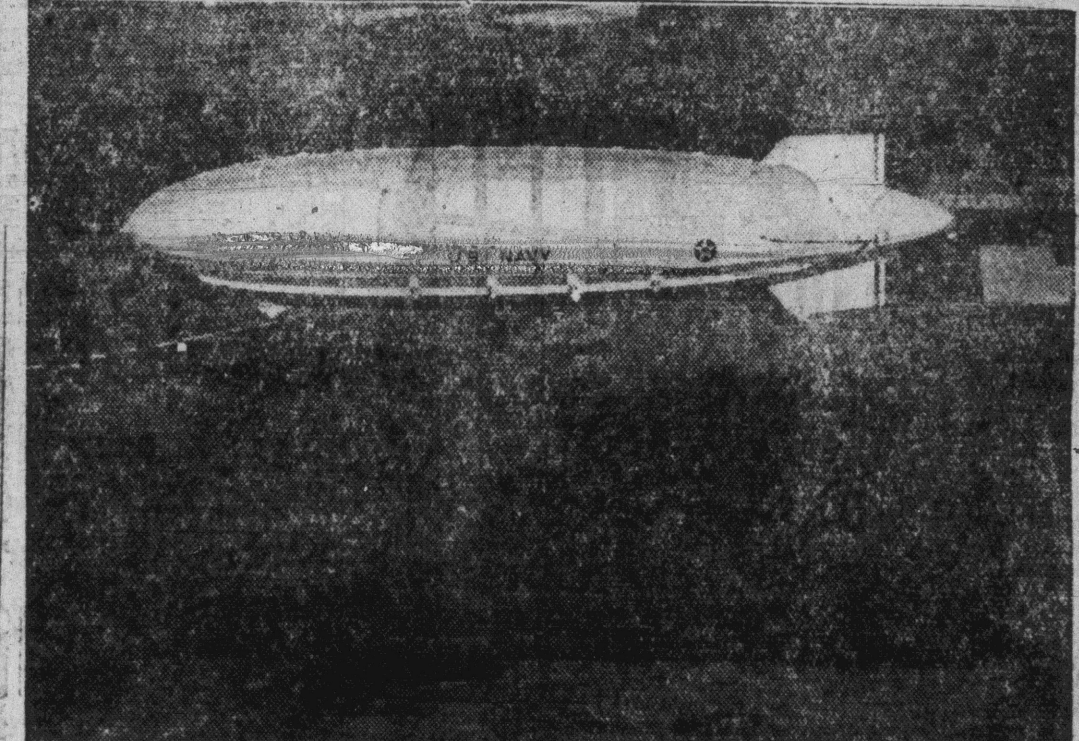

Taking of testimony begins today when the first of the government's approximately thirty witnesses will take the stand. The defense indicated it will call about fifteen witnesses.

Mrs. Frazier shot and killed Miss Murrell on the lawn of the Federal building last December 16 as the secretary was leaving Frazier's office after the day's work. Frazier then was district supervisor for the Federal Narcotic Service.

Mrs. Frazier accused Miss Murrell of trying to break up her home.

Demand For Investigation Of Akron Disaster Made By Members Of U. S. Congress

PROUD QUEEN OF THE AIR MEETS TRAGIC FATE

Here's a picture of the U. S. Airship Akron which was destroyed by fire off the Jersey coast early today with the loss of life of the major part of her crew of 77 men. Admiral Moffett, head of the naval aeronautic bureau was among those who perished with the ship when she was struck by lightning and then crashed in the ocean.

NAVY MOVES TO INITIATE EARLY PROBE

Pres. Roosevelt Keeps In Close Touch With Rescue Efforts; Accident Arouses Slumbering Opposition to Spending Money For Lighter Than Air Crafts; Destroyer Portland Reports no Evidence of Survivors Found; Walsh Says Thorough Probe Will be Made Without Delay

Washington, D. C., April 4.—(AP)—The proud Akron's tragic fate sent a shock through waiting Washington today from President Roosevelt down to the man on the street, and expressions of sorrow were accompanied by demands for an investigation.

From the silence in the naval communications office, officers were grimly hoping to find alive more of the comrades than the few picked up this morning. But as the day drew on their hope was diminished.

Aides of the President decided not to disturb him as first reports of the disaster came in. Once the circumstances became plain, however, there was a stir at the White House akin to that of the Navy to make sure of a prompt report on the situation for the President.

From Capitol Hill Senators and Representatives poured inquiries into newspaper offices as to what had happened and the prospects.

Demands for an investigation were made even as the Navy itself moved to initiate one. The accident also aroused slumbering opposition to expenditure of money for lighter-than-air vessels.

The cruiser Portland in the area of the wrecked craft sent word to the Navy Department at 9 o'clock that the Akron caught fire after it fell. It said no survivors and no bodies were found by the coast guard planes, and several vessels engaged in the search.

The report said the Akron was in a severe electrical storm before he went down, but that Commander Wiley, the sea officer to escape, gave no reason for the crash.

The message from the Portland said two coast guard planes and a cruiser had covered the most probable areas en route to the present position, apparently referring to the area where survivors might be seen and bodies might be picked up.

As the demand arose on Capitol Hill for an investigation, Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, Democratic head of the Naval Committee, asserted that "prompt and thorough probe would be undertaken without delay."

MICH. WETS GAIN SUPPORT

Majority of Votes Expected to be Cast For Repeal at Convention

Detroit, Mich., April 4.—(AP)—At least 86 or the 100 votes in the special State convention next Monday will be for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

This became evident today as additional returns from Monday's referendum showed the tremendous strength of the anti-prohibition forces.

ROUTES HEAR THREE TALKS

"What Stands in The Way?" is Subject of Weekly Meeting of Clubmen Here

What stands in the way? That was the question which occupied the attention of R.R. clubmen last night as they heard talks dealing with national and international problems. Rev. A. W. Weissmann, president and Johnnie Overton led the singing.

The speakers were Howard McGinnis, chairman of the International Service committee, Johnnie Overton and Dr. W. L. Best.

Overton discussed the question from the international aspect and gave some of the reasons that stand in the way to international security and happiness.

Mr. Best confined his attention to the discussion of "Times Material," and talked about diamonds exclusively. He told of the first diamond mines and then traced their development until they reached the jewelry store and later adorn the hands of young women as they take the leap into the field of matrimony.

Speaking of what stands in the way of prosperity, personal contentment and national security, Mr. McGinnis admitted he didn't know and didn't have any panacea to offer, but he presented a few suggestions which indicated he had delved rather deeply into his subject. They follow:

Low prices on agricultural products. Short sales of manufactured products. Losses in the stock market by the

Late News Flashes

Today In The Legislature.

Raleigh, April 4.—(AP)—Beer will be sold in North Carolina after May first for the first time since 1908.

The legislature today added its final approval to the Francis measure to legalize wine and beer of 3.2 alcohol after the first of next month. The House approval for the proposal on its last reading came on a 75 to 27 vote and a few minutes later the Senate concurred in a minor House change and the mere formality of ratification kept the measure from becoming law.

North Carolina voted to outlaw the sale of alcoholic beverages in the state in 1908 but shipment into the state could be obtained until adoption of the 18th amendment.

With beer out of the way after holding the center of interest in the legislature for ten days, the House turned to consideration of a bill to rewrite the state constitution by amendment and the Senate passed a number of minor bills.

FARM RELIEF BILL PUSHED

Administration's Price Lifting Program Gains Greater Support

Washington D. C., April 4.—(AP)—A rough but certain path through the Senate was forecast today for the administration's price lifting mortgage relief program.

Hopeful of having the combined measure ready for the Senate in a few hours, the Agriculture Committee was called together this morning to pass finally on the debt refinancing proposal.

Approval of the plan to give Secretary Wallace wide latitude in employing the price raising machinery was voted yesterday by the committee after writing in an optional reduction cost guaranty proposal.

Almost immediately the committee went to work on the emergency legislation to be sent to Capitol Hill to President Roosevelt this afternoon.

The idea is to combine the measures and speed them through the Senate and back to the House which already has given endorsement to the farm relief bill. Leaders predicted final action by next week.

LOAN CHECKS REACH COUNTY

Six Hundred Farmers Receive Loans in Pitt During The Last Several Days

Washington D. C., April 4.—(AP)—Six hundred checks for farmers who took advantage of the Federal agricultural loans have been received in this county up to the present time it was revealed today by H. E. Lane, government seed inspector, who has been assisting the farm department in the filing of applications and delivery of loan checks.

The average of the six hundred checks, Mr. Lane said, probably is around $150, an amount expected to decrease as the remainder of checks are received.

Over 1,800 applications for loans have been made by the growers of this great agricultural county since the filing period opened over six weeks ago, and farmers continued to gather in the farm offices at the courthouse to fill out blanks. It was expected the total applications filed here would reach the 2,000 mark when the filing periods ends the latter part of the month.

Farmers desiring to obtain this form of aid will find plenty of assistance in the filing of applications at the farm office. While the force was decreased somewhat following the rush of the first two weeks, the department, Mr. Lane said, is capable of handling around twenty applications daily at this time. At the height of the filing period sixty applications were handled each day.

As high as five hundred people appeared at the office one day of the first week of the filing period, and it was no ordinary sight to see two to three hundred awaiting their turn at filing tables.

Individual growers are able to obtain as much as $300 each while $1,200 is allotted to the farm. Each borrower is requested to make a 30 per cent reduction in his money crops and the government is lived up to that requirement is lived up to.

COMMISSIONERS ACTED WISELY

The Board of County Commissioners yesterday no doubt followed the wisest course by ordering a horizontal cut of 33 1-3 per cent in present tax values together with a provision for the equalizing of values up or down on individual pieces of property to conform with values of similar surrounding properties. While the Constitution provides that property shall be placed upon the tax books at its true value in money, the opinion of the board was that during such an abnormal period as at present the finding of the true value in money of each and every parcel of real property in the county was not only a paramount task but almost an impossible one in view of the fact that there is no market whatever for same and no just basis upon which to place the values. It was the opinion of the majority of the board that the 33 1-3 per cent cut with the regular provision for equalization would more nearly bring the property to its true normal value and at the same time would leave with the commissioners their power to revalue or reduce again next year in case conditions warranted while a revaluation at this time, no matter what conditions were next year and the years to follow, would have to stand for four years without change except to equalize one individual with another. In view of this opinion together with the savings that the county will realize at this time by the horizontal cut instead of the tremendous cost of revaluation, we repeat that the decision of the board was a wise one.

We have always contended that the tax books should represent true values and we do not feel that we are stepping aside from our beliefs in approving the action taken by the board yesterday, for a valuation today would no doubt be just as far out of line before another opportunity to revalue four years from now as were the valuations based upon 1919 prices and we reiterate the board took wise action in trying to more nearly reach a normal value by the horizontal cut and retaining to itself the privilege of a revaluation next year or the year following if conditions were more nearly normal and justified.

The White Cockatoo by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: A vague premonition warns James Sundean not to stay in— but he is too hungry to leave! A white cockatoo watches him sign the register; the proprietor, slightly greasy and a little unpleasant, turns out to be a naturalized American of uncertain lineage. Sundean is shown a big gloomy room, in a distant wing of the hotel. He is left with only the north wind, that curse of Southern France, for company.

Chapter 2

MYSTERIOUS PROMISE

Perhaps half an hour later I started to retrace my steps through those confusing corridors to find the dining-room. As I stepped outside my room and placed the door behind me I paused a moment.

Directly opposite me and across the shadowy court I could see the lights of the lobby; from its glass-paned door and its window bold rectangles of light spread themselves white upon the paving of the court. The wind was steadily rising, murmuring and sighing and creaking windows and shutters, and it waved the dense vines and shrubs in the corners of the court so that they made black blue shadows which fled anxiously across the white blocks of light.

The courtyard itself was faintly lighter than the shadows, owing to brooches, and she looked, in spite of being rather angular in line, a little stuffed as to clothing, as if she had a great many layers of other clothing underneath the black silk.

She was reading the Daily Mail with a lorgnette and considerably disapproval. I surmised she was English, but I was wrong, for she turned out to be Mrs. Felicia Byng from Omaha, Nebraska, and I might say here that I never did know exactly why she was touring the country or why she had taken it into her head to stop in Armeine. In many respects she remained to the last a woman of mystery.

Across the room sat a priest, youngish, with a dark brown sweater pulled over his black, tightly buttoned soutane. His claim to distinction appeared to lie in a rather ghastly red beard. His hair was cut like a brush and was of no particular color; thus the sight of his fiery beard was in the nature of a shock. He was partaking of soup through the beard with unpleasant determination, and I shifted my gaze hurriedly back to the wine list in my hand.

But after a moment, simply because there were so few people in the room, my eyes drifted idly to the only other occupied table, where a woman was seated whose back was turned towards me.

Drifted idly but pained with interest, for it was, I saw at once, a very beautiful back. She was wear-the light from the lobby and dining-room windows, as well as to a rather dim and wavering light which was hung above the arched entrance and which as the wind swayed, it waked more fleeting blue shadows into life.

Immediately at my left as I stood facing the lobby was another glassed door, and, idly curious, I moved toward it, glanced through the glass, laid my hand on the latch, and stepped through the door onto a sort of landing which led to a narrow, winding flight of ten steps which descended to the courtyard below.

I don't know why the steps aroused my interest; perhaps I only wanted a breath of fresh air after the chill mustiness of my room. At any rate, I descended a few steps and paused again to view the shadow-ridden court.

Just below me someone was talking. In the lull of the wind I could hear the voices quite distinctly, although I could see neither of the speakers. Lovschiem, probably, rattling a servant, for the lobby was empty, and it sounded like Lovschiem's voice telling someone in crisp English that he'd be damned if he'd let it happen again. The other voice replied it wouldn't happen again.

"Are you sure?" said the voice I took to be Lovschiem's.

"I'm sure. It's certain. I know exactly where it is."

"Good, then, I leave it to you," Lovschiem paused, and this man of hybrid nationality, uttered the one Spanish word I knew which was "Manana."

"Manana," said the other, and Lovschiem, a dark shadowy bulk, stepped out from the shadows and shrubbery directly below the stairway and walked across the flickering black and blue and white of the court and into the lobby, where he stood at the desk, stroking his white cockatoo. The other speaker had vanished.

Since then I have recalled with some interest that it was a faint distaste of Lovschiem which sent me up the steps again, and through the long winding corridors along which the porter had led me. If I had descended the remaining steps and followed Lovschiem directly across the court and into a lobby, things might have had a very different ending.

The lounge was still empty, and the bar had not even a light, but in the dining-room adjoining the lounge I caught a glimpse of the bright-eyed little porter apparently doubling as a waiter, for he was hurrying across the room with a steaming tureen of soup in one hand and a napkin properly across his arm.

He looked harassed but after disposing of the soup, trotted to meet and seat me with an air of alacrity. He brought me the wine list, showed me a written menu which offered no choice, and hurried away.

There were only three people dining.

Directly across from me sat a woman with a kind of war-horse look about her nose and terrifying wide, black eyebrows; she was dressed in black, silky-looking stuff with quantities of beads and bracelets and cident which, I think, no one saw but myself.

What is it that Sundean sees, tomorrow?

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, D. C.—If the events of recent weeks have imposed a strain on President Roosevelt and his associates in the administration, there's no indication of it.

Mr. Roosevelt still finds time to exchange quips with those who visit him at the White House. His free and easy manner of conducting his bi-weekly conferences with the press are as zestful as ever.

He complains genially about the many documents he must sign. He laughs heartily at his own and others' witticisms. And at all times he gives the impression that he is, thoroughly enjoying himself.

And over the Treasury Secretary Woodin retains his good humor. He still shows a fondness for sitting on his desk while he talks at his daily press conferences. And the ejaculations of "Gee!" and the like continue to punctuate his conversation.

Hopeful Trooping In

But it's down at the Post Office Department, perhaps, where you find the most striking examples of this sort of thing. The office of "Big Jim" Farley is probably at present one of the most interesting spots in the capital.

It is literally over-run with "deserving" Democrats looking for jobs. They crowd in and out in a continuous line all day. They are of all descriptions. Senators and Representatives rub elbows with ward bosses, State leaders and just plain hopefuls.

"Big Jim" sees 'em all, or at least most of them. Veteran attaches of the Post Office Department, who for years have watched patronage-seekers file in and out of the Postmaster General's office, are authority for the statement that they've never seen anything like that which prevails at the present.

Some arrive disgruntled, but usually Farley sends them away with a smile, if without a job.

Quick Clean-Up

"He can clean out an office more quickly than any man I ever saw," one of his assistants remarked recently.

And it seems that way. The secret, of course, is that "Big Jim" sees them en masse. There'll be a crowd waiting to see him when suddenly he will appear in their midst. Quickly, but courteously he'll start down the line disposing of each in succession.

It's all informal, but highly effective. "Big Jim" leaves them all feeling just a little bit better than they did when they came in.

KEPT FRESH IN THE WELDED HUMIDOR PACK. CAMEL TOBACCO. NO TRICKS... JUST COSTLIER TOBACCO. IN A MATCHLESS BLEND

It's fun to be fooled... it's more fun to KNOW. A clever trick employed in cigarette advertising is the illusion that manufacturing processes account for mildness in a cigarette. EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes are made in much the same way. Cigarettes vary greatly in mildness because they vary greatly in the quality of tobaccos used. Mildness, as well as character and good taste, depends upon the quality of tobaccos used. It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand. This is the most important statement ever made in a cigarette advertisement. Weigh its words. Consider what it means. Smoke Camels critically and learn to appreciate what costlier tobaccos can mean to you in mildness, in throat-ease... in added pleasure! Other cigarettes, we believe, will taste flat and insipid to you forever after. CAMELS

The club house back of Third street school was the scene of a beautiful tea on Saturday afternoon when Mrs. J. L. Savage, Miss Ruth Faison and Mrs. A. B. Corey entertained a large number of friends.

An attractive color scheme of yellow and green was used throughout.

The rooms of the club were artistically decorated with yellow jessamine and fern, which added greatly to their rustic loveliness. Bowls of yellow snapdragon and burning green tapers in silver holders were used at intervals throughout.

There were two attractively appointed tables covered with imported lace covers, from which was served tea, nuts, cheese biscuit, ice cream and cake.

Choir Festival In Raleigh.

With nearly 40 choirs from all parts of the state participating, the choir festival in Raleigh on Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, in the Memorial Auditorium, will be the high spot of the 17th annual convention of the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs there this week.

Among the choirs of the state taking part will be the Guilford College choir. Max Noah, director of music at Guilford College, will direct the chorus of several hundred voices.

Greenville people are particularly interested in the Guilford College choir, due to the fact that James Fleming of this city, professor of French at Guilford College, is a member of the choir.

The chor is now on its third annual northern concert tour, and sang in New York for the first time last Friday evening, appearing at Columbia University, under the auspices of the music and the religious education departments. They also sang at Princeton University under the auspices of the Westminster Choir School. Tonight they will appear in Richmond, Va., and reach Raleigh in time for the choir festival tomorrow evening.

BOARD MEETING OF CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The official board meeting of Eighth Street Christian Church will be held this evening at eight o'clock.

Christian Science Services.

"Unreality" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ, Scientist, Sunday April 2.

The golden text was from Jeremiah 2:5: "Thus saith the Lord, what iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity; and are become vain?"

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "For yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be." (Ps. 37:10).

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Evil is a negation, because it is the absence of truth. It is nothing, because it is the absence of something. It is unreal, because it presupposes the absence of God, the omnipotent and omnipresent. Every mortal must learn that there is neither power nor reality in evil."—Christian Science Committee on Publication.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood, Calif.—The girl whom the great Anna Pavlova herself trained to carry on her art is in Hollywood now, convinced that she can do better in the movies and on the dramatic stage than as a dancer.

Marjorie March was little more than a child, winner of a movie contest with an English studio, when Pavlova saw her, bought her contract from the film company, and at once began a strenuous three-year course of personal training which was to be climaxed with her debut, a triumph, in the Vienna opera-

Hints on Contract Bridge Up-to-Date

By Tom O'Neill

The elimination and end play is often necessary for success with close contracts and is part of the every-day equipment of the bridge master.

One Must Eat

There are many people still interested in the art of Pavlova," she says, "but still not enough—and one has to live, and eat."

"I am not giving up dancing. I plan to return to it every six months or so, if for no other reason than to honor my teacher's memory."

"If I fail as an actress—I'm confident, I won't, otherwise I wouldn't go in for it—I can always dance. But no! I don't like to think of dancing as something to fall back on—it's much dearer than that!"

Soon after Pavlova's death, Marjorie had her initiation into what the world wants of a dancer. Engaged by Cochrane, the English revue producer, for a show, she was horrified to learn that her number was extremely "hot-cha"—in fact, the variety drag from "Good News!"

"I wouldn't consider it at first," she says, "but then I decided, if that's what they want, I'll give it to them! I did it, and I actually cried while dancing it the first night."

As a classic dancer, Miss March gave command performances in England and Vienna, to establish a fund for a Pavlova memorial.

Marjorie relates incident after incident showing Pavlova's creative genius: how Pavlova stared at any form of graceful movement—to the point of rudeness—than went home and devised rhythms to express it.

The plodding of a snail, the upward curl of smoke from a cigarette the flirtatious gestures of a Parisian coquette, the lapping of ocean waves up the shore—Marjorie danced all these under Pavlova's direction.

Nicknamed! that's what happened

THE contest for a name and slogans for Conoco's new gasoline is over. The winning name and slogans have been selected and awards made to the contestants listed here.

More than half a million good friends tried sincerely to help us, and we are grateful to all of them for the names and slogans sent us, each of which had a careful reading and consideration.

Even though we have selected and paid for a splendid name, we find we cannot use it or any of the many hundreds of good names submitted.

Here is what happened:

Personality always wins a "nickname." We never thought of that in our anxiety to get a good name for an outstanding gasoline. Bronze was used as a color to make this new gasoline distinctive and to protect our customers. It was liked by everybody—they, you, everybody called it Conoco Bronze. So, try as we might, we couldn't change now. It will always be known as Conoco Bronze. It had too much personality to avoid this popularity rating—"nicknamed!"

Therefore, conforming with contest rules, we are using a name of our own creation, the name used in all the contest advertisements—"Conoco Bronze"—even though it is not the name for which we paid $5,000.

Each user of Conoco Bronze gets a perpetual prize of instant starting, lightning pick-up, greater mileage and power—for it is a great gasoline.

TAR HEEL NET STARS TO OPEN WITH DEACONS

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 4.—The Carolina tennis team, which has beaten all opposition in sight for the past two years, will open the 1933 season with a match at Wake Forest Wednesday afternoon.

John Vernon is the Wake Forest captain and is understood to be leading a Deacon team which is stronger than usual and which may be expected to give the Tar Heels a good run for their money.

Wilmer Hines, who is a former National Junior champion, will play the number one position for Carolina, with Lenoir Wright occupying the number two berth.

The rest of the line-up is not settled, but the men will be picked from Ricker, Willis, Harvey Harris, John Dillard, Dave Morgan, Harley Shuford and Walter Levitan. Hines and Wright are seniors; Dillard, Morgan and Shuford, Juniors, and Willis, Harris and Levitan sophomores.

The Carolina trackmen, who are drilling for their opening practice, meet with Georgetown here Saturday, made several good marks for early season at their last time trials.

The best perhaps was Ed. McRae's time of three minutes, fifteen seconds, for the three-quarter mile.

Ode's Children, who won the 100 in 10.1 and the 200 in 22.2, stamped himself as another comer.

Tom Hawthorne won the low hurdles and tied Woody Glen in the high, both in fair times.

Dennis Fox led the quarter-milers in a 34 second 330-yard race, and Louis Sullivan paced the two milers in a 7 minute 19.9 seconds mile and a half.

Other best marks were Jay Marsden, 1 minute 27.2 for the 660-yard run; Red Hamlet, 5 feet 9 for the high jump; Charlie Hubbard, 21 feet 4 3/4 for the broad jump; and Oscar Mills, 43 feet 4 1/2 for the shot and 126 feet 10 for the discus.

Several other good prospects were held out due to sprains and other minor injuries, including the veteran, Crook Stafford; the reserves, Alexander, Curice and Turple, and the sophomore hopes, Williamson, Abernethy and Gunter.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

This being about the time of year when the bunkered clan begins rummaging around in the lockers, looking over the old war clubs and wondering whether it wouldn't be a good idea, after all, to make things easier with a six or eight-inch cup on the greens, it behooves us to report among other matters, the following:

(1) That Bob Jones still has not the slightest idea of returning to competition, but that the city of Cincinnati, nevertheless, will give him a bigger welcome, as a special guest, than any of the competitors in the national amateur golf championship there in September.

(2) That current conditions likely will preclude another invasion of the United States by the popular, sharp-shooting title star of the Argentine, Jose Jurado, a two-day sensation in his first try at our National Open championship last June.

(3) That Johnny Goodman, the Omaha kid, is gunning early for the national honors he barely missed at Five Farms last season but that Texans doubt if any amateur in the country, Goodman included, will succeed in stopping their favorite son.

He'll Bear Watching One of my most trusted scouts may be a trifle prejudiced, due to proximity, but he reports, anyway, as follows:

"Gus Moreland, who has just won the annual Houston invitation golf tournament for the third straight year, is really a golfing wonder, doubly so because he has a halting, or slowing down spot about three-fourths of the way back on his swing and he hits off two bent knees."

Moreland will bear a lot of your personal attention when you see him at the big tournaments this year—provided he does not burn himself out before he gets to them, as he did last year. He is perfectly deadly with every club in his bag."

Force Some "Chiseling" This new idea of a handicap tournament, for high and low alike on a national basis, seems to have aroused fears in some quarters that "chiseling" will mar the proceedings.

"Everyone who knows about the ordinary handicapping procedure at most golf clubs, both public and private, knows that the handicaps attained by individual members are altogether unreliable and by no means indicative of the true ability of such individuals," writes a Portland (Oregon) observer.

"Under the present system of handicapping, a golfer wishing to obtain an official rating terms in cards for a certain number of rounds played, usually from three to five. Any one who desires a high handicap may play carelessly until he has registered the required number of rounds, then reap the benefit of this. It isn't sportsman-like, but it's done all over the country."

demonstrate, on behalf of her sex, that she was not jesting when she suggested a willingness to play any masculine star of the links on even terms, with the exception of Bob Jones.

This discussion of relative athletic prowess may be all very interesting now and then, but it is strictly academic. There is no more necessity of Maureen or any other feminine golf star trying conclusions with the masculine star than there was any need of demonstrating, by actual test, that Jim Bausch could score more points in the decathlon than Babe Didrikson.

At that, if the Babe could pole vault and heave the shot without breaking an arm she might run up a fairly good total of points in all-around track competition. She probably could out-run and out-hurdle Bausch.

The proper suggestion, however, comes from Helen Willis Moody in advising at girl athletes as follows: "Practice with men, they will help you, but do not challenge their supremacy, for they will beat you."

Trudy the Exception On the feminine side, I think the greatest athletic performance ever turned in was Gertrude Ederle's feat of swimming the English Channel in record time in 1926.

This called for a rare combination of speed, stamina and courage. Miss Ederle had them all. She could more than compete on even terms with the best male distance swimmers of her day. She swam the channel in 14 hours, 31 minutes, a truly astonishing performance.

In no other sport, however, has any woman competitor approached the best masculine standard. There have been days and rounds when Glenna Collett Vare or Joyce Wethered, the great British golfer, would be difficult even for a Jones to defeat. Mrs. Moody has beaten in practice one or two members of the men's first ten in American tennis.

But these are not indicators of the vast general difference in playing standards. They are merely tributes to an exceptional woman's ability.

No Place For Women By now it probably has dawned on Babe Didrikson and her sponsors that woman's place is not in professional athletics, in these or any other times.

There have been a few instances where it offered lucrative opportunities, chief among them being the barnstorming professional tennis expedition that C. C. Pyle organized a half dozen years ago, featuring Suzanne Lenglen and Mary K. Browne. It did not last, however, and Miss Browne experienced the embarrassment of being barred from amateur golf for a few years as a penalty for her professional venture.

Swimming is the only sport which has consistently offered women stars a chance to capitalize their name and ability through the commercial pools or the movies.

The entire morning was consumed in a hearing and as soon as it was completed, Judge Meekins recessed court for lunch. Beaman, former minister accused of accepting bribes from $2 to $5 in connection with the case involving alleged violation of the dry laws. He asked for removal of his trial to Wilson on grounds that his counsel could not be present there, but Judge Meekins refused to grant removal and named counsel for him.

POLITICS

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Events at Washington now have gone far enough to afford a view of the Roosevelt domestic program as a whole, and of the interesting and illuminating manner in which it is being written into law.

The program itself may be epitomized in three items: 1. A balanced budget, necessitating drastic governmental reorganization.

2. Close regulation of banking, finance and business generally, with emergency supervising of such hard-hit industries as agriculture and the railroads.

3. Increased attention to the relief situation, through public works and federal appropriations.

Stated thus, the program seems acceptable to almost everyone. Little criticism is heard in Congress of the general principles involved. It is only when details are considered that dispute arises.

The result has been that Congress while approving leading purposes sought edges away from committing itself on specific means.

This disposition to leave a few convenient bridges behind has been apparent time and again during the congressional debates.

Member after member has arisen to say he intended to vote to "stand by the President," although he would prefer that this and that provision of the banking bill or the economy bill or the farm bill were different.

The forest conservation bill was rewritten from end to end by a senate committee. The original Roosevelt proposal for a dollar a day pay in the "conservation corps" was taken out. Virtually every other provision to which any organized group objected was taken out.

In place of these contested details, the committee inserted a provision that the act should be administered by the President under such regulations as he might prescribe. Thus, by the oral admission of senators, Mr. Roosevelt was left with authority to do everything he could have done under the original language, and perhaps much besides. But the skirts of the legislators were clear.

Everyone is entitled to his own opinion in what degree this affords a measure of the courage and candor of the Congress of the United States.

Of course, there are notable exceptions. Some men in Senate and House have spoken their minds directly for or against the President, without any "ifs" or "howevers."

With the others, it may all be a matter of habit. No parliamentary phrase is more used from day to day in either branch than that time honored formula: "reserving the right to object."

As for the effect of it all, that can be epitomized in one item: The responsibility for what happens in this country during the next few years is going to belong to Mr. Roosevelt to a degree even greater than had been foreseen.

JIMMY WALKER AND ACTRESS TO MARRY

Cannes, France, April 4.—(AP)—James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, and Betty Compton, got complete information at city hall today about the regulations that must be observed by people who are married under the French law.

One of the regulations is that the banns must be announced ten days before the wedding. Mr. Walker however, probably would not be required to observe this rule as he is an honorary member of the Cannes Municipal Council. No Walker-Compton banns have been posted.

"We were just getting the necessary information," Mr. Walker said in reply to a question concerning a rumor that he and Miss Compton already had been married.

The former mayor and Miss Compton were accompanied to the marriage bureau by Alfred Sharon, Mr. Walker's lawyer.

At the bureau offices said Mr. Walker notified them several days ago that he would be married soon. He asked them to keep the date secret, they added, and so they were saying nothing about it.

CHURCHES TO CONSIDER AGREEMENT ON BELIEF

Philadelphia, Pa.—(AP)—An effort to formulate a statement of belief to which all Presbyterian and Reformed churches can agree will be made at the quadrennial meeting of the Alliance of Reformed Churches Holding the Presbyterian System, to be held in Belfast, Ireland, in June.

Leaders of these denominational families in the United States and Canada will be among the delegates. The extent of atheistic propaganda, the effect of the depression upon churches both in Europe and America, and the relations of youth and the church are among the other subjects to be considered.

Luckies Please! You want character as well as mildness in a cigarette... Luckies have both! Everywhere you go—at cosmopolitan Havana as in our own homeland—discriminating smokers prefer Luckies. Why? For one thing, because of their fine, fragrant Turkish and domestic tobaccos—carefully selected, perfectly blended. People the world over want a cigarette that has Character. Second, and all important, because these fine tobaccos are "Toasted"—that scientific process which creates true mildness. For these two reasons—character and mildness—"Luckies Please!" because "It's toasted"
