Roosevelt Moves To Break Deadlock On Disarmament Question

Matter Expected to Be Discussed on Visit of MacDonald and Herriot to Washington

Washington, D. C., April 11.—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration is seriously considering as a possible key to the European disarmament deadlock the proposal of Ramsey MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain, under which the United States and other signers of the Paris peace pact agree to consult together in an event of any violation. In the forthcoming International Economic Conference here in which the British Prime Minister and Edouard Herriot, of France, will take part, the idea is advanced generally that this will be an important subject of discussion.

If the United States should agree to this extension of her responsibility under the Paris peace pact, and if France feels that such American action is sufficient to assure French security against attack, officials believe that the French objection to the previous agreement would be generally dissolved sufficiently to permit definite accomplishment.

Three nations invited to send representatives to Washington have definitely accepted. Others are expected to fall in line soon. Canada is the third nation to accept in addition to Great Britain and France. Canada will be represented by Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett.

Paris, April 11.—(AP)—Former Premier Edouard Herriot will sail for the United States next Monday, two days earlier than had been planned, in order to be able to join Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald in his conversations on world problems with President Roosevelt.

Says State Places Too Much Emphasis On Material 'Gods'

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 11.—(AP)—A State that spends 39 cents out of every tax dollar for roads as compared with 30 cents for education has come to a pretty sorry pass, and yet that is just what is happening in North Carolina. Dr. Julian Miller, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer, asserted here yesterday in a stirring address before University students at chapel period:

"The material and physical developments of our State have been out of proportion to the development of our educational, cultural and social functions," Dr. Miller declared.

Referring to General Assembly appropriations he declared that "we have come to a pretty bad state of affairs in our thinking when we insist that we are able to spend as much on roads as we propose to spend on the development of our childhood and manhood, when we insist that the material and physical shall be preserved, even at the cost of the mutilation of our children's opportunity."

Harking back to Aristotle's chariot horses, the body and the mind, with the soul as the driver, he told the collegians that the trouble today is the lack of sufficient drivers.

"Yours is the opportunity to provide these drivers," he admonished. "As you go out from this campus you will be faced with the necessity and the opportunity of reviving our whole philosophy of life. We find ourselves in distress today because we have been depending on material gods. Aristotle has been pitched out of the window in practically all branches of knowledge."

TO DRAW BILL TO REGULATE SALE OF BEER

Task of Drafting Regulatory Act Delegated to Special Sub-Committee

Raleigh, N. C., April 11.—(AP)—Drafting of regulations for the manufacture and sale of beers and wines of 32 per cent alcoholic content in North Carolina today was delegated to a legislative sub-committee.

The House sub-group composed of Martin, of Buncombe; Murphy, of Rowan, and Hamilton, of Carteret, was named to draw a single bill regulating the sale and making of the beverages and a similar group will be named to work with them.

Representative Boyd, of Mecklenburg, suggested provision in the new bill to levy a license upon each unit of a chain store that sells beers or wines. Representative Manneberg, of Polk, expressed opposition to the Martin bill allowing county commissioners to pass on all licenses to be allowed for the sale of the beverages.

BLIND BROTHERS WIN SUCCESS AFTER FIGHT

Kinston, April 11.—J. L. and A. G. Jackson, who a day or two ago celebrated the 20th anniversary of the founding of their mattress factory here, today asserted they had been quite successful. They are brothers.

But only by optimism and perseverance had they succeeded, they said. Misfortune had stalked them before the factory was started. It pursued them relentlessly during the two decades. They were burned out more than once. Business reverses came from time to time. And they have been blind from the start. But the factory which started with one small hand machine has become a plant or proportions, and the blind brothers, groping their way around and through it, believe a beam is ahead of them.

Raleigh, April 11.—(AP)—Appropriations of $83,159,218 by the State of North Carolina for the next biennial received final legislative approval today as the House heard debate on the controversial general sales tax article of the biennial revenue bill.

The Senate talked two hours about the $83,000,000 appropriations compromise and provision of $16,000,000 annual allotment for the eight months school but followed the House in adopting the conference report. Thirty-five senators voted for the report and 10 against. Last week the measure was voted on the supply bill 51 to 40. Though the final measure is $4,000,000 above the house bill and $1,000,000 below the Senate allotment it is nearly $24,000,000 less than the appropriation voted in 1931 for the current biennium.

Morgan May Talk In Senate Banking Inquiry

By J. R. BRACKETT
New York.—(AP)—Wall Street's traditional poker face conceals an undercurrent of extraordinary interest these days over the prospect that J. P. Morgan himself may testify in the Senate banking committee's investigation of financial practices.

The power has been given to Ferdinand Pecora, committee investigator to call whomsoever he pleases. Already he has asked 23 questions of the Morgan firm, and he may summon Morgan himself for further inquiry.

The power of the Morgan firm is both actual and proverbial. Undoubtedly its actual power is great, and financial legend often ascribes to it virtual money dictatorship.

Lewis Corey, economist, calculated that in 1929 the Morgan firm controlled or influenced some $74,000,000,000 of corporate resources and capital. The figure was arrived at by tracing interlocking directorates and the so-called community of interest among leading New York banks.

Private banks are not required to make public statistics of their operations, which is one reason the Senate committee proposes to investigate them.

COUNTY BOARD WOULD REMIT TAX PENALTIES

Also Asks to be Allowed to Grant Discounts For Prompt Payment Taxes

In a special meeting yesterday afternoon the County Board of Commissioners petitioned our representatives in the Legislature to seek to enact a law that would permit the board in this county to omit the penalties now accrued on 1932 taxes and likewise to grant discounts in their discretion not to exceed 5 per cent to parties who pay their 1932 taxes prior to July 1, 1933. Realizing that in view of the present tax laws there will be a tendency on the part of many who can pay to hold off just as long as possible before paying their taxes, the Board made the request in order to offer inducements to get these taxes paid promptly.

Another request from the board to the legislators was for a change in the new tax law that prohibits the advertisement for taxes and requires instead a notice of registered mail process of notice.

In the past the advertising of the delinquent tax list has greatly accelerated the collection of taxes, and it is this reason that prompted the commissioners to seek authority to use their discretion in the matter in order that the best interests of the county might be served.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
 Washington—(AP)—A man whose entire life has been spent not far from the sidewalks of New York has been given an important task in connection with bringing the latest form of relief to the farmers.

Senator Robert F. Wagner heads the sub-committee of the banking and currency committee which will look into President Roosevelt's proposal for easing up on the farm mortgage situation.

Days before the President's message reached the Senate, Wagner had been wrestling with the question of farm mortgages.

Born in Germany, Wagner came to this country with his parents when he was eight years-old. He sold papers on the streets of New York to help pay his way through school and also worked his way through the College of the City of New York.

Despite the fact that he isn't a farmer and knows little or nothing about the farm, handling relief legislation of this nature is nothing new to him.

He has been at it ever since he has been in the Senate. Back in the days before hardly anyone had begun to think about unemployment in this country Wagner's voice was heard in warning. The very conditions that he urged Congress and the administration to guard against now exist.

He worked his proposals into legislation that was passed by Congress which sought to set up a federal organization to cooperate with the states on unemployment. The measure received a presidential veto.

Wagner's political career has been marked by his efforts on behalf of the laboring classes of the country.

It's nothing new in Congress to see a city man fighting for the cause of the farmer. Some of agriculture's best friends on capitol hill have been those men who have spent most of their lives in urban centers.

Franklin Fort, for a long time a representative from New Jersey, was one. Fort represented a district that didn't have a farm in it, but won a place on the House agriculture committee and constantly fought for farm relief.

The farmers had a good friend in LaGuardia of New York City. His associates liked to jest with him concerning his interest in agricultural legislation.

"Why shouldn't I be interested?" he would reply. "I once lived in Arizona."

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES
 New York—Confederate currency staved off hunger in at least one instance here in New York during all the talk about what we were going to use for money.

An 1864 Confederate dollar bill was taken in by W. T. Dudley and Francis Pirie, cashiers at one of a trio of penny restaurants operated by a charity foundation in Manhattan. This one, located on Forty-third Street between Broadway and Sixth Avenue, serves about 7,000 penny-a-dish meals a day to the unemployed.

Dudley, who used to be connected with a Wall Street brokerage house, and Pirie have a collection of hundreds of odd coins and bills which have come to them over the counter. They also have accumulated some good luck pieces that didn't do their owners any good—unless it was lucky for the poor fellow to get just one more meal with them.

Some of the coins and luck pieces got into the till through the oversight of the cashiers, but Dudley and Pirie have bought others from unfortunates who needed a few cents for food. These acquisitions are not valuable from a coin collector's viewpoint, Dudley explains, but they make an interesting display.

One man did business with them with an eight annas note from India.

Taxi-ing Around
 One of the cabs stationed on my corner is driven by a huge Irishman—so bulky that he had to leave the window by the driver's seat open on the coldest days to rest his elbow on the sill. He's very talkative, too. You'd think he wouldn't be timid about anything.

The other night I had to go to an address near old St. John's on West Eleventh Street. I told him just to let me out in front of the church.

He stopped his machine in front of the gate, but when I was half way out he began to jump it a few feet more—a few feet more.

"What's the idea?" I yelled.

Beyond the church-yard, he stopped.

"That's an old cemetery," he said. "I don't like to stop there."

BRINGS RARE PRESS COLLECTION TO U. S. FOR EXHIBITION

Dean Carl W. Ackerman of the Columbia university school of Journalism is showing Captain Irving of the liner Aquitania a specimen of English pamphlet printed in 1649. Ackerman arrived in New York with the collection of the London Press club depicting the rise of the English newspaper over a period of several hundred years. The collection, regarded as the most complete and valuable of its kind, will be displayed at the annual meeting of The Associated Press in New York April 24. You know, drumming up steady trade.

Well, a girl went to him this week who was in his shop, and in his very own chair, for the first time just two weeks before. But he didn't recognize her.

When he pulled his usual line, she took venomous delight in snapping: "You cut my hair last time. And I agree with you, it's the most terrible haircut I've ever seen in my life."

And did he hush up!

Jig-Saw Puzzles Are Passing Fad

By J. R. BRACKETT
 New York—(AP)—Approximately 30,000,000 jig-saws go to puzzling minded Americans every week.

From a business devoted to merely nominal production of elaborate wood puzzles a few short months ago it has jumped to mass production of enough paper puzzles to bring about $1,500,000 weekly to manufacturers and another $500,000 to $1,000,000 to retail distributors.

Outdoor sports coming to the fore now have reduced jig-saw sales, say manufacturers, most of whom are willing to admit the jig-saw is a fad; but while sales have been falling, renting has increased. A large New York chain book store reports demand for the many pieced wooden puzzles on a rental basis. This chain has been renting puzzles for 20 years at fees varying according to the puzzle's size.

Jig-saw puzzles are not jig-saws at all to expert sawyers who use a real jig-saw to cut the puzzle out of wood. Back in 1909 when three was another jig-saw craze, specialists used to claim they could recognize the saw work of various experts. Now for the paper puzzles only one puzzle is cut from wood. Into the crevices left by the saw are fitted thin strips of sharp-edged steel. When the wood is removed there remains an outline of steel which is placed in a machine resembling a printing press. The steel die is pressed down on cardboard cutting it into pieces.

The first step in making puzzles is the selection or production of a painting or drawing. This is printed and affixed to cardboard, between 16 and 20 puzzles to the sheet.

These are cut into ones, twos or fours, depending on the size of the die-cutting machine to be used, and then are stamped out. Girls or machines break up the stamped sheet, feed the pieces through a hopper into a cardboard box. The boxes are sealed by machinery and the job is completed. One New York puzzle picture plant produces 3,000,000 puzzles a week, estimates total national production at about 30,000,000.

Makers of the traditional saw-cut wood jig-saw experienced a small boom about a year ago. A box-maker suggested a paper puzzle to an advertiser and from then on business came almost too fast for handling.

The fad brought in its wake a small-sized boom to paper box manufacturers, one firm estimating that in February the jig-saw demand consumed about half of the newsboard purchase.

BEAUTY HINTS

By JANE SEYMOUR
 (Stage Actress)

Summer coming and suntan becomes a problem. Most every one wants a golden tan, but there are many who cannot risk staying in the sun too long. For those the best aid is a vinegar rub-down. Vinegar makes the sunburn turn a deep brown, but only a small amount should be used. Too much vinegar won't do the trick.

Roosevelt Moves To Break Deadlock On Disarmament Question

Matter Expected to Be Discussed on Visit of MacDonald and Herriot to Washington

Washington, D. C., April 11.—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration is seriously considering as a possible key to the European disarmament deadlock the proposal of Ramsey MacDonald, Prime Minister of Great Britain, under which the United States and other signers of the Paris peace pact agree to consult together in an event of any violation. In the forthcoming International Economic Conference here in which the British Prime Minister and Eduard Herriot, French Premier, will take part, the idea is advanced generally that this will be an important subject of discussion.

If the United States should agree to this extension of her responsibility under the Paris peace pact, and if France feels that such American action is sufficient to assure French security against attack, officials believe that the French objection to the previous agreement would be generally dissolved sufficiently to permit definite accomplishment.

Three nations invited to send representatives to Washington have definitely accepted. Others are expected to fall in line soon. Canada is the third nation to accept in addition to Great Britain and France. Canada will be represented by Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett.

Paris, April 11.—(AP)—Former Premier Edouard Herriot will sail for the United States next Monday, two days earlier than had been planned, in order to be able to join Prime Minister Ramsey MacDonald in his conversations on world problems with President Roosevelt.

Says State Places Too Much Emphasis On Material 'Gods'

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 11.—"A State that spends 39 cents out of every tax dollar for roads as compared with 30 cents for education has come to a pretty sorry pass, and yet that is just what is happening in North Carolina." Dr. Julian Miller, associate editor of the Charlotte Observer, asserted here yesterday in a stirring address before University students at chapel period. "The material and physical developments of our State have been out of proportion to the development of our educational, cultural and social functions," Dr. Miller declared. Referring to General Assembly appropriations, he declared that "we have come to a pretty bad state of affairs in our thinking when we insist that we are able to spend as much on roads as we propose to spend on the development of our childhood and manhood, when we insist that the material and physical shall be preserved, even at the cost of the mutilation of our children's opportunity."

Harking back to Aristotle's chariot horses the body and the mind, with the soul as the driver, he told the collegians that the trouble today is the lack of sufficient drivers.

"Yours is the opportunity to provide these drivers," he admonished. "As you go out from this campus you will be faced with the necessity and the opportunity of reviving our whole philosophy of life. We find ourselves in distress today because we have been depending on material gods. Aristotle has been pitched out of the window in practically all branches of knowledge."

He asserted that "we have allowed wealth to converge into the hands of a few until the masses have been beaten into a pulp. I have been called a Socialist on several occasions when I have called attention to the fact that 3 per cent of the people of this country control 90 per cent of its wealth. I am not a Socialist, but I do believe in a democracy that is shot through with a principle of ethics."

"Democracy may be here to stay, but so far it has not vindicated its right to performance. Fascism and Communism have arisen as challengers to the imagination and are spreading. And while we would defend democracy we would be foolish to take the position that it has been unerring."

Dr. Miller was entertained at a luncheon given at Graham Memorial by a group of University officials.

TO DRAW BILL TO REGULATE SALE OF BEER

Task of Drafting Regulatory Act Delegated to Special Subcommittee

Raleigh, N. C., April 11.—(AP)—Drafting of regulations for the manufacture and sale of beers and wines of 32 per cent alcoholic content in North Carolina today was delegated to a legislative sub-committee.

The House Judiciary Committee No. 1 with Senate members sitting in heard the authors of the Francis and Martin regulatory bill explain their measures. The House sub-group composed of Martin, of Buncombe; Murphy, of Rowan, and Hamilton, of Carteret, was named to draw a single bill regulating the sale and making of the beverages and a similar group will be named to work with them.

Representative Boyd, of Mecklenburg, suggested provision in the new bill to levy a license upon each unit of a chain store that sells beers of wines. Representative Mannsberg, of Polk, expressed opposition to the Martin bill allowing county commissioners to pass on all licenses to be allowed for the sale of the beverages.

Fay Webb Vallee Quits For Keeps

Santa Monica, Calif., April 11.—(AP)—Fay Webb, erstwhile community wife of Rudy Vallee, thinks that thirteen trips across the continent trying to get along in her martial affairs are enough. Rudy and Fay are through for good. "Yes, that's that," added Chief of Police Clarence Webb who returned with his daughter yesterday from another trip to New York as arbiter.

Both are at home today and Mrs. Vallee said she would remain there unless she went over to Hollywood to resume her status as Miss Webb of the movies. She added that any move toward divorce would be made by Vallee.

BLIND SUTHERS WIN SUCCESS AFTER FIGHT

Kinston, April 11.—J. L. and A. G. Jackson, who a day or two ago celebrated the 20th anniversary of the founding of their mattress factory here, today asserted they had been quite successful. They are brothers. But only by optimism and perseverance had they succeeded, they said. Misfortune had stalked them before the factory was started. It pursued them relentlessly during the two decades. They were burned out more than once. Business reverses came from time to time, and they have been blind from the start. But the factory which started with one small hand machine has become a plant of proportions, and the blind brothers, groping their way around and through it, believe a beam is ahead of them.

Late News Flashes

Today in the Legislature. Raleigh, April 11.—(AP)—Appropriations of $83,159,218 by the State of North Carolina for the next biennial received final legislative approval today as the House heard debate on the controversial general sales tax article of the biennial revenue bill. The Senate talked two hours about the $83,000,000 appropriations compromise and provision of $16,000,000 annual allotment for the eight months school but followed the House in adopting the conference report. Thirty-five senators voted for the report and 10 against. Last week the House voted on the supply bill 51 to 40. Though the final measure is $4,000,000 above the House bill and $1,000,000 below the Senate allotment it is nearly $24,000,000 less than the appropriation voted in 1931 for the current biennium. The theme of almost every debate on the appropriations bill laid (Continued on Page Four)

DEAL SPEAKS TO ROTARIANS

Declares Spirit of Good Fellowship is One of Communities Greatest Assets

Real fellowship and friendliness is one of the greatest assets of any community and the Greenville community possesses this asset to a superlative degree, Ralph Deal declared in addressing the Rotary Club at its regular meeting here last night. The principal speaker on a program under the auspices of the club Fellowship Committee, Professor Deal reviewed briefly the ten years he had spent in this city and declared that "where had he found such fellowship as one can find in Greenville. He said that during the depression there had been talk in many places of fellowship here is to a great extent due to the presence in this city of Kiwanis, Rotary and other similar organizations, he thought now, above all times, the community needed to keep these clubs in operation.

Last night's meeting was presided over by the club president, Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, and the program was under the direction of Haywood Dail, chairman of the Fellowship Committee.

TOBACCO MEN WILL CALL ON WALLACE

Danville, Va., April 11.—(AP)—A. B. Carrington, president of the Tobacco Association of the United States, said today that Senator Byrd had arranged for appearance of a committee of tobacco men from the two Carolinas and Virginia before Secretary Wallace on Wednesday to protest against certain features of the farm relief bill now before Congress.

The association also is opposed to the thirty-hour week bill, Mr. Carrington said.

Morgan May Talk In Senate Banking Inquiry

New York.—(AP)—Wall Street's traditional poker face conceals an undercurrent of extraordinary interest these days over the prospect that J. P. Morgan himself may testify in the Senate banking committee's investigation of financial practices.

The power has been given to Ferdinand Pecora, committee investigator to call whomever he pleases. Already he has asked 23 questions of the Morgan firm, and he may summon Morgan himself for further inquiry.

The power of the Morgan firm is both actual and proverbial. Undoubtedly its legal power is great, and financial legend often ascribes to it virtual money dictatorship.

Lewis Creedy, economist, calculated that in 1929 the Morgan firm controlled or influenced some $74,000,000,000 of corporate resources and capital. The figure was arrived at by tracing interlocking directorates and the so-called community of interest among leading New York banks.

Private banks are not required to make public statistics of their operations, which is one reason the Senate committee proposes to investigate them.

Winthrop W. Aldrich, head of the Chase National Bank, largest commercial bank in the world, recently proposed legal changes which would force private banks to submit to the same regulation as commercial banks and which would end interlocking directorates among banks and corporations.

COUNTY BOARD WOULD REMIT TAX PENALTIES

Also Asks to be Allowed to Grant Discounts For Prompt Payment Taxes

In a special meeting yesterday afternoon the County Board of Commissioners petitioned our representatives in the Legislature to seek to enact a law that would permit the board in this county to omit the penalties now accrued on 1932 taxes and likewise to grant discounts in their discretion not to exceed 5 per cent to parties who pay their 1932 taxes prior to July 1, 1933. Realizing that in view of the present tax laws there will be a tendency on the part of many who can pay to hold off just as long as possible before paying their taxes, the Board made the request in order to effect inducements to get these taxes paid promptly.

Another request from the board to the legislators was for a change in the new tax law that prohibits the advertisement for taxes and requires instead a notice of registered mail process of notice.

In the past the advertising of the delinquent tax list has greatly accelerated the collection of taxes, and it is this reason that prompted the commissioners to seek authority to use their discretion in the matter in order that the best interests of the county might be served.

LET THOSE MAKING BIG PROFITS PAY FIRST

Our people have heard "Sales Tax" so much that no doubt they are getting tired of it, but hearing about it now is not near so bad as having to pay such an unjust tax on the necessities of life, and when we see such an injustice about to be perpetrated upon the masses of the people of our state while the privileged classes continue to enjoy special privileges, we will continue to fight such an action.

As we have said in this column many, many times since the legislature convened, there are other sources from which the state can derive its needed revenues if the members of the legislature will show the courage to tax these sources.

During the 1931 legislature we gave our hearty approval of the plan of Representative Ewing for a kilowatt production tax on the power companies, but despite the fact that South Carolina saw fit to pass a similar tax for their state on the same power companies that operate in our state, our own legislature declined to adopt Mr. Ewing's bill.

Mr. Ewing's plan again comes before the legislature at this time as an amendment to the revenue bill, and again we declare that in his contention he is everlastingly right, and we urge our representatives to give their support to this measure.

Since South Carolina adopted the kilowatt tax two years ago they have received a tremendous amount of revenue from the power companies while we have received no such tax from them and have been creating a deficit in our state treasury. Now to make bad matters worse, the power companies in this state are to be relieved of $385,000 in the reduction of ad valorem taxes and the increase in their franchise taxes will amount to close to $139,000, leaving a net reduction to the power companies of $246,000 from their present taxes.

Under the Ewing amendment the power companies instead of receiving a quarter of a million dollars cut would pay half a million more than at present, making the net gains to the state over the present revenue bill of three-quarters of a million dollars. There is no argument about the power companies being able to stand this tax for they are standing it in South Carolina and surviving and able to pay official salaries from $13,000 to $60,000 each annually and pay dividends not only on actual money invested but on watered stocks as well. These companies are making these large profits out of the industries and individuals in these states in which they operate and there is no reason why they should not carry their just share of the tax burdens when they can show net profits of millions of dollars and most of the people to whom they sell can show no profit whatever at this time.

In addition to the power company source, there are, as we have mentioned many times, the foreign stocks from which we could and should get more revenue, together with the tobacco companies and other large corporations that are showing millions of dollars net profits despite the depression. In times like these those who are making millions of dollars out of our people while thousands are literally in want, should be willing to give up a part of their big profits to carry burdens of the state and if they are not willing to do so it is up to the state to compel them to do so.

In addition to the above sources of revenue we again call attention to the possibilities from a luxury tax as an aid out of the present emergency and until these sources have been taxed to the limit there should be no effort to place a tax upon the necessities of life via the sales tax.

The White Cockatoo by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Jim Sundeau is accused of murder by the manager of the French summer hotel in which Sundeau is spending a winter week. He detests the oil manager, Lovschiem. His three fellow guests he knows nothing of—excepting Sue Tally. And Sue has, only a few minutes before, awakened him from a doze by demanding entrance to his room, and told him a harrowing tale of escape from an abductor. She has sent him to the hotel lobby for her key, which is not there. On his way back he sees Sue's shadow in the upper corridor, and then he stumbles over a body. But Madame Lovschiem berates her husband.

Chapter 8 PERHAPS A TRAP?

"You're a fool!" Madame Lovschiem repeated, and the glance she gave her husband was not pleasant. "Of course Mr. Sundeau had nothing to do with the murder. That clock sword—there are a dozen explanations. But the police won't believe them. Give it to me."

The man made a protestant gesture, but nevertheless handed her the sword, and she took it coolly. "It'll just wash this off and replace it and nobody need know anything about it."

Lovschiem looked blank. "That won't do at all," he said. "I don't know what you—"

"Lovschiem," she said sharply. Her eyes quelled his. Yet there was no reason that I could see for Madame Lovschiem's suddenly championing me.

Moreover, I didn't know that I wanted her championship. In the first place, if I let her do as she proposed there was no danger of the girl, or me being accused of murder. At the same time, if the truth eventually came out, as it readily might, things would look much blacker for us. And I should give the Lovschiem a most detestable hold over me.

"No," I said. "We'll call the police and let them know the whole thing; dagger and all. I didn't kill him. I'm not afraid."

She stopped and looked at me incredulously. I saw then that her eyes were green, limpid, and clear, and yet with that look of secret reflection that a cat's have.

"Not afraid?" she said rather softly. "American, aren't you? Not bad-looking, either. Accustomed to having your own way, I suppose, with men—and women?"

"You are too kind, madame. You'll leave the dagger exactly as it is, please, and your husband and I will wait together while you phone for the police."

"I'll do nothing of the kind," she said, and turned to the bathroom, but I caught her wrist and held her back to the dead man. She did not protest or even pull back when I told her to place the dagger on the dead man's chest, but I did not release her wrist until she had done so, and her eyes shone like a cat's when the light strikes them.

man, and his fat face only vaguely frightened now, for he was still sunk deep in his thoughts and looked more troubled and perplexed than he looked frightened.

I thought of Sue as I waited, of the story she had told of her abduction—and the fact that she had not told enough about the event. She had not wanted me to look for her abductor, or to tell either the police or the Lovschiem.

It was all full of holes, and yet I believed it. I was thinking how pleasant it had been having her by my fireside when I remembered that she had sent me for a key that was not where she had said it would be.

While I was gone a murder had been done, and the sword from the big clock, which she had had in her hand a few minutes before, was in the breast of the murderer. It seemed ridiculous—but I still believed her. Perhaps this lumpy, grotesque thing at our feet had been pursuing her, and she had snatched the sword and struck at him, and then run away.

I was about to say something to Lovschiem, anything to break the silence in that narrow passage, when we heard a sound down the corridor and Madame Lovschiem's yellow shawl emerged, followed by the black skirts of the priest.

Madame Lovschiem led the priest directly to the man at our feet. We both moved back a little when the priest's red beard boomed up into the light. He bent over, as we all had, and stared at the dead man. But he looked puzzled and clumsy and did not seem to know exactly what Madame Lovschiem expected of him. He got down, however, on his knees and got out his crucifix and rosary and began passing his fingers over the beads.

I couldn't see his face, only his bent head and rather thin and narrow shoulders in their tightly buttoned soutane, and his feet, which projected from the black folds of the skirt of the garment he wore and looked very large. He was younger than he had seemed on my first glimpse of him; there was an unwrinkled look about the back of his neck, there seemed to be no gray in his mouse-colored hair, and his figure was rather lean.

It was strange, I thought, that he was wearing American-made shoes. It was so strange that I looked closely at the soles and heels and stitching. They had undoubtedly been made in America.

He was mumbling then, and Lovschiem was staring blankly across the shadow-swept court, and Madame was looking very devout except for her eyes, which were shining and were looking at me with an expression that came very close to a kind of wicked amusement.

The priest kept on muttering. To my approval he had asked no questions about the murder, which was self-evident to be sure, and he offered no churchly admonitions or advice. It occurred to me that he might be, in his youth, a little uncertain in what was likely an unprejudiced experience with him.

Lovschiem drew back a little, and Madame and I moved also. I was tired and would have done with the thing, I said. "And now, madame, the police."

"You go, Grethe," said Lovschiem stupidly. "Tell them what you think best."

This time she consented, and after give one quick glance about which lingered with a certain satisfaction, she went. I was suddenly frightfully weary. And I knew that I must have my story ready. My story in which there must be no holes, for I should have to stick to it and tell it at the later and formal inquiry which would undoubtedly take place. The weakest point was my trip to the lobby.

How could I explain that without telling about Sue? Through the glass windows I looked out over the shadows of the court. If the wind would stop, perhaps things would be better. But instead of stopping or even lulling a bit, there was a terrific onslaught which fell upon the court and the old house with cold and ranging fury.

were thrown back, and a face was watching us. The room beyond was black, so the watcher must have been able to see us all quite clearly against the light behind us. The face looked white in that flash of light upon it, and dreadfully haggard.

You felt at once that whatever watched had some strong and dreadful interest in the scene it looked upon. But the thing was, it was a girl's face—and it was like Sue Tally's face.

THE NEW GERMANY

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER Berlin.—(AP)—A new Germany is in the making, one for which the dramatic political upheavals, drastic anti-Semitism and idealized nationalism of Adolf Hitler's following are to be the first steps of a toddling infant.

Hitherto unrevealed, the plans of the regime call for a distinctly different social and economic society. No part of the national socialist program has been enshrined in more mystery than this economic plan. The leaders declined to reveal it while they were in opposition, saying their opponents would steal their thunder. Since Hitler's accession to power, they have been equally secretive.

Hitler Asks Only Time The chancellor himself has aid merely that he needs four years to put the project through. That period of dictatorial power was granted him by the Reichstag. But by numerous conversations with Nazi leaders and a day-by-day study of the paraly newspapers and pronouncements, one can see that the Fatherland is headed toward a "staendestaat."

That word means a state in which representatives of the professions, guilds, trades, handicrafts, arts and other callings will be substituted for the political representation of the ordinary parliamentary system.

The Nazis proclaim that parliamentarism is dead in Germany. They also proclaim the end of "let us alone" liberalism.

Public Weal Paramount Cates and classes are to go. In their stead a community spirit is to be inculcated in which rich and poor, exalted and lowly, shall work side by side for the Fatherland.

The idea is that capitalism as such is not to be abolished, but its excesses prevented. The principle, "The public weal is paramount to private gain," must be the guiding factor in determining to extent to which individual capital can expand. But private property must not be directed against the state.

For instance, a man of means will not be permitted to support a theater in which plays are given that belittle the government. His surplus must be contributed to useful, patriotic purposes.

Taxes To Curb Idle Rich Taxes will be graded so as to prevent the amassing of vast fortunes. If a man acquires so large an income that he can live from it without further effort, ways will be found to reduce him to the necessity of again performing socially useful service. This will not apply to old people, who are to be permitted to live off incomes earned by a life-time's hard work.

Graduating the income tax so as to hit big fortunes does not mean that the Nazis believe in high taxes generally. On the contrary, all taxes that hinder business and trade are to be reduced or, if possible, annulled.

The inheritance tax is to be high on everything that might enable the heirs to live a life of laziness. It is to be high on things that promote socially useful lives. Thus, a homestead or a factory can be passed on to the direct descendants, but distant relatives will be practically taxed out of inheritance.

Workers To Share Profits Anonymous stock holding in industry is to cease and the known stockholders are to participate in the profits only after a goodly part of the gain has been set aside for the workers and for the responsible managers whose business acumen made a profit possible.

Big trusts are to be barred. The whole effort will be directed at elevating the middle class tradesman and craftsman, who has almost gone out of existence because big concerns

George Earnshaw, big right-hander of the Athletics, predicts that big league ball players, far from resenting the general salary cuts, will hustle harder than ever this season. "They appreciate now what good jobs they have," he declared.

COLLEGE WINS EXCITING GAME

In a fast and exciting game, E. C. T. C. defeated Campbell College Saturday by the score 4 to 3. Campbell scored first in the first inning and again in the sixth inning.

Hight, pitcher for Campbell, pitched a very good game for six innings, but in the seventh inning Tucker singled over second, Harrington was safe at first on his slow roller to second, and both scored on Bostic's smashing triple to center field after Forbes had gone out on strikes.

Bostic scored on Lang's perfectly placed bunt past the pitcher. E. C. T. C. scored again in the eighth on Bostic's infield hit, his steal to second and Lang's sizzling single to right field.

The features of the game were the pitching of Tucker, who let Campbell down with three hits, and the hitting of Bostic and Long for E. C. T. C., while the pitching of Hight featured for Campbell until he was relieved by Lefty Fowler in the seventh inning.

E. C. T. C. travels to Maxton Thursday where they play Presbyterian Junior College on Friday and Saturday. They will play A. C. C. here following the holidays.

Table with 5 columns: Player Name, Ab., R., H., O., E. Rows include Harrington, Forbes, Bostic, Lang, Hicks, Hodges, Rumley, Barrett, Tucker, King, Campbell, J. Mathis, Byrd, Gaylord, A. Mathis, Humphries, Eason, Hedgepeth, Hight, Woodham, Fowler.

Three base hits: Bostic and Humphries. Two base hits: Harrington. Struck out: By Hight 3, Fowler 6, Tucker 6. Base on balls: Off Tucker 2, Harrington 1. Winning pitcher: Tucker. Losing pitcher: Fowler. Umpire: Upchurch.

Maxie Rosenboom, light-heavy-weight boxing champion and most active of the current pugilistic crop, fought thirty-six times during the past year. But he didn't have a cent in the bank to show for his activities. He's also the most prolific spender.

Martinsville high school's basketball team in winning the final game of the Indiana State tournament, scored ten field goals on eighteen attempts, only one of them a "long shot," and that one clicking!

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

For any youthful fastball pitchers who may be interested, there is a sermon in these sage words of Al Mamaux, taken from the reports of one of our better known war correspondents in the Florida sector this spring:

"Like most pitchers, I learned how to pitch after most of what I had to pitch with was gone. When I had a real fast ball I used to try to mow 'em down with strikeouts. But strikeouts take, at the absolute minimum, nine pitches per inning. Now I try to get by with three or four pitches. Even he learns too slowly and his playing life is too short. By the time I was thirty-three sports writers and fans were calling me 'Old Man Mamaux.'"

Al Mamaux, after 21 years in baseball, is not alone equipped with a swell tenor voice and an ability to manage the Newark ball club, winner of the 1932 "little world series." He has lost his old speed, but International League batsmen will testify he still has a lot of pitching stuff in his "ancient" right arm. He worked in twenty-four games last year, won five, lost one and posted, relatively, the best record for effectiveness of any pitcher in the league, allowing 2.56 earned runs per nine innings.

Wanted: A pitcher who can pitch with physical endurance and a rubber arm, that he can get along almost exclusively with a fast ball and a faster one. Johnson did not develop a curve ball until he was on the down-grade. After twenty years he still had enough speed, in the clinches, to dazzle some of the best hitters in the game, but the "Big Train" was an exception.

WANT ADS PAY To realize the truth of what Al Mamaux has to say, take a peek at the records of men like Lefty Grove, Paul Derringer and Dizzy Dean. All came up to the big show ballyhooed for their fireball flinging. Grove simply threw them by International League batsmen. Since he had cost Connie Mack around $100,000, Lefty figured he had to do the same thing in the American League.

He tried it for nearly three years, without pronounced success, until the effect of Mack's consistent counsel finally dawned upon him. Once Grove achieved a chance of pace, perfected his control and sought winning results with a minimum of "bearing down," he became the greatest pitcher in baseball and still is. His record of capturing at least twenty games in each of the past six years is unmatched.

It has taken both Dean and Derringer two seasons of major league experience to learn the same lesson. Dean struck out more than 300 batsmen one year in the Texas League. He led the National League pitchers with 191 last year, but he also listened to Gabby Street's advice on when and how to conserve his fastball for the tight spots, instead of starting off each game with the idea of mowing 'em down.

Johnson An Exception Now and then the major leagues produce a pitcher like Walter Johnson with so much speed, together with physical endurance and a rubber arm, that he can get along almost exclusively with a fast ball and a faster one. Johnson did not develop a curve ball until he was on the down-grade. After twenty years he still had enough speed, in the clinches, to dazzle some of the best hitters in the game, but the "Big Train" was an exception.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

CHRISTIAN CHURCH CHOIR TO RENDER CANTATA

"The Seven Last Words of Christ," a cantata by Dubois, depicting the tragic story of Christ's crucifixion, will be given by the Eighth Street Christian Church choir, with Miss Eugenia Thomas as organist and director, on Friday evening, April 14, at eight o'clock. This cantata one of the most tuneful of all the better known Easteride cantatas, probably more vividly than any other portrays the tragic events leading up to the crucifixion. The mad frenzy of the mob; derisively shouting Vah; Vah; the soft appeal of the Christ as he pleads for their forgiveness.

The pathetic cry of the thief as he hangs upon the cross, the despair of the Christ when it appeared that all—even the Father had forsaken him—the grief of the mother as she beheld her son beloved, are expressed in most exquisite harmonies.

Miss Thomas as director, is having marked success with the Eighth Street Christian Church choir. An unusual interest is being manifested in this, the most ambitious program yet attempted by her since becoming director of this well known organization.

Those taking part in the cantata are as follows:

Sopranos, Mrs. J. Knott Proctor, Mrs. Dink James, Mrs. Ruth Penburg, Mrs. J. H. Gaylor, Mrs. E. R. Daniels; Alto, Mrs. H. H. Settle; Tenor, Miss Agnes Fullilove; Bass, C. E. Rowlett, J. S. Willard.

The members of this choir have given considerable time on this cantata and deserve lots of praise for undertaking to present this wonderful story of love in music. The people of Greenville and other cities are cordially invited to attend. Miss Thomas has been director of this choir for several years and has made wonderful success with its members.

"Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?" was the subject of the lesson-sermon in all churches and societies of Christ Scientist, on Sunday, April 9.

The Golden Text was from Ps. 103:3-3: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thine diseases."

Among the citations which comprised the lesson-sermon was the following from the Bible: "Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no guile." Ps. 32:2.

The lesson-sermon also included the following passage from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man is never sick, for Mind is not sick and matter cannot be. A false belief is both the tempter and the tempted, the sin and the sinner, the disease and its cause. It is well to be calm in sickness; to be hopeful is still better; but to understand that sickness is not real and that Truth can destroy its seeming reality, is best of all, for this understanding is the universal and perfect remedy." (Christian Science Committee on Publication).

One of our faithful daughters, Mrs. James L. Little, donated a Victrola to our order for the benefit of the shut-ins. We are quite sure it will add much happiness to their lives and help them to pass away many lonely moments.

At the conclusion of the meeting the hostess served delicious refreshments.—Reported.

HOLY WEEK SERVICE OF CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The second of the Holy Week services being held in the Christian Church will be conducted tonight at 8 o'clock. The minister will deliver the sermon on "Restlessness," and the intermediate choir will sing. These services are devotional in character and designed to provide a worshipful approach to Easter.

On Thursday night the Maundy Thursday celebration of Holy Communion will be observed and music will be provided by the regular choir. On Friday night the choir will render its annual Holy Week cantata, singing this year "The Seven Last Words." Weeks of preparation and practice assure a splendid rendition of Dubois' sacred composition.

AYDEN JUNIOR-SENIOR BANQUET

Ayden, April 11.—The seniors of the Ayden high school were given a delightful banquet by the juniors on Friday evening in the lunch room of the high school building.

Miss May Johnson Eure, as toastmistress, gave the address of welcome and toast to the seniors, and Wayland McGlohon, president of the senior class, responded. Other toasts made were, Miss Cora Bob Smith to the faculty, and response by G. C. McBané; Miss Edna Earle Trippe to the superintendent, P. B. Pollock; Master Henry Lee Burgess, mascot of the senior class, gave a toast to the seniors.

Others on the program were, Miss Jackie Boney of Kinston, and Mark Trippe of Ayden, each of whom gave a dance. The junior mascot, Patricia Lyons, was lovely in her colonial costume of green and white. The senior mascot and sophomores who served as waiters and waitresses, were also dressed in colonial costumes.

The lunch room and dining table where a two-course luncheon was served, were decorated with class colors and potted plants.

After the banquet the seniors and juniors were invited to the home of Miss May Johnson Eure, where dancing was enjoyed. Punch was served later in the evening.

Slugging Catcher Finally May Stick With Senators

Biloxi, Miss.—(AP)—For four years the Washington Senators have tried to make a catcher out of Cliff Bolton. The job isn't finished yet, but he's learning.

A natural hitter, Bolton has never learned the finer points about fielding or handling big league pitchers. Every year he has been sent back to the minors for more seasoning. He isn't a manager's dream of a catcher now, but it appears Joe Cronin is to give him a whirl in the majors this summer.

If it were not for his heavy slugging, the Senators would have turned Bolton loose long ago. Cronin is sure Cliff can hit big league pitching. Former Manager Walter Johnson also thought so. He's been a terror at bat for two years with Chattanooga, the Southern Association Class A champions.

Feels Fool Him
Cronin apparently plans to use Bolton as a replacement for Moe Berg and Luke Sewell, the latter obtained from Cleveland.

Some of Cliff's troubles have been his inability to handle foul balls well and of catch big time pitchers. During practice here Manager Cronin donned a mitt and gave him some first-hand instructions in the art. Berg and Sewell also were detailed to teach the rookie.

Bolton, who weighs 160 and is five feet nine inches tall, comes from High Point, N. C. He is 25. The Senators bought him in 1928 from Raleigh, N. C. During his first two years as a minor leaguer under Washington strings he led the Piedmont League at bat with a .413 average and the Eastern with a figure almost as high. Last year he hit .388 for Chattanooga, getting 173 hits in 132 games, including forty for extra bases.

Must Think Faster
Some of Bolton's minor league managers, believing he would never make a catcher, used him in the outfield, but when Clark Griffith sent him to Chattanooga two years ago it was with the understanding he would be a backstop.

Bolton will bring the Senators some punch for their offense, but he won't win any prizes for his fielding. Cronin also figures Bolton will have to think a little faster behind the plate to win his spurs.

Cliff can sock a ball to any field with equal ability. He bats left handed and throws right. Although he's rather short, he has powerful shoulders and forearms.

New York Cotton

New York, April 11.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, 7 to 9 points higher on better Liverpool cable and trade and commission house buying. The advances met considerable resistance and there was some Southern selling, but the buying movement continued after the call with indication of increased commission house interest.

Active months sold 9 to 11 points higher. This carried July up to 6.80, making an advance of 50 points above the low price touched on last month's late reaction.

A Washington Day Book

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington—(AP)—It's interesting and at times amusing to watch the reaction among the Democratic leaders these days as the "new deal" continues to progress.

The concise messages that President Roosevelt sends to Congress, each dealing with one subject exclusively, leave them a bit baffled when they hear them read. In some instances they can't see their way clear to grab hold and start the legislative wheels to running.

The agricultural relief bill, for example, ordinarily would have been introduced in the House by the chairman of the agricultural committee.

Marvin Jones of Texas, is the chairman. The bill, however, when presented to the House carried the name of Fulmer, the ranking Democrat of that committee.

And again when the President sent his reforestation plan to Congress for unemployment relief the same thing happened.

Connelly of Massachusetts is chairman of the labor committee in the House to which the bill was referred. He didn't share the views of Mr. Roosevelt on the project, however, and refused to introduce the bill. Byrns of Tennessee, Democratic floor leader, did the job.

But let a message come up from the White House recommending legislation with which public opinion is pretty much in accord and there seems great alacrity on the part of senators and representatives.

Perhaps the most striking example of this came recently when the President sent up his long-awaited proposition for easing up on the farm mortgage situation.

Jones, chairman of the agricultural committee, and Keacall of Alabama, chairman of banking and currency, staged a free-for-all battle for jurisdiction of this bill in the House.

Farm Relief Bill Moves Ahead
Washington, April 11.—(AP)—Congress moved ahead today with pressing farm relief legislation and received the bill carrying the Roosevelt recommendations for operating Muscle Shoals power plant and development of the Tennessee River basin. The $2,000,000,000 farm mortgage bill was taken up by the House with debate limited and a vote is expected tomorrow.

Quash Leas Writ
Clarksville, Tenn., April 11.—(AP)—Criminal Judge John T. Cunningham today issued an order quashing the writ of habeas corpus granted Cal. Luke Lea and Luke Lea, Jr., on March 14 after their arrest on a warrant ordering extradition to North Carolina to serve a sentence for banking laws violations. The Leas were granted an appeal by Judge Cunningham who also fixed bond at $15,000 each.

basis for the fight that is facing the House tonight or tomorrow on the sales tax. Without a serious fight the House approved section after section of the license tax articles of the revenue bill but lines were rapidly forming for the showdown on the sales tax. The revenue bill contains provisions for a 3 per cent general sales tax as its last section. Before it can be reached debate of the license tax schedules, income and franchise taxes must be studied by the House sitting as a committee of the whole. Any action on the revenue bill by the House as a committee of the whole must later pass three readings in the House on three separate days before the bill can be sent to the Senate.

Representative Newman, New Hanover, was reported today ready to send forward a selected commodity tax to substitute for the general sales tax approved by the Finance Committee, and Representative Bowie, Ashe, leader of the economy group in the House was counting noses for the possibility of killing any form of sales tax.
