Peek Definitely Slated As Administrator of The Measure For Farm Relief

MOLINE MAN FIGURES IN CONFERENCE

Illinois Manufacturer Will Also Have The Responsibility of Calling Councils For Discussion of Farm Prices; Plans For Putting The Measure in Operation Immediately After it is Passed Under Way

Washington, D. C., May 4.—(AP)—George Peek, of Moline, Ill., has virtually been decided upon as the chief administrator of the farm measure nearing final passage in Congress.

Peek, a farm implement manufacturer, and a student of agricultural problems, was one of those who participated in the White House conference last night on application of the bill designed to raise the prices of farm commodities.

As chief of administration, tremendous responsibility would evolve upon him in accepting policies in the attempt to lift farm prices.

In addition, his position, if he is named, which now seems certain, will place upon him the burden of handling of details of calling of commodity councils and other steps preliminary to application of the measure.

Plans for putting the measure into operation proceeded rapidly today while committees of the Senate and Representatives bent over a table in the conference room of the Capitol, seeking to reconcile differences between the farm bill as passed by the Senate and House. They thought they would be able to reach an agreement by the end of the week, but there were more than eighty amendments in dispute, and it appeared likely the measure would not reach the White House before the first of next week.

Capt. Tate To Be Honored

Norfolk, Va., May 4.—(AP)—A lighthouse keeper, Capt. W. J. Tate, at whose home the two Wright brothers boarded while conducting their activities at Kitty Hawk, turned today toward Dayton, O.

There he will be the guest of Orville Wright and of the Dayton Chamber of Commerce. Later he will visit Akron and Cleveland as guest of the State of Ohio. At Dayton he plans to visit the grave of Wilbur Wright.

ESCAPED DESPERADO SURRENDERS HIMSELF

Rocky Mount, N. C., May 4.—(AP)—Roy Cobb, Nash County desperado who broke prison with eight, others several days ago when a group took advantage of an open door in a prison supply tunnel to gain their freedom, is not only back in prison to complete his ten-year sentence for highway robbery, but will never, so he says, try to escape again.

Cobb, tired of sleeping in constant fear of officers and in the woods while he was at liberty, sent word to Nash officers that he would surrender if they would come for him today and bring a pair of shoes.

When Constable Tanner who recently surprised Cobb asleep here in a tobacco barn and returned him to the prison arrived at a neighbor's house, Cobb waked out and climbed into the officer's car, determined to pay his debt and be released so he says. It was his third successful escape.

He was declared an outlaw here after a series of robberies, but was arrested later and sentenced to ten years for highway robbery. He has served about one year.

The door through which the men escaped was unlocked from the outside by accomplices of the escapes, but Cobb said he knows nothing of how it was accomplished. He said he merely followed the others when he saw them leaving.

HORSE RACE BILL IS LAW

Final Action Taken On McDowell County Legislation During The Morning

Raleigh, N. C., May 4.—(AP)—The final act to legalize pari-mutuel horse races in McDowell County with approval of the voters became law in the State today.

A few minutes before the message was ratified the Senate by an 18 to 13 vote refused to recall the bill so that a motion could be passed to kill it.

Raleigh, N. C., May 4.—(AP)—A conference committee of five Representatives and three Senators today was getting ready to begin to try airing out of legislative differences on the tax levies of the next biennium.

ALDERMEN TO MEET TONIGHT

Several Matters to be Taken up at Monthly Meeting of City Fathers

Canvass of the returns of the recent municipal election, appointment of a new alderman in the Second Ward and consideration of beer applicants were expected to be the principal matters of business to face the Board of Aldermen at the City Hall tonight.

Little time was expected to be consumed in the election canvass as the vote was the lightest in many years. Four members of the old board and the mayor were re-elected and a fifth member of the board was elected without opposition.

The naming of a successor to J. L. Hassell, alderman of the Second Ward, who died about three weeks ago, was also scheduled to be taken up, but might be postponed until a later date.

The board also probably will consider application for licenses to sell beer, although the bulk of applications were acted on at a special session last Saturday.

The meeting tonight will be held at 8 o'clock, and it was expected all members of the board would be on hand to take part in the induction of Alderman Fleming, elected in the ballot casting here Monday.

JAPANESE ENVOY WILL CONFER AT CAPITAL

Viscount Ishii Leaves Tokyo For Series of Conference in Washington

Tokyo, May 4.—(AP)—Viscount Hokiyo Ishii left today for his conference with President Roosevelt and to defend Japan's role as principal offender of the peace of the Orient and to urge American recognition of Manchukuo.

Although it is doubtful if the American government will offer an opening, the 67-year-old statesman is prepared to defend Japanese conquest of Manchuria and the establishment of the Manchukuoan government.

Accompanying the Viscount are Eigo Fukui, vice-president of the Bank of Japan, and his aides and secretaries.

Before leaving Viscount Ishii told a member of The Associated Press his role at the White House conference and the world conference would be entirely political.

CHORAL CLUB TO BE AT FAIR

Carolina Kiddies Re-venue to Also be on Program at Exposition Tonight

A concert by the Greenville Choral Club will be one of the principal attractions at the Community Fair in the Star Warehouse tonight. Over a score of singers will appear in the concert, which, according to predictions, will be one of the best ever put on by the local organization.

Another attraction coming in for a considerable amount of interest is Mrs. Zelma Russ McEvoy of Washington, known as the "Sweetheart of the American Legion," and her Carolina Kiddies' Revue. A fourteen-piece orchestra will be one of the features of the revue.

In addition, the "Original Synopators" veterans for dance engagements in all parts of the State, will present several numbers tonight and Saturday afternoon. Mrs. McEvoy will sing several solo numbers. A trio patterned after the Boswell sisters and including Mrs. McEvoy will render several numbers, including "Japanese Samman" and "Shuffle Off to Buffalo."

A feature of the fair last night was the style show put on by students of East Carolina Teachers College. The gowns worn by the young women were woven and designed at State College, and were recently used in the State style contest. All of the costumes were made of cotton and showed just what can be done with the staple of the Southland in these days of improved textile industry.

Tomorrow night the third style show of the fair will be presented by Blount-Harvey, Greenville department store. The show will be for children.

In addition to these attractions the fair puts on a number of acrobatic, music and shooting acts. Concessions and booths help reveal the possibilities of the community in various activities of life.

Indianapolis, May 4.—(AP)—Louis Johnson, national commander of the American Legion today assailed what he termed "frenzied application of the economy knife" in cutting veterans' benefits and urged the Legion executive committee to adopt a four-point policy on national legislation affecting the veterans.

He told the committee in annual session at national headquarters here that those to whom President Roosevelt had entrusted the administration of the economy act have gone beyond his spokesman in Congress. (Continued on Page Three)

Late News Flashes

Today in The Legislature Raleigh, May 4.—(AP)—The Senate today spent more than three hours discussing the biennial bill school machinery act but did not complete half of the measure before it recessed to hold an afternoon session.

The House rested this morning and this afternoon was busily engaged in work on a heavy calendar of purely local bills.

Revenue bill conferees prepared to hold their first meeting tonight when the Senate agreed to vote on the school machinery act late in the afternoon. The conferees and Senators Ranken, Aiken and Bailey and Representatives Oughton, Cherry, Moss, Thomas and Ewing. The House ran into a hitch in its effort to abolish and rebate 1931 tax penalties in some 49 counties when it was discovered a bill passed earlier in the week should have been rolled called measure. The act recalled from the Senate amendments to add some new counties and take out some previously included and passed on first reading. Under sections of the school ma-

ROOSEVELT TO SPEAK TONIGHT

President Expected to Tell of Government's Plan to Control Industry

Washington, D. C., May 4.—(AP)—Business leaders looked today to an address by President Roosevelt for a definite indication as to how far the government is going to its effort to seize the whole industry and put men back to work.

That address will be made tonight before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at a time when business and Congressional leaders are advocating regulation of industry in matter of hours, wages and production.

A committee of Senators, economists and Federal officials, headed by Senator Wagner, of New York, is working on a proposal for temporary regulation of anti-trust laws so that trade associations within their particular line of duty could act under government supervision to prevent reunions competition and wage slashing.

FEDERAL CAMP SOUGHT HERE

Proposes Effort be Made to Obtain Government Reforestation Camp in Pitt

A proposal that Pitt County make a bid for one of the reforestation camps the government is establishing in various parts of the country in an effort to relieve unemployment has been advanced by Dr. R. S. McGeachy, director of the Pitt County Department of Health.

The suggestion was first made at a meeting of the Kiwanis Club last Friday night when Dr. McGeachy urged the Kiwanians and the more than a score business men of the community to use their influence in behalf of the camp.

The speaker told of the progress being made in drafting 107 men from his county for work in reforestation camps in the western part of the State, and said the county was furnishing some fine specimens of young nanhood.

Although he was not fully informed concerning the requirements for such a camp, the health directors suggested that local citizens confer with government representatives. He expressed belief that a reforestation project would do much to improve the conditions of this part of the State, and at the same time carry out the government's effort to provide work for the millions of jobless men walking the streets in quest of work.

The suggestion has been made repeatedly since it was advanced to the Kiwanians and while no definite action had been taken as yet. Dr. McGeachy said he would continue to interest the people in the proposition and then see what could be done.

This morning Mr. Gaines spoke on "Grace in the Building of Christian Character." Last night his subject was "Repentance."

His remarks this morning were based upon the following verse, 2 Peter 1:3: "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness." In this statement, he said, we are being told that everything that goes to make up a Godly character is given to us of God. It is one of the greatest texts concerning grace within the Word of God. There are three things to which attention may be given namely the source, the communication and the appropriation of Christian character.

Considering the source of Christian Character it is necessary to note the two-fold work of Christ. First, that which Christ has done for the sinner, and second, that which Christ does in the sinner. His work in the redeemed one attracts us now. Why did Jesus pass through all that he did? Was it for himself or for us? All his experiences, and his victories for us. We are to appropriate them for ourselves. All that he did and continues to do is for us, and is of a three-fold content, namely, he is perfect in obedience, in ministry, and in suffering. We have perfection before God in Christ, Christianity to many of us is taking Christ as exemplar but that is not true Christianity. We develop Christian character by being in Christ. cation of Christian character. It is necessary to note the two-fold work of Christ. First, that which Christ has done for the sinner, and second, that which Christ does in the sinner. SAFEGUARD OF BRITISH PLAN TO BE SOUGHT

No Definite Agreement in Regards to Policy Has Yet Been Reached, Prime Minister Tells House of Commons; No Solution of World Problems But Exchange of Views Described As Most Encouraging

London, May 4.—(AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons today that Great Britain favored the American proposal for a tariff truce during the period of the World Economic Conference with safeguards for Great Britain's special tariff position.

The Prime Minister quickly aroused the intense interest of the members. They craned their necks and sat on the edges of their seats at the outset of his report on his discussions at Washington with President Roosevelt and as he jumped into the question of the tariff truce.

With the tariff issue paramount in the House, Mr. MacDonald made it clear that while Mr. Edouard Herriot and he had agreed on plans for the coming World Conference, the Washington talks had brought no definite agreements in regards to policy. Nor has there been any solution of the world problem, he said, although the exchange of views was "most encouraging."

AN OUTRAGEOUS PROCEDURE

The News and Observer is right in its attack on not only pari-mutuel gambling but the method by which the measure to legalize it in this state was put through the legislature yesterday and to the following editorial from today's Observer we wish to add a loud "Amen."

Yesterday with every mark of shameful haste the General Assembly of North Carolina, without previous notice, passed a bill, just introduced, legalizing pari-mutuel race track gambling in this State. Passed as a local bill for McDowell County, the law puts the State on record as approving the legalized gambling and makes Marion the gambling center of North Carolina. Despite a clause which will let the people of one county vote on whether or not North Carolina will permit gambling, the bill is dishonest in its statement of purpose, and its passage was accomplished by slyness and one of the ugliest examples of legislative railroadroading in recent years. Its own author and supporters presented it and secured its passage in a manner which indicates nothing so clearly as their knowledge that the bill could not be passed except by swiftness and stealth.

This is no place to discuss the merits of pari-mutuel gambling. Evil as many may think such gambling is, it is not so vicious as an attempt to change the law of North Carolina by the methods which attended the passage of the McDowell County bill yesterday. Gambling may injure many individuals. But pari-mutuel gambling does attempt to give a sucker an even break, which is something of which the advocates of the McDowell County bill sought to deprive the people of the State in the Legislature yesterday.

Apparently ashamed of his own purposes, the author of the bill entitled it "An Act Creating an Agricultural and Breeders' Association for the County of McDowell."

Apparently afraid to let the bill be discussed, as a similar bill was discussed two years ago, the author introduced it yesterday morning and, under suspension of the rules, got it passed by the House and hurried to the Senate, where it was approved with no member opposing it. Many members did not have the slightest idea of the provisions of the bill which they approved.

The General Assembly will be approving not only pari-mutuel gambling but the methods of legislation by which this law was enacted if this law is allowed to remain on the statute books. The whole matter should be reopened. Its advocates should not be ashamed to openly champion it, if they are willing to sponsor it. Its opponents, who made public sentiment known in no uncertain terms in 1931, ought to be given the privilege of expressing themselves again.

Let the whole matter be brought back. Let the question be presented squarely as to whether the State of North Carolina will have race track gambling or will not have it. It is in no sense a local question but a matter of State-wide policy. If race track gambling is permitted in McDowell it should be permitted in Wake, and if denied to Wake, to McDowell also.

Whatever is done, the General Assembly should do it, thoughtfully, openly and without furtive and scurrying haste.

The White Cockatoo
by Mignon G. Eberhart

THE WHITE COCKATOO

SYNOPSIS: Marcel, the little porter of the French hotel, is killed by a shot from the elevator just as he is telling Jim Sundean what he knows about a previous murder. Then Sundean himself is wounded. He and the detective, David Lorn, believe the events are part of a plot to rob Sue Tally of the token by means of which she may claim half of her father's huge fortune. Marcel manages to gasp that the all-but-dead man known as Father Robert is false. When Sundean tells Father Robert, the latter is so angry he nearly steps on the white cockatoo.

Chapter 23

BAITING FATHER ROBERT

Father Robert looked down and hastily swerved just in time to prevent Pucci's sudden transition to undoubtedly a warmer spot. Pucci croaked again and fluttered struggling upward to a chair and looked at the priest with his suspicions confirmed. The priest in the meantime muttered something that sounded very much like "Curse the bird," and was most unsuitable to his cloth, and had regained his threatened balance. "Why, Father Robert!" I murmured in a reproaching way. He stood, a long black figure, with the wind sweeping the skirts of his robe outward and threatening his shallow shovel hat. In spite of his trappings he looked anything but pious.

"Still, priests are but normal, and perhaps the mysterious illness that had brought him to Armene had made him a little more peevish than ordinary. Peevish, however, was scarcely the word; the man was glaring down at me, he was fairly bubbling with wrath, but he was still silent.

"Father Robert!" I said again in gentle reproach. "Such words from a man of God—May I trouble you for a match?"

His rage bubbled over at once. He took a menacing step or two toward me, his long black arms looking, I must say, anything but feeble.

"I suppose," he said, "that you've told the police."

"No. Not yet."

"Why?"

"Why what?"

He forced himself, I thought, to take a long breath and to become steady.

"Why have you not told the police what you've just told me?" he asked more coolly, but with the still look deepened in his light eyes.

"I haven't had time," I said with a degree of honesty. "I had more important matters to explain to them yesterday. But it's my duty, of course, to inform them of it."

"I doesn't matter," said Father Robert. "Having no alibi is nothing."

"Nothing at all," I agreed. "Still, I suppose the police will ask—why has this man been at some pains to prepare a false alibi?"

"A question that is easily answered," he said coldly. "In these unsettled times, when the Church itself is assailed, it is unwise for men of the Church to permit themselves to be entangled in any way with such things as—"

He made a gesture toward the north wing of the hotel, with its shining glass wall looking down at us and the little iron stairway at its end. "As that," he said conclusively.

"Keeping myself completely clear of the thing was merely another duty, Mr. Sundean, which you who talk so glibly and familiarly of duty will understand." With which he said good morning in a way which hinted at triumph and turned sweepingly away.

The dignity of his departure was, however, somewhat marred by the cocatoo's making a sudden clutch at his soutane with a long gray claw, and hanging on for dear life, and squawking like a very devil, and having to be forcibly released.

During the releasing I think he nipped the priest slightly, for the priest uttered suddenly an enraged ejaculation and put his finger in his mouth in a most undignified way, and altogether it was a confused moment or two before Father Robert resumed his exit, which was, then, a ruffled and rather hasty affair and gave me some small pleasure.

Pucci, perching on the chair, gave me a diabolically knowing look, shook his feathers gleefully, and all but chuckled. It was possible, it occurred to me, that he had a natural antipathy for churchly vestment.

"And what," said Sue behind me, "did you do to Father Robert?"

I sprang to my feet. She was standing there, glowing in the fresh cold air of the morning. A spark of laughter was dancing in her eyes, and her cheeks were pink. She wore some wind of tweedish-looking jacket and skirt of a soft, warm green, and a scarlet beret was perched on one side of her bright hair, and there was a touch of something scarlet at her throat, and she looked altogether very nice.

"Nothing," I said slowly.

Her face sobered.

"Why—what is the matter? What have I done?" she asked in a small voice.

"Nothing at all. Nothing. There's nothing wrong." I realized that I was babbling and drew myself up short. After all, I could scarcely tell the girl that I wished she wouldn't manage to look like that.

She would say, and rightly: "Why on earth not?" And I would say as rightly: "No reason at all. It's nothing to me. Nothing." I was babbling again, fortunately not aloud this time.

"We were only talking," I said more lucidly. "The priest and I explained the matter of his false alibi."

I told her of the result of the encounter, and she listened gravely.

"I sounds," she said when I'd finished, "rather reasonable. At least I think it will sound rather reasonable to the police."

"Perhaps," I agreed. "Nevertheless—I think the priest is not what he seems."

She looked suddenly white again, as if my words had brought her too suddenly back to the horror that had visited the old hotel.

"You don't think Father Robert—Oh, no, I can't consider it. We can't think that the murderer is here. Here among us. All the time. That would be too dreadful. Why—we would all be gibbering idiots."

"I don't know," I said honestly. "I don't like to frighten you, but you must remember that it is at least a possibility. Good God, how I wish you could leave!"

"It isn't just flattering to think that you want me out of the way," she said lightly, although her eyes leaped to mine.

"There's nothing I should like better," I said brusquely. "I'm sorry, but I can't be light-hearted about it."

Her smile vanished. She said gravely:

"Let not begin that again. I can't leave even if I would."

She spoke very stiffly and coldly, and I felt puzzled and dismayed; I had only wanted to be sure she was safe.

She leaned a little toward me and said suddenly:

"Don't look like that. You've been everything that's—" after a pause she said "kind," and I felt pleased and yet rather let down. "I'll be very careful. I won't take any chances at all. But I can't believe—it's mad even to consider the murderer's being one of us here in the hotel. Don't you see that it is?"

"I don't know," I said morosely.

"I should say this crazy, dark, silent, old place might harbor—anything."

She shivered again and moved unconsciously nearer me and cried:

"Don't!"

"I'm a fool," I said briskly. "I'm an idiot. You're quite right. There's nothing for you to fear in the hotel."

"I'm not—that is, I won't be scared. More than I can help at any rate," she added honestly. "Is your shoulder better?"

"It really isn't bad. It's only stiff and sore."

"Has the doctor been here yet?"

"No. Now then—I hated to drag her back to the problems before her, but still it had to be done, so that she might get her millions, 'have you asked Lovschiem for the envelope you had him put in the safe?'"

"Yes." Her eyes had darkened again.

"He gave it to you?"

"No."

"No! I had expected it. 'What excuse did he give? Here, do sit down.'"

She took the chair absently, and I drew one near her and sat down also, and Pucci at once flapped and sidled and clung till he got onto my knee and then finally to my shoulder, with his head very near my mouth in a conspiratorial way.

"He said," Sue told me gravely, "that—he'd lost the combination."

SIZE OF BERRY CROP CUTS DOWN PRICES

Mount Olive, N. C., May 4.—Two thousand crates of strawberries leaving here Monday made the produce section look a bit like it used to 25 years ago when Mount Olive was the world's largest shipping point for the fruit. About 800 crates were shipped Tuesday. The price ranged from $1.25 to $2.50 both days. The quality of the berries is much improved since the opening of the season, according to a leading broker, but the increase in quantity has kept the price from advancing in proportion.

English pens are moving at 75 cents to $1 per basket. About 600 crates were shipped Monday and about 800 on Tuesday.

The first shipment of material for the new $13,000,000 bridge across the Mississippi River at New Orleans contained 42,000 tons of fabricated steel.

Mrs. Beard Club Hostess. Mrs. N. S. Beard delightfully entertained the member of her bridge club and a few additional guests, Tuesday afternoon at her home on East Ninth street. A lovely arrangement of larkspur, roses and snapdragons was used in the rooms where bridge was played. After a number of interesting rubbers, Mrs. Sam Glenn of South Boston, Va., assisted the hostess in serving a delicious salad course. Miss Ward Moore, winner of high score, was awarded bridge cards. The low score prize, a guest towel, was given to Mrs. Frank Bendall.

Miss Fleming Luncheon Hostess. Complimenting Mrs. Jack Dillon of Statesville, Miss Margaret Fleming was a charming hostess yesterday morning. A pink and green color motif was effectively carried out in the decorations. Concluding the game, Miss Anna Long was awarded bridge cards for high score. Mrs. Dillon was remembered with linen. A tempting luncheon was served. The guests were given miniature corsages as favors.

END OF THE CENTURY CLUB LUNCHEON

The End of the Century Club at its final meeting of the club year, was delightfully entertained at luncheon Tuesday by Mrs. E. B. Ficklen, Mrs. L. C. Arthur, Mrs. C. O'Leary, Laughinghouse and Mrs. R. L. Carr.

At one o'clock the members and a few invited guests arrived at the home of Mrs. Ficklen, where they were greeted by the hostesses, in a most cordial and happy manner. The home was lovely with its decorations of roses and various colored garden flowers and an atmosphere of happiness prevailed. The dining table was beautifully spread with a handsome cloth of Chinese Italian cut work and centered with an exquisite floral centerpiece and smaller vases of lilies of the valley. Covers were laid for twenty-one and at each place there was a lovely corsage. A delicious four course luncheon was served, during which time the president, Mrs. J. B. Spillman, spoke of her appreciation of this lovely entertainment, and asked the outgoing president, Mrs. J. L. Fleming, to give the club a few parting words. Mrs. Fleming spoke of her appreciation of the loyal support of the club members during her term of office and reviewed the work of the club during the past two years. She brought to mind many worthwhile things that have been accomplished by the End of the Century Club.

After the luncheon, Mrs. R. L. Carr presented Mrs. James S. Ficklen, who in her usual charming manner spoke most interestingly of her recent trip to China, giving a description of the different countries she visited; her first hand knowledge of the habits and customs of the people of Japan and China, making each one feel that they had had a closer glimpse of these countries. At the conclusion of her talk, Mrs. Ficklen's two young sons, Jim and Warren, came in, dressed in Chinese costumes of red with black caps. Many beautiful Chinese articles were shown, quite a number of these being gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Ficklen from Chinese friends.

Those present besides the club members, were Mrs. Charles Skinner, Mrs. R. C. Stokes, Mrs. L. C. Skinner, Mrs. Marianna Murphy and Mrs. E. B. Ferguson. The club adjourned for the year voting this one of the most enjoyable final meetings the club has ever had.—Reported.

JOINT MEETING OF THE P-T ASSOCIATIONS

On Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock a joint meeting of the Third Street, West Greenville and Training School Parent-Teacher Associations was held in the Training School auditorium. Mrs. Edward Batchelor, retiring president of the Training School Association, presided over the meeting. Gratifying reports of the year's work were given. Miss Elizabeth Hyman read the one from the Training School Association. Miss Mozelle Jones read the one from the Third Street Association, and Miss Agnes Fullilove read the one from the West Greenville Association.

Several announcements were made. Mrs. Batchelor then introduced Dr. Carl Adams, of the college faculty, who gave a very illuminating talk on "Moving Pictures." He stressed the fact that the theatre was an asset to any community, and that in many instances the moving pictures were both educational and entertaining for school children. But he pointed out the importance of knowing what kind of pictures your children see. He read a report of questionnaires on moving pictures given the children of the city schools, and showed what per cent of the children attended regularly and what per cent preferred the feature pictures, the news reels, the comedies, etc. He closed his remarks with a plea for the cooperation of the Parent-Teacher Association in securing a longer school term, and urged the parents not to patronize the picture shows to the extent of neglecting to pay their taxes thereby making the school term shorter.

Prior to the joint meeting of the three Parent-Teacher Associations on Wednesday afternoon, the Training School Association held a short business meeting. Mrs. Batchelor called the meeting to order and requested Mrs. R. G. Fitzgerald, chairman of the nominating committee, to present the slate. The following officers for the coming year were presented:

Mrs. Wade Holmes, president; Mrs. Edward Batchelor, vice-president; Mrs. R. N. Pendergraft, treasurer. The association unanimously accepted the slate. Mrs. Batchelor then turned the meeting over to Mrs. Holmes. She gave a brief outline of the work to be done in the coming year and appointed new committees.

Mrs. J. B. Kittrell gave a very encouraging treasurer's report. The association voted to send a note of thanks to J. B. Kittrell for the school children sold, and to M. L. Wright for his efforts in beautifying the grounds. They also gave Mrs. Batchelor a rising vote of thanks for her splendid work and untiring efforts during the past year.—Reported.

FINE SERVICE MARKS REVIVAL

(Continued From Page One) cation of Christian life and Character. The character of the unregenerate man is the sum total of the works of the flesh or striving as seen in Gal. 5:19-25. Christian character is the sum total of the first of the Holy Spirit. It is the creation of the Holy Spirit, not of striving, but of yielding. In this there is no boasting on the part of the Christian. Third, we observe, how to appropriate these gifts. The Word classifies men into three groups, the natural, the carnal, and the spiritual man. The natural man is unregenerate. The carnal man is the Christian whose Christian infancy is protracted, he has never grown at all. To be spiritual let us follow the teaching of the Lord through Paul, "Reckon ye yourselves to be alive from the dead; reckon ye yourselves to be instruments of righteousness." Yielded unto the Lord. Moody said: "I have the check book of faith on the bank of Heaven." There are unlimited resources at our disposal. Paul presents the great truth of our justification of the Christian before men. By their fruits, the fruit of the Spirit, the reality of their faith in Christ is evidenced.

Last night his text was taken from Acts 17:30: "God now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Mr. Gaines began by drawing attention to the danger of retaining stereotyped form of initial Christian experience. He spoke of the various types of experience due to the difference in temperament; some come to Christ in tears, some come with their faces wreathed in smiles, while others may come in serious and stolid countenance. Fixing the text with its setting in the minds of his auditors, Mr. Gaines called attention to the fact that the Apostle Paul was facing the Grecian philosophers on Mars Hill—he was standing before the intelligentsia of that day in the land of philosophy and art. The Wise Men before whom he stood needed repentance. The Apostle paid them a compliment by saying: "I perceive that you are very religious." Among the many images and shrines he had found an altar dedicated "to an unknown God." Paul was standing before them in the name and in the power of Almighty God to declare unto them the way of life. He preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection, calling them to repentance. Mr. Gaines then proceeded to ask and answer four questions:

First. What is repentance? It is a change of mind toward God and toward the sins of one's life. In repentance, the entire life "about-faces" toward God. There are three constituent elements in repentance: conviction—which is the knowledge of sin; contrition—which is sorrow for sin, and conversion—which is turning from sin. Repentance is a noble emotion—to wit, Judas, after his debacle, in remorse went and hanged himself, while Simon Peter after his miserable denial of Jesus was penitent and went out and wept bitterly. Which man's example would you wish to follow, Judas or Simon Peter? It is the goodness of God that leads men unto repentance; His great love will melt the heart of stone.

In the second place we ask: Why should men repent? And we answer first that it is right to repent because God commands it. Men should repent because a day of judgment is coming—a day in which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained. Men should likewise repent because the way of repentance is the one way back to God. The wandering wastrel—prodigal from his father's home had to come to himself and turn back—about-face—and confess his sins to find reinstatement in the home from which he had wandered. That was true repentance.

Another question: Who should repent? The answer is immediate: "All men everywhere"; rich men and poor men, wise men and ignorant men, the moral man and the brutish man, all men everywhere. The classic example of the need of repentance and regeneration is that of Jesus' dealing with Nicodemus. The latter was a man whose life was morally and religiously correct according to the standards of his day—and he was a man of high social and political and religious standing—but he lacked the main thing—regeneration. He needed the new birth. He needed a change of mind toward God and toward the sins of his life. "Marvel not that I say unto thee, Ye must be born again." Wise and influential Nicodemus needed repentance—the wise men and philosophers of Athens needed it. I need it and you need it.

And last of all, the question: When should men repent? The answer is, now. God promises infinite blessing to all out of the riches of His grace in the living present—but He does not promise one hour to your procrastination. We must "seek the Lord while He may be found," and "call upon Him while He is near." Tomorrow may be too late.

Front-Page News for You!

It's news when anyone can give more safety, more style, more mileage in a tire than was ever given before at a lower price! That's exactly what Goodyear has done in the new 1933 Pathfinder—a tire that's certainly built and priced in tune with the times. It will pay you to look it over, because you'll see for yourself that it has more actual quality than many top priced tires of other makes—and it certainly gives more for your money than any tire selling for less.

tra, and full of youthful snickers. He recalls Brahms in his late years, with patriarchal beard, solemn mien, standing only about 5 feet 5, and very corpulent. When he directed he went in for elaborate acrobatics, and the whole effect was amusingly grotesque. In July, 1895, when Brahms was rehearsing the students in his own composition, the Academie Overture, every time he would turn upon Posty for the clarinet to take over the melody, the young fellow would lose control of himself and break out laughing. It was evident that this peeved the great Brahms, but he overlooked it—in rehearsals.

But then came the orchestra's public performance. Posty was determined to be serious. And when his solo passages were called for, the master, for his part, exercised self-conscious restraint in directing. Despite everything, the solo went sour. One squeak of the clarinet followed another and the beauty of the melody together with Brahms' temper was lost. The audience which filled the Vienna Musikvereins-Auditorium gave vent to general laughter.

"After the concert," Posty told me, "Brahms called all of us students into the artists' room. Puffing with rage, he blurted in his Vienna German dialect: 'Wo ist der Spits-bub? In den Problem hat er gelacht und heuete hat er gepatzt.' Meaning, 'Where is the bad boy? In the rehearsals he laughed and today he squeaked.' 'I tried to sneak out of the room but Brahms saw me. He screamed—I'll put it in English for you—'Say, boy, come here! I like to slap your ears, you rascal!' 'But I was gone for a summer vacation.'"

Edith Tallaferro got a telephone call from the manager of a summer stock theater on Long Island. He wanted to know if she would come out there and revive the leading part in "Private Lives," which she played for a whole season. She asked him what he would pay. "We can't guarantee any set salary," the manager purred. "It's according to our receipts. But we'll have lots of fun, and you can lead a healthful outdoor life. Plenty of horseback riding and boating." "How dare you!"—the actress stormed—"call up a star and ask her to play in the sticks for a horse-back ride!" "If you really are near water, please go jump in!"

Talks To Parents

LOSING TEETH
(By Alice Judson Peale)
Many children go through a good deal of unnecessary humiliation, worry and fear when they begin losing their first teeth. They are humiliated because grown-ups and older children tease them about their toothlessness and the funny things it does to their speech. They are worried and afraid because they are by no means certain that new teeth will grow in and because the pulling of the first loose tooth was perhaps something of a shock. Even if the tooth came out by itself it remains a disconcerting thing to have a part of oneself simply drop off and leave a vacancy. It helps a child a good deal if, when the first milk tooth begins to wiggle, it is explained to him that this is a sign that he is growing up, that he will lose these baby teeth one after another but that big strong teeth like father's and mother's will grow in to take their place. The teasing is made less hard to bear if parents do not take part in it and if the child is reminded that the people who tease him looked just as funny when they were losing their first teeth. It is a good idea to take the child to the dentist who has already looked over his teeth once or twice and let him do the pulling of the teeth that are loose but don't come out promptly. The dentist can do this skillfully and without pain.

HOW SHE LOST 18 POUNDS OF FAT
FOR LESS THAN $1.00
"Will say in regards to Kruschen: I took it to reduce. I lost 18 pounds after using one bottle and feel fine. Just bought one more bottle today and expect to lose 18 more pounds. I now weigh 148 and feel fine." Mrs. Harry Robinson, Akron, Ohio, (Jan. 6, 1933).
Once a day take Kruschen Salts—one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water first thing every morning. Besides losing ugly fat SAFELY you'll gain in health and physical attractiveness—constipation, gas and acidity will cease to bother you—you'll feel younger—more active—full of ambition—clear skin—sparkling eyes.

SPORT SLANTS By ALAN GOULD

"One of the main reasons why you have seen such great pitching in the big leagues this spring"

"Most of our star ball-players in the first place, did not realize a depression was on until about a year ago.

"They noticed what happened to a fellow like Vance, supposed to be a big-money shot and in great demand, even at his advanced playing age.

"So, with everybody bearing down now, as Kipling used to say, for 'im and 'er and it, you are having some very fancy box-work and further proof of the fact that you can't tell what a guy will do until he has to do it."

"Tarzan" Becoming Tame If the Giants can keep Leroy (Tarzan) Parmelee under control or on a leash, Manager Bill Terry will have half of his current pitching problem solved.

The big Michigan right-hander's nick-name was hung on him because of his propensity for getting himself "out on a limb" while doing mound duty.

Even in that game he let in one run on a wild pitch and there were several occasions when his control gave team-mates and spectators the jitters.

Unbeatable in the Minors Parmelee was almost unbeatable in the American Association last season, with Columbus, winning fourteen games and losing only one before the Giants recalled him, but there was many an afternoon when it looked as though "Tarzan" was going to become wild enough to climb the highest tree.

Perhaps he will settle down now to city ways, having experienced the delightful sensation of being on firm ground for nine innings and become accustomed to the rattle of elevated trains outside the Polo Grounds.

A "cotton ball," at which girls display costumes of cotton, is an annual feature at Texas A. & M. College.

The south Texas onion crop for the 1933 season is estimated at 3,500 to 4,000 carloads.

VIRGINIA IS SENDING BEST TEAM TO U. C. C.

Chapel Hill, May 4.—The Virginia team which Carolina will face here Friday and in Greensboro Memorial Stadium Saturday has just beaten Navy, V. M. I., Maryland and Washington and Lee in a row and is regarded as perhaps the best team the Cavaliers have boasted in years.

One of the strongest things about Virginia is its exceptional pitching staff. In two of their last starts Peck Luck, slowball artist, let Navy down with four hits, and Dutch Brewer did the same for V. M. I. And in Virginia's next game Olin Rogers, sophomore southpaw, held Maryland to two hits until he faltered and was relieved in the eighth by Lawler, another good hurler.

To go with this all star mound staff Coach Gus Tebell has a fine-fielding, hard-hitting club, including five regulars from last year.

The veterans, Drissell, Charles and Brewer, covered the outfield for Virginia at the Greensboro game last year, but Charles has shifted to second this season.

The other regulars who are scintillating another year are Buck Poss, catcher and football player, and Sam Lee, shortstop, whose triple with two down in the ninth won the first game of the 1932 series for Virginia 6-5.

The annual Greensboro game has come to be the most colorful college battle in the South and has drawn as many as 11,000 fans, including the usual delegations from Carolina and Virginia, and from the several colleges in and around Greensboro.

New York Cotton

New York, May 4.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened fairly steady, seven to ten points decline in response to lower Liverpool cables and under liquidation ad Far Eastern selling.

Some Southern selling was reported, but offerings were taken by buying from commission houses or other sources, and after selling off to 815 for July and 855 for December prices rallied to about yesterday's close.

The market showed losses of four to seven points at the end of the first half hour. There was a little selling of May against a few notices issued this morning and the price of that position worked off to 803, or 12 points lower under small offerings.

Trading in later months was moderately active, and prices held steady late in the forenoon.

July firmed from 818 to 822 on further trade and commission house buying. At midday active months were unchanged to four lower. Futures closed fairly steady, two to nine points higher; spots quiet; middling 830.

Table with columns for Open Close, May, July, Oct., Dec., Jan., Mar. Values range from 8.05 to 8.91.

Stock Market New York, May 4.—(AP)—The financial markets were a little wobbly for a time in earlier trading today, but developed a better tone after midday.

Trading was less active in shares. After some easy selling rails led the list a little higher.

Wheat and cotton followed a somewhat similar course with cotton regaining most of setback of around 50 cents a bale. Rails and U. S. government were firm in bonds.

The dollar sagged slightly in foreign exchange dealings. Gains of one to two points appeared in such shares as Santa Fe and Lackawanna. Other shares up a point or more including American Telephone, Case, Western Union, Standard of New Jersey and Seaboard Oil.

New York tractions were firm and Motors rose fractionally. Tobaccos were heavy and metal shares sagged fractionally in profit-taking on yesterday's advance.

Stoks gained momentum on the advance as heavy buying in oils and rails appeared in late dealing.

Advances of three groups ranged one to more than three points. The turnover was 4,500,000 shares.

ina Cleveland hotel April 19. Boss has denied he had molested her. The bill alleges that Miss Mitchell was brutally beaten, suffered a black eye and number of bruises on her legs, that one of her teeth was broken and that her dress was torn.

Washington — (AP)—The Democratic landslide of last November swept into Congress for the "new deal" administration a widely assorted group of men, among whom was a minister of the gospel.

Henry E. Stubbs of California stepped from his pulpit in the Christian Church at Santa Maria, joined his wife and son in an automobile waiting outside, and began the motor trip to Washington to take his seat in the seventy-third Congress as the only active minister representative in that body.

Stubbs, called "Pat" by his friends, had been preaching for more than 25 years. When the state was redistricted, enough was chiseled from two other congressional districts to form a new tenth.

"I threw a prayer book and a hat into the political ring," says the Reverend Stubbs, "and emerged a victorious Democrat in a normally Republican territory."

This tall dark-haired preacher claims that he won his election almost single-handedly and with a very slender purse. Before he ever thought of running for public office, he had laid the foundation for an appeal to the voters.

Alongside his church in Santa Maria he built an improvised soup kitchen. He and his wife fed more than 5,000 hungry men at their establishment.

As evidence of just how slim his purse was during the campaign, at one time he started on an automobile journey to Bakersfield. After driving for hours, he slept in his car, rather than pay the cost of a hotel room.

He is a native of Texas, and, incidentally, Stubbs, McClintic, member of the House from Oklahoma, and Senator Bratton of New Mexico, were born and reared within 15 miles of one another.

His district comprises five counties. One of these counties is larger than the four eastern states of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Delaware. The district stretches from the Sierras to the Pacific ocean.

An enormous borax mine and the famous naval petroleum reserves are located there.
