PRESIDENT IS STILL MASTER IN WASHINGTON

Price Says Roosevelt Will Have His Own Way With Special Congress

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

It now seems assured that President Roosevelt will have his own way entirely with the special session of Congress, right up to the last whack of the gavel.

A month ago signs pointed in the other direction. In both Senate and House there was growing restlessness, particularly among the new members, who once or twice appeared almost out of hand. The Democratic leadership was much worried.

Toward the end of April the Presidential fortunes turned. Mr. Roosevelt's word again was law. It developed that he was destined not only to shape by his leadership every single action of the session, but even to set the date of its adjournment.

The change represented a remarkable recovery of prestige for the President. It lifted him into a position of legislative power regarded by many as even greater than that he enjoyed during the first few days of his administration, when he put the emergency bank bill through under whip and spur.

This did not come about by accident. A great deal of practical planning and careful patient execution lay behind it.

In the matter of patronage, for instance, it came to be pretty well understood without the administration actually saying so—that those who stood in the way of the White House program might expect nothing from the pie counter.

Then a report got around—somehow—that the President was prepared to do as he often had done as governor of New York and appeal to the people directly over the heads of congressmen.

After the malcontents had thought these two things over for a while they felt differently. Most of them began looking for a good opportunity to get aboard the band wagon again.

The degree to which the Roosevelt leadership was restored can be measured by the one example of the bonus. Few doubted that large majorities in both Senate and House wanted the bonus, but the movement for its enactment was ended with great suddenness by a hint from the White House, spoken privately and without public commitment.

Mr. Roosevelt thus has passed through the first test of his leadership. His trial by fire now is transferred to the field of foreign affairs, upon which he is entering with such high expectations.

Mrs. N. D. Eason Dies Here Today

Mrs. N. D. Eason died about noon today following a week's illness. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock at her home, 203 Paris avenue, conducted by Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church. Burial will be made at the Robert Allen homeplace about two miles from this city on the Falkland road.

She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allen and had made her home in this city for the past year and a half. She was a member of the Red Oak Christian Church.

She is survived by her husband and eight daughters, Jenelle, Lucy Bell, Sadie, May, Sallie, Avline, Ellen, Anna, and four sons, Lyman R., N. D., Jr., Joseph M., and Aaron; three brothers, Onan, Lunis and Moses Allen; and two sisters, Mrs. H. C. Smith and Mrs. John Eason, of this city.

Name New President Harvard University

Cambridge, Mass., May 8.—(AP)—James Bryant Conant, Sheldon Emory professor of organic chemistry, today was chosen president of Harvard University to succeed Lawrence Lowell, resigned. The new president, who was named by the Harvard Corporation, subject to confirmation by the board of overseers, has just passed his 40th birthday, making him one of the youngest Harvard presidents in the long line extending from 1640.

226 PATIENTS RESCUED AS HOSPITAL BURNS

Rushed out on cots or carried down ladders, 226 patients were rescued when a fire swept the Robert Parker hospital at Sayre, Pa. A baby was born in the hospital when the fire was at its height. One of the damaged wards is shown above. The loss was estimated at $1,000,000.

STORMS TAKE TOLL OF LIFE AND PROPERTY

Three Killed and Scores Injured in Series of Scattered Tornadoes Sunday

Covington, Tenn., May 8.—(AP)—A west Tennessee tornado killed three persons and injured twenty in Tipton County near Covington yesterday, while a forty-mile wind did heavy damage at Nashville, the capital in the center of the State.

Bunson, S. C., May 8.—(AP)—A tornado cutting a path two miles wide and approximately thirty miles long swept the farming section between here and Walterboro near here inflicting extreme damage to crops and unroofing dwellings. No one was reported injured. The storm was followed by a heavy hail and rain which was reported to have practically ruined corn, cotton and fruit trees in the affected area. Trees were uprooted, unattended buildings were demolished and the roofs of at least three dwellings were torn off. Window-panes in homes and plate-glass in stores were blown out. For the most part, the wind roared over the farms, skirting the villages and inhabited centers.

Little Rock, Ark., May 8.—(AP)—Storms struck in two sections of the State yesterday. One woman was injured at Harrisburg while considerable property damage was reported from another section.

CIVIL COURT BEGINS HERE

A one-week term of Superior Court for the trial of civil cases got under way here this morning with Judge Clayton Moore, of Williamston, presiding.

The week's docket consists of about seventy cases, most of them of a minor nature, and with indications many of them would be compromised or settled out of court, it was believed that there would be no trouble in disposing of the entire calendar during the week.

PITT COUNTY HEALTH QUEEN CROWNED HERE

Miss Mildred Taylor, Of Pactolus, Picked From More Than 500 Young Women

Miss Mildred Taylor of Pactolus was crowned Pitt County health queen here Saturday night as a closing feature of the Community Fair and Spring Festival held last week in the Star Warehouse.

In an elimination contest under the direction of Miss Ethel Nice, County Home Demonstration Agent, and the Four-H Clubs of the county, Miss Taylor was chosen for the finals from more than 500 girls in the various schools of the county.

On Saturday, April 29, the twenty-eight high scorers in the preliminary contest came to the local health offices for the final contest that resulted in Miss Taylor's selection as Pitt County's healthiest girl. The name of the winner was not announced until Saturday night at the exposition at which time she was crowned queen.

The address of presentation was made by Dr. M. V. Zeigler, of the United States Public Health Service, stationed in this State, which in part was as follows:

"Besides fitting yourself more effectively for your life's work, good health increases your beauty and attractiveness. True beauty comes from within; it cannot be put on from without. Good health gives such beauty, a beauty that will wear. Its foundation is health of body and mind; its expression is a sparkling eye, a clear complexion, a graceful body, an active brain. With health and happiness as your birthright, it is your honor and a privilege to crown you queen of health. Preserve and increase this birthright."

BELGIUM IS FAVORABLE TO TARIFF TRUCE

Will Give Roosevelt Plan Unqualified Support; British Action Uncertain

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—The unqualified agreement of Belgium to the tariff truce proposed by the United States was announced today by Under-Secretary William Phillips after a conference with the Belgian representatives of the State Department.

London, May 8.—(AP)—The fate of the American tariff proposal hangs on the safeguards the British government wants, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald indicated today, in an address to the House of Commons. Pressed for an announcement of his government's attitude, Mr. MacDonald declared that he had accepted to add to his statement of last Thursday in which he said he had accepted the idea of the truce with the understanding that the British tariff position would be protected. The American government, he added, considered this attitude reasonable.

GIRL FORCED KILL SLAYER OF HER FATHER

Crazed Lover Murdered Her Father and Then Forces Girl to Kill Him

Elgin, Ill., May 8.—(AP)—Dramatic details of how a 17-year-old girl was forced to act as executioner of her father's slayer after her own life had been spared by failure of a shot gun to respond to the trigger, were revealed here today.

The girl, for whose act the state's attorney said he would ask a coroner's jury to render a verdict of justifiable homicide, is Loretta Schmitz. Her victim is Oliver Dwy, 48, slayer of her father, John Schmitz, 56, farmer.

Authorities said they believed Dwy had become moody over his failure to win the girl's affections. The brief reign of terror took place at the Schmitz home early Sunday morning when Dwy, believed to have been crazed by liquor, dashed into the bedroom of Schmitz, whom he had worked for 15 years as a farm hand, armed with a shot gun and announced he intended to kill them all. Schmitz leaped from the bed to struggle with the man and Dwy shot him fatally through the neck.

A moment before Schmitz had been shot through the leg as the gun had accidentally discharged when Mrs. Schmitz coming to the rescue of her husband, had joined the scuffle. Dwy then ran to Loretta's room and Mrs. Schmitz fled to the nearby home of her daughter to summon help.

The girl said she was forced to get on the bed while Dwy pointed the gun at her and she waited with her face covered for the shot that would send her into eternity. She pressed the click of the trigger but nothing happened. At that moment the farm hand forced the weapon into her hands and ordered her to kill him and then shoot herself.

"You kill me and then kill yourself or I'll kill you," he said. She pulled the trigger and once again it didn't work. Then Dwy told her to release the safety catch on the gun and she did so and fired. The man fell mortally wounded and then Loretta ran to her sister's home.

SHOT DOWN IN DOOR OF HOME

Willie Harris of Ayden Section Shot by Unknown Assailant Sunday

Willie Harris, white man of the Venter Cross Roads section about five miles east of Ayden, is suffering a shotgun wound received early Sunday morning as he stood in the doorway of his home.

According to information furnished by officers who investigated the shooting, Harris had returned home about 2 o'clock, and after preparing to retire, had gone to his front door to fasten the screen door. As he stood in the doorway a shotgun was fired from the nearby darkness and a load of No. 4 shot took effect in his upper thighs and hip. Harris was unable to furnish any clue as to his assailant's name, and so far no arrests in the case have been made. County officers were to continue their investigation of the affair today.

One Killed and Two Injured In Automobile Wreck

Richmond, Va., May 8.—(AP)—K. R. Ivey, formerly of Benson, N. C., but recently a resident of Washington, D. C., died early today at a local hospital from injuries received when the automobile in which he was riding with two companions crashed into a highway rail near Doswell, Hanover County, late yesterday.

A portion of the guard rail penetrated Ivey's chest. Two blood transfusions were given in an effort to save his life.

George E. Thompson, Washington, D. C., received a broken collar bone and John H. Wheeler, of Benson, a leg injury. Thompson did not go to the hospital but Wheeler was taken to the hospital where his condition was reported today as fair.

BONUS ARMY IS ENROUTE TO CAPITAL

Seventy Five Men Ejected From Freight Train at East Bradford, Va.

East Bradford, Va., May 8.—(AP)—This railway junction town is the involuntary host this morning to 75 men who claim to be a part of a new bonus army moving toward Washington. They were ejected from a Norfolk-Western freight train about 9:30 o'clock that came in from Bristol. They remained on the railway property and said they would catch another train or remain there until the railroad moves them off. The asked to be fed by the town, but no action was taken immediately by the authorities.

BUCK CLAIMS SOMEONE ELSE IN KIDNAPPING

One of Suspects Declares That Someone Else Implicated Ran Out on Him

Provincetown, Mass., May 8.—(AP)—While sitting in the prisoner's box awaiting arraignment for the kidnaping of 10-year-old Peggy McMath, Kenneth Buck today told reporters that someone else was in the crime and ran away and left him to take the blame. With Kenneth in the prisoner's box, was his brother, Cyril, also held for the kidnaping but Cyril remained silent.

Kenneth was asked, "Is it true there was someone else in on this?" "Yes, there is," he replied, and began to sigh. "I am between them and my wife," he continued, "and I don't know what to do. I know I did not do it and my wife knows I did not do it. I am between them and my wife and can't say anything."

Kenneth was then asked if the "someone else" went away. "Yes," he said, "they ran away and left me."

WILL OBSERVE CONFEDERATE MEMORIAL DAY

Appropriate Exercises be Held Under Auspices of Local U. D. C. Chapter

Confederate Memorial Day, Wednesday May 10, will be observed here as a bank holiday and with memorial exercises under the auspices of the George B. Singitary Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, including a pilgrimage to the graves of the Confederate dead.

The exercises will be held in Austin auditorium at the college at 10:15 a. m., at which time L. W. Gaylord, popular member of the local bar, will deliver the principal address. Following the exercises at the college, a parade of veterans, high school students and representatives of other organizations, headed by the High School band, will proceed to Cherry Hill Cemetery for decoration of the graves of the fallen heroes. Superintendent J. H. Rose, of the city schools, will be master of ceremonies at the exercises and in charge of the parade.

The public is invited and urged to attend the exercises. While it is hoped that all of the remaining veterans in the county will be present this year, it is remembered that last year only one of these heroes was able to attend.

Wage Increases For The Stock Market Employees

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Revival of activities on the stock market today brought pay increases to many Wall street workers and new jobs to a considerable number of employees. On the New York Stock Exchange J. F. Bache, one of the largest wire-houses in Wall street, with branch offices in many cities, today announced salary increases of 10 per cent effective immediately for all employees with the firm prior to January 1.

Funeral Today For Heath Child

William Elijah Heath, the year-end-a-half-old son of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Heath, of Chicod Township, died yesterday morning after a short illness of colitis. Funeral services were conducted this afternoon by Rev. M. Strawbridge, of the Grimesland Methodist Church. Burial was made in the Hodges' graveyard near the home.

Fire Destroys 175 Buildings Ellsworth, Me.

Ellsworth, Maine, May 8.—(AP)—Fire, believed by authorities to have been of incendiary origin, laid waste to a large section of this city last night with a loss estimated at $1,500,000. Dawn today showed a blackened desolated area where approximately 175 business houses and residences had stood.

Close to 400 of the city's 4,000 inhabitants were left homeless and the Red Cross chapters from Bangor and Bar Harbor moved in to take care of them. A company of national guardsmen from Bar Harbor arrived soon after daybreak to assist the one hundred special policemen sworn in during the night to guard the devastated area.

Says Government Endeavoring to Help Business Plan For Stabilized Prosperity

Washington, D. C., May 8.—(AP)—President Roosevelt outlined to the nation last night his ideas for a "partnership" between the government and agriculture, industry and transportation in a full exposition of his policies, past and future.

He announced that measures will be proposed shortly to give to industrial workers "a more fair wage return, prevent cut-throat competition and curtail long hours for labor, and at the same time to encourage each industry to prevent overproduction."

Turning to the subject of inflation, the Chief Executive stated the powers about to be given him by Congress for this will be used when, as, and if it may be necessary to accomplish the purpose of improved prices, credit and wages.

He said the conversations with the foreign envoys have brought a unity of action for progress on disarmament and economic stabilization.

"The international conference that lies before us must succeed," he emphasized. "The future of the world demands it, and we have each of us pledged ourselves to the best joint efforts to this end."

Mr. Roosevelt delivered his second report of stewardship in a room on the ground floor of the White House, starting his address at 9:45 p. m.

Reviewing completely the actions heretofore taken and outlining those for the future, the President, in a calm, confident voice, asserted:

"Today we have reason to believe that things are a little better than they were two months ago. Industry has picked up, railroads are carrying more freight, farm prices are better, but I am not going to indulge in issuing proclamations of over-enthusiastic assurance. We cannot bally-hoo ourselves back to prosperity. . . . I do not want the people of this country to take the foolish course of letting this improvement come back on another speculative wave."

As for his policies, he said it was "wholly wrong" to describe them as control of industry, agriculture and railroads, asserting they were "rather a partnership in planning and a partnership to see that the plans are carried out."

As for the gold embargo and the country's departure from the gold standard, he said a situation developed three weeks ago resulting in a drain on the national gold supply by foreign countries, and a resulting threatened flight of American capital from the country.

Asserting this might have resulted in a panic and the complete stoppage of the wheels of industry, and that gold is required as a basis for currency, he declared:

"I decided not to let any of the gold now in the country get out of it. "The administration has the definite objective," he explained, "of raising commodity prices to such an extent that those who have borrowed money will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of dollar which they borrowed. We do not seek to let them get such a cheap dollar that they will be able to pay back a great deal less than they borrowed."

"In other words, we seek to correct a wrong, and not to create another wrong in the opposite direction. That is why powers are being given to the administration to provide, if necessary, for an enlargement of credit in order to correct the existing wrong."

"These powers will be used, when, as, and if it may be necessary to accomplish the purpose."

Going over his domestic program, he pointed to an early public works bill designed to stimulate "directly and indirectly the employment of many others in well-considered projects. The industrial supervision measure now taking shape, he said, would be "well considered and conservative."

"Government ought to have the right, and will have the right," he asserted, "after surveying and planning for an industry, to prevent, with the assistance of the overwhelming majority of that industry, unfair practice and to enforce this agreement by the authority of the government."

Telling of his entry into the White House two months ago, the President said "we were facing serious problems—the country was dying by inches." He added: "The situation in that crisis did not call for any complicated consideration of economic panaceas or fancy plans. We were faced by a condition and not a theory. Lending Congress for its support of him in the emergency, he insisted there had been no surrender of (Continued on Page Four)

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH

President Roosevelt's speech last night to the American people should give further assurance that we have in the White House a man who is determined to give the country a new deal in a way that will prove most beneficial to the greatest number of our people.

While there has been improvement since Mr. Roosevelt took over the reigns of government it is most noteworthy that instead of bragging on what has already been accomplished he minimizes the accomplishment thus far and warns that "we cannot ballyhoo ourselves back to prosperity."

Pointing out that teamwork is necessary all along the line if we are to stage a comeback on a sound basis, the President admits that some mistakes must be made but he is determined to do his part to keep mistakes to a minimum and work unceasingly for the common good of all.

Free from the usual pomp that accompanies addresses from high officials, Mr. Roosevelt's speech was another of his typical talks to his people in whom he is interested and we repeat his remarks give further evidence that we have in the White House one who is making every effort to pull our nation out of the mire of depression to a sound footing.

Chapter 31

EYES IN THE DARK

It was as if some ghost had taken a fancy to haunt my footsteps—disturbed possibly by my intrusion into his rightful domain, for if ever a place looked haunted it was that rambling old hotel.

And then I felt a presence more definitely. And I'd no sooner realized it than, out of the tail of my eyes, I caught a sort of movement on the lower gallery.

It was only a flicker, and it was gone, though I leaned far out to look.

Yet, Madame Grethe, Mrs. Eyns, and Sue were still in the parlor, and I took the pains to walk to the elevator shaft whence I had a view of a part of the lobby and could see Lovschlem still bending over his desk.

I had come, by that time, very circumspect, in my actions, and I took greater caution about opening doors into supposedly empty rooms and was careful not to outline myself against any windows, thus providing a target.

Had I needed warning, which I did not, the silent, dark little elevator hanging there at the ground floor would have supplied it.

But, as I say, I was little wiser, and the one definite clue—which I was not, as a matter of fact, at all certain was actually a clue—was as palpable and ghostly as was the feeling of a menacing presence stalking the dim-stretching corridors with me, just out of my sight and reach.

I found it when I visited the two rooms, thirty-four and thirty-five; from the window of one of the two I had caught that wild glimpse of a haggard and terrible face. The face which I refused to believe was Sue, which she herself unwittingly denied, and which still was so like—so terribly like her face, with the square-cut hair framing it, page-like.

Neither of the rooms appeared to have been occupied for some time. They were both cold and unaired and musty. It was only accident that I took my way across the heavy carpet of the latter, and going to the window, pulled back its curtain and squinted in an effort to see through the slits in the shutters in order to discover just how much of the second-floor corridor, directly opposite and across the court, the watcher's gaze could have encompassed.

I realized at once that I couldn't see through the shutters satisfactorily and was reaching out my hand to pull back the doors of the window and properly unlatch the shutter when my hand adusted itself in the evry act.

The shining glass was cold; the shutters behind it dark. My breath against the glass had misted a sfall patch, and in that little patch suddenly I saw very clearly the whorled imprint of fingertips. Four of them and a thumb.

They were very clear, sharply definite. They were spread as if the hand had pressed heavily against the glass. And they were small and slender. No man's hand had made them.

Five small fingerprints. The question was, When had they been made?

The possible significance of the little prints—prints that with a breath and a touch of my cuff I could everlastingly destroy—drew my attention from my surroundings.

Fortunately the door creaked. I've often wondered what might have happened if it had not creaked. Things might have been very different. But it was old and hadn't been opened and closed much in its last years, and the hinges creaked.

I'm sure I saw the door move. I'm sure I caught the glint of a moving high-light in that darkish doom. Then I flung toward it, pulled it open, and in the corridor.

There was, however, nothing but dimness and mustiness and increasingly shadowy walls and dark carpet winding past blank doors. Nothing.

And, as it proved, those ghostly little fingerprints had never a need to be photographed and ticketed and carefully documented.

They served their purpose wholly in their own ghostly fashion and added their own small link to the gradually accumulating sequence of the chain that was so strangely woven and was in the end so dreadfully like a noose.

I knew, now, the general plan of the hotel; I knew the locations of the various tenanted rooms; all on the second floor. I had not, it is true, penetrated the store-rooms in the wing below my own room; the time had been too short.

I knew that the switch box was exactly where Mrs. Byng had told me it was, and that she could scarcely have failed to recognize Sue.

I knew that the priest's room was off an intersecting corridor not far from the angle where I'd caught a disturbing glimpse of a moving shadow on the previous night.

And I knew about the fingerprints which I had not destroyed.

Beside me was the door into the White Salon. I had opened the door, I remembered, in the darkness of the night when the odor of tobacco smoke had aroused me. I opened it again and stepped inside.

The shutters were closed, and in the dusk I could see little. I found and pressed the switch, but there was no bulb in the high, ornate crystal chandelier.

As my eyes adjusted themselves to the gray gloom, however, I could make out objects—carved arm-chairs and sofas, and a heavy gilt mirror above a large fireplace, and in one corner a great piano that loomed up darkly, so large that there was a sort of cavern of shadow under it.

The Pope's piano, undoubtedly. Its dark unyieldingness and the look of waiting that an old piano always has—as if it were patiently waiting for the hands that had once touched it—gave the last touch of morose solemnity to the room.

I went out hurriedly, closing the door sharply behind me to shut in that waiting piano and those waiting chairs, and I wished the dimly cavernous White Salon with its dusty air and its silence were at a nappier distance from my own room.

Momentarily I paused in the long narrow corridor with its closed doors on one side and its glass wall on the other to look, as somehow I always did pause to look, down into the court and over the whole sweep of surrounding windows and encircling walls.

Lights were on in the lobby. The light was already swaying under the entrance arch, and thus above the gate that was not yet closed. Two policemen were in the court, huddled under their capes and leaning against the inner wall, which sheltered them to some degree from the wind.

Lovschlem and Grethe were in the lobby. I could see into the parlor, since the light was shining there and the window facing the court yet unshuttered; Mrs. Byng and Sue were still there.

I turned and walked along the north corridor, turned into the main section of the hotel, and started again toward the corridor running to the elevator.

The whole upstairs was silent and deserted and unbelievably empty. My footsteps made no sound on the carpeted corridor. Thus it was, I supposed, that as I passed the closed door to Sue's room I distinctly heard someone moving about beyond it.

And it could not be Sue, because I had just seen her sitting there in the parlor.

TORNADO 'BORN' IN WHIRL OF WARMED-UP NORTH WINDS MEETING TROPICAL BREEZES

Lines on the map show how cool winds out of the north and warm breezes from the gulf region, originating thousands of miles apart, cause tornadoes when they meet over the south and mid-west.

By F. B. COLTON (Associated Press Science Writer) Washington, D. C.—(AP)—Look out for a tornado when cold winds out of the north take a detour over America's far west on the way to their spring rendezvous with warm tropical breezes.

The detour takes some of the chill out of the northern gales and makes them ten times as likely to stir up "twisters" as when they rage straight down from Canada with no preliminary warming-up. This is the finding of U. S. Weather Bureau specialists studying the whirling storms, such as those of early May, which took a heavy toll of lives in an area embracing Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Missouri and Illinois.

Temperature Just Right Nine out of ten of the eastward-moving air masses or "lows" that are accompanied by tornadoes are followed by cold air from the north that has been partially warmed by passage over the western part of the United States, it has been discovered.

But this warmed-up air is still cooler than the tropic winds that it meets coming from the south, and the difference in temperature seems to be just right to cause the instability of air masses that gives rise to tornadoes.

Tornadoes result from preliminary skirmishes between outposts of the advancing cool air masses and the warm air which it is invading. A tongue of cool air pushes out from the main mass, it has been found, and over-rides the warm air at a height of about two miles. It is just under the edge of this cool air tongue that tornadoes are born, apparently as the result of warm air rising and cool air falling.

Move At Car Speed The average tornado moves no faster than an automobile, from 20 to 68 miles per hour. It may travel a few rods or up to 200 miles, though the average distance is 25 miles. Sometimes these storms travel in erratic "jumps." Width of the path varies from 50 feet to three-eighths of a mile in most cases.

Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri have the most tornadoes—four to seven a year.—The tornado season begins in early spring in the gulf and South Atlantic States, moving north later.

Tips on CONTRAC

THROW THE ENEMY IN by Tom O'Neil

A schoolboy of Port Washington, N. Y., should go far in the game of contract if he lives up to the promise shown in home games with his dad as partner, and takes advantage of good paternal instruction.

It is quite becoming for Alan Gould, Jr., to learn the intricacies of an end play at bridge from a father of an end play at bridge from a father who has recorded many a successful end play on the gridiron.

Senior dealt the following hand with Junior sitting north:

Bridge hand diagram showing North, West, East, and South cards and dealer position.

South opened the auction with a heart and West made a sporting double. North bid three hearts.

Fearing North and South had better than game prospects, ast bid four diamonds. It was obvious that a good penalty was in prospect for a diamond contract, but the Gouls, being vulnerable, foresaw better possibilities.

Over the four diamonds South bid four no trump, showing possession of two and the king of hearts.

West passed, bowing to the strength of North and South and hoping they would bid too much. North offered five no trump, indicating he had the other two aces. South went to six hearts. West happily doubled.

It might seem that West could not fail to take a trump trick and the king of spades, but South fixed things so that after making a trump, West could do nothing but lead away from the king of spades up to the declarer's ace-king.

West opened with the king of diamonds. The trick was taken in the North hand and South discarded the nine of spades. A diamond was led from the North hand, South ruffing. South led the heart knave. West covered with the queen and the ace took the trick. West's ten of trumps was, therefore, certain to win. The last diamond was led from the North hand, South again ruffing.

Placing all the high card strength West because of the double, South led a low club, finessing the ten spot, then played the king and ace of clubs. The king of trumps was led, followed by the nine. West took a trick with his ten of trumps and had nothing left to lead but spades. Declarer's knave won and the rest of his cards were good.

Finesse Tip

A rule of years' standing is that an adversary's king is likely to fall if the declarer's side holds 11 trumps in two hands, the queen will drop if the declarer has nine trumps and the knave if seven are held. This is based on averages.

A supplementary guide is the probability that a singleton trump honor is held by an adversary if either declarer of dummy has a singleton honor of any other suit.

Another distributional probability is that if one hand has a void another hand has one also. The Gould deal above is an illustration.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—(AP)—There's been a lot written about the daily problems of the casting director, but the studio gentleman in the role of Sherlock Holmes is seldom mentioned.

That is a role he takes not infrequently, too, when suddenly from the front office comes word that a certain picture is to be started immediately instead of two weeks hence. That order means more than the hastening of set construction and double-time stitching in the wardrobe department. It means, quite often, that stars who might be vacationing somewhere "between pictures" have to be hastily assembled.

Ordinarily it isn't a task requiring such sleuthing. Ann Harding may like to retire to quiet desert spots between camera sieges, but unfailingly, she leaves word with the casting office as to where she may be reached.

So, they say, is Constance Bennett. Just telephone her secretary, and Connie will be around, or will be fetched. That's the rule, however, with most of the stars and other players. For instance, Bruce Cabot, going motoring in Mexico, leaves a complete itinerary, stating just where he can be found any given day.

Generally speaking, the stars don't lose themselves completely when they "run away from it all." But sometimes complications occur, and the casting office dons its detective cap, yells "Quick, Watson, the 'phone book!" and gets busy.

The classic example arose recently when Eric Linden, who really travels, it seems, was needed in a hurry for a new film suddenly pushed forward in schedule. The studio's ex-officio "missing persons" list in value the things which it purveys put in calls to all the cities and towns between San Francisco and San Diego, and three days later located him at Laguna Beach about 50 miles from Hollywood. Another time Eric was "lost" and they found him fishing away happily up in Oregon.

Pictured above are six of the 200 prominent North Carolina society girls who are sponsoring the State's first Cotton Festival which will be held in Raleigh, Friday, May 19th. The festival will include a cotton parade, cotton fashion show, and be climaxed by the North Carolina Cotton Ball. Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, acclaimed the greatest novelty band in the world, will play for the Cotton Ball.

Richard Dix believes in privacy to the extent that no one at the studio has his home telephone number, but he can be reached through his secretary.

Lionel Barrymore is touchy, too, about being called at home—that is, he's particular about who does the calling.

His rule is to appoint one certain worker on each picture he's in to do all summoning when he is required unexpectedly. This worker has instructions as to what hours Mr. Barrymore considers "reasonable" for such calls.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—(AP)—A good illustration of the state of mind now not uncommon in Congress is to be seen in how hard the presiding officers of the Senate and House have to work to keep order during sessions.

Keeping order, especially in the House, has developed into a man-sized job at this special session of Congress. Some of the veteran observers on Capitol Hill are of the opinion that rarely before has there been such confusion on the floor.

"Mr. Speaker! May we have order?" is heard so often in the House these days that it seems almost part of the routine. But the noise goes on just the same. It subsides for a few moments, perhaps, but that's all.

There's nothing so strange therefore, about the incident in the House gallery the other day when a woman rose from her seat and began making a speech. To some who sit there and watch the milling below it probably seemed not much out of the ordinary.

The Senate, during the days that Charlie Curtis presided, was a stickler for order. Curtis simply wouldn't let the Senators go on until there was quiet in the chamber. He beat an incessant tattoo with the handle of his gavel while in the chair, and the slightest distur-

veyed and plotted by J. B. Harding, C. DIVIDE GOLF MATCH HERE WITH KINSTON

Greenville golfers defeated Kinston here Saturday afternoon by a score of 50 to 17 in the men's tournament. The Greenville outfit has 19 out of 25 matches and tied two. Wyatt Holmes of the locals was the low scorer with 75, while for Kinston, British Long turned in an 82 for low score. The men's tournament consisted of thirteen flights in all.

In the women's division of Saturday's play the Kinstonians defeated the locals by taking three out of the five matches with the score of 9 to 5. Miss Rachael Holmes was low scorer for the locals with a 93, while Mrs. Jeff Abbott scored low for the visitors with a 94.

SPORT SLANTS

If you have noticed any bright-red faces in or about Eastern collegiate premises these past few days, they probably belong to the rowing officials responsible for calling off the Poughkeepsie Regatta this year. Only to regret the enthusiastic response to the project for all intercollegiate regatta at Long Beach, California, this July.

I happen to know that a number of interested parties have been going around kicking themselves ever since they agreed to the one-year moratorium in the greatest college sporting spectacle that the East has ever built up.

Their pain and discomfort is in no way alleviated by the knowledge that Long Beach, with its famous Olympic rowing course, has now capitalized the situation, aroused national interest, and drawn the promised entries of those three ancient Eastern strongholds of the sport—Harvard, Yale and Cornell.

With the prospect of thus shattering tradition, Southern California not only may contribute a stirring substitute for the time-honored Eastern classic this year, but be in a position subsequently to outbid Poughkeepsie for the star attractions.

Can Handle 6,000 Fans By holding the Long Beach races in July, the way is clear for Harvard and Yale to go West any year they want to. At the same time, coast crews would be reluctant to make the long trip East to Poughkeepsie if assured of national competition off their own shores.

The four mile races at Poughkeepsie or New London offer a competitive spectacle that cannot be duplicated on the Pacific Coast. They have built up a real background of tradition, but they are costly propositions; a luxury to be enjoyed and encouraged when times are good.

This is where Long Beach, with its $250,000 course, big stands and fine location, has the advantage again. The race course is now limited to 2,000 meters, the Olympic "sprint" distance, but there are facilities to handle upwards of 50,000 cash customers. At least twice during the Olympic Regatta last year, crowds of this size turned out, and they would unquestionably turn out in just as big numbers for a college naval battle.

Could Be Great Show The college regatta at Long Beach could be extended over two or three days, not only for commercial advantage but to give the crews a much better chance to come through in an elimination series, conducted like the Olympics, where the "repechage" goes losers a second chance.

Pairs and four oared competition for the collegians could be tried out. School-boy crews encouraged to take part and exhibitions given by professionals, like Major Goodsell, as added attractions.

In short, while precedent is being busted, Long Beach can bust it wide open and put on a more entertaining rowing show than can be seen anywhere outside the Olympics. They have talked for years about making the Poughkeepsie races a two-day event, with trial heats, but that's all. Long Beach can show 'em how.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT DELIVERS MESSAGE ON PLANS FOR RECOVERY

(Continued From Page One) power. "The function of Congress," he said, "is to decide what has to be done and to select the appropriate agency to carry out its will. The policy it has strictly adhered to. The only thing that has been happening has been to designate the President as the agency to carry out certain of the purposes of the Congress. This was constitutional and in keeping with the past American tradition."

Granting that mistakes may be made by himself, Mr. Roosevelt said simply: "I have no expectation of making a hit every time I come to bat. What I seek is the highest possible batting average, not only for myself but for the team." Expressing the thanks of Congress and of the administration for "public support," he assured that "every ounce of strength and every resource at our command we have devoted to the end of justifying your confidence."

He outlined his four objectives in the international negotiations as follows: "First, a general reduction of armaments and through this, the removal of the fear of invasion and armed attack, and, at the same time, a reduction in armament costs, in order to help in the balancing of government budgets and the reduction of taxation." "Secondly, a cutting down of the trade barriers, in order to restart the flow of exchange of crops and goods between nations." "Third, the setting up of stabilization of currencies, in order that trade can make contracts ahead." "Fourth, the re-establishment of friendly relations and greater confidence between all nations."

METHODISTS CELEBRATE HUNDRETH ANNIVERSARY AT SERVICES YESTERDAY

(Continued From Page One) church, for much has been lost, much was never recorded in documentary form, and the portion which has been preserved gives only a hint of the influence exerted by this church on the life of this community. There is no particular merit in years alone, nor in mere age. Years merely give additional opportunities to do good deeds and the opportunity to improve good qualities. Merit is deserved because of worthy deeds or because of admirable qualities possessed. We celebrate today the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of this church and we rejoice in its accomplishments of a century. There are abundant evidences all about us in this city of the magnificent work it has been doing. These evidences are found in the hearts and deeds of the members of the church; in the wholesome influences they have exerted to make this a desirable city in which to live; and in the work of its members who have gone out into other cities and communities to live and there proved its wholesome influence.

The historical paper as read by Dr. McGinnis, and prepared by the church historian, Mr. Ellington, was as follows: "The early records of Greenville Methodist Church have not been preserved. Hence material for a satisfactory account of the origin and growth of the church is not available. Few facts and incidents could be obtained except during the last 25 years prior to 1893. Who was the first Methodist minister to preach in Greenville? Who organized the church, and when? These questions must be left unanswered. Before the Methodists erected a church building in Greenville they had preaching in the Academy building—a two story house opposite the church, on the corner of Second and Greene streets. It is highly probable that the church was organized at this time. On the 7th of May, 1833, one hundred years ago today, Allen D. Nobles sold a one-half acre lot, now known as the Methodist cemetery, to Simon Nobles, Samuel Whitley and Benjamin Stancill, trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The sum paid was $40.00. A building was soon erected, in which there was preaching once a month. It was one of the appointments of a very large circuit in this section. Rev. Miles Poy preached here in 1833 and 34. T. W. Arches held a good meeting in 1840 or 1841, resulting in several accessions to the church. John Tillett was the preacher in 1840-42; Jeremiah Johnson in 1846, and W. S. Chaffin in 1847. Greenville was then a part of the Tarboro charge. The circuit had 14 appointments and included all of Edgecombe and Martin counties, (Greenville) that part of Pitt county north of Tar river, and parts of Halifax and Beaufort counties.

C. M. Anderson was appointed to the circuit in 1848; William Walsh in 1849; W. L. Martin 1850-51; Robert Carson and T. H. Barling in 1852; T. B. Reeks in 1853; John Jones and George Wyche in 1854; Oscar Brent in 1855; James Jefferson in 1856; H. H. Gibbons in 1857-58; Hester in 1859; N. A. H. Godin in 1860; H. P. Bibb in 1861; James Fisher in 1862; E. A. Wilson in 1863; B. F. Long in 1864-65, but he did not come to the charge on account of the Civil War and John S. Long in 1866-67. At this time Washington and Greenville were in the same circuit, with preaching three Sundays at Washington and one Sunday in Greenville during the month James Hines followed in 1868 and W. H. Moore in 1869. He stated that there were about twenty members in Greenville at that time, and that little attention given to religion by the community. Every church was closed except the Methodist and very few attended that. To Mrs. Ann Pearce and Mr. B. W. Brown the church is indebted more than to any others at that time. Mrs. Pearce had two children, Joe and Ada (Mrs. Cherry). Ada swept the church, rang the bell, played the organ, led the singing, and counted no service in the church too mental for her to perform.

W. H. Call was pastor in 1870-73; A. R. Raven in 1874-75; Jeremiah Johnson was again pastor in 1876; B. B. Culbreth in 1877; L. L. Nash in 1878-79-80-81. In the spring of 1878 a glorious revival was held at which time over one hundred were converted and sixty-six joined this church. This meeting put our church to the front, which place she has held since that time. In January 1878 a lot on the corner of Second and Greene streets was purchased from William Grimes for the sum of $1,000.00. It was predicted that the property would never be paid for; and that the church would never be built. But in a short time both the church and parsonage were built and paid for. The first sermon preached in this church was preached on Saturday, February 7th, 1880, by Elder James Mann. The text was taken from St. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, 4:16. The text of the first sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. L. L. Nash, was taken from the Gospel of St. Matthew, 22:41-45 inclusive, on the 9th of Feb., 1880. The first person to join the church was Simon B. Wilson, on the night of February 22nd, 1880. The first conversion was Miss Annie Small, on the night of Feb. 25th, 1880. She joined the church on the night of Feb. 28, 1880. The new church was dedicated on the last Sunday in May, 1880, by Bishop Wrightman at the first district conference held in Greenville, and it was named St. Paul's Bishop and it was the first Methodist Bishop ever seen in Greenville. The first payment of $500 on the new church was paid by Mrs. Pearce. Her's was the first funeral to be held from this church. S. V. Hoyle served Greenville Circuit in 1881-1883. At the conference held in Statesville, Greenville was made a station and C. M. Anderson was appointed pastor. He remained here two years—1884-1885. P. A. Bishop served this church two years, 1886-1887. He writes: "The earthquake was the biggest occurrence during my pastorate. It occurred on Tuesday night and had a fine effect on my prayer-meeting congregation the next night." R. B. John succeeded P. A. Bishop and remained four years, 1888-1892. Governor T. J. Jarvis for whom the present church is named was received, by certificate in 1889. At the

FIRST FIRE TRUCK FOR MANTEO IS NOW IN USE

Manteo, N. C., May 8.—Manteo's first fire truck arrived Friday. It was quickly put into commission by the representative of the sales company, and gave the townspeople a short demonstration, with Lee Hassell at the wheel and Albert Evans acting as chief.

The shrill whistle of the siren drew a large number of spectators to the vacant square on the waterfront where under heavy pressure water was thrown high in the air. The new equipment has been secured through efforts of several individuals, including the mayor and members of the town board of commissioners. It cost approximately $4,000, about 25 per cent of which was paid by volunteer subscription.

TWINS NAMED FOR PRESIDENT AND WIFE

Edenton, N. C., May 8.—Just one namesake at a time for President Roosevelt has been nothing unusual since he took office March 4. Secretary of the station, and J. C. McCall was the name of Delano Roosevelt.

But it is believed Edenton holds the distinction of having furnished the first twins to be named after Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt. Last week a boy and a girl were born to Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Wheeler, of Edenton. The boy weighed nine pounds and the girl eight. Today the boy formally was named Franklin, for the President, and the girl Eleanor, for Mrs. Roosevelt. A letter has been forwarded to the President apprising him of the fact. Franklin and Eleanor Wheeler are the eighth and ninth children in the Wheeler family. The oldest, Wilbur, is fourteen.

New York Cotton

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened barely steady 6 to 17 lower on disappointing Liverpool cables and under liquidation and far eastern selling. July sold off to 8.47 and December to 8.80 under pressure which carried prices 12 to 19 net lower. July rallied to 8.55 and December to 8.94, slight to 11 from the lowest. The general market was steady with a net decline of 3 to 7 points about 11:30 o'clock. The market steadied later in the morning and at midday July was selling up around 8.63 and December 9.02, and the general list was unchanged to 6 higher. The market eased off later under increased profit taking and local and southern selling. The close was easier 17 to 19 lower.

Stock Market

New York, May 8.—(AP)—Reacting favorably to the address of President Roosevelt and denial of rumors that France would leave the gold standard, the financial market resumed its advance today. Trading was quieter in the share market, but many issues advanced more than one to three points, cancelling much of Saturday's losses. Cotton reacted and then recovered. Wheat showed a good undertone. Issues up one to three points included American Can, American Telephone, DuPont, Case, U. S. Fruit and others, while those up around a point included U. S. Steel, National Steel, General Motors, National Biscuit, Procter and Gamble, Union Pacific, Santa Fe New York Central, Public Service of New Jersey, Consolidated Gas, Owens, Illinois, Kennecott, Stone and others.

All were steady to firm. Stocks turned reactionary in late trading after a steady climb of one to two points and almost entirely erased the early gains in some cases. The turnover approximated 3,200,000.

Washington, May 8.—(AP)—News of the decision of the French cabinet on the war debts demanding a guarantee of moratorium in the June 15 payment was received with a sense of disappointment in official circles today. It was reiterated authoritatively that the United States is still expecting its European debts to pay the June 15 installment at least partially. Postponement of the President cannot be proposed to Congress. He has not asked Congress for this authority and leaders on Capitol Hill expressed considerable doubt that any such postponement would be authorized by Congress.
