Seaboard, April 12.—A concerted drive against diphtheria was begun Monday by the health department of Northampton county among children of the pre-school age. Attention has been called to the record of the last six years. CHICOD CLINIC SET FOR FRIDAY

Public health workers will go to Chicod Friday for the holding of one of the series of adenoid and tonsil clinics which have been under way the last two months in an effort to improve the health condition of school children.

The Chicod clinic was to have been held about two weeks ago but was postponed on account of a light epidemic of measles which has cleared up sufficiently at the present time to enable health workers to go through with their program.

A clinic was held at Grifton yesterday and twenty children were operated on for adenoids and tonsils. This brought the total near the 250 mark. It was expected over three hundred would be operated on before the campaign comes to an end.

Raleigh, N. C., April 12.—(AP)—Blue mold, dread disease which attacks tobacco plant beds with disastrous results, has been found in Wayne, Pitt, Columbus, Robeson and Craven counties.

Last year the inroads of the disease resulted in a big decrease of acreage due to the scarcity of plants and State College authorities today warned farmers to make an effort to control the disease this year.

The best control method yet found was to wet the beds each morning, and when they dry out make an application of three pounds of nitrate of soda per one hundred square yards.

TELLS OF WORK OF APOSTLES

Rev. Charles Gable Lectures on The Develompents of Christianity

In the seventh lecture last evening on "The West Century of Christianity," at St. Peter's Catholic Church, the Reverend Charles J. Gable gave a description of the grafting of the teaching of Christ on that of Judaism. The speaker's words in brief were:

"Nothing is more logical or natural than the development of the external organization and the internal spirit of the early church. As Jews, the apostles without knowledge of any other methods, simply cast the whole form of their labors along the lines of what they had seen in their synagogues. First of all there was the Twelve, with Peter at the head, they formed the ruling council. Co-operating with them were the deacons who gave their attention to such matters as pertained to the more remote life of the community. Their methods of teaching were identical with any synagogue. There was their dogmatic teaching founded upon the writings of the prophets, with their fulfillment in the life of Christ. The second, based on the moral laws of Moses, having as the complements the teachings of Christ. Though the apostles were individually familiar with the details of Christ's life, we know, but it was their laboring together twelve years in Jerusalem that enabled everyone to contribute what he had seen or heard. By piecing together the details of the gospel story took on a definite form. And this served as the foundation of the gospels as we have them. When the twelve years had elapsed, and the two incidents, the reception of the Gentiles and St. Peter's imprisonment pointed to the time for them to take up their labors in their respective fields. But before separating they drew up a formula of common faith. This is, today, preserved in what is known as the apostles' creed."

On leaving Jerusalem, the apostles preached from town to town, from one Jewish colony to another, until they reached the most distant lands. St. Andrew spread the gospel in Syria along the Danube and Black Sea. St. Thomas penetrated Parthia, lying between the Euphrates and Tigris. The southern part of Arabia was visited by St. Bartholomew. Simon the Zealot is credited with traveling along the African shores from Alexandria to the pillars of Hercules. St. Philip evangelized Phrigia. St. James led the church as the first Bishop of Jerusalem. St. John outlived all the others and in the last days of his life, condemned to death by being

REVIVAL HERE DRAWS CROWD

Good Attendance Reported at Series of Services at Immanuel Baptist Church

Morning services were inaugurated today at the series of revival services which opened at Immanuel Baptist Church Monday night. The services will be held each morning from 8 to 8:30 o'clock during the remainder of the services, with exception of Sunday, of course, when the regular 11 o'clock hour will be observed.

The revival is being conducted by Dr. J. W. Kinchele, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Rocky Mount. A large crowd was on hand the first two services, and the attendance was good at the morning service today.

The early morning hours was chosen to enable school children as well as others to attend, and hope was expressed that many would take advantage of the opportunity. This morning Dr. Kinchele used as his subject, "The Righteous Shall Flourish Like the Palm Tree," and brought out many interesting points in this connection. Tomorrow and Friday he will speak from the same text and attempt to throw additional light on the scriptural passage.

the sales tax is true, evidently the legislators refuse to see it our way.

We reiterate that the sales tax will be the little man's burden while the rich will continue to escape their just share of taxation.

PITT REPRESENTATIVES VOTED RIGHT

The kilowatt production tax on the power companies voted by the House last night covers one of the sources from which we have contended that the state should receive more revenue instead of placing greater burdens upon the backs of the masses through a sales tax and it is gratifying to note that both the Pitt Representatives voted for this tax. It is to be hoped that they will continue to stand upon this ground and that when the matter reaches the Senate, Senator Corey will take a like stand.

The White Cockatoo
 by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Jim Sundean waits for the police to come and arrest him for a murder he did not commit—in a half-deserted hotel in Southern France. Circumstances point to the guilt of an attractive American girl, Sue Tally, who only a short time before has asked refuge from an abductor in Sundean's room, but who would not permit him to search for her pursuer. She handed, in passing, a sharp sword in the hands of a figure on an enormous old clock in Sundean's room. Sundean has found the sword in the breast of the murdered man. Now Father Robert, ill at ease, is praying over the corpse. Sue has fled, and Sundean tries to concoct a story that will not incriminate her. Then, across the court, he sees a face he believes to be hers.

THE SHOT

It was Sue Tally. It was not Sue Tally. It was Sue Tally. I told myself that I was mistaken. I told myself that the light upon it had been too brief, too sudden and swift a flash to permit me to recognize any face. But I stared and stared at that unshuttered window and wondered what was back of those winking blank panes, and that strange haunting resemblance to Sue Tally's face would not leave me.

Suddenly I was conscious that Lovschiem had roused from his distraction sufficiently to note my gaze and follow it. I had the impression he had overlooked some pressing and urgent aspect of affairs. This impression was confirmed when he caught his breath sharply, slid a quick glance at me, and said suddenly:

"But I must go. There are things—Grethe will want—you and Father Robert can stay with the—with this." His eyes indicated the thing at our feet.

"Wait," I said. "What room is that across there? What number is it?" The one with the shutters open.

His eyes were veiled and yet intensely aware of me and my question.

"You mean across the court there? That is about 34 or 35. Why?"

Not, 19 then.

"Is it unoccupied?"

"Yes," he replied directly, without a shadow of hesitation.

"I saw a face just now in the window."

"No, no. You are mistaken. There is no one there."

"There certainly was a face there, Lovschiem."

It seemed to me he looked faintly relieved at the implication that I did not know the face. But he said a word or two to the priest, who did not look around or reply, and waddled hurriedly away. At the end of the passage he met the little porter and stopped for a few words with him before he disappeared around the corner, and the porter hurried toward us.

Madame had called him, the porter said breathlessly, and he was to remain with us while Monsieur went to her assistance.

Turning into my room I threw my coat over my shoulders and took a flashlight from my bag. The little porter watched me anxiously, and I said as I returned to the corridor:

"I am going to look about the court. Back in a moment."

He did not seem reassured, but, of course, had nothing to say. Then I closed the door, saw the porter's bright eyes watching it and what he could see of me, stepped out of their range of vision, and snapped the button on my flashlight. I made a darting circle of thin light on the stone floor of the landing.

There were no signs of a struggle, but I could have expected none. There were no muddy footprints, for there was no mud; everything in Arme was dry and cold and windswept. There were no cigar ashes. There were no coat buttons. There was nothing but a dark blotch, quite small, where the dead man had huddled.

I bent close to the worn stone and looked and looked, turning my flashlight here and there and eventually I did discover a small red piece of what looked like hard rubber or very hard wax. It was rough and irregularly semi-circular and about the size of a half-dollar. It bore no faint resemblance to any kind of clue. I put it in my pocket merely because it was the only thing except the dark patch on the stone and a dry brown leaf that the landing held.

"It was just at that second that there was a sudden lull in the wind; everything, shadows and shrubbery and rattling windows, fell into dead quiet, and I heard an unguarded step on the stairway below me.

It wasn't any sound but a step; I knew that perfectly, and I dare say if the wind had not lulled just at that instant I should not be alive

now. But I heard it and moved to one side in order to look over the curve of the railing. And at that very instant there were two sharp cracks of a revolver, my flashlight spun out of my hand and thudded somewhere below, the wind swopped down upon the courtyard with a crash, and every light in the hotel went out.

My hand tingled but wasn't hurt. There was no sound but the hurrying of the wind, and I found myself running down the stairway, holding to the railing. There is no excuse for it, but that is what I did.

I encountered nothing on the stairway. If it was Lovschiem who had shot at me—and I thought it possible—he would probably either follow me to finish the job or seek to re-enter the hotel himself.

He certainly was not apt to re-enter the hotel by way of the winding stairway and the corridor where the priest and the porter waited; if I followed the wall cautiously past the great iron gate below the entrance arch and then around the corner, opposite I might catch him at the door of the lobby.

By this time I had cooled a trifle, and my progress was slower and more careful, and I wished-I had some kind of weapon. Lovschiem was fat, however, and out of condition. If I could get him before he had time to use his revolver—again something brushed my hand. This time it was not a shrub. It was a rough fabric and an arm and it moved quickly away, and I hurried myself in its direction, tackling low as in football.

I caught only the flying end of some kind of garment which wrenched itself out of my clutch, my knees scraped the pavement, and there were three flashes of light from somewhere off at my left and three revolver shots that spat viciously through the tumult. Vaguely I thought it was lucky I was flat on the pavement and waited. There were no more shots, and the wind shrieked, and it was black as pitch everywhere.

I wished I had had the good sense to retreat before it was too late, and got cautiously to my knees, then swiftly to my feet and ran to my right a few steps. The sound made by the wind covered my own footsteps, but it also covered the sound of any movement he had made.

Cautiously, straining my ears to hear, I edged toward the wall of the north wing, not, however, toward the corner of the stairway. That, I thought, was where he would expect me to go; it would be natural for me to attempt to escape by the way in which I had entered the courtyard—an entrance which, I realized rather chillingly, had been entirely too precipitate. When someone starts shooting at you in the dark and you have no weapon at all, you can't help wishing vehemently that you were elsewhere.

Against the wall, with some kind of small trees in a tub at one side of me I waited. If he approached from the side of the shrub I would hear him or feel him and have some warning; then, since you'd rather take a chance than stand still and be shot, I could take him perhaps unexpectedly and have a better chance in a fight.

Presently I began to work quietly toward the door to the lobby. The entrance gates were locked, Sue had said; he would not deliberately enter the hotel by the north-wing corridor above, and the only place left was the lobby door.

I encountered no one and heard nothing but the wind. And I had not more than arrived at the lobby door when the lights suddenly flashed up; the light swaying above the entrance, throwing the court into shadows and empty white spaces again; the light from my door above; and now a light in the lobby, beside me.

I stepped aside from the door into the shadow and waited again. There was nothing to be seen but the shadows and the bending shrubs and trees in the courtyard.

Defeated and angry, I opened the lobby door. Madame, her red hair shining under the desk light, looked up at me, a quick flash in her green eyes.

"Your husband just came in by this door," I said. "Where is he?"

"No one entered by that door," she replied crisply. The cockatoo chattered, and she added: "Hush, Pucci!"

About NEW YORK

New York.—One of the city's most curious jig-saw sections is in the upper East Fifties, near the river, embracing celebrated Sutton Place. Here pretentiousness and squalor, shiny newness and decrepitude are tightly fitted together in the New York scene.

Here the sorriest eyesores crumble in the shadows of lofty apartment homes of the wealthy. Here the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady (or maybe it's Judy Mugstein) live so closely together that the colonel's lady may see Judy's washing on the line whenever she steps out on her river view terrace.

Exclusive shops do business on the same blocks with smelly little markets. Financially high hat gentlemen brush elbows with bedraggled fellows on the walks. Livered chauffeurs breeze the finest motors through street mobs of unwashed and mocking children.

Sutton Place itself is a stretch of a couple of blocks near the river. Some say Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's buying a house and moving in was responsible for the social elevation of the place. Ann Morgan, the late Elisabeth Marbury, and the Charles H. Sabin's came to be her neighbors.

There is a brewery at the south end and the "gray Queensborough Bridge rises at the north. Welfare Island's prison walls are part of the river view, and across the water is a drab expanse of smoke-belching industry. This whole area in the Fifties is pocked with unsightly tenements.

Yet your New Yorker speaks with pride of his address over here. It's gilt-edged—socially speaking.

Jumping Jimmie
 A night club that broadcasts its "celebrity nights" usually manages to get some really big guests from Broadway for these occasions. Recently the club boasted of Jimmie Durante as a visiting entertainer.

When Jimmie Durante came over to Jimmie, listeners-in heard nothing whatsoever from him. There was lastin silence, broken only by echoes of laughter from the tables. The explanation lies in "Schnozzle's" unique manner of delivery, which is action—jumping about—all over the place. In his monkey shines he forgot all about the microphone.

Finally a distraught master of ceremonies had a piano shoved in front of the instrument, dragged Jimmie to the keyboard and commanded him to sit still and play his own accompaniment for a couple of songs.

The rest of the allotted time Jimmie came over the air in fine shape.

IT'S THE LITTLE MAN'S BURDEN

Since the first mention was made of the possibility of a sales tax we have opposed it and are still of that same mind and will continue our efforts against it because, despite the arguments of its proponents, in the last analysis the sales tax is a tax upon the bare necessities of life instead of upon those most able to pay.

There are many who believe that the sales tax will work in the same proportion against the rich as the poor and that the rich by buying more will necessarily pay more, but here is the joker that bears out our contention that a sales tax does not work equally toward the rich and the poor.

According to a statement made here by Representative E. G. Flanagan when he was home the vast weekend was to the effect that there is a provision in the sales tax section of the revenue bill that limits the amount of tax to be collected on any single purchase to $10. This limiting provision of the bill means that no matter how big a purchase is made at one time the amount of tax collected cannot exceed $10, but the same bill prescribes that small purchases must bear a flat tax of three per cent. Under this plan when a family over a period of time has bought as much as $334 worth of the necessities of life they have paid taxes on these purchases totaling $10.02, or if more necessities than this have been purchased the total tax has been increased at the rate of three cents on each dollar, and when the family has spent as much as $1,000 they have paid a total tax of $30. On the other hand, the limiting provision on the single purchase enables the man able to purchase an automobile or other luxury of life to pay only a $10 tax whether the said automobile costs $500 or $5,000. It doesn't take much intelligence to be able to see that such a tax is indeed in favor of the person who is able to spend amounts in the thousands, and increases the burdens of the little man who buys the necessities of life a dollar's worth at a time.

Our contention all along has been that the man who is able to purchase a $5,000 automobile or other high priced luxury is more able to pay taxes than the laborer who has but a small amount with which to purchase the bare necessities of life, but if reports from Raleigh as to the growing sentiment for

TWO LINES OF CARS—TWO PRICE RANGES ONE HIGH STANDARD OF QUALITY

First, came the Chevrolet Master Six—and America responded with the greatest welcome given Chevrolet since 1929. Then, up stepped the leader with another entirely new line of cars, the Standard Six. And down went the Chevrolet base-price to the lowest figure in history for a full-size six-cylinder closed car.

Now—for the first time—there are two Chevrolet Sixes—the Standard and the Master. Body-styles for everybody. Prices for several different groups of buyers. But only one standard of quality running throughout the complete line. And that's the very same high standard that has made CHEVROLET the greatest name in low-price transportation!

Both Standard and Master models offer wood-and-steel bodies by Fisher—equipped with safety plate glass in the windshields, and featuring Fisher No Draft Ventilation. Both have silent second gears and smooth, fast, six-cylinder engines. In the Standard Six, you enjoy all these advantages—at the lowest operating cost of any full-size car. In the Master Six, you get all these advantages, and many more, in an unusually large, luxurious car, along with the greatest all-round economy of any car of its size. And Chevrolet prices are now as low as $445—for the Standard Six Coupe!

Sampler Made in 1819. When looking among a number of keepsakes a few days ago, Mrs. D. C. Moore of this city, found a sampler which was made by her mother when she was eight years old. In design the sampler is similar to those that numbers of people have embroidered in more recent years. The linen and colors are well preserved. This piece of handwork is now one hundred and fourteen years old. It is embroidered on a piece of tan linen in blue and brown thread. The design, the letters of the alphabet, in capitals and small letters, and numbers, and is completed with "Mary Ann Hutchins, her work, aged eight."

A. A. U. W. HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING

"The first drama written on American soil, was written in North Carolina," said Miss Emma Hooper, in beginning a talk before the A. A. U. W. Monday night, April 10, on "American Drama in the Last Fifty Years."

This drama, "The Prince of Parthia," Miss Hooper went on to say, was written by Thomas Godfrey of Philadelphia when on a trip to North Carolina about 1736.

Not until about fifty years ago did we begin to turn to our own native material, according to the speaker, and one of the men who first interested himself in presenting the American scene was Augustine Daly, who was born at Plymouth, North Carolina.

Bringing her history on up to the twentieth century, Miss Hooper spoke of how much happened in our drama between 1905 and 1910, and pointed out the part played by the university and the teacher in our modern drama, William Vaughn Moody, Josephine Preston Peabody and Percy Mackaye being some of the teachers who have made names for themselves in this field. All three of these were students in Professor Baker's famous play-writing class at Harvard.

Professor Koch's work with the Carolina Playmakers was also mentioned and his already well-known pupils, Hatcher Hughes, Lawrence Stallings, and Paul Green.

At the business meeting of the group Miss Laura Rose was unanimously re-elected vice-president and Mrs. J. E. Winslow treasurer, for a term of two years.

The group was entertained by Misses Catherine Cassidy, Lorraine Hunter and Mary Ellen Powell, at the home of Mrs. H. E. Austin on Eighth street.—Reported.

SPRING HOLIDAY BEGINS AT COLLEGE

Spring vacation, which embraces the Easter holidays, of East Carolina Teachers College will begin at the close of the morning session tomorrow, April 13 and extend until the opening of school on Thursday morning of next week, April 20. Only a few students will remain on the campus, most of them going to their homes for the holiday.

The vacation comes exactly in the middle of the spring term, therefore mid-term tests are keeping the students busy this week.

New students will be admitted for the second half of the term, and will receive half credit for a term's work. Teachers whose schools close early are especially benefited by the new plan of having the spring term a "split quarter." Applications have been coming in for some time.

EASTER CORSAGES COMPLETE ENSEMBLE

Everybody wears flowers on Easter. Single blossoms grace men's buttonholes. Smart corsages complete feminine ensembles.

The modish thing in corsages this Easter is to select them with an eye to the accessories. Flowers need not match the color of the costume, but they should always harmonize with it. They may be a tint or shade of the same color or they may be in direct contrast with it, so long as harmony is obtained.

Choosing the proper corsage may seem a trifle involved, but that is where a good florist fits into the picture. Tell us the shade of your Easter costume and we will be glad to aid you in selecting the proper corsage. Greenville Floral Company.—(Adv.)

"I have used Black-Draught for a number of years and I find that it is about the best medicine I can take for headache, biliousness, a tight feeling and for gas and spitting up of my food," writes Mr. Bert Smith, of Carthage, Mo. "Taken in broken doses, Black-Draught will relieve this. It will also help (as a laxative) a cold and hoarseness. Tips on CONTRACT

TALE OF THREE DEUCES

(By Tom O'Neill)

Happy should be the declarer with a long set-up suit to play. He can work wonders toward enabling low cards in other suits to contract tricks. He can succeed at contracts which at first double dummy glance look positively doomed to failure.

Three lowly deuces were left in the hand of Lewis' Osborn, New York bridge master, after he ran a trump string. The deuces were among the things squeezing both adversaries in three different suits so that Osborn was able to make five clubs and game. Here was the hand:

NORTH DEALER
♠	A753
♥	J1086
♦	A85
WEST
♠	KJ96
♥	AQ54
♦	J98
♣	J10
EAST
♥	KQ2
♦	KQ1073
♥	42
♦	A9875432
♣	OSBORN	73

North opened with one no trump and South bid five clubs. That was the entire auction. As it turns out, East and West would have a play for four spades, but the bidding of spades would be quite risky when vulnerable.

It would seem that South, in a five-club contract, must lose two hearts and a diamond, but Osborn showed how to avoid that.

Disliking to lead from his tenaces, West opened the club knave. The trick was won in the North hand and the declarer deliberately lost two heart tricks.

The first heart trick went to East's nine. After taking the second with the ace of hearts, West noted that the lead of the heart queen would set up North's hearts. So West went after the diamond re-entry in dummy. On the knave of diamonds the ace was played from the North hand, South played the four spot just for fun with three deuces.

After leading North's last club South pulled himself in his own hand by ruffing a heart and began his trump monotony. West had to find five discards and East six.

Here was the situation after ten tricks had been played:

NORTH: S-A 7; H-J; WEST: S-K J; H-Q; SOUTH: S-2; D-2; C-2; EAST: S-8; H-10; D-K.

When the deuce of clubs is led comes the climax. West must shed a spade in order to prevent the heart knave in the North hand making. North will shed the heart if West holds his. If East discards the diamond king, South's deuce will be good. If East sheds a spade, North will make two-spade tricks.

Quick Penalty Calculation. Add 3 to the number of tricks set. Multiply the total by the number of tricks set. Put two ciphers on the end. The result is the penalty redoubled vulnerable. N being the number of undertricks, the formula is 100 N (N plus 3). Divide by 2 or 4 for doubled vulnerable and doubled not vulnerable penalties, respectively. Probably penalties can be figured without use of pencil and paper more readily by this plan than by any other method.

My Beauty Hint

By FLO WARD (Stage Actress)

A balanced diet is very necessary for the perfection of beauty. In the winter we are prone to include many heavy foods in our menus but with the arrival of hot weather this should be changed. One should eat more green vegetables and fresh fruits. Also plenty of water is helpful.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — (AP)—Is Hollywood becoming shy, sensitive, shrinking from the stares of its public?

The most recent "gala premiere" was attended by only a scattering of recognized stars. There was an abundant crowd, the usual old time horde of autograph seekers, the fans who had begun congregating during the afternoon for choice positions along the "line of march." But their fervor had scant reward, except in the customary bustle and ballyhoo, for most of the inveterate premiere attenders were missing.

The phenomenon scarcely can be held to denote a considerable change in the personnel of the stellar ranks. Many whose absence was noted are still in Hollywood, still active in pictures, certainly still able to meet the reduced fees for first-night tickets.

Rather, it may indicate a change in star psychology, a growing away from the period which found delight in the parading of ermines and sables and jewels, in the homage and cheers of a crowd with nothing better to do than render homage and cheers to movie stars.

Perhaps those stars who always groaned at the thought of paying tilted prices for the privilege of fighting crowds and being stared at, who always threatened to rebel and stay home, are casting aside old fears and actually staying home.

And then again all these conclusions may be wrong. It may have just happened: Still, it's another occasion to herald the passing of the Hollywood premiere, with its "stars, lights, flowers."

This has been heralded before, often with result that the premiere backers have bestirred themselves and hured out more stars than ever.

But if the premieres fade into memories of the Hollywood that was, a gaudier Hollywood, they will not be alone on their journey out. The economy wave is hitting at showy, expensive automobiles, too, whereas once no stellar equipage was complete without a couple of motors from abroad.

A writer reports that his boss actually offered to trade him a high-powered limousine for his modest coupe. The offer was rejected.

"I can't afford," the writer said, "to buy a gallon of gas every time I shift gears!"

Neither, it appeared, could the executive.

Football Hero Headed for Majors

Atlanta, Ga.—(AP)—Two years ago Freddie Sington was playing baseball for the University of Alabama—his senior year—and it was then predicted he'd follow the trail blazed by the Sewells and Riggs Stephenson from Tuscaloosa to the big leagues.

As a college baseball player, Sington looked good to the scouts and the Atlanta Crackers of the Southern Association signed him when school was over. He could hit and catch 'em in the outfield.

Farmed-out for two summers for a little more seasoning Sington this spring already has set the fans talking and bids fair to move further up the big league trail.

In spring his stride and his batting and fielding created a sensation in exhibition games. In eight pre-season games against major league and class AA pitching he smashed out three singles, a double, two triples and a home run. His fielding, too, has been of high calibre.

Sington will be a regular on the Atlanta team this summer Wilbert Robinson, president of the Crackers and former manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers is sweet on the Alabama rookie. Sports writers are calling him a "new and distinctive type of ball player."

Between baseball seasons Sington, All-America tackle in 1930, assists his former mentor, Wallace Wade, with football coaching at Duke University. He was a member of the Crimson Tide which defeated Washington-State in the Pasadena Rose Bowl at the end of the 1930 season.

HIGH SNATCHES TILT FROM FIRE HERE TUESDAY

In one of the poorest played games, and yet one of the most exciting ones seen here in a long time, the Greenville High School team defeated their ancient rivals by a 7 to 6 score in a twelve-inning game here yesterday.

Roger Taylor and young Downs of Washington pitched the entire game for their terms and the locals secured a total of ten hits while their opponents were garnering seven.

Both teams scored one run in each of the second and third innings while the locals scored three in the fourth, to go in the lead by a 5 to 2 margin.

Stock Market

New York, April 12.—(AP)—The financial market showed signs of exhaustion after a recent climb and prices were inclined to recede.

The share market turned dull in recession. Mid-week business statistics were encouraging enough to make traders sell, but buyers were inclined to place orders under the market in hope of the technical reaction.

American Telephone reacted two points and then recovered partially. Few other issues slipped down a point or two, including Allied Chemical and others.

Most recessions were limited to minor fractions. This was true of U. S. Steel, New York Central, General Motors, Sears, Consolidated Gas and others.

Firm stocks were Woodworth and Continental Can, up a point or ordering of quarterly dividend.

The late tone was heavy. The turnover was 750,000 shares.

Chapel Hill, April 12.—The Carolina baseball team returns home from a victorious invasion of Virginia today to put in two days of practice preceding the V. P. I. game here Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock and the brace of Easter features with Davidson, the first in Winston-Salem on Saturday afternoon and the second in Concord on Monday afternoon.

The Tar Heels beat V. P. I. 9-1; V. M. I. 14-0 and Washington and Lee 2-1 and continued to look good in yesterday's game at Virginia. Big Joe Griffith yielded only five hits in the first, Fred Couch pitched the second and added his bit at the bat with a timely four-baser.

Johnny Peacock hit a homer with one on and Nate Andrews won a pitching duel in the third. Griffith worked again yesterday.

According to the present schedule Coach Bunn Hearn will probably pitch Crouch here Friday, Andrews in Winston-Salem Saturday and Griffith in Concord Monday. This might be altered, however, to let Crouch, who is from Winston, work the game in the home town.

The small army of trackmen that will move on Chapel Hill for the 21st annual high school championships Friday will show few of last year's winners, but new stars have arisen in their places who are expected to produce some fine performances, intense competition and perhaps several new records.

Charlotte won the meet for the three years 1929-1931 but High Point nosed the Queen City team out of the title last year. The two teams are leading the field to the meet again this year, with Durham, Winston and Wilmington rated the best bets to pull an upset.

Tennessee Gets Beer

Nashville, Tenn., April 12.—(AP)—By a vote of 22 to 11 the Senate today passed the house approved bill to legalize 32 per cent beer in Tennessee May 1.

The State had been "bone dry" since 1909. House concurrence in several Senate amendments was expected and the bill likely will go to the governor by tomorrow. His signature is certain.

Senate Talks Farm Relief

Washington, April 12.—(AP)—Congress swung back today into the maelstrom of farm relief debate with the Senate again seeking to talk its way to a decision on the administration price fixing and the mortgage refinancing bill.

The first point at issue there was the Simpson amendment to the bill under which the government would be guaranteed enough income to cover the cost of producing his crop.

The secretary of agriculture who will administer the relief measure opposed the plan.

The House intended to complete its eight hour debate on the farm mortgage bill handled, several times, in that branch, but postponed a vote until tomorrow so many members could attend the opening baseball games.

Radical overhauling of the war department with $500,000,000 annual saving was proposed before the House military committee by Major General Johnson.

Labor committee heard Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, discuss the 30-hour week bill which the administration would support.

The agriculture committee of the Senate in 30 minutes gave approval to the Norris administration bill for the operation of Muscle Shoals and development of Tennessee river basin.

Shaw Denies Offending Anybody

New York, April 12.—(AP)—Bernard Shaw was still insisting today that he had no intention to offend anybody as he prepared to leave the land of those "dear old boobs."

Giving the interview which he refused yesterday, the Irish wit told more than one hundred news and magazine writers that:

"I never offend anybody. Occasionally you write ill-natured stories. I haven't said."

Immediately the name of Helen Keller was brought up. Shaw had already denied he had said in the presence of Miss Keller "that all Americans are blind, deaf and dumb."

Sports Endorsed As Mainspring of Fascist Culture

Rome.—(AP)—Combative sport, pointed toward the development of champions and championship teams, has been endorsed by the Italian government as one of the mainsprings of Fascist culture.

The chamber of deputies thus officially glorified athletics activity with thunderous approval of a broad-

Does Not Distract

"It never has been true," Arpinati asserted, "that physical exertion or competitive sport distracted the youth's mind from academic work. The classic tradition that athletics conflict with serious and scientific study is erroneous."

"On the contrary, sport serves a high educational, national and social motive. Competition speeds up the mental processes, teaches self-control and poise, and scatters torpid youthful fantasy."

Arpinati emphasized the necessity of national and international championship events "to keep Fascist youth forever reaching beyond the limits of mediocrity."

National Prestige

"The champion," he said, "becomes an international symbol of national pride and vigor. He is the advance guard of national prestige."

The Olympic chairman referred to Italy's winning second honors in the Los Angeles Olympics midst an ovation from the nation's legislators.

Gentle Awakening Advised

Bile Stagnates In Sluggish Livers and Makes Us Sick

Unless your liver furnishes plenty of fresh bile every day your food does not digest properly—it just ferments and decays in the bowels—constipation, gas, sour stomach, headaches, nervousness, etc., are the result.

Sargon Soft Mass Pills relieve the cause of this condition. They are not like any medicine you have ever taken (write for free literature describing their action and effects). Don't be misled. Calomel, salts, mineral waters, laxative pills, etc., have no effect on the liver. Sargon Soft Mass Pills contain the only two substances which will actually cause a sluggish liver to increase its production of bile. Only 60 cents for a full 30-day treatment. At your druggist or write G. F. Wills, Inc., Atlanta, Ga.
