France Will Seek Monetary Truce For U. S. Tariff Plan

STATEMENT FROM SOURCE NEAR HERRIOT

French Government Will Use all of Its Resources to Keep Nation on Gold Basis Despite Doubt it Can Be Done; Herriot Returning To France After Visit To Washington For Roosevelt Conversations

S. S. Isle de France at Sea, May 2.—(AP)—The French government believes a monetary truce should be its compensation for the tariff truce proposed by the United States.

This was learned from a source close to former Premier Herriot, who is returning to Paris after conversations with President Roosevelt.

FASHION SHOW HERE TONIGHT

C. Heber Forbes To Show Living Models At the Community Fair

One of the main attractions of the community fair which opened at the Star warehouse last night will be the summer fashion show to be presented tonight at eight o'clock by C. Heber Forbes, Evans street ready-to-wear store.

Living models will trip across the central stage at the fair dressed in the latest creations of the world of fashion. Every kind of dress for every hour of the summer day or evening will be shown by the young women representing the pulchritude of the city and community.

Special emphasis will be put on clothes for sport wear. The latest creations in bathing suits will also be exhibited.

During the style parade, Miss Bessie Brown, well known soloist of Greenville, will sing. This will be the highlight of the musical program to be provided during the style show.

Nearly forty young women will wear the creations carried in stock by the popular ready-to-wear store and they were expected to form an entrancing picture as they paraded across the stage and out into the Japanese Garden.

The display, it was said today, will be one of the most extensive ever shown here, although the firm has staged many fashion shows of note in recent years.

The showing will embrace virtually all creations of the fashion world and hundreds were expected to be on hand to view them. Those taking part as models are:

Misses Catherine Uiter, Louise Tadlock, Julia Gaylord, Sallie Edwards, Mary Raymond Teel, Jean Reddes, Marian Wilson, Martha Scottville, Agnes Gaskins, Helen Burnett, Sue Barrett, Eleanor Barr, Gretchen Willard, Margaret Ward, Florence Taft, Pattie Whitehurst, Mary Council Home, Jane Hall, Elizabeth Moore, Floise Garrett, Margaret Bostic, Huldah Nobles, Laura Fleming, Laurene Skinner, Mary Lou White, Emma Frances Hardee, Janice McGowan, Virginia Jenkins, Pearl Laurens, Blanche Stanton, Virginia Jones, Rosamond VanDyke, Helen White, Laura Smith, Bonnie Bell, Windham, Helen Fleming, and Lynnette Dixon.

"And that means cussin', too," said Chief Vice Fesperman of the Charlotte, N. C. rural police, as he nailed a "No Profanity" sign to the wall at headquarters.

Three Points Takes Effect In Greenville

"Three point two" is beginning to take effect in Greenville in spite of the fact that it is being suspended at only a small number of places.

Today a painter was busy engaged in painting the dome of the courthouse. He was standing still apparently contemplating what to do next when a pedestrian passed along the street, glanced at the clock in the dome and said, "My, I didn't know they had put a statue on the courthouse."

We leave it to you, was it "three point two" or in the phraseology of Amos 'n Andy, "just sump'in."

GAINES TELLS OF RICH FOOL

Raleigh Minister Paints Graphic Picture of Wild Dash For Tinsel

Good crowds continue to attend the series of revival services which have been in progress at Memorial Baptist Church the past week and much interest is being manifested in the splendid sermons delivered by Rev. Louis S. Gaines, of Raleigh, and the delightful song program directed by Rev. A. W. Feischmann, pastor of the church.

The revival will close Friday evening. During intervening nights services will be under the auspices of various departments of the church.

Tonight's service will be sponsored by the C. J. Ellen Bible Class and the subject of the sermon will be "The Three Appearings of Jesus." The subject Wednesday morning will be "Burdens and How to Bear Them."

The service last night was sponsored by the Ladies Aid and Women's Missionary Societies, and a good crowd was present.

The subject of the sermon was "The Affluent Fool," and proved to be one of the best of the series of services.

The text was taken from the 15th through the 23rd verses of the 12th chapter of Luke. Mr. Gaines carefully portrayed the affluent fool of the Bible who thought more of the material side of life than he did his soul, and denied himself of the spiritual blessings of life. He declared the affluent fool attempts to satisfy himself with the things about him and stands in his own light.

ROOSEVELT NOT TO GO TO LONDON

Washington Scouts Report From London That President Will Attend Confab

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—President Roosevelt is trying to arrange to get to Chicago to open the world fair there in June, and he also plans to spend most of the summer out of Washington. His trip to Chicago is only tentative at present because he has agreed to go to Annapolis on June 10 to deliver diplomas to Naval Academy graduates.

The fair is scheduled to open that day. But it was said today at the White House that if the fair was postponed a day or two the President might make the Western trip.

London, May 2.—(AP)—Special dispatches received today by British newspapers from the United States saying President Roosevelt may attend the World Economic Conference considerably surprised members of the mission of Norman H. Davis, American Ambassador at large.

(The Washington government has made not an announcement that President Roosevelt intends to go to London.)

An American official in London believes that the President is making any such plans, but the dispatches proved a sensation for afternoon newspapers.

It was said one of the statesmen who recently went to Washington to confer with President Roosevelt urged him to come to London on the ground that this would add prestige to the conference.

The two outstanding foreign statesmen who have conferred with Mr. Roosevelt recently are Premier MacDonald of Britain and Edouard Herriot, special French envoy.

COBB HEADS ROTES HERE

Other Officers Elected at Weekly Meeting of Local Organization

K. W. Cobb was elected president of the local Rotary Club at the regular weekly meeting of the organization last night. He succeeds Rev. A. W. Feischmann, who served for the usual term of one year.

Herbert ReBarker, member of the faculty of East Carolina Teachers College, was chosen vice-president and J. C. Gaskins was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Mr. Cobb has long been active in the work of the organization here. He is fully familiar with the high post to which he was elected having presided over several meetings of the organization last summer during the illness of Mr. Feischmann. He has also served on a number of important committees.

Mr. Feischmann presided over the meeting last night and the program was in charge of Mr. Cobb, chairman of the Boys' Work Committee. Ralph Deal, well-known humorist of East Carolina Teachers College, was the principal speaker.

Instead of dealing with the humorous side of life the speaker called to the attention of the Rotarians the need of something to occupy the attention of boys during the summer months after they leave school.

He proposed the formation of a junior baseball league, expressing belief this would arouse sufficient enthusiasm to hold the attention of the city's youth during most of the summer.

The clubmen listened attentively to the suggestions and it was indicated the matter would be taken under consideration.

Five young women from the college provided a delightful musical program and literally sang their way into the hearts of the tired, careworn business and professional men.

Those taking part in the program were: Misses Melba Watson, LaRue Manrum, Mary Bell Watson, Beth Brantley and Emma Lee Davis. Miss Melba Watson was the pianist.

FEW DEALERS IN BEER IN PITT COUNTY

Only Eighteen Places Handling Legalized Beverage In Entire County

Pitt county, it is believed, leads the state from the standpoint of lack of enthusiasm over the advent of legalized beer. If records of the issuance of licenses is to be taken as an index to the situation.

The county tax collector said today he had issued only eighteen licenses for the entire county. This will not begin to compare with some of the large cities of the state where the figure is considerably larger.

Ayden and Bethel probably take the record for towns of similar size. Records show that only one dealer is handling beer in each of these towns. Greenville, with the largest population of any town in the county, led in the number of beer dispensers, seven having been issued license to do business here.

The rural communities are going beerless but how long the condition will continue is problematical. It was first thought that many filling stations of the country would carry a liberal supply of the beverage but so far as known not but one or two places outside the corporate limits of towns are handling the fluid.

Consumption of the beverage is much smaller than anticipated. Dealers report lack of business, due largely to the high prices being charged. Twenty and twenty-five cents a bottle is the price demanded in all stores here and with the public pocketbook looking like an elephant had stepped on it, the majority of people are still drinking city water like they did before beer was legalized.

NAZI TROOPS SEIZE UNION

Great Stroke For Labor Taken by Followers of Hitler

Berlin, May 2.—(AP)—Adolph Hitler's Brown Shirts in a surprise out-storm took the last hurdle today on the road to Nazi domination of the labor movement by occupying headquarters of the Free Trades Union throughout Germany.

Socialist leaders of the union which has 5,000,000 members, were arrested. Trade unions of the country are to be made national rather than international, Nazi leaders said.

Having vigorously smashed the Socialist Democratic party, the Nazis realize in the ideology of Marxism—even though leaders outwardly are attempting to swing them into line with the concept of Germany.

In Berlin Nazi storm troops occupied national headquarters of the union and the gigantic building of the Metal Workers' Union.

EVERYBODY VICTORIOUS IN ELECTION

Mayor and Five Members of Board Re-Elected Without Contest Here

Everybody won in the municipal election here yesterday and nobody suffered the humiliation of losing. The affair was one of the most colorless ever held here, but the mayor and four members of the Board of Aldermen were re-elected without contest and a fifth member went in the same way.

A total of 143 votes was cast for Mayor R. C. Flanagan and 139 for all five aldermen.

The election was held at the courthouse, and at no time during the day did a crowd gather around the polling place. The few who voted trickled into the building from time to time and voted listlessly and without the usual spirit of contest.

The vote for the aldermen follows: Fleming, First Ward, 22; Warren Second Ward, 43; Duncan, Third Ward, 27; Boyd, Fourth Ward, 17; Hobgood, Fifth Ward, 30.

There is yet a vacancy on the Board which probably will be filled at the next meeting, it being that of J. L. Hassell, who died recently.

It was the first time in years that a city election has taken place without contest in a single ward, and the matter of voting yesterday was purely of a perfunctory nature.

The candidates were victims of numbers of jeers yesterday, but they took everything with the smile, not being troubled by the outcome of the final count of ballots and the prospect of having political honors snatched from them.

100 CHINESE SLAUGHTERED

Mohammedans Capture City of Yarkland in Warfare Against Chinese

Pelting, May 2.—(AP)—One hundred Chinese were slaughtered when Mohammedan rebels captured Yarkland, an ancient city of 60,000 population in the East Turkestan province of Sinkiang, foreign dispatches from Kaschar said today.

All foreigners in the Yarkland area, including missionaries, were believed to have escaped.

The incident was one of many similar ones in the long continuing civil war between Chinese and Mohammedans.

Late News Flashes

Today In The Legislature. Raleigh, May 2.—(AP)—The controversial biennial revenue bill with its modified three per cent sales tax was passed by the Senate today and returned to the House for concurrence of amendments.

The House got the money bill at its afternoon session. Speaker Harris ruled it could not be voted on today but it could be discussed. The House recessed to meet again tonight.

The measure differs materially from the draft passed by the House and sent to the Senate ten days ago and though Senate change of the original position on many items to try and get the House concurrence without deferring the bill to committee itself was in doubt.

Members of the educational committee of both divisions held long sessions to try and get the school machinery bill reported but did not complete the draft Judge N. A. Sinclair and former Senator Rivers Johnson urged unlimited permis-

MACHINERY FOR SCHOOL ACT PUSHED

Legislative Committee Make Effort to Complete Work on Measure

Raleigh, N. C., May 2.—(AP)—Driving to get a school machinery act bill reported to the Legislature as soon as possible, the two education committees today held a joint session.

Judge N. A. Townsend, of Charlotte, appeared before the committee to present a proposal to limit supplements to State funds to increase teachers' salaries. He pointed out the text trade high school of Charlotte as an example where lack of supplements to the eight months' school fund would defeat the purpose of the school.

Proposals that the State fund of $16,000,000 for standard eight months' school term be allowed to supplement up to ten per cent on authority of the State Board of Equalization and the local governing and school board met opposition from Townsend in that the plan included provisions that supplements above 10 per cent must be submitted to vote of the people.

Adjournment of the Legislature may come to depend upon the content of the school machinery act.

If the bill contains a provision allowing the levying of local taxes for schools it will take it at least six days to pass it, meaning the Legislature cannot adjourn this week.

Under suspension of rules the House passed the clarifying beer bill to limit term of licenses to one year.

The Senate passed and returned to the House the measure changing the basis for taxing buses and trucks operated on the highways.

The House killed a bill to place regulation on embalmers and funeral directors but passed a measure to set up the machinery for operation of a consolidated department of revenue, highway patrol and gas inspection.

A measure to prohibit "singling, nesting and overcharging" tobacco was passed by the House. The bill is aimed at the practice of placing high grade tobacco where buyers will see it when the leaf is sold at auction while inside of the pile may be a lower grade.

Lower Mississippi Valley and Regions Of Arkansas and Louisiana Suffer Heavy Loss in Two Day Attack of Elements; Storms Follow Blast That Took Eight Lives Over Week-End

Shreveport, La., May 2.—Spasmodic tornadoes that lashed lower Mississippi Valley for two days left behind them at least 89 dead and more than 1,000 injured and a litter of wreckage in cities and rural communities of Louisiana, Arkansas, and Mississippi today.

Following on the heels of a week-end blast that snuffed out eight lives in a blow at Lake Village, Arkansas, Greenville and Yazoo, Mississippi, May Day storms dashed a crazy pattern over Louisiana and Arkansas, added 81 to the death list and damaged five towns, including the important parish of the State of Meinden, Louisiana.

BOARD TALKS ABOUT BEER

New Legislation Considered at Monthly Meeting of Commissioners Here

The Board of County Commissioners considered beer legislation recently passed by the Legislature in their regular monthly meeting at the courthouse here yesterday.

The commissioners went over four or five applications for beer licenses and were to take up several others at a later date. They previously had instructed the tax collector to go ahead with the issuance of license to dealers who had obtained license from duly incorporated towns and cities of the county.

It was stated that eighteen county licenses had been issued since legislation of the beverage, and the tax collector was instructed to keep a close check on dealers to see that they do not operate without proper authority.

The board also went over the grand jury's report recently prepared in criminal court and indicated all recommendations would be carried out to the letter.

Among the principal recommendations was that referring to worn out school buses jeopardizing the life of hundreds of children of the county, and while the matter has already been taken up by the Department of Education, the commissioners were cognizant of the serious import of the jury's action and will attempt to help the educational department improve conditions.

In addition to these two matters, the Board handled a considerable amount of routine work and adjourned.

Roosevelt To Visit Chicago

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Officials familiar with President Roosevelt's plans today scouted reports that the Chief Executive planned to travel to London to the World Economic Conference.

They manifested belief that while the President would follow developments of the conference closely and keep in touch with the American delegation, he would leave the actual participation in the conference to the American delegation.

WHERE WILL THEY SWIM?

Yesterday throughout the country was designated as Child Health Day, and this week is known as Child Health Week. While the topic is in the news, isn't it a good time for our local people to begin to take steps toward providing some recreational facilities for our young folks during the coming school vacation period.

Under the plan of operation during the past two years a heavy financial burden has fallen upon those sponsoring the swimming pool for the kids and whether or not the undertaking will be repeated this year is problematical.

There is no question that we should have a suitable place for our children to swim during the summer in order that we might keep them out of the river and other unsafe places, but if we are to have same it should be strictly a municipal or community project instead of just a few endeavoring to put it over. We understand that if the city accept it they can obtain the Westbrook pool and now while the relief labor is available such enlargement or improvements as are deemed necessary may be carried out at little cost.

WHY THE DIFFERENCE?

(Wilson Times) In Canada right across the border, power is sold for two cents per kilowatt, while in America just across the line it is sold for from five to seven cents to consumers. Why is this? The same kind of water furnishes the energy and the same kind of dams are built to hold the water to furnish the pressure and the same kind of steam is used to generate the power to turn the turbines, and yet the power companies are so poor they are unable, not only to furnish power at anything like the cost in Canada to the consumer, but they are also too poor to help pay adequate taxes to support the government.

The White Cockatoo by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Two murders have been committed in Jim Sundean's little hotel in Southern France, and two attempts have been made on his life. It all is linked, Sundean and David Lorn, the detective, believe, with an attempt to secure the token with which Sue Baily must prove her right to half of her father's millions. The police suspect the wounded Sundean of the murders, but his chief concern is for the welfare of Sue Tally. With Lorn, he goes to look after her.

Chapter 26 THE CONFERENCE

She went with us back to my room. We chose that I room without thinking about it. I suppose because we had met and talked there before and the wing was deserted and thus we would be put to have no observers. The police, Lorn said dryly, were stationed at various places around the hotel.

"We're like rats in a trap," said Sue suddenly and caught her breath. And so began another strange conference in that old-fashioned room in the cold, deserted wing, with the fire crackling now and then, and the wind blowing in the court below and outside the windows.

Lorn and I did most of the talking. Sue was very quiet and pale, and there had been tears on her cheeks. Our talk was not long, for we were all desperately weary and shaken with the ugly affair of the afternoon. It was, however, important; particularly important in view of what happened later.

"See here," I said abruptly. "I know you consider the Lovschlems your friends. But I want to suggest something. Why don't you tell Madame that you've put the token in a bank? A bank in Paris or London or somewhere."

"Don't tell me where you have it—perhaps that's exactly what you did—at any rate, I think you're wise to keep it whereabouts a secret. But that will put them off."

"Always providing," interrupted Sue dangerously, "that my friends who have been my only friends for a long and hard year are planning to murder me for an inheritance that they even know I've got."

"Always providing that," I said, wishing I could shake her. "It was curious easily a little flame of queer antagonism could leap up between us; it was as if for a flash each resented something in the other. I resented her not agreeing with me, and then I knew that somehow she had a kind of hold upon me or I shouldn't have hated her disagreeing with me, and so then something in me resented that hold upon me."

And in another second there was no feeling of resentment at all, only a warm kind of pleasure because she was there, sitting quietly before me, her bright head bent, and the fine angle of her chin faintly pink against the black velvet of her tightly buttoned coat, her slender feet on the rug, her whole lovely body slim and fine and yet beautifully rounded.

I said in a matter-of-fact way: "We can scarcely help wondering about the Lovschlems. You admitted that your mother might have told them something. They are here—managing the hotel. Who else is there to suspect?"

"We've been over all this before," said Sue. "And, anyway, you have no evidence against either of them."

"That's quite true," said Lorn dryly. "There's no one definite thing we've got against Lovschlem."

"Unless we can prove he knew the man who was first murdered. As for Marcel's murder—anyone—everyone in the hotel is open to suspicion."

"Do you still feel it may be limited to the hotel?" asked Sue. "That—surely that can't be true. I can't believe that the Lovschlems are involved. You and Mr. Lorn and Father Robart are self-explanatory. The cook is just a fat and rather stupid cook—and anyway, he wasn't here the night of the first murder. Marianne—that's absurd. Mrs. Byng—equally absurd. And I didn't do it."

"And there's no one else.—No, it can't be limited to us in the hotel. After all, someone could easily have got into the place this afternoon—no reason at all why he shouldn't have walked boldly in, either front high cost of power in this country, in comparison with the same costs in Canada. In Canada the companies do not pay the enormous salaries that are paid in America. Canada does not allow the tremendous capital inflation that America does, with its watered stock on which the companies are endeavoring to pay dividends. Canada does not allow bonuses given to the presidents of their companies, and to the favored stock holders who get an extra dividend because they are influential.

Let us hope that President Roosevelt will squeeze much of the water out of the companies, and give the little stock holder a chance, and regulate rates and the amount of stock issued as he proposes doing in order to make the railroads compete and pay expenses.

There is no competition in power rates in America. The big companies are tied up in working agreements, and they fight legislatures that are trying to make them pay a just proportion of the taxes in accordance with the amount of money they make; and to pay the small stock holder a fair dividend on his stock. When Muscle Shoals gets to work in the south, and the St. Lawrence development in the north, we shall see lower rates for power, and the people will receive some benefit.

Smith testified he answered a knock at his door just at nightfall December 25, but found no one there. An instant later he heard a hail from about thirty feet away and then a lead shot struck him in the face and chest. He ducked, and another charge passed over him.

or kitchen entrance, shot Marcel, and escaped without being seen." Her voice trembled over Marcel, and I experienced a strange little surge of tenderness toward her.

"And as to the night of the first murder?" I said.

"Oh,"—she spread out her hands in a hopeless gesture—"I don't know. Anything could have been done that night. Perhaps that way through the hotel gate was known to more people than I thought. At any rate, it's not to be thought of that the murderer is here, now, in this hotel. But I promise you, Mr. Sundean, that I shall be very careful."

Her breath caught in what was very near a sob. "How could I help being careful after what I've seen?" Her face was tired and white. There were slender blue marks under her eyes, I said:

"See here. We'll cut this talk short. We can finish it tomorrow. The main thing is for you to keep your door locked and bolted to-night. And the first thing in the morning—"

I hesitated, for after all what I was about to say was Lorn's business, not mine. But I continued: "The first thing in the morning it might not be a bad idea to get the papers that you gave to Lovschlem out of his safe and take them to the bank."

"That's what Mr. Lorn advised," said Sue wearily. "Very well. I'll do it. But the Lovschlems—"

She broke off abruptly and said instead, "I'm going now."

We both went with her to her room. Lorn stood with her at the door while I searched her room; there was, of course, no one hiding in the great wardrobe or behind the curtains or in the bathtub, and there was little other place in which to hide.

But I wanted to be certain, and I waited in the corridor until she had whispered "Good-night" and vanished and I heard the key turning and then immediately the bolt slipping into place.

The corridors were deserted, and there had been no one to see us. Lorn turned in another direction. I walked toward the north-wing corridor again. The halls were half dark, as usual.

It was just as I turned suddenly around the angle above the steps that I thought I saw a darker shadow down the length of the corridor ahead of me which moved quickly out of sight beyond the angle of the intersecting corridor.

I ran lightly and rapidly toward where it had been, but when I reached the angle there was nothing but blank doors and narrow halls leading back to a window at its end.

Probably, I told myself, turning finally into the long bare corridor of the north wing with its cold shining windows all along the court side and its bitter draft—probably a mere optical illusion composed of nothing but shadow.

The court was crazy again that night; though the wind was not as strong as it had been, and the gusts were not as wild with their flying shadows. Still, it did not look inviting; neither did the little iron stairway descending into darkness.

In the turmoil of the day I had again neglected to ask Lovschlem for a key, and I again, with a kind of grim amusement at myself, propped the table against the door. I was determined to stay in that room, but I never liked it.

Neither did I like the cold, deserted wing with its mysterious creaks and rustles. And neither, I confessed to myself, had I liked that flying shadow.

It had had, somehow, a substantiality one does not associate with mere shadows. My shoulder was aching and throbbing damnably, and I took one of the pills the doctor had left me and finally went to sleep.

I awoke with a start. I'd been dreaming wildly of Father Robart's black soutane with its full black skirt and of Sue's red slippers and the wind. The wind had lulled again into such quiet that probably the mice in the old walls were noisy again.

I listened, but if a noise had awakened me I heard no further sound. And if a prowling ghost had come to visit me, awakening me with a passing touch or sign, then it was a lively ghost indeed, for I smelled very definitely the odor of tobacco.

I sniffed again and sat up. There was no ghost about it. Someone, somewhere near me, was smoking.

THREE GO ON TRIAL FOR CHRISTMAS ATTACK Laurinburg, N. FARM NOTES

This office has been advised that the farm census, which is now being taken by the tax listers of Pitt County, will be the basis upon which the President's farm relief program will be handled in 1934. Therefore, it is important that every farmer in the county who anticipates any relief from the President's program report his full acreage of cash crop and livestock on hand because on the basis of these reports, reductions in acreage requirements will be based. Farmers who participate in refunds from the processing tax that is to be put on to aid the farmers will be required to make certain deductions and those farmers who do not turn in a full acreage would be unnecessarily penalized. Therefore, I am urging that every farmer in the county give an accurate farm report to the tax listers during the month of May.

Swine W. J. Smith and J. V. Taylor are in Baltimore this week disposing of two carloads of hogs for the following growers: Jasper Taylor, B. F. Manning, F. C. Martin, Jr., J. L. Gurganus, J. V. Taylor, E. A. Tripp, M. O. Blount, and W. J. Smith.

This shipment makes a total of eight cars this season. The unusual low price for hogs in connection with the corn shortage in Pitt County reduced the number of shipments in Pitt County considerably below that of last year. However, the farmers are holding on to their breeding stock and are in a position to take advantage of any increase in price that might result from the farm relief program.

Curb Market The curb market offers twice each week the following variety of vegetables and farm produce for the buying public of Greenville to make selections for their table: Asparagus, cabbages, Sabbage, onions, radishes, lettuce, potatoes, greens, green peas, carrots, beets, spinach, turnips, sweet potatoes, strawberries, cream, slim milk, buttermilk, butter, jellies, jams, preserves, pickles, canned goods, walnuts and pecans (shelled), meal, eggs, meats, broilers, fryers, hens and a large variety of flowers.

Since the removal of the material from the torn down buildings on the grounds there is plenty of parking space near the building which is an added attraction to those who desire to buy on the market.

Beginning this week special prices will be made on certain articles sold on the market each week, thereby enabling all of the buyers to secure bargains on each sales day. Articles carrying special prices will be posted separately from the regular price list so that each customer may know just what articles are being offered in this list.

Hog Cholera Control Campaign

The annual spring Hog Cholera Campaign starts this week. Farmers have been mailed letters announcing this campaign with enclosed cards for reporting on the stock they wish vaccinated and all of these farmers will be visited in the next two or three weeks and the work completed. Any farmer in the county who did not secure a notice may have his work done by listing his hogs at the county agent's office. Hogs were vaccinated for the following farmers last week: J. N. Williams, N. L. May, T. C. Turnage and J. E. Winslow.

For the control of insects, pests the first essential is good equipment. For the home gardener, the piece of equipment of most general use is a compressed air sprayer of 2 or 3 gallons capacity. A hand duster is also desirable. The second essential is a supply of spray and dust materials. This brings up the subject of a practical means of measuring spray materials in small amounts.

The home gardener is not usually equipped with scales for weighing small amounts and must therefore seek some means of measuring the materials. An 8-ounce glass measuring cup is quite useful for this purpose. It is graduated in thirds and quarters and is suitable for measuring most materials. The following control measures are suggested for some of the principal pests:

Bean Beetle: Spray with magnesium arsenate at the rate of one ounce to 50 gallons of water or one ounce (1-3 cup) to 3 gallons. Begin spraying as soon as the adult beetles become numerous and repeat every week or ten days or as often as necessary. Magnesium arsenate may be used as a dust by mixing 1 pound with 3 pounds of hydrated lime. The spray or dust must be applied to the under side of the leaves.

Colorado Potato Beetle: Spray or dust calcium arsenate or lead arsenate. For spraying use 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water or 2 ounces (2-3 cup) to 3 gallons. If used in dust form, mix 1 1-2 pounds of calcium or lead arsenate with 8 1-2 pounds of hydrated lime.

Magnesium arsenate may be used for this pest if desired. Use it at double the strength recommended for the bean beetle.

Cabbage Worm: Use the same materials and strengths recommended for the potato beetle. A little soap or calcium caseinate spreader will help make the spray materials stick to the smooth cabbage leaves. Use 1-2 pound calcium caseinate to 50 gallons of the spray mixture, or 2 level tablespoons to 3 gallons. Soap may be used at the rate of 1 pound to 50 gallons, or 1 ounce to 3 gallons. (One cup of beaded or flake soap weighs approximately 1 ounce.)

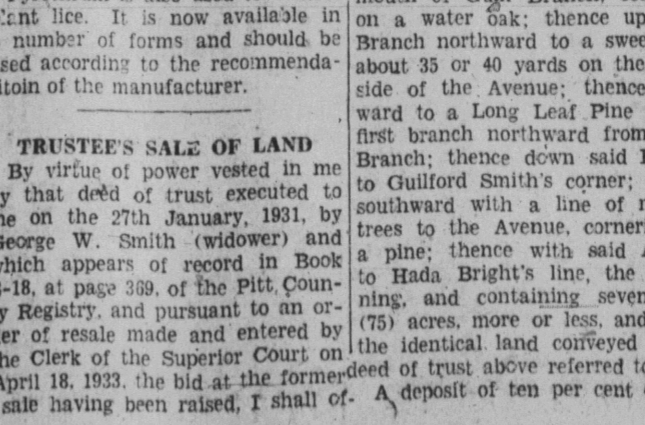

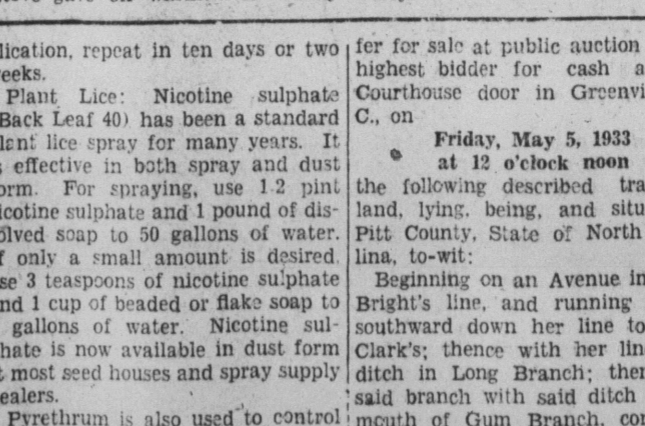

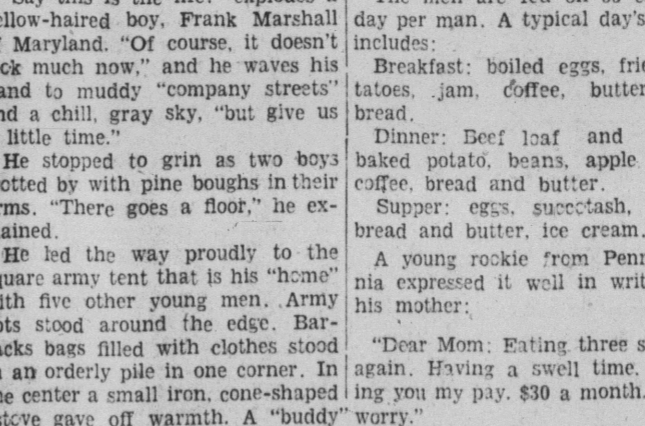

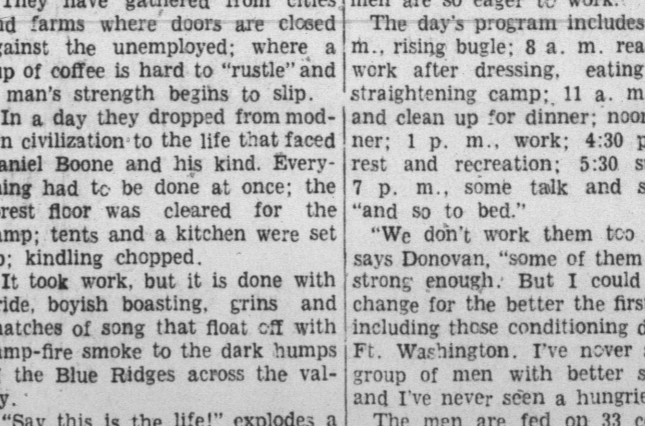

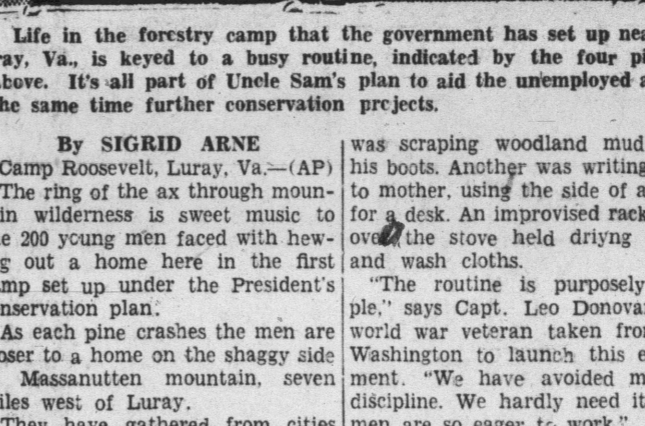

Cucumber Beetle: This is the fellow that does so much damage to young cucumbers, cantaloupes, and watermelons. To control it, apply a poisoned Bordeaux dust. One application as soon as the plants are up will usually give good protection for several weeks, and sometimes for the whole season. If the beetles appear in large numbers after the first application, repeat in ten days or two weeks.

Plant Lice: Nicotine sulphate (Back Leaf 40) has been a standard plant lice spray for many years. It is effective in both spray and dust form. For spraying, use 1 1/2 pint nicotine sulphate and 1 pound of dissolved soap to 50 gallons of water. If only a small amount is desired, use 3 teaspoons of nicotine sulphate and 1 cup of beaded or flake soap to 3 gallons of water. Nicotine sulphate is now available in dust form at most seed houses and spray supply dealers.

Pyrethrum is also used to control plant lice. It is now available in a number of forms and should be used according to the recommendation of the manufacturer.

Engineers Develop Method Of Finding Defects In Beams

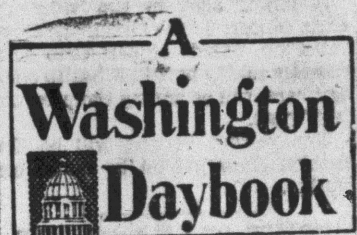

Philadelphia—(AP)—A departure in building inspection may result from what proved to be a vain search for structural defects in historic Independence Hall.

Last summer the X-ray was used to determine whether there was any danger of the shrine's tower collapsing on the heads of patriotic tourists.

It developed that the sturdy old building had withstood successfully the ravages of time and that the timbers supporting the tower were per feet sound.

However, the examination stimulated the inventive genius of engineers, and experiments now are under way looking toward the development of a portable and efficient fluoroscope outfit with which rapid and accurate surveys can be made.

By its aid defects in steel beams and girders hidden in the walls and floors of great buildings will be discernible readily. Unlike X-ray films, fluoroscopic pictures do not require developing, for the machine does not make a permanent record.

Washington—(AP)—Perhaps no better illustration of what might be termed the present "legislative state of mind" can be found than the situation with which Senator Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina found himself confronted for the last few weeks in the Senate.

My Beauty Hint

By ALTHEA HENLEY (Screen Actress)

I owe my complexion to probably the most elemental beauty plan—scap and water with the addition of ice water to close the pores after thorough washing and rinsing.

First cold cream the face thoroughly, then wash with hot water and soap, rinse well, and apply a wash cloth dipped in ice water. Your face is then ready for a powder base.

But it was futile. All they could do was to sound dire warnings. They were beaten before they arrived.

About NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES

New York—Maybe it was too pure to critics who had advised the public to avoid it.

A musical comedy producer wired to a critic who had advised the public not to view the production: "What was wrong with it?"

The critic wired back: "No hits. No puns. No Erros."

Top the artist, tells about going out to sun himself in a small town not so far away, and passing the bank which was re-opening after its "holiday." The bankers revealed their sense of humor in the window in the form of a large floral horseshoe bearing the gold-inscribed ribbon: "Success."

McKee Rudy's Idol

Rudy Vallee favors us today by crooning the names of the twelve personalities who interest him more than do any others in New York.

Politically minded Rudy gives No. 1 place to Joseph V. McKee, who was briefly and sensationally mayor of the town. McKee's "fearlessness honesty and policies make him quite an ideal for me," says Rudy.

Second on Rudy's list is Boris Moros, in charge of all musical and stage activities of a large chain of theaters here whom the orchestra leader believes to be a "great showman." Third, is John U. Reber, head of the radio department of a major advertising agency.

Babe Ruth is fourth. And Rudy explains that he names Irving Berlin No. 5 and Jerome Kern No. 6 "for their song writing activities, believing that the muse of heaven touched them unusually favorably, and that they have given us wonderful enjoyment in the simplicity and beauty of their music." No. 7 is H. I. Phillips, writer.

Fred Allen wins a large bouquet from Mr. Vallee, who unreservedly calls him "my favorite comedian."

As for the others, here's the way Rudy sets them down: "9. Rubintoff, whose orchestral directing ability has always been my ideal and my pattern, and who I believe is eminently fitted for the particular work he is doing."

"10. Moffatt Johnston and— "11. Eugene Leonovich, who completely captivated me with their marvelous work in 'Twentieth Century.' "12. George White, who I consider one of the finest and cleverest of the show producers it has been my pleasure to know."

For Burglars Only

On a recent Tuesday evening I was circulating on Third Avenue. A woman rushed into a tobacconist's, and all excitedly announced there had just been a burglary at her neighbor's in a tenement dwelling on Second Avenue between Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Streets.

"I left a note on my table," she babbled to a sympathetic clerk. "If any burglars get in, they can read it. I said: 'Don't look for money here. I take mine with me!'"

And I'll take an affidavit before a notary, if you want me to.

Local fans will have a chance to see the Greenville High baseball in action on the local field twice this week.

U. N. C. NINE HITTING HARD

Chapel Hill, May 2.—The Carolina baseball team is hitting at the heavy team average of .391-2, according to official figures just announced by Manager J. K. Taylor.

Carolina and Virginia will play their first game on the local diamond at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon and will then move on to Greensboro for their final clash in Memorial Stadium on Saturday.

Coach Bunn Hearn is planning to pitch Carolina's ace, Big Joe Griffith, in the Greensboro classic Saturday.

Ernest Hunt, chief cheerleader at Carolina, will go to Greensboro Friday to drill the students at Greensboro College and Woman's College in Carolina yards.

The fair ones have promised to be on hand in large number and their presence always lends much interest and color to the occasion.

Other attractive features will be Carolina-Virginia dances Friday and Saturday nights under the auspices of the American Legion with music by Kay Kyser and his band.

Kyser who is regarded as Carolina's greatest cheerleader in recent years, will lead some of the Tar Heel yell at the game Saturday.

Playing fiddle to the czar probably was a good job in the old boom days of the Romanoffs. Playing second fiddle of Babe Ruth and Aloysius Simmons also had its advantages when those two kings of

The switch started last year and there is little doubt this spring that Henry Louis Gehrig, erstwhile slugging shadow of the Babe, and James Emory Fox, the Maryland mauler, rank as the No. 1 clean-up bastards of major league baseball.

Explores Simmons Myth Fox, for the first time, overshadowed Simmons in batting last year, an off-season for the Milwaukee slugger. Al's departure to the White Sox gave Jimmie a clear field, which he has proceeded to dominate.

Looks Like Old-Timers Major league executives do not favor open warfare, such as broke out again between the New York and Washington clubs, but they are none the less pleased by the real aggressiveness and old-time rivalry marking the outset of the 1933 pennant scramble.

Already incipient feuds have developed between some of the National League clubs, notably Brooklyn and Philadelphia. Some harsh words, at least, have been exchanged by the Cubs and Cardinals on the western front.

Other attractive features will be Carolina-Virginia dances Friday and Saturday nights under the auspices of the American Legion with music by Kay Kyser and his band.

UNIVERSITY OFFICIAL WARNS OF IMPOSTORS

Chapel Hill, May 2.—R. M. Gruman, director of the University Extension Division, today sent high school officials of the state the following statement.

"We have been informed that a person claiming to be a representative of the University of North Carolina is trying to sell commercial courses to recent graduates of high schools. He is in no way connected with this institution and if he should appear in your community he should be reported to police officials. Please send us information regarding the person if he has been in your vicinity and be on the lookout for impostors. Any University representative would have proper credentials and university material."

MANTEO SUFFERING FROM PLAGUE OF DOGS

Manteo, May 2.—This island town has met an unique problem and is preparing to face it with a dog-catcher for the first time in its history. The place is swarming with dogs, and their depredations have reached the extent where they are digging up the graves in Manteo's Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

New York Cotton

New York, May 2.—(AP)—Cotton futures fairly steady, 7 to 15 points lower in response to Liverpool cables and realizing and Southern selling.

Trading was active at the start, but buyers were less aggressive than yesterday and prices eased to 803 for July and 850 for December during the first few minutes, or about 14 to 18 points net lower.

This dip attracted some fresh buying and the market worked up three or four points from the lowest.

Realizing continued and the market showed losses of 12 to 13 points at the end of the half hour.

The market held steady later in the morning, the tone being aided by a rally from the pending decline in stocks and steeper wheat market.

At midday July was ruling around 816. The market rallied late in the day and renewed strength on the stocks market and trade buying.

Futures closed steady, one to five points higher.

Stock Market

New York, May 2.—(AP)—The inflation fever subsided in speculative markets today and the price trend in shares and stables mixed with changes largely narrow.

With the declines in dollars halted once more, profit-taking appeared in shares and the volume slackened on reaction and before midday a few groups turned upward again.

Miscellaneous issues showed signs of one to two points gains over yesterday, including Santa Fe, Public Service, Consolidated Gas, Liggett and Myers, National Steel, Macy and others.

Gold mining stock were strong, with Homestake getting up six points. U. S. Steel lost more than a point, then recovered partially.

Issues off one to two points by early afternoon included American Can, Allied Chemical and Johns Mansville.

Firmness of rails bolstered the market after the early sag. Utilities were steady to fractionally higher.

The turnover was 3,600,000 shares.

GAINES TELLS OF RICH FOOL

He said the important thing about life was being ready, not getting ready for accepting the things which God bestows upon those who follow the teachings of His Son.

Mr. Gaines spoke this morning on "Practicing the Presence of God," calling attention of his audience to the fact that all of the great heroes of faith in Bible history were men and women vitally God-conscious.

"They endured as seeing Him who is invisible." Our lives will be sweetened, brightened and made more effective by our daily practice of the presence of God. He is none the less real and vital to our daily lives although invisible. Faith lays hold upon the invisible God and He becomes very real to the believer.

First of all, let us note that we have some very definite promises of the presence of God. Jesus promised that "where two or three of us are gathered together in His name" we will be vitally and graciously present with us. To His witnesses and workers He gave the promise: "Lo, I am with you, even unto the consummation of this age." Jesus, Himself, was vitally God-conscious. He could say: "I am not alone, because the Father is with me." And to us He says: "I will not leave you as orphans, I will come to you."

But we are so prone at times to be living upon suppositions. Like the parents of Jesus, who supposed that He was with them on their return from Jerusalem to Nazareth, only to find that he was not there, we oftentimes suppose that He is present and we fling Him a flippant gesture of salvation and straightway forget Him. Carnal blindness and wilful ignorance oftentimes obscure His presence.

But faith functions in a factual experience that is rich and glorious. When we have a constant daily sense of God's presence we no longer mark lines dividing between the sacred and the secular, for all ground whereon we stand is holy ground. We may cultivate this sense of God's presence with us, through the study of the Book of books, reading thoughtfully, reverently and meditatively so that God may speak to us. We may seek Him at any moment in earnest prayer. The best tonic for real believing prayer is the meditative reading of the Word of God. Read His Word daily if you desire to remain on "praying ground." And further, we may cultivate this fine sense of the presence of God by entering into fellowship with Him in Christly service. With Paul we can say: "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." "I am entering into the fellowship of His sufferings. Thus, we may come to know God in an exquisite experience of spiritual intimacy that is all-glorious and vitalizing to our daily lives.
