Begin New Attack On Inflation Plan

Senate Republicans Line Up In Effort To Defeat Money-Raising Measure

HOUSE READY FOR VOTE ON VALLEY PLAN

COURT ENTERS SECOND WEEK SITTING HERE

Further Phases of The Administration's Expansion Being Chased in Committee; Vote Expected Late This Afternoon; Roosevelt Plans to Send up Bill For Aiding Railroads

Indications Barnhill Murder Case Will Not Come up Until Tuesday

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)

With the Roosevelt controlled inflation plan coming up for debate, Senate Republicans moved today to bring out the heaviest offensive in an effort to arouse nation-wide sentiment against what they had called "the road to ruin."

Democratic leaders, not willing for the Republicans to make the most of the debate, were confident they have the power to jam the measure through the Senate by Wednesday.

The House made ready to finish consideration and vote late today on the administration Tennessee Valley Muscle Shoals development plan. Leaders said approval was certain.

Further phases of the administration's expansion program were being chased in committee with much attention being given to the bill for relieving mortgages on small city homes.

President Roosevelt is expected to send to Capitol Hill early this week a message outlining his plan for aid to railroads and to appoint a Federal co-ordinator.

Two days of informal debate already have been had in the Senate on the controlled inflation measure which is attached to the administration bill.

REVIVAL OPENS HERE TONIGHT

Rev. Louis Gaines of Raleigh to Conduct Memorial Baptist Church Services

Revival services begin at Memorial Baptist Church tonight at 7:45 with a gospel song service. A cordial invitation is extended to every one to engage in the services.

Rev. Louis S. Gaines, pastor Hayes-Barton Baptist Church, Raleigh, will be the guest preacher. Mr. Gaines is an excellent preacher, and will present forceful messages concerning the application of Christian truth in the present day. He has held a number of pastorates in Kentucky, having come to Raleigh from Williamsburg, Ky., and has also engaged in evangelistic work in connection with his pastorates, aiding fellow-pastors in this portion of their task. Mr. Gaines is a graduate of Denison University, of Granville, Ohio, and the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Rev. A. W. Fleischmann, pastor of the church said today: "We have every confidence that we shall enjoy a time of spiritual refreshing, and wish to share our blessings with the people of Greenville, and especially the members of our sister churches."

Arrangements have been made for school children to attend the morning services and they will not be counted tardy when they go direct from the church to the schools. Sunday's services were marked with a fine spiritual atmosphere in preparation for the revival. At the morning worship the pastor presented an inspirational message on the topic "Where Art Thou?" The second week session of a two-week term of criminal Superior court got under way this morning with sixty or more cases to be considered.

Around eight actions were disposed of during the previous week, including two or three of the most important cases on the calendar.

The murder charge against T. H. Barnhill, Bethel township farmer, was to have come up today but indications were it would not be reached before tomorrow morning.

Court this morning delved into the case of Joe Floyd, colored, of Chicod township, charged with breaking and entering the home of L. P. Mills and stealing some lard. The case was heard in a previous term of court but resulted in mistrial. Indications were it would be completed during the early afternoon.

The Barnhill case has been in the limelight for the last two years and hearing was postponed three separate times to give the state more time to complete evidence.

The grower is charged with slaying his ward, Jesse Barnhill, for the purpose of obtaining $10,000 insurance which had been made payable to the defendant.

During the investigation of the murder charge, officers lodged another charge against Barnhill, that of manufacturing whiskey. They claimed to have definitely connected him with liquor operations in that community.

This was the principal case to be given consideration during the week although numbers of other actions of more or less importance were scheduled to be given consideration.

The grand jury, which recessed last Friday, again entered upon its activity today with indications that the report to Judge Grady would be ready for delivery during the latter part of the week.

Clinics have been held in virtually every section of the county and between 250 and 300 children have been operated on for bad tonsils and adenoids.

Operations are performed by throat and nose specialists of this city, assisted by members of the public health department.

Money for the work is being provided through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds allotted to the county.

ENROLL MEN FOR FOREST WORK HERE

Pitt County Will be Able to Place 107 Men in National Program

Work of enrolling men for work in the reforestation camp in Western North Carolina got under way in Pitt county today and indications were that it would be completed in short order.

John Clark was in charge of the enrolling office in Greenville and applications from other parts of the county were being received at the office of the Welfare Department.

K. T. Futrell, director of the Welfare department, has asked each township community to recommend men with dependants for this phase of government activity to relieve the unemployed situation and indications were that action would be prompt.

As soon as all recommendations have been received eligibles will be passed upon and prepared for service.

Mr. Futrell made it plain several days ago that only men with dependants would receive consideration of the department under the government ruling.

Pitt county's quota as announced several days ago is 107 and these must be between the ages of 18 and 25. They will receive pay at the rate of $1.00 a day and must sign to return $25 of the monthly pay check to their dependants back home.

Enrollment is being conducted rapidly in every part of the county at this time and when the program gets in full swing it was expected the unemployment situation would be greatly relieved.

SEN. ROBINSON CLOSE SERIES FOR INFLATION SERVICES HERE

Upholds Administration Program in Address Prepared For Associated Press

New York, April 24.—(AP)—The great New York financial center and nation at large, was assured by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, today in an address for delivery before the annual meeting of The Associated Press that the administration's inflation program would be followed prudently and as a weapon to end the race to depreciate currency.

"We must not enter into a race to cheaper money of to depreciate currency," said the administration floor leader in the Senate who represented President Hoover as principal speaker before hundreds of publishers from all over the country.

"Nevertheless, it may be helpful for the executive to attempt to secure international treaties or agreements designed to end the race to depreciate currencies, for until this is done and currencies are stabilized our producers and merchants will be handicapped and suffer less through diminution of exports and the increase of imports on the part of the United States."

Dr. Kincheloe Delivers Final Sermon at Immanuel Baptist Church Sunday

The two-week revival campaign came to a close at Immanuel Baptist Church last night with a powerful message by Dr. J. W. Kincheloe of Rocky Mount, on the subject "They All With One Consent Begone to Make Excuses."

While Dr. Kincheloe was delivering the final sermon here, Rev. W. H. Covert, pastor of the local church, was filling the pulpit of the First Baptist Church at Rocky Mount, of which Dr. Kincheloe is pastor.

The concluding service here was largely attended and the song service as usual, was inspirational and formed a splendid setting for the sermon. Good attendance has been in evidence both morning and evening throughout the two weeks the services have been in progress and the congregation and many others attending from day to day received great spiritual uplift.

Mr. Covert stated today that ten additions were received during the campaign with many others recognizing themselves to the work of the church.

Members of the congregation expressed appreciation to Dr. Kincheloe for the splendid sermons delivered from day to day. He is considered one of the foremost ministers of the denomination in this part of the state and his messages contributed greatly to the success of the series of services.

CONFERENCE CANNOT RULE IN BALL HERE

Northeastern Circuit Has no Jurisdiction Over Greenville; Not a Member

New reports from Kingston that Greenville high school had been debarred from further participation in the Northeastern Athletic Conference at a meeting of the organization in Kingston Saturday night failed to produce anything but smiles among faculty and student body here today.

Commenting on the reports, J. H. Rose, superintendent of city schools said Greenville could not be ruled out of the conference for alleged unethical conduct because she was not a member of the organization.

The story of the rift between Greenville high and the conference dates back to last January when the question of eligibility came up and Greenville withdrew.

When the time for baseball rolled around, it was stated, Greenville was asked by W. A. Graham, of Kingston, president, to take part in conference play again. After considerable deliberation Greenville decided to do so until it was discovered the conference would not be conducted under new rules promulgated by the University of North Carolina which govern play of all schools of the State.

At this juncture, Graham was informed that Greenville would take part in the conference schedule but would not ask for recognition.

The situation in nutshell form, it was said, is that the conference finding Greenville would benefit by playing an out-of-town man as allowed under State rules, changed its own regulations to prevent the player's participation.

Mr. Rose said the high school would continue to play under State rules, and therefore, the conference had no jurisdiction over athletic activities in this city.

MISTRIAL IN MURDER TRIAL

Jury Fails to Agree in Wilcey Johnson Trial at Asheville Today

Asheville, N. C., April 24.—(AP)—A mistrial was declared in Superior Court here today by Judge Felix Aley when the jury after deliberating 27 hours reported it could not agree on a verdict for Wilcey Johnson, charged with murdering Lonnie Russell in a filling station hold-up last September.

No date was set for the new trial as Johnson was taken back to jail. The jury reported it stood seven to five for conviction for second degree murder on the first ballot which remained unchanged. The case went to the jury Friday at 3:30 o'clock.

Johnson and Leon Langley, the latter under sentence of death after being convicted of the crime, were alleged to have killed Russell last September in an attempt to rob the filling station a short distance from the business district.

Both denied guilt and execution of Langley's sentence was stayed by appeal to the Supreme Court.

NEW BASIS OF GOLD USE IS BEING SOUGHT

Disarmament Enters Discussions as Roosevelt and MacDonald Make Boat Trip; Former Premier Herriot and Prime Minister Richard Bennett Enter Discussions; Hope For Agreement on International Gold Standard

Washington, D. C., April 24.—(AP)—France added weight today to the White House conversations in which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald have been working day and night to forge a new international gold standard and to open the way for real progress toward disarmament.

The arrival of Former Premier Herriot of France on the scene of these world important negotiations threw discussions into even a more advanced stage. Canada also entered the picture today with the coming of Prime Minister Richard Bennett.

For the first time the topic of disarmament entered the conversations yesterday and held the undivided attention during a seven-hour cruise down the Potomac.

Then on their return trip summoned experts who had been hard at work during the day, and in a session which lasted until midnight they got down to dollars and cents in discussing action by which the United States and Britain might return to a revised international gold standard.

FRANCE GETS WORLD GOLD

Large Shipments From Other Nations Received by "World Gold Refuge"

Paris April 24.—(AP)—France now is a golden fortress defending the few yellow back currency systems remaining in the world.

Gold is coming here by air and to what the newspaper call the "world's gold refuge," adding to the horde in the Bank of France.

Here also Belgium, Holland and Switzerland are staging a fight to remain on the standard while France directs the battle professing to be without fear for the franc by realizing the danger if other gold countries follow the United States.

Seven airplanes arrived at Le Bourget field Sunday from Amsterdam each with more than a ton and a half of gold or a total of $12,000,000. They carried 1,000 gold bars which were trucked to the Bank of France.

From Belgium and Switzerland for days trains have been bringing smaller shipments. By sea much gold has also come from the United States.

THE LITTLE MAN PAYS

The revenue bill stripped of all those provisions that would derive the taxes from the sources most able to pay, the power companies, utilities and foreign corporations, but carrying provision to place more taxes upon the masses through a sales tax comes up before the Senate as a whole for action today. We have contended from the start that there should be no sales tax of any kind in North Carolina except as a last resort to balance the budget after every cent obtainable from the sources able to pay had been included in the revenue bill. Rather than get the money from these sources the revenue bill as it now stands after being pulled to pieces by the Senate committee is indefensible in that any benefits that the masses might derive from the reduced ad valorem taxes will be offset by the sales tax these same masses will have to pay while the power companies and other large corporations, now showing net profits in the millions, even on a basis of inflated and fictitious investment, will receive still farther benefits to the extent of several hundreds of thousands of dollars through the reduced ad valorem rates.

We reiterate that the sales tax plan of raising the revenue in North Carolina at this time, while those who are making millions are handed still further reductions, is indefensible and no man who pretends to represent the masses of the people should vote for such a measure.

We agree heartily with the News and Observer that the action by the Senate committee if carried out by the Senate as a whole certainly gives color to the belief that the wealthy corporations are being permitted to dictate policies favorable to themselves whereby the little man will have to bear the burdens:

The Observer says: Thus the Senate proposed not only to place upon the people sales taxes which are indefensible in equity and justifiable only in the greatest emergency. It proposes further to raise that sales tax high enough to give tax reductions to corporations. There are many who have contended that the great taxpayers of the country, who have been paying on the fair policy of ability to pay, have been urging the adoption of a sales tax not only as an emergency measure but as a permanent system of taxation to relieve great wealth and great incomes of high taxation. The proposal of the Senate Committee to use the sales tax as a tax reduction means for great corporations in the midst of the depression would give color to this view.

The White Cockatoo by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Sue Tally confides to Jim Sundean that she has in her possession a token which will entitle her to share her father's huge fortune, and that she believes the man murdered in the hotel corridor near Sundear's door had some connection with her claim. Sundean is suspected of the murder, and David Lorn, a detective sent by Sue's brother to investigate her claim has helped him. Sue shows Sundean a letter she has from Francis.

CHAPTER 19 SUE'S HELPLESS STATE

Francis' letter began rather coolly: "My dear Madame: I glanced at Sue. She smiled into my eyes, but there was a determined look about her face and a spark of anger in her eyes. I guessed that brother Francis' reluctance had had its share in molding her determination to prove herself. I went back to the letter, reading it slowly.

"My dear Madame: Mr. Lorn's report has been favorable. However, I think it advisable that I and my lawyer visit you in order to make further inquiries. You will kindly await our arrival in Armeine, which may be somewhat delayed owing to pressing business matters. Of course, you understand that our projected trip to see you does not bind me in any way to grant you claim. While, as I say, my detective's report has been favorable, still there is one matter in particular to be satisfactorily proved. "You will understand that my sister's portion of the estate, if she is still alive and can prove her identity beyond a shadow of a doubt, is

I went back to the letter. "I thought of that," she said quietly. "But Francis would never believe that I'm Sue Tally if I turned up in another place. He seems—unduly suspicious already." "What about these records—marriage and birth and all that—are they, too, in a safe place?" "Oh, quite," she said at once. "They are in this safe in Loveston's office." "In Loveston's office?" I asked incredulously. "Why, yes," she said, looking at me in a puzzled way. "Why not? They — Grothe and Marcus Loveston have been very kind to me. They have been almost my only friends. They end—well, Marcel the porter, you know. He's been kind in many, many ways. And the Lovestons did everything they could for my mother." "Do they know anything of all this?" "Loveston isn't prying," she said, giving the suspicion in my tone. "But I think he means well. However, I have told them very little about it."

It was all typed, even to the "Your truly, Francis Tally," although he had placed very intricately interwoven initials below the typed signature. She was watching me thoughtfully. "Your brother Francis," I said slowly, "appears to be a somewhat rummy sort of person. Not over-clever, perhaps, but welcome his sister." Her eyes lit. "Then you do believe I'm what I say I am." "Why—see here, do I look as if I doubted it?" She shook her head slowly. "No," she said smiling and eyes shining. "No, you look as if you believed it." Her voice trembled a little. "It has not been very pleasant for me, you know. But I quite understand why he writes like that. He's got to be—cautious." "He's cautious enough," I said briefly. "One might even call him over-cautious."

I wondered if Francis had exactly the same participation of giving up half his fortune to his sister. I don't, of course, say all this, but she read my look. She said: "You must remember that he's been troubled with impostors, and that he has not even seen me since I was a baby. We have practically no recollections of each other. It would be natural, too, for him to be a little prejudiced against me. And then, besides, he did send the detective. That's something!" "That's something," I agreed dryly. I rose to give her the letter. Her hand approached mine, and I took it and the other in mine as I had there in the corridor only an hour or so be taken easily. Providing each operator assumes his part of the responsibility. A good driver can easily be recognized by the smooth handling of his car, easy turns, gentle stops, the running of the engine as fast as possible for the speed desired, and does not have to be told that turning corners at high speed does more damage to tires than 25 or 30 miles of road work. There is no exception rules in regard to the meaning of horn blowing. But it is reasonable to assume that constant blowing indicates that the car approaching you from behind wants to pass and desires a clear road. It is quite natural that a good driver will drive at various speeds, but this will be no means correspond with the oncoming car. And after all driving automobiles is nothing more than a racing game you are either in front or behind regardless of what speed you drive. To eliminate flashy driving and horn blowing which is proof that the motorist is a novice, we should at all times drive to the extreme right on what is known as the slow zone so fast moving traffic could pass through without zig-zagging or passing cars on both right and left sides. It might be a good idea if a slow zone was painted off the full length of college campus. J. M. ROGERSON.

Curiously enough, the demand for pretzels during the last ten years of the prohibition era has been greater than in the old beer-drinking days. This has been due largely to the fact that it came to grace the tables of the chic, served with soups, salads, ice creams, and naturally with all kinds of cold beverages. It was admitted into the exclusive circle of the cracker canape delicacies that grace the cocktail hour. In fact, during the prohibition period pretzels have remained amazingly alive and popular. Practically all the innovations in pretzel design have been made within the last few years. Pretzels have been marketed in the form of sticks, have been shaped into the letters of the alphabet, and have even appeared in the form of small one-bite fishes, following the lead of the animal crackers. But in spite of the out-cropping of all these novelties, it is the good old-fashioned double loop pretzel that continues to hold popular fancy. Also it received the blessing of the medical authorities and the dieticians, and thus found its way to the school lunch counter and to some extent shared honors with the after-school cookie. Dr. Arthur W. Thomas, Professor of Food Chemistry, Columbia University, recently made an

Beer Gives Boost To Pretzel Business

The age-old companionship between beer and pretzels will be stronger than ever after the prohibition era lapse, according to present indications. The National Biscuit Company reports that the demand for pretzel products from grocers, delicatessen dealers, hotels and restaurants has increased tremendously since President Roosevelt signed the beer bill. The company's two huge bakeries at York, Pa., and St. Joseph, Mo., each devoted especially to pretzel baking, have materially increased the working forces, and are on a twenty-four-hour daily production basis. York bakery, said to be the largest pretzel plant in the country, is now producing approximately 5,000,000 pretzels daily, of all varieties, and the St. Joseph bakery is running around 4,000,000 daily. The "bending" and baking of pretzels is one of the ancient handicrafts that grew up in central Europe in haustive study of the pretzel as a food. By way of summary, Professor Thomas found that the salt in pretzels stimulates the flow of saliva, provides beneficial constituents for the body fluids, insuring muscle tone. It supplies chlorine to make the acid of the gastric juice. It is especially beneficial to workers whose labor is of the vigorous kind which provokes perspiration. On the Job every minute they've just got to be right

Each and every Chesterfield!

Each tray of CHESTERFIELDS from the cigarette-making machines passes under the watchful eyes of inspectors, trained by long practice to see flaws such as an end of torn paper, or a poorly filled cigarette. And there's still another safeguard... two "electric detectives" on each packaging machine. Electric fingers "feel" each end of every cigarette, and throw out every imperfect package. Open your pack of Chesterfields, and look at them. It's no accident that every cigarette is round, firm and full. Somebody's been on the job every minute to give you what you want... a cigarette that's made right in every way and that's milder and tastes better.

My Beauty Hint

I believe in soap and water for the face, but before using it, I rub white petrolatum carefully into my eyebrows and eyelashes.

This keeps them softened and prevents the soap from reaching in which in time would result in a dryness and falling out of the brows and lashes.

After my skin is dried with a soft towel, it is but the work of a moment to remove the oily substance with a piece of absorbent tissue.

About NEW YORK

ABOUT NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York.—Adrienne Ames had done a lot of shopping and theater-going, but her New York-visit promised nothing unusually exciting until her chauffeur swung her magnificent limousine around Union ("Red") Square the other rainy afternoon.

Her sister was with her, going to tea at a swanky place on Washington Square. The car, turned west on Fourteenth Street from Fourth Avenue, was held up by a traffic light jam.

On the north side of wide Fourteenth a fellow was exhorting a mob that encircled him, despite the drizzle. His subject, unquestionably, was the people who still enjoy luxuries while their fellows suffer, starve and so on. At any rate, he pointed to the Ames limousine and yelled: "Looka there—that's what I mean!"

In the twinkling of an eye, dozen or so of the bolder listeners crowded around Miss Ames' car, glowering through the windows at her. They did nothing but glower, but Miss Ames told me it was an unforgettable second or so, until—

One of the moosters, evidently more up on his mavin' going than the others, exclaimed: "Why, I know you—you're Adrienne Ames, the movie actress."

Miss Ames smiled, naturally (admitting later that she was flattered at the recognition under such circumstances), and the other men ceased to glower and smiled back.

Apparently "Red Square's" grievances don't hold up against the charms of capitalism's movie capital.

Mae Murray Panic

Movie players perhaps would prefer to be left alone at times, especially speaking they thrive on recognition—would feel hurt if they didn't get it.

Mae Murray, who has spent some time in our midst, and who will return in June to appear in a Broadway play, was in a Spanish night club in Greenwich Village just before her departure for Hollywood. She was asked to dance the tango with an Argentine performer, and obliged.

When the dance was over, an irresponsible fellow left his table, took Miss Murray's hand in his and, kneeling, gave vent to his affections for her in glowing terms.

Some of the Latin gentlemen considered it an insult and were ready to throw the stranger right out. But Miss Murray calmed them, and said she got a big kick out of it all.

Belongs To Public

Miss Murray is one of the frankest of the frank when it comes to admitting fondness for public demonstrations in her behalf.

"I am not one who wants to hide," she told me. "I am always on parade."

"Oh, perhaps it is inconvenient at times. But, after all, I belong to the public."

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—(AP)—Billie Burke is finding the talkies much more interesting from the player's viewpoint than the old silents.

Miss Burke's first experience in Hollywood was in 1916, in the days of silent films, and now she admits modestly that she is trying very hard to find a place in the talkies.

She has made three of them to date, appearing in "A Bill of Divorcement," in "Dinner at Eight" and "Christopher Strong."

In the latter, Miss Burke's stage devotees may be pleased to know she is seen as one of those flirty, garrulous women in portraying whom she made something of a specialty.

"When we were making 'A Bill of Divorcement: the director, Mr. Zukor, almost had to hit me over the head to restrain the fluttering."

Miss Burke recalled. The result on the screen, however, was rather a disappointment to many who had seen her on the stage, because the character in the picture was staid.

The actress, widow of Florenz Ziegfeld, made some pictures in New York in the early days but had one experience in Hollywood. This was with the old Thomas Ince company.

"Pictures offered unbelievable salaries in those days, I remember I had offers from both Ince and Paramount," Miss Burke said. "At Paramount Mr. Cecil B. DeMille, when I met him, looked closely at my profile and said 'She'll do—her nose is all right!' but seemed terribly impertinent to me then—perhaps because I didn't know what a great judge he was. At any rate I went with Ince."

April 11 would have been the nineteenth anniversary of her marriage to Ziegfeld. Miss Burke said she plans a biography of him in collaboration with some writer.

In the autumn, perhaps, New York will see Billie Burke again in a play.

"As for pictures," she said, "I don't plan—I hope!"

KEEP MEDICINE CABINET BEYOND CHILD'S REACH

The medicine cabinet in a house where there are little children should be placed so high that they cannot reach it even by standing on a chair. It should have a firm catch which they cannot readily learn to manage. The children's tooth brushes and soap and other bathroom necessities should be kept on a little accessible shelf of their own.

Took CARDUI for Pains, Cramping

"I have taken Cardui for irregular trouble, also for pains and cramping, and it helps me," writes Mrs. Maxie Crumme, of Texas, Arkansas, Texas. "I gave Cardui to my daughters and it helped them very much. They had pains and cramps, and it did them good."

Cardui is given the credit for relieving so many cases of womanly suffering that it is widely and favorably known. Druggists, everywhere, sell it.

If you are weak, run-down, suffering monthly, take Cardui. Take it for a reasonable length of time and try it thoroughly. As your health improves, you will share the enthusiasm of thousands of women who have written to say: "Cardui helped me."

Table Mats Useful

In many homes table mats and runners are being used in place of large table cloths. Some are gayly colored prints, some plain colors. Mats made of gingham with bright checks give an air of informality to the table. If the mats are home-made, select colors and materials which will stand many washings. The mats may be fringed or hemmed, depending upon the style selected.

Boiling Requires Precautions

Washington.—Boiling vegetables calls for greater precautions to preserve the food value, says the Bureau of Home Economics. For cabbage, turnips, onions, cauliflower and brussels sprouts use only enough water to cover and boil gently. Cook green vegetables such as turnip tops, kale or spinach in a very small amount of water, or none at all except the moisture which clings to the leaves after washing.

Dish towels should be soaked in boiling water into which a dash of soda has been sprinkled.

Apple Float a Party Dessert

A simple dessert for a children's party is apple float with whipped cream. For a half dozen guests the white of one egg stiffly beaten and stirred into the apple sauce lifts this dessert from one of dullness to something delicate and tempting. The dash of whipped cream on the top further improves it.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington, D. C.—The "little congress"—that organization on Capitol Hill composed of the secretaries of Senators and Representatives—has rivaled the Congress itself in the working out of the "new deal."

This group of young men and women, who by day labor in Congressional offices and once a week at night meet in the caucus room of the House office building to debate the problems before Congress at the moment, in many instances, have "legislated" weeks ahead of the real Congress.

Prohibition repeal was approved here long before Congress took final action. Beer, the economy bill and employment relief measures were passed weeks and months before Congress gave its approval.

As a matter of fact, not only has the "little congress" forecast the action of the House and Senate in regard to these measures, but the distribution of yeas and nays has been surprisingly the same.

Still Prophetic? Whether its reputation as a legislative prophet will continue remains to be seen. At a recent session recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States was approved.

The "little congress" is conducted in much the same manner as the Congress itself. Its rules are about the same as those which govern the House of Representatives. And the organization is much the same.

"Mr. Speaker" at the present is George Stewart of California. "Party leaders" are named to lead the debate on each question, but every member usually manages "to get time" to express his views. There are few special rules limiting debate.

The members of the "little congress" don't pretend to represent the views of their Congressmen. They may agree with the boss during the day, but when they get into their own sessions the secretaries often take the opposite side.

There's even a little mud-slinging at times. Both men and women are eligible for membership, but at the present time the majority is men.

"It's a good cross section of the Congress itself," says Speaker Stewart.

It has served, too, as a good training ground for Congress. Several of the secretaries who have taken prominent parts in the "little congress" are now serving as members of the House.

Young Paul Kvale, of Minnesota, is one. Kvale was his father's secretary for years on Capitol Hill and headed the "little congress" at one time. At his father's death Kvale took his place in the House.

Another youngster—W. Carlton Mobley of Georgia—elected to fill out the unexpired term of his boss, Representative Rutherford of Georgia, who died last session, took an active part in the proceedings of the "little congress."

REVIVAL OPENS HERE TONIGHT (Continued From Page One) first question addressed to man by God was used to bring the hearers to a realization of the importance of the opportunities that are now before us in these meetings, and to call upon the membership of the church to dedicate themselves to untiring efforts to make these services most effective during the stay of Mr. Gaines.

An excellent response was manifested at the close of the service as a large number of members gathered at the pulpit for re-dedication.

The evening service was conducted by the Baptist Young People's Department, and they rendered an excellent service under the leadership of Hugh Bradley, director. Every member participating in the service gave of their best, and received an appreciative response from the congregation. The young people were commended for their fine work.

Tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock morning devotions will begin in preparation for the day.

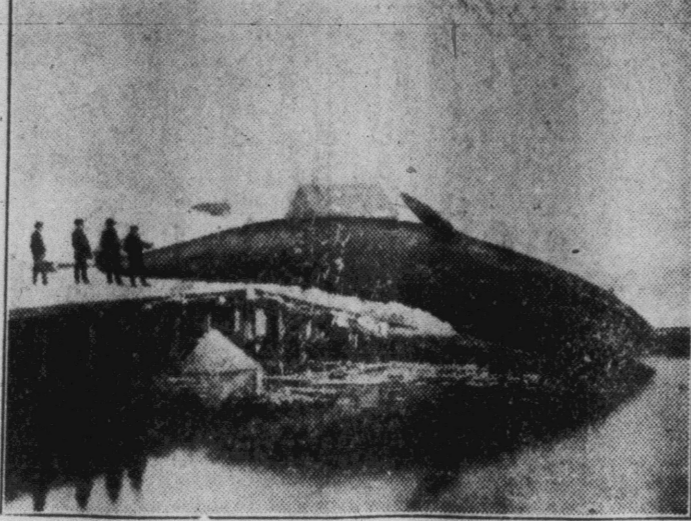

How's Your Health DIET AND BLOOD PRESSURE It is a common belief that the excessive consumption of animal foods, especially meat, leads to the development of high blood pressure.

In order that these beliefs might be subjected to something in the nature of a scientifically controlled test, lasting a little over two years, of the blood pressure recordings of two different groups of men living on different types of diet.

The two groups consisted of monks belonging to different orders. In one group there were 110 brothers belonging to the orders whose rules forbid the use of meat, fish, eggs and butter. The other group included 115 monks from the orders permitted to eat meat four and five times a week respectively.

When the average or mean blood pressures of these two groups were compared, it would found that vegetarians at all ages from 20 to 90, had a considerably lower blood pressure. The difference was greatest in the age group between 60 and 70, where the average blood pressure for the vegetarians was 120 millimeters of mercury and that for the meat eaters 160.

Despite these figures, however, it cannot be concluded that the difference in the blood pressure, to the apparent advantage of the vegeta-

The familiar cry of the whaler, "Thar she blows," can be sounded here Saturday, April 29, when the famous whale of San Clemente arrives in this city, to be placed on exhibition.

Captured near the island of San Clemente off the southern California coast, the gigantic mammoth of the sea was embalmed and is now being taken on a transcontinental tour.

The whale is more than 55 feet long and weighs 68 tons. It is being transported on a specially designed car and is enclosed in a glass case. The curious spectacle, as reported to have created intense interest at every point thus far visited on the tour, with great throngs taking advantage of the opportunity to view the great carcass in detail at close range.

Some idea of the size of the whale can be gained from the statement that the heart, when removed in connection with the embalming process, was found to weigh close to 1286 pounds. The tongue that rested between the gigantic jaws weighed 600 pounds.

From the massive head to the powerful tail, the ponderous bulk has been perfectly preserved and is said to present an extraordinarily

Grand Jury to Probe SHOOTING OF NEGRO. Coolidge, April 24.—There seems a possibility that the death of John (Red Shirt) Davis, Georgia negro killed in North Coolee while resisting arrest on last Sunday night, by Special Officer Jess Saunders, will be placed before the next meeting of the grand jury, according to information obtained from Davie County officials. The man was shot according to the officer when he reached for a hip pocket in what the officer thought was an attempt to draw a weapon after a quart of whiskey had been found in his house. A coroner's jury headed by Coroner W. E. Kennen exonerated the officer, but when the body was being prepared for burial a second bullet hole was found in the negro's back in addition to the one in his breast which examining physicians stated caused his death. This was the first man killed by Davie County officers in more than forty years the records reveal.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

Speaking of ballyhoo in connection with the forthcoming Battle of the Maxes under Promoter J. Dempsey's auspices, Reddy Gallagher of Denver columns these words of warning:

"They must make Baer a serious young man who realizes it's his big opportunity and who is prepared to fight accordingly, etc., etc. They'd better soft pedal the laugh-clown-jugg stuff the romances with Park Avenue gals, the gay sayings and eccentric doings of the lapping Lochinvar out of the vest. They turned on that kind of 'heat' once and look what happened!

"Max must be a good boy, too, and learn his lessons. He must be neither absent nor tardy. If it's the make-or-break fight for Promoter Dempsey, it's also zero hour for Fighter Baer. They'll sink or swim together.

"Baer has the ability to beat Schmelling, but he must polish his temperament as well as his punches. If he doesn't, the methodical German will quietly cut him down. Fighting in furies won't be enough for Baer. He's going to have to fight calmly and deliberately as long as the battle wages.

"There'll be time enough to talk about plans of battle later. Let's go back and continue our analysis of Mr. Dempsey. You know we're likely to wake up some morning and find him as our premier promoter. At least, he's likely to be the 'front man'.

"Perhaps the Garden might even sign him to replace James J. Johnston. It will be interesting to watch Dempsey's development. Whatever happens, you can be sure they won't crowd him off the sport pages."

Sixteen Straight For Crowder It won't stand as a record because there's no allowance for a winter's rest in the middle of a winning streak, but it was a noteworthy fact, largely overlooked in the opening baseball festivities, that Alvin Crowder pitched his sixteenth consecutive victory for Washington when he subdued the Athletics in the first start of the 1933 campaign.

Crowder rang up fifteen wins in a row at the close of last season, the best in his career.

The American record is sixteen for a single season, shared by Joe Wood (1912), Walter Johnson (1912) and Lefty Grove (1931).

The all-time major league mark is nineteen, set by Rube Marquard in 1912, the Big Strike Year. Both pitched to the New York Giants.

An Old Pal Departs It is a matter of serious concern that the famous "Little Red Book," the last word on baseball records and statistics, apparently will not be published by Spalding's this year. The answer, of course, is that the "Little Red Book" is "in the red" now, although I doubt there ever was any money in it.

It's disappearance would work a severe hardship on the boys who need the volume for quick reference when an unusual performance turns up. There's no other source of the ancient lore, so complete or so authentic.

Old Joe Fan, however, doesn't seem so worried about his baseball figures as he used to be. He can take 'em or leave 'em alone or accept what KNHE reads in the papers.
