Nineteen Killed And Two Hundred Injured By Tornadoes Today

Series of Twisters Struck Central Alabama Communities Early This Morning

Birmingham, Ala., May 5.—(AP)—Nineteen persons were killed and more than 200 injured by tornadoes that swept three west central Alabama communities shortly before dawn today.

The storm added to the toll of other storms in the South that swept Louisiana, Arkansas and Mississippi yesterday, two at Tulula, La., and one near Pine Bluff, Ark.

Civil War Veteran Dies Yesterday

Ezekiel Thomas Trotman, 87, died last evening at 6:45 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. M. H. James, Whitehurst Station, after a short illness from pneumonia.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. M. H. James; two granddaughters, M. H. James, Jr., Whitehurst Station, and Mrs. Joseph Teel Mount Pleasant community; two stepdaughters and a stepson, Mrs. W. L. Edwards and Mrs. J. K. Barnes, of Rocky Mount, and H. A. Simpson, of Portsmouth, Va., also survive him.

Japan's Railway Extensions Stir Soviet

A struggle between traffic terminals with Japan trying to cut into the value of Vladivostok as an outlet for Manchurian products and Soviet Russia seeking to safeguard the standing of its chief Pacific port, has again put the Chinese Eastern railway into the limelight.

The speaker closed with an appeal for purity of thought and motive and deed. "The pure in heart shall see God." The presence of Jesus Christ in these hearts of ours will change our modes of living; His presence will glorify and beautify our daily living.

Since then Japan has steadily sought to undermine the commercial importance of the parent road. By developing Korean lines up the coast of that former independent kingdom and by shooting branches eastward from the South Manchurian, she has virtually paralleled the Chinese Eastern route to Vladivostok.

That latter project has been in the making since 1907. So long as the Chinese were in power in Manchuria, they opposed the idea. Chang Hsiao-lang's hostility to it was one of the underlying causes of the sudden Japanese seizure of Mukden in September, 1931, an act which developed until Chang was ousted and the state of Manchukuo erected.

Neckties patterns are "mental property" in Germany, where an association of necktie makers plans to prosecute pattern stealers.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE HAS BIG FIRE LOSS

Main Building of College Swept by Fire Today With Loss of $200,000

Wake Forest, N. C., May 5.—(AP)—Historic Wait Hall, the 98-year-old administration building of Wake Forest College, was completely destroyed by fire early today at a loss estimated by college authorities at $200,000.

The structure, the oldest on the campus, contained the business offices of the college, a majority of the regular class rooms and dormitory quarters for about one hundred students. Through the fire was discovered about 2:30 o'clock, all the students living in the building escaped without injury.

Today the classes usually held in the church of the college and literary society halls and other college buildings. The business office was temporarily established in the library. Most important of the records, those of the registrar and bursar were saved as they were in fireproof vaults, but many other business office records were destroyed.

Wife of Former Alderman Appointed To Fill Out His Unexpired Term

Greenville for the first time in its history is to have a woman as a member of the city governing board, if Mrs. J. L. Hassell accepts the appointment to fill out the unexpired term of her late husband on the Board of Aldermen.

The board officially canvassed the returns from the recent city election and declared the mayor and four aldermen re-elected to succeed themselves while in the first ward. L. B. Fleming was declared elected. The election held the early part of this week was without a single contest and Mr. Fleming was the only candidate not already a member of the board and his candidacy was to fill a vacancy created when C. W. Hearne, alderman from the first ward, moved from the city. In view of Mr. Fleming's election to this post for the term beginning July 1 the board unanimously elected him to fill the unexpired term from now until that date and his duties as alderman were assumed at once.

Complying with the recently enacted law that exempts tax penalties on 1932 taxes the board announced that no penalties would be charged on 1932 taxes paid prior to July 1 and refund would be made to those parties who had paid penalties on 1932 taxes.

The board adopted a resolution requesting permission to set $4,000 in short-term notes for completion of the eight months school term and in order to have sufficient cash with which to pay the teachers in full at the expiration of the school term. Mayor Flanagan declared that the citizens of Greenville realized their obligations to the children in the way of furnishing adequate schooling and likewise were determined to see to it that those in whose hands were entrusted the training of the children should receive their pay promptly for their services. He likewise urged that those citizens who are in position to pay their taxes do so before July 1 in order that these notes might be paid off promptly.

Application was made by Smith Lee for license to operate a pool room on the second floor of a building on Evans street, but in view of an ordinance that restricts pool rooms to the ground floor with open fronts affording the full view of the gaming tables, the license was not granted but the matter was taken under consideration by the board and final action deferred until the next meeting.

Henry Oliver, colored, made application for license to sell beer at his place on Twelfth street but action was deferred pending investigation by the board.

Another resolution instructed the street committee to go into the matter of properly marking the city streets for the convenience of the public in general and especially visitors to the city.

Before adjournment the board adopted resolutions of thanks for the services rendered by the city by the late J. L. Hassell while a member of the board and expressed regret at his recent death.

COAST LINE HANDLING BIG LOTS OF PRODUCE

Goldboro, N. C., May 5.—One hundred and twenty-five solid carloads of produce moved North through Goldboro over the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Tuesday and Wednesday, this in addition to the acres of truck loads that passed through the city headed for the Northern markets.

Sixty of the cars on Tuesday and twenty-four on Wednesday were filled with strawberries; twenty-five Tuesday and ten Wednesday with lettuce, while other cars were filled with garden peas and mixed vegetables. The produce shipped through Goldboro came from Mount Olive, Faison, Calypso, Warsaw, Wallace, Magnolia, and other points between Goldboro and Wilmington. It was reported from the A. C. L. office in Goldboro that twenty-five car-loads of strawberries from Chadbourn were shipped Wednesday through Elrod, a short cut towards the North.

Chapter 29

A CHANGED LOVSCHIEM

"But, good Lord," I said, "can't the man open his own safe without directions? And even so, would he have only one copy of the combination? That's just silly..."

Lovschiem was at the desk. He bowed greedily to the departing doctor and then to me...

Sue Tally pulled the switch.

"Better," I said shortly to Lovschiem. "By the way, Lovschiem, where does this priest come from?"

A distinct change had come over Lovschiem during the last two days. He was frightened, glistened uncomfortably, and looked as if he had truly not slept...

I was conscious of his eyes following me and I was wondering, not why a railroad time-table was there on the desk of a hotel lobby...

"Ah, good-morning, Mr. Sundean," boomed a voice so startlingly near me that I all but leaped skyward. It was Mrs. Byng, of course...

"Nice girl," she went on without perceptible pause. "Pretty. Who's she speaking to, the doctor? Yes, I see, it's him. Pretty girl—pretty girl..."

"But she didn't," I said. "The woman snorted again. 'Didn't, hm?' she said scornfully. 'I saw her do it with my own eyes...'"

"I don't remember that I said anything for a moment or two. Then, conscious that her sharp eyes might be reading more than I chose they should read in my face, I said: 'Isn't there a possibility that you are mistaken?'"

"Not in the least," she said very promptly. "I'll tell you how it was. I didn't tell the police and shan't, for I rather like the girl. But this is what happened. Do you know where my room is?"

"It's on the second floor, isn't it?" She nodded. "Number 11; it's just there at the turn of the corridor from the south wing, where the lounge is, you know, into the middle section of the hotel. You pass it every time you go toward the north-wing corridor..."

"Well, anyway, there's a—what do you call it?—a switch-box in the south-wing corridor just across at an angle from my door. The night that man was murdered up there on that landing I wasn't sleeping well. The wind was howling and shrieking and rattled my windows till peaceful rest was out of the question..."

"I heard some noise, however, during a temporary lull of the wind that sounded as if it came from the hall. Now, as you might surmise, we are very quiet here; a noise in the hall around midnight and past is unusual. So having nothing better to do I got up and went to the door and opened it a little..."

"The light was burning dimly in the hall, and that girl was standing there at the switch-box; the door of the little cupboard was open, and she had her hand on the big switch, the one that controls the whole hotel—I looked the next morning to make sure—and the light went out in the hall..."

"I went back to bed and—" concluded Mrs. Byng with a fine feeling for climax—"thirty minutes or so later was hauled out by the police for murder..."

"But—are you sure it was Miss Tally? Couldn't it have been Madame Lovschiem?" "I've got good eyes, Mr. Sundean. It was Sue Tally."

First Spoken Bit Big Moment For Movie Extra

By ROBBIN COONS Hollywood, Calif.—One of Hollywood's biggest moments comes—if you ask the movie extra—when he gets his first line to speak...

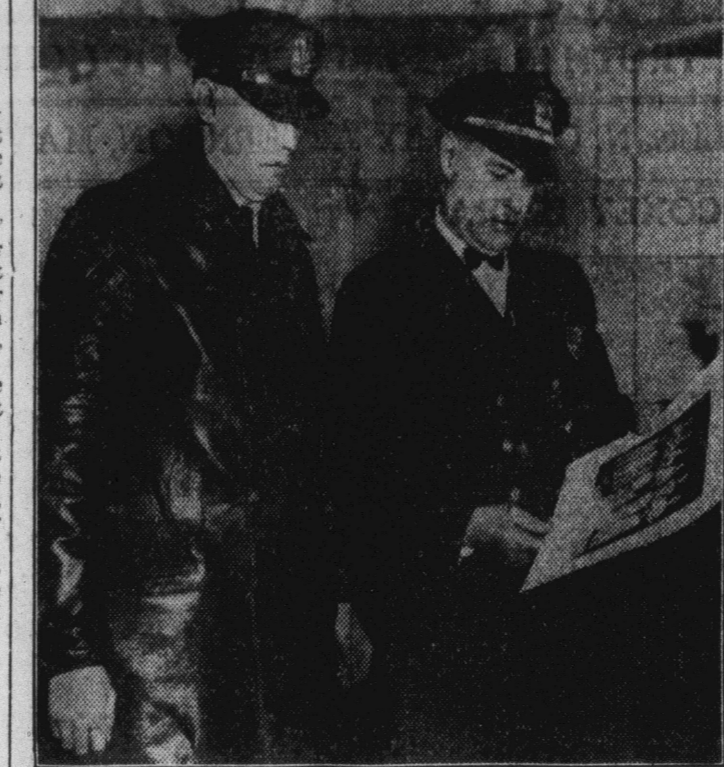

There was that boy that Wesley Ruggles selected to read a line in his new picture. The line was "Now you're talking..."

But the lad said instead, "Gee, that would be swell!" "Now you're talking!" corrected Ruggles.

"Oh, thank you, Mr. Ruggles, thank you!" gushed the boy, up in the clouds.

Young Mexican Outfielders Impress Coast Experts

Los Angeles, Calif.—(AP)—A couple of young sluggers appear to be set on driving Seattle high in the Pacific Coast League baseball race, but the majors will get them if Manager George Burns doesn't look out.

They are Fred Muller, second baseman and home run king of the league last season, and Melo Almada, outfielder.

Muller, who is 24 hit 38 circuit wallops last season and started out with promise this year by connecting with three in the opening series against Los Angeles here. He had three doubles to fatten his batting average.

Almada has less experience in organized baseball than Muller, but some critics are inclined to think he holds more promise.

A Los Angeles high school star in track, football and baseball, he is only nineteen and is enjoying his second year in organized baseball.

His brother, Louis Almada, after much pleading, got Melo the chance to try out with Seattle last spring, and after the training grind was over Louis was given his outright release as a reward, and Melo got his job.

The older brother caught on with the San Francisco Missions almost immediately, however, so all was forgiven.

Melo blossomed into a hitter almost from scratch and finished the season with a .311 average, much of which was picked up at the fag end of the season.

He started the first series here by getting ten singles and two doubles in twenty-nine trips to the plate, playing in the lead-off position, and on one day got five for five off LeRoy Herrmann, who won 21 games in the loop last year.

Young Almada, should he get up, will probably be the first Mexican to make the major league grade. He was a right-handed pitcher of promise in high school; broad jumped 23 feet and was an all-city halfback.

POLITICS

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

The geographical aspects of the inflation controversy in Congress present a picture which some politicians think may be highly significant.

On this dominating question, viewed by many as embodying the central issue of the whole Roosevelt program, the leadership and most of the votes for the administration came from the west and south, and nearly all of the opposition from the east.

So striking was the geographical division that it pretty well wiped out party lines. In other words, the same sections which stood almost solidly for Mr. Roosevelt's nomination at Chicago, and entirely solidly for his election last November, again rallied to his support.

This is especially interesting in view of the predictions of some of his followers during and after the campaign that his political strategy in the White House would be to combine west and south, leaving the east to fall into line or not, as it chose.

One published prediction expressed the same thought in this way: that the President would hope for the help of the east in putting into effect some rather sweeping changes, but failing to get it, would turn his back on the east, knowing he could count on majority support elsewhere.

It would be going a long way to say that Mr. Roosevelt actually has turned his back on the east; although on the inflation issue the first condition for such a procedure would seem to have been fulfilled. The east, as it expressed itself in Senate votes, has turned its back on him.

Take the developments step by step: The first inflationary proposal of the session which made a real impression was presented by a western Republican, Norbeck of South Dakota.

The measure on which the test finally came was fathered by a southern Democrat, Thomas of Oklahoma.

The opposition round robin was originated, apparently, by Reed of Pennsylvania, and signed by three other Republicans, all from the east. Notably absent was the signature of the Republican Senate leader, McNary of Oregon.

One of the most powerful voices raised for inflation was that of a western Republican, Borah of Idaho and one of the most insistent opponents was an eastern Democrat, Tydings of Maryland.

The exceptions to this geographical, non-party line-up were so few that they could almost be counted on one hand.

Important as it is with regard to the inflation issue alone, this sort of division is even more interesting in so far as it may indicate what is to come later.

When the political leaders of two great sections throw aside party lines to unite on so crucial and basic an issue as this, political analysis must take careful note.

They must recall the words of Democratic Chairman Farley, who spoke in New York during the campaign, that a great new party was forming "out there" and ponder how nearly correct he may have been.

The central design in each case is the same—an inner oval with the words "O Crux Ave Spes Unica" (hair, cross, the only hope) around an illuminated cross resting on a sphere representing the world.

The two lower values have an outer oval border bearing the legend, "Poste Vaticane—Anno Santo—1933-34," while in the two higher, bunched ribbons fall on either side of the central design, slightly smaller than in the first two, with "Poste Vaticane" appearing in a ribbon at the top and "Anno Santo" in a rectangle at the bottom.

Only twice did the dirigible carry air-mail. Both times official cachets were placed on the covers. The first time was her first coast-to-coast flight last May and the second, the tactical training flight which started from Lakehurst on August 1.

PRETTY OPERETTA GIVEN YESTERDAY AT THE WEST GREENVILLE SCHOOL

"The Wedding of the Flowers," a one-act operetta presented by the primary department of the West Greenville school on Thursday afternoon, attracted a large number of Greenville citizens interested in the activities of our city schools.

The outdoor stage was beautifully designed to represent a woodland scene. A huge flower basket artistically arranged in the center back of the stage formed the hiding place of all the sleeping flowers. The first to awaken were two gracefully swaying Jonquills, in the persons of Misses Louise Jackson and Christine Manning who heralded the news of the approaching wedding of Valley-Lily and Johnny-Jump-Up. A group of roses peeped from the basket, and danced to the songs of the large choir made up of school children. The roses were represented by Misses Audrey Carroll, Ella Lynn Allen, Gloria Caroll, Doris Smith, Edna Munford and Charlene Moyer. The Violets arrayed in their costumes of modest purple were the next to join the assembly and were represented by Misses Mary Savage, Lucile Joyner, Ruth Brown, Sara Williams, Mary Ann Duncan and Betty Nichols.

The smiling sunflowers nodding from their long green stems added quite a bit to the gaiety of the flower convention. They were represented by Masters Rufus Butner, Tommy Moore, Joe Tyson, Richard Duncan, Charles Mayo, James Hudson and Earl Denton.

The Field-Daisies singing the songs of the approaching wedding were represented by Misses Evelyn Fomes, Hazel Fomes, Marie Whitehurst, Melvin Creech, Marjorie Harris and Ester Falkner. The last to make their appearance were the wee blue Forget-Me-Nots, their sad little faces made glad by all the happy songs and dances of other flowers. They were represented by Misses Laura Herby, Ruby Paul, Dorothy Colie, Dorothy Copeland, Doris Broadhurst and Helen Aman.

Just as the flower assembly had completed their plans the Rainbow Fairy scattered the radiance of her brilliant colors in a most graceful dance interpreted by Miss Marjorie Dean Allen. The hour for the wedding was now at hand, and the alarm was sounded by two dainty Blue-Bells. While the choir softly sang "I Love You Truly," the groomsmen and bridesmaids as Tulips and Dandelions, took their places. They were Meril Taylor, Lizzie Keesh, Julia Conway, Jene Cox, Irene Forbes and Waldene Tucker. Groomsmen were Phil Goodson, Albion Williams, Floyd Dunn, Mitchell White, E. T. Clark and Warren Brown.

As the music pealed forth the Wedding March, the maid of honor Miss Mary Barden Taylor, beautiful in a costume of white and green, entered with all the dignity of a Water Lily, which she represented. The ring-bearer, Master Jack Jennings, carrying the ring in the heart of a white lily, followed the maid of honor. Little Miss Theodell Nichols, as flower girl, very daintily in her costume of pink, scattered rose petals in the path of the bride. The bride, little Miss Margaret Anne Johnson, was lovely in her wedding gown of snow white. Her shoulder bouquet consisted entirely of valley lilies. Her flowing train was arranged in cap form about the face and held in place with a wreath of valley lilies. She entered with the bridegroom, Master Billy Denton, arranged in a bright green dress suit as Johnny-Jump-Up. Master Ed Jolly McLawhorn as the Reverend Jack-In-the-Pulpit, performed the impressive ring ceremony, and after the bridegroom had promised to shelter his lily bride in all sorts of weather, pronounced them man and wife. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for an extended woodland tour.

The songs, dances, music and performance of the school children were beautifully presented and reflects much credit on their teachers. The operetta was given under the direction of Miss Ona Shindler, accompanist. Miss Helen Gray Jones, Miss Agnes Fullilove, Miss Jane Hadley, Miss Alma Lee and Mrs. George Gardner.—Reported.

Student Election At College. Student elections are now being held for the honor places for next year in the campus organizations of East Carolina Teachers College, the literary societies and the various clubs.

The Poes will serve under the leadership of Miss Melba O'Brien. The chief marshal comes from the Emerson Society for the remainder of this year and next. Miss Edwina Burch was elected for that position.

Miss Clyde Morton is president of the Scribblers Club, the group of editors and reporters for the newspaper and those with journalistic inclinations. Bob Eason of Greenville, is the new chairman of the chapel committee, the group responsible for the weekly and monthly chapel student programs. Miss Emma Lee Davis is the president of the English Club.

The officers in the other organizations will be elected within the next few days.

DR. FRANK SPEAKS "ON A PLAN TO PREVENT WAR"

"If the American people would take two steps, there is no likelihood, in my opinion, of their ever being involved in war again," said Dr. A. D. Frank last night in his talk at Sheppard Memorial Library on "A Plan To Prevent War."

As this nation is bounded east and west by the ocean and north and south by wet neighbors, it need fear no invasion, he went on. The two steps that would be most efficacious in preventing other wars are submitting the question each time to the direct vote of the people and making use of a universal draft if war were really declared.

Then going back to the World War, Dr. Frank spoke of its 15,000,000 or 16,000,000 of men killed or so badly injured as to be a total loss to civilization and of its direct cost $200,000,000,000, and said that the best minds have for centuries sought a plan to prevent such horrors.

He mentioned the idea of a League of Nations which gained such currency after the Napoleonic wars, of the Balance of Power plan, which worked for a while but ended in the World War, of the present League of Nations; and declared his belief that determining war by popular direct vote and using a universal draft would be our best means of preserving peace.

According to Dr. Frank, the two groups that lead us into war are our leaders and the powerful interests that expect to profit by the holocaust.

In support of the view that leaders often drag a nation into war while the common man does not know what is going on, the speaker read excerpts from the letters of Colonel House showing that he was binding the United States by secret agreement as early as 1915 to the cause of the Allies while the common people were getting ready to re-elect Wilson on the slogan—"He kept us out of war."

Such things, said the speaker, should be settled by the people and not by two or three leaders. The second thing that makes for war—the desire for big profits—would lose its power if the universal draft were employed with all workers serving on the same pay as the army, with business in the hands of the military, and no more than 4 per cent allowed the owners.

When war is equally unprofitable and uncomfortable for all, there will be no one group favorable to a state of war.

The third and last talk of this series sponsored by the A. A. U. W., which will be on the agricultural problem, will be given next Monday night at 8 o'clock at the library.

Round Table Club Meets.

The Round Table Club held a very delightful meeting on Tuesday afternoon, May 2, at the home of Mrs. J. E. Nobles. Almost the entire membership responded to roll call. Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Brooks and Mrs. Hall were guests. Mrs. J. H. Rose, the president, presided over a short business session. Mrs. Howard McGinnis was in charge of the program. Her subject was "Changing Conditions in Public Giving."

Alfred W. Anthony says, "We are floating down a stream which we call time—various familiar objects float with us, one of which we call environment. Environment constantly changes and usually without our realization of the changes as they take place. Recent reports from England show that some 20,000 foundations there have ceased to operate because changing conditions have nullified the good intentions of the donor. Benefactions once intended, at length impossible, because of changed conditions. With all the changes—charities change. Not long ago there were no asylums for the insane, no homes for the feeble minded, no refuge for the aged, for the sick and convalescents or for the orphan. With recent years it has become obvious that the tendency through the country at large is for the state or county to take over the entire support of institutions which provide for health, education and dependents. Since 1914 numerous community chests and trusis have been established. Philanthropy has entered a field of big business and life insurance in philanthropy is comparably new but in one form or another it is meeting with widely increasing favor and development. The tendency is growing to set up foundations and to give large-fortunes for research work.

This splendid paper was a fitting climax to the study on American Foundations. The hostess, assisted by her daughter, Miss Hulda Nobles, served a delicious salad course.—Reported.

Royal Courts Draw New U. S. Envoy In British Social Whirl

By OSCAR LEIDING. London—(AP)—Robert W. Bingham, America's new ambassador to the Court of St. James, will be plunged into the center of Great Britain's social whirl at the very outset.

When he arrives he will find himself in the midst of the five royal courts which King George and Queen Mary will hold this year. The first one is on May 11. Interest in the courts will center largely on the presence of two new ambassadors, representing America and France.

But there is more to the ambassadorial duty than his own appearance at the court.

It is the personal prerogative of an ambassador or his representative to choose from the hundreds of applicants the society women who will have the privilege of curtsying before the king-emperor and his wife.

This year nearly 200 applications were received at the American embassy. Of these, if the past is any guide, less than 40 will be granted for the five courts.

The 1933 season marks the first time since 1930 and the second since King George's grave illness in 1928 that five courts are planned. The dates this year are May 11, 12, 17 and 18, and June 23.

An additional court may mean one of two things, either that in the great press of applications there will be less likelihood of anxious debs and young brides being disappointed by rejection or that presentations can be made in more leisurely fashion.

For the lucky ones who are selected, the great moment, in which they dip before the king, move gracefully a few steps and repeat the curtsy before the queen, passes all too quickly.

Months of preparation—selection and fittings of the gown and the other details of wear, the lessons in curtsying and walking and sitting gracefully when a court train is worn, the parties, and uncounted details—lead to this brief moment.

Each court represents the peak of British social ceremony and the glittering pageant with its dignity and splendor has no counterpart in the world today.

Whether the chosen ones will have to "pass in review" before thousands of spectators lining the wide Mall which leads from Trafalgar Square to Buckingham Palace has not been made known.

Usually the main ordeal for the presentees has been the long wait in their limousines, lined up in the Mall awaiting their turns to enter the palace. Last year, however, for the later courts, all the cars were packed into the courtyard and the public lost its chance to give society a leisurely "once over."

Once at the palace, the pageant moves smoothly through the throne room. Each girl is identified on arrival by a chamberlain who sees that she is in her proper place and arranges her train.

As each appears before the king and queen, in regal splendor on a raised dais, her name is called and she curtsies to each in turn and passes by, the face held towards them as she leaves.

CAREFUL MIXING OF FAT IMPORTANT TO PIE CRUST

Fat for pastry should be cut or mixed until pieces as large as a pea or slightly larger remain unmixed, says Florence Scouler of Oklahoma A. and M. College. If the fat is mixed more thoroughly, she warns, it coats the flour particles, prevents their absorbing water, and the result is a crust that is thin and brittle.

Baby's Exercise. The best time for baby's daily exercise is just before his bath. Freed of his clothing, he can be allowed to kick and squirm and wave his arms about. Simple exercises, pre-

Miss Perkins made an impression the first time she made what might be called a public appearance.

Those who saw her, within less than a month after she had taken office, before the joint committee of the House and Senate...

Ogden Mills, former secretary of the treasury and a former member of the House, also had his troubles with the gentlemen "on the hill."

Under fire for the first time, Miss Perkins emerged with flying colors. There are those who will tell you that she bested her congressional inquisitors—routed those skilled in parliamentary practice and legal debates.

Direct in everything, precedents as such mean nothing to her. For example, when a metropolitan paper criticized her policies in an editorial, she came right back with a letter explaining her stand.

An influential member of Congress had been having difficulty with immigration inspectors in his district. After repeated complaints, he appealed to her. She picked up a telephone, got a line direct to the immigration office in that section, and cleared everything up within a few minutes.

That's how she works. They're already saying around here that before she gets through the labor department, the youngest division of government now, will be among the most important and influential of all.

Next, it is of interest to note the all-sufficient love of God in which we are to keep ourselves. Here we note the purpose of the incarnation in that this love is an understanding love. God wants us to understand that He understands us, and through Christ's incarnation accomplishes that purpose.

It is a purifying love. It is a purifying love in the heart of man. It is an inspiring love that has kindled the inspiration for the greatest deeds of heroism the world has known. It is likewise an empowering love, as one has said: "My strength is as the strength of ten, because my heart is pure."

Out of it all we are led to wonder, why did Jesus choose us to be His lights to the world?

Vienna's Hints Of City-State Worthy Austria By WADE WERNER Vienna.—(AP)—Revision of boundaries in a direction scarcely contemplated by Benito Mussolini or Adolph Hitler is hinted now and then by sections of the Vienna press and public.

The hint is that if friction continues to develop between Socialist Vienna and the Austrian federal government the city might conceivably declare itself independent. It now has the double status of a municipality and a state of the Austrian republic.

Dispute Federal Decrees Since the shelving of parliament and the subsequent development of a decidedly anti-Socialist and even anti-Jewish program by the government of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, there have been several violent disputes between city-state and federal authorities as to who has the right to give orders here.

foreign free-state Vienna against an unconstitutional federal power." The strength of this local Vienna feeling was brought home to Chancellor Dollfuss and other cabinet members when they attended a recent football match between Austria and Czechoslovakia.

Neither the chancellor nor any of the foreigners among the 50,000 spectators saw anything strange in the fact that the crowd cheered the Czechoslovakian hymn. But it was something of a shock when much shrill and derisive whistling greeted the Austrian anthem.

Invoke Hitler Slogan The anthem never has been particularly popular among the Socialists because it is sung to the tune formerly played for "God Save Our Kaiser." But that it should be publicly hissed struck Austrian reactionaries as evidence of a considerable separatist feeling.

The episode caused the ordinarily conservatively written semi-official organ "Reichspost" to exclaim with Hitlerian vehemence: "Austria awake!"

Fascist papers openly accused the Socialists of planning to secede "with the help of Czechoslovakian troops."

Washington Daybook By HERBERT PLUMMER Washington — (AP) — There's probably no member of President Roosevelt's official family attracting more attention these days than Miss Frances Perkins.

Nor is it simply because she's the first woman member nor her tricorn hat nor her re actions to a man's job that have attracted the attention of the political observers and others in the capital. It is Miss Perkins herself and the way she is going about her job of enlarging the importance of the labor portfolio in the President's cabinet.

Washington is familiar with women in high positions. The gentlewomen of Congress for a long time have provided observers ample opportunity to see how they can stand the gaff.

Miss Perkins made an impression the first time she made what might be called a public appearance. Those who saw her, within less than a month after she had taken office, before the joint committee of the House and Senate considering the administration's bill creating corps of unemployed to work in the national forests, were convinced that she could hold her own.

Congressional committees at times are trying to cabinet members. Pat Hurley, when he was secretary of war, became so incensed at the jibes he suffered at the hands of one that he stalked out of the committee room vowing he would not return until they could agree to treat him with what he termed the proper consideration.

Ogden Mills, former secretary of the treasury and a former member of the House, also had his troubles with the gentlemen "on the hill." Under fire for the first time, Miss Perkins emerged with flying colors. There are those who will tell you that she bested her congressional inquisitors—routed those skilled in parliamentary practice and legal debates.

Direct in everything, precedents as such mean nothing to her. For example, when a metropolitan paper criticized her policies in an editorial, she came right back with a letter explaining her stand.

An influential member of Congress had been having difficulty with immigration inspectors in his district. After repeated complaints, he appealed to her. She picked up a telephone, got a line direct to the immigration office in that section, and cleared everything up within a few minutes.

That's how she works. They're already saying around here that before she gets through the labor department, the youngest division of government now, will be among the most important and influential of all.
