PRESIDENT MAKES PLEA FOR WORLD-WIDE PEACE

HIGH SCHOOL CLOSURES WITH FINE PROGRAM

Eighty-Four Graduates Awarded Diplomas at Finals Here Last Night

Marked by the most impressive and inspirational exercises probably in the history of the system, Greenville high school closed last night with graduating exercises in the campus building of East Carolina Teachers college.

The exercises were witnessed by probably the largest crowd ever attending a similar event here and every available seat of the spacious auditorium was taken when the sixty-two graduates filed into the building and were seated directly in front of the stage.

The annual literary address was abandoned this year and in its place members of the department of music of public schools were given an opportunity to show the world what they have been able to accomplish in this field of endeavor. They not only demonstrated the development of talent during their public school training, but literally tooted and drummed their way into the hearts of the hundreds who had assembled to pay tribute to the graduates.

An unusual feature of the exercises this year was the awarding of diplomas to twenty-six members of the part-time vocational classes conducted by Prof. L. M. Cannon through state and federal aid. This brought the total number actually graduating from the high school to 88.

The awarding of diplomas to the vocational students took place shortly before the school closed. The diplomas were presented by Prof. Cannon and J. E. Winslow, member of the school board. Prof. Cannon stated that over forty odd students who started commercial courses the beginning of the school year twenty-two of them graduated.

After expressing appreciation to those who contributed in numerous ways to the success of the school year, J. H. Rose, superintendent of city schools, made the annual awards for high type of scholarship.

He announced that the sons of the late Dr. Joseph Dixon had presented the school with an athletic cup to be presented to the student who makes the highest athletic record from year to year in honor of the memory of Dr. Dixon, who for many years manifested much interest in this phase of school activity.

After expressing the appreciation of the gift Mr. Rose bestowed the cup upon Roger Taylor, whose work for the last several years has been outstanding in all phases of athletics.

The annual award of $5.00 from the Woman's club to the student with the best scholarship, was presented to Miss Martha Scoville.

The Keech distinguished service cup, which in recent years had gone to a single individual, was awarded to two students this year because each had established the highest all-round scholastic rating. The cup was awarded to George Willard and Harold Sugg, and each was so concerned over the other receiving the greater part of the glory that they had a difficult time getting the cup off the stage.

The majority of those attending the exercises had heard of the constant development of music in the public schools and of the high honors which the young musicians had won in state-wide music contests, but they didn't dream of the excellence of the achievement until they had actually listened to the band and orchestra and solos, quartets and mass singing.

Prof. Eugene Robeson demonstrated the fact that he has one of the best high-school musical organizations in the state in spite of the fact that lack of numerical strength prevented him from winning first place in the annual state contest at Greensboro. His orchestra, with the smallest of the musicians about eight years of age, gave a program that was keenly appreciated and hardly eclipsed by the band which would take the whole show anywhere you put it.

Numbers by the girls' and boys' glee clubs produced liberal applause and indicated what the director of public music, Miss Ona Shindler, is doing in this field and also showed why she was able to walk away with so many honors in the state music contest.

Among the highlights of the program were solos by Miss Helen Phelps and James Dees, clarinet.

PITT SCHOOLS NOW CLOSING

Impressive Exercises Conducted in Various Institutions During the Week

Commencement season was under way at full blast at various schools of the county system this week and impressive exercises were the order of the day in the majority of institutions.

Some of the schools closed the latter part of last week but it was not until the majority of the schools had closed on a very successful term this week.

Judge J. Paul Prizzelle of Snow Hill, resident judge of the Fifth Judicial district, is scheduled to deliver the literary address at Winterville next Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock and the baccalaureate sermon will be preached by Rev. W. A. Lillycrop of Greenville, next Sunday.

Dr. Brewer, president of Meredith College, who delivered the sermon before the graduating class in Pointon last Sunday, was scheduled to appear in Ayden next Sunday.

K. R. Curtis, director of public instruction in Wilson county, delivered the literary address to Belvoir last Friday night.

E. S. Hilley, president of Atlantic Christian College, will deliver the sermon before the graduating class in Farmville next Sunday night and Rev. W. A. Ryan, pastor of Eighth Street Christian Church, Greenville, will appear at Pachtos Friday.

Rev. E. L. Hillman, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, Greenville, delivered the sermon at Grifton last Sunday night, and Rev. J. C. Long of Bethel, appeared at Stokes at the same time.

Exercises in virtually all schools have been marked by impressive musical programs, and the long lines of graduates in each place spoke in eloquent terms of the success of the school year.

Marvelous Demonstration Of Mind Control Friday

The editor of the Reflector finds Madame Nemar who directs her husband during his blindfold drives over the city intensely interesting.

Friday Professor Nemar will be blindfolded to such an extent that it will be impossible for him to see anything, and yet he will drive a car through the streets of Greenville in the midst of traffic, obey traffic regulations, and move along just as if he were using his eyes, while Madame Nemar will stand on the running board of a car just behind him and direct his driving so he will not have a collision, or injure anyone during the drive.

Madame Nemar says that it is all done through mental telepathy and it is an actual direction of the mind of her husband, whose normal mind is in suspense, while that of his sub-conscious mind is under her direction and is being guided by her mental effort.

In order to be able to suspend and render inactive the mind of her

WYOMING IN REPEAL RANK

State Appears to Have Joined Three Others in Eliminating Prohibition

Cheyenne, May 16—(AP)—Wyoming today appeared to have joined with Michigan, Wisconsin and Rhode Island in favoring repeal of the 18th amendment.

With returns from 180 of 667 precinct conventions there had been elected 363 delegates pledged to ratification of the congressional resolution for repeal and only 40 favoring retention of the law.

TIBETAN SYMBOLS THEME OF REPORT BY ITALIAN

Rome—(AP)—Unaccustomed lips are experimenting with "me'od rten" and "t'za t'za" as a result of the publication of Giuseppe Tucci's book on Tibetan religious symbols.

A member of the Royal Academy, Tucci spent months studying the religious manifestations of the people of Tibet. He reports they are intensely devout and mystical in their religious concepts.

The "me'od rten" pronounced "chee-or-ten" Tucci says, is a sort of combined tomb and receptacle for holy relics. The "t'za t'za" are small clay vessels, usually heavily decorated with figures of divinities.

The "t'za t'za" may contain a pinch of the ashes of a revered priest or parent, a holy script or some other sacred relic.

Tucci says that orations, prayers and fervent incantations accompany the making of these receptacles. Once made and the relic sealed with in, the "t'za t'za" are placed in the "me'od rten" with solemn ceremony.

No Unemployment Problem

Rock Hill, S. C.—(AP)—The unemployment problem here seems to be no problem at all. City Manager W. P. Goodman advertised for 50 workers for a city project and only 11 turned up for work.

CHINESE IN NEW STAND NEAR PEIPING

Defense Line to be Established After Disorderly Retreat in North China

(By The Associated Press) The Chinese were reported in Japanese dispatches today to be in disorderly retreat from North China battlefields in preparation for a stand along a defense line only thirteen miles east of Peiping.

At Tientsin, however, political changes resulted in predictions that a compromise might be effected to bring about a recession south of the Great Wall.

Arrival in the north of Hang Fu, representatives of the national government at Nanking, in conjunction with the statement Monday of Field Marshal Nobuyoshi Mito, Japanese military head in Manchuria, is interpreted as indication of a compromise.

The Japanese will withdraw, Marshal Mito said, as soon as the Chinese troops leave the Great Wall. More than seventy American citizens are evacuating the North China American school at Tunchow conducted by the American Board of Missions.

The United States legation advised the evacuation of the town 13 miles east of Peiping after rumors that the Japanese intended to occupy it.

A Rengo Japanese news agency disclosed fold of the occupation of Tuhua by the 14th infantry brigade of Major General Herjiro Hatiori who is offering resistance in the west.

LANE GIVEN FINE RECORD

Former Local Field Loan Man Praised By Manager of Regional Office

The work of H. E. Lane of the North Carolina field force of the Federal Crop Production and Farmers' Seed Loans, was entirely satisfactory, and his services were terminated recently because of an administrative order calling for drastic reduction of field personnel, S. M. Thomson, manager of the Washington regional office, has informed Congressman Lindsay C. Warren of this district.

The statement from the department head came after Mr. Warren had sent him a telegram from Pitt county citizens asking that Mr. Lane be retained as field man in this territory. It was stated that his work had been highly satisfactory and that he had been able to accomplish much good among the growers of the community in the handling of agricultural loans.

Several other field men were released by the government along with Mr. Lane, the letter stated.

The letter follows: Hon. Lindsay Warren, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. My Dear Mr. Warren:

Reference is made to a copy of a telegram recently transmitted by you to this office, this telegram requesting that Mr. Herbert E. Lane be retained as a member of our North Carolina field force, and being signed by a group of representative citizens of Pitt county.

The termination of Mr. Lane, whose services have been entirely satisfactory, was occasioned by a decrease in the volume of our work together with an administrative order calling for a drastic reduction in our field personnel. The retention of Mr. Lane, under the circumstances, was impossible and unless this office is authorized to employ additional workers, it is improbable that Mr. Lane can be reinstated to his former position.

Our action in this matter is in no sense a reflection on either his ability or character and I personally wish to endorse the remarks made by his well wishers.

I regretted the necessity of releasing Mr. Lane from our employ and am prepared at any time, to aid him, if possible, in obtaining a new connection.

Very truly yours, S. M. THOMSON, Manager Washington Regional Office

The field force of seed loan inspectors were cut in North Carolina from 50 to 34. Additional cuts will be made in about two weeks as an economy measure.

MESSAGE SENT TO VIRTUALLY ALL POWERS

Chief Executive in Message Without Diplomatic Precedent, Calls on Nations To Forget Petty National Aims and Join Move For Economic Recovery; Says Any Nation Offering Obstructions Will Be Signalled Out by Those Seeking Peace

Washington, May 16—(AP)—President Roosevelt appealed directly to the rulers of the nations today to reduce armaments, eliminate entirely the weapons of aggression, refrain from extending any armed forces whatsoever beyond their own borders, forget "petty national aims and join sincerely to assure peace and economic recovery."

In a plain speaking message without diplomatic precedent, the President asked for specific steps at once and declared "If any nation interposed obstruction the civilized world would know where the responsibility for failure lies."

He mentioned no nation by name but his words rang through the diplomatic world with dramatic significance at a moment when certain leaders in Germany are seeking greater armaments; when Japanese troops are marching deeper into territory of China; and when other people are suspected of harboring aspirations to acquire new territory by force.

For the United States the plain word of the declaration points to abstention from further incursions by American marines into any Latin American country.

They hint at status-quo with respect to American forces now stationed by treaty in portions of China.

As an immediate goal, the President asked success for the Geneva arms conference and the economic conference soon to meet in London, adoption at Geneva of the MacDonald plan to reduce armaments of France, stabilize those of Germany and set up a consultative pact for peace; agreement of time and place of a later conference to carry steps still further; an agreement in the meantime that no nation shall increase existing armaments, and a promise by all nations provided the terms of arm limitations are kept that they will send no armed forces of whatsoever nature across their frontiers.

The message, contrary to long standing diplomatic practice, was addressed directly to the kings, potentates and presidents of all of the fifty-four nations to be represented at London, including Russia. It was signed "Franklin D. Roosevelt."

It went forward early today in direct language which was without the usual form of diplomatic code. Within the space of a few hours it was before the heads of every great nation around the globe and of the smaller ones.

'BRAKE BALLOON DISCARDED FOR COSYNS' AIR VENTURE

Brussels—(AP)—Max Cosyns, the young engineer who accompanied Prof. August Piccard on last year's trip to the stratosphere, has abandoned his plan to use a "brake balloon" on his own forthcoming ascent.

Instead he has perfected a device to stop his balloon at will for scientific tests.

"It consists of a folding tube belows in the middle of the balloon and reaching from the top to the gondola," said Cosyns. "When the top of the tube is in contact with the hydrogen which occupies only the upper part of the bag, the gas will flow out slowly by way of the tube and will furnish me with an exact control."

MISSIONARY TO SPEAK HERE

Dr. Dawson, of Pueblo, Mexico, to Lecture at Immanuel Baptist Church

Dr. C. D. Dawson, medical missionary stationed at the Baptist hospital at Pueblo, Pue, Mexico, will speak at Immanuel Baptist church tomorrow night at 8 o'clock on "The History and Customs of Mexico."

Dr. Dawson, nephew of Dr. L. R. Meadows, of East Carolina Teachers college, is well acquainted with conditions existing in Mexico at this time and was expected to bring an interesting message.

Dr. Dawson is attached to the staff of the Hospital Latino Americano and his close contact with the people of the Pueblo area, one hundred miles southeast of Mexico City has given him a vast store of knowledge concerning their customs.

Aged 87, Sees First Talkie

Mrs. Harriet Hart, 87 of Ayden, had the pleasure of seeing her first talking picture in Greenville yesterday.

Mrs. Hart was one of the more than a hundred mothers beyond the age of fifty-five years, who were the guests of The Daily Reflector-State Theatre program given yesterday in honor of the mothers of the community.

Mrs. Hart said she thoroughly enjoyed the picture featuring Eddie Cantor in "The Kid From Spain," as well as the musical numbers by the Carter Twins.

Each of the mothers was presented with flowers.

Late News Flashes

Seeks World Peace Pact. Washington, May 16—(AP)—President Roosevelt told Congress in a special message today that he had proposed a world non-aggression pact because it has been increasingly evident that assurance of world political and economic peace and stability is threatened by selfish and short-sighted policies, action and threat of action.

Notifying an enthusiastic Congress of his direct message that had gone to 54 world leaders early in the morning, the President declared the majority of the nations faced the danger of recalcitrant obstruction by a very small minority.

"It is high time for us and for every other nation," he said, "who understands the simple fact that invasion of any nation or the destruction of a national sovereign can be prevented only by the complete elimination of the weapons that makes such a course possible today."

IT WON'T BE SO DULL

With the Legislature now adjourned the trend of conversation will no doubt now turn to the remaining days of the special Congress and maybe by the time that too adjourns our baseball team will get into operation and we can get rid of our surplus steam by bowling out the players. Then will come the fall season and if tobacco and cotton prices are good we will have plenty of subject for conversation, so after all there is no need for it being a dull summer.

WHAT ABOUT THEM?

With the warm days here the boys of the city are already swarming to the isolated spots along the river to swim. These swimming holes offer no means of protection in the way of life guards, life ropes and the like, while they do offer all kinds of dangers in the way of treacherous water, deep holes, snags and most unsanitary surroundings. While we sincerely hope that there will be no drownings among the swimmers this summer, if the summer is like previous ones the river will continue to take its toll of life. The lives of our boys are too dear to be risked in this way and again we urge that some steps be taken to provide a safe place for them to swim this year.

The children are out of school form now until the fall and if a suitable place is not provided for them to use up their surplus energy enjoying themselves, certainly they are going to seek this enjoyment in the out-of-the-way places with the result that someone might lose his or her life in so doing. This matter is too important to go unheeded and we urge that our city authorities or some of our civic clubs get behind a movement for providing a safe recreational center for our children this summer.

LINEMAN IS RENDERED UNCONSCIOUS BY SHACK

Farmville, May 16—Murry Williams, Negro lineman, will probably never come as near to death's door again without passing over the threshold as he did today. Williams was bucked to an electric light pole on Church street in front of the home of B. O. Turnage about 3 o'clock engaged in taking the slack from the lines, when in some way the 2300 electric voltage found its way through a leak in his rubber gloves. It is thought, and he received a heavy shock, through the full voltage, which would have proved fatal, did not pass through his body. His plight was discovered by B. O. Turnage and C. T. Dixon. The Negro was rendered unconscious but revived after being brought to the ground.

The White Cockatoo by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: After the unexpected arrival of Francis Tally in the little hotel in Southern France where his sister Sue lived, they with the other guests, visit the police for there have been three murders in the hotel, all connected, so Jim Sundean and the detective, David Lorn, feel, with an attempt to secure the token which will prove Sue's right to her share of her father's great fortune. They ask that Sue and Francis may leave the town; the police refuse. On the way back to the hotel Sue, whispers to Sundean that she has lost the token.

Chapter 38 THE VANISHED BLOT

"Well—" It was Madame Grethe entering from the lounge. Her green gown caught highlights in its curves and the white cockatoo clung to her shoulder, looking inquisitively from one to the other of us. "Well," she said again. "Will the police now permit you to leave?"

She heard of their refusal with a fact that did not alter a shade in its suavely amiable lines. Watching her, it was difficult to believe—as I certainly had believed, watching her husband's reception of the news—that the refusal affected any plan they might have made.

Either it had not, or she was a better actor than her husband. Perhaps the look of secret reflection in her catlike eyes deepened but her face remained smooth and friendly, with only dark lines under her eyes and a certain pinched look about her nostrils showing the strain of the last few days. Grethe was always friendly; usually amiable.

When Lorn, who had explained dry and briefly, finished, her soft shoulders rippled slightly under the silk, she lifted one squarish but very white hand to caress the cockatoo's neck and said:

"Ah—well—the detectives from Paris will do something. The police here—" She left her sentence unfinished meaningly. "We may have you here for several days more, then. Heaven send they be better days."

She said it quite honestly—at least, that was the effect. I heartily agreed with her.

At the same time I had thought more of it as a wish if I had been entirely sure it was Heaven and not Madame Grethe herself with whom the responsibility lay. I reminded myself that I hadn't, actually, a shadow of a clue against her, and moved nearer the register which lay open on the talk desk at my side.

Grethe had turned to Sue and was talking of her leaving them in a very frank and pleasant manner—a manner, which nevertheless contrived to emphasize Sue's long year with them and somehow the friendliness of the Lovschiem's toward Sue and her mother—while Francis and Lorn, equally non-committal in expression, waited and perforce listened.

As she talked I was looking with interest at Francis Tally's name scrawled across the open page, and trying to recall the interwoven initials below his typed signature in the letter Lorn had brought. It was true that he had recognized Lorn; true, which was more important, that Lorn had recognized him.

Still, as Lorn himself had said, it is well to prove things before resting a case on them. I could not recall the exact characteristics of those intricate initials with enough accuracy to compare them with the signature. I must ask Sue to permit me to look at the letter again.

But there was something about that page that was wrong. Something that had nothing to do with Francis Tally's signature.

There were three names on it; my own, David Lorn's and Francis Tally's. It was exactly the same as it had been when I looked at it last, which was on the occasion of David Lorn's arrival—exactly the same except, of course, for the addition of Francis Tally's name.

Yet it was not as it had been when I signed it at the top of the page. Something tugged and pulled at my memory a second and then made itself definite, so definite that I wondered that I had not seen the discrepancy immediately upon my looking at the page at the time of Lorn's arrival.

It was simple, trivial. And yet by reason of its very triviality must be somewhat important. There wasn't an ink blot. And there had been an ink blot on that page when I signed my own name, under the cockatoo's suspicious eye, the very evening of my arrival in that ill-omened hotel. Now there was no ink blot. Yet there were no signs whatever of erasure; the page was smooth and glazed. And there was my own name in my own writing.

They were talking behind me but I did not hear what they were saying. Under cover of the conversation I leaned nearer the book and luckily, caught a highlight from the window near by on the glimmering surface of the paper.

Then I was sure. My signature was still in my own handwriting; that was true. But it had been traced on that page with a sharp instrument and then followed with pen and ink.

And it was not too well done; with police it wouldn't have stood a test one moment. Even I, no policeman and, God knows, no amateur detective, could readily observe the forgery.

But the forgery began and ended with my own name. Lorn's and Tally's signatures were clearly not traced.

Why, then? The explanation was simple and swift. Something had made the removal of that page imperative. It had become imperative after my arrival and before Lorn's. And it was nothing of an innocent nature, such as a bad tear or more spilled ink, for Lovschiem in such a case would have merely asked me to register again, and explained the need for it.

No, the very fact of careful and painstaking forgery of my name proved that there was a hidden and probably incriminating reason for it—incriminating to whom, I could not know, although it pointed very strongly to Lovschiem, and was thus practically the only material clue I had so far discovered which led to him.

Suddenly I realized that I was locking too long and too closely at the page. There were still voices behind me, but I looked up quickly and met Lovschiem's eyes. I endeavored to look blank and unconcerned. I even said in a casual way to Tally, "You home's in the south, then," as if I'd been only guilty of idle curiosity.

There was no way to know, however, whether my small ruse succeeded with Lovschiem or not. His eyes still followed me when I left the lobby, and as I started upstairs I glanced back from the landing and saw him bending over the register.

Madame Nemar says that the subconscious mind is active while one sleeps, and everyone has experienced spiritual manifestations in dreams and visions while their normal mind was at rest and the subconscious mind more active. You have noticed she said that you may be dreaming or have a vision, and you know that you are awake, and yet you are afraid to open your eyes for fear it will disappear, and when you open your eyes it does disappear and the reason for this is the fact that as soon as the eyes open, the normal natural mind awakens to the things of the world and its activity asserts itself, and the supernatural impressions and manifestations are shut out.

Madame Nemar is a graduate of the Alexandria College of Psychiatry, founded by Queen Alexandra of England where the leading world experts in Psychics have been educated. She knew Sir Conan Doyle very well, and has visited his house and witnessed many wonderful things he did.

Madame Nemar said that as a young girl she realized she possessed certain mystical powers, but she did not realize what they were until she met her husband, who at the time was showing in Australia. It was love at first sight, and he discovered these forces in her make up and persuaded her to attend the college at Alexandria and develop these forces, which she did. The couple easily control their minds, and Madame Nemar has driven with her husband directing.

Be certain to come to Greenville Friday and witness this marvelous demonstration of mind control.

Greenville Has Energetic School Head

This, ladies and gentlemen, is no other than J. H. Rose, superintendent of city schools, who last night had the inexpressible joy of seeing another large graduating class go out from the high school. Greenville schools claim the highest scholastic rating of any school in the state, this honor having been conferred by state authorities about two years ago. Mr. Rose, aside from being one of the best school heads in the state, is prominent in the religious and social life of the state, and literally bubbles over with joy when some new honor comes to Greenville, whether it is for the schools, the tobacco market or anything tending to show what a thriving town Greenville really is.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
Washington, D. C.—Often it is in the little known places of Washington, or rather, in those places that the average person doesn't know how to reach, that one encounters dramatic incidents in this capital city.

And so it was when the Navy started its inquiry into the tragic disaster that befell the arship Akron in the early morning hours of Monday, April 4, off the New Jersey coast.

A naval court of inquiry always is impressive. Gold-braided admirals, captains, commanders and lieutenants abound.

A Strange Setting
It was the setting for the Akron inquiry, however, rather than the admirals that impressed observers at this particular court.

Beyond the Navy Yard, in the southeast section of the city, a barnlike structure wholly out of keeping with the dignity and pomp of the participants was the setting.

Natally dressed marines guarded the entrance. Interested observers could get in, but first it was necessary to satisfy these marines that you were an interested observer. Seated behind a green-covered table, resplendent in his gold braid, was the president of the court—the affable but stern old sea dog, Rear Admiral Henry V. Butler. At his right was Captain Harry E. Shoemaker, and at his left, the third member of the court and the lowest in rank, Commander Sidney Kraus. Off to one side was the judge advocate, and to the other the only surviving officer of the ill-starred Akron, Lieutenant Commander H. V. Wiley.

Wiley knows more, perhaps, than any living man about what happened the night the Akron went to her doom. But he sat there, apparently listening to everything, but taking no part himself.

Expert Testimony
The day we witnessed the court of inquiry in action, two of the most distinguished witnesses were heard. One was Captain Almer H. Drexel, who now commands the Macon, sister ship of the Akron. The other was Dr. Carl Arstein, designer of the Akron.

Drexel's task was the hardest. The court wanted to know of him what he would have done that night had he been in command of the Akron. Slowly, weighing every word, and often asking the stenographer to read back what he had said, he told his story. He was the man who recommended that Commander McCord, who lost his life in the disaster, be put in command of the Akron.

It was a situation tense at every moment. Everybody in the room seemed to sense it, even the marine doorkeepers. That is, everybody but the court.

Grim countenances of the admiral, the captain and the commander seemed never to change.

Parties For Miss Fleming.
Rocky Mount, May 15.—Among the charming courtesies which have been extended to honor Miss Mamie Ruth Fleming, who in June will be given the bride of William Taft of Greenville, was the bridge party given Tuesday evening by Miss Bonnie Babb and Miss Minnie Murchison who received at Mrs. Sanders' Tea Room.

Upon her arrival, the honoree was presented an exquisite corsage of sweetheart roses and valley lilies, and other guests were given smaller corsages of roses and pink sweet-peas.

During play refreshing punch was served and after the game a delicious ice course in which the pink, white and green motif was repeated.

The prize for top score went to Mrs. Thomas C. Short and Mrs. W. J. James received the low award. Miss Fleming was presented a piece of silver in her wedding pattern.

Rocky Mount, May 15.—Mrs. Bob Hayes paid a pretty compliment to Miss Mamie Ruth Fleming, bride-elect, Wednesday afternoon when she entertained members of the Thursday Night Contract Club at her home.

Dusting powder was given Miss Vivian Davenport as high award and Miss Bonnie Bagg received a cigarette container as a souvenir. To Miss Fleming the bride-elect presented an embroidered towel. Following the awards a delicious salad course, combining green and yellow of the chosen motif, was served.

Rocky Mount, May 15.—Miss Mamie Ruth Fleming, popular bride-elect of June, was the inspiration for a charming party given Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Paul MacRae at her home.

In the progressive series of bridge games Miss Bonnie Babb received top score prize. Mrs. MacRae presented linen pillow cases for her linen chest to the honoree. Following the awards little Miss Evelyn Pettitt, the lovely young niece of the hostess, entered the living room and presented a tray filled with dainty gifts to the honoree.

Mrs. MacRae served her guests a delicious supper, the main course being followed by dessert.

Contract Whist
Back to the old days o whist, without the exposure of one hand but otherwise with all the wrinkles of contract, some players are going as an experiment.

Bidding must be careful and conservative. Psychics are highly dangerous. There must be careful deductions from echoes and discards as to partner's holdings.

Contracts which are fairly easy with an exposed dummy are often defeated. Every player is in the game at all times. The thrill to the declarer in play is less. Coups and squeezes are at times almost impossible.

AUSTRALIA SPLITTING AS SECESSION ISSUE CONVERTS FARMERS
Canberra, Australia.—(AP)—Secession from the Australian federation is becoming a major issue in Australia.

The referendum on secession in Western Australia has now led to a similar demand in South Australia—another primary producing state—where farmers' organizations are urging the state to quit the commonwealth.

There is a similar, although smaller movement in the island state of Tasmania.

The wealthier and more populous states of New South Wales, Victoria and Queensland, which find a splendid market for their manufactured products in the rural states, are strongly against any breakaway from federation.

Tips on CONTRACT

By TOM O'NEIL
Grand slam contracts at a declared trump are endangered at times by the possibility of an adversary's ruff of the first trick. Especially is this so when the declarer's side has bid several suits and there is mutual support in one of them.

The safest thing to do when the ruffing possibility is apparent is to contract for the slam in no trump, instead of at a suit, or to select for the trump the suit which is likely to be ruffed in the first lead.

Mrs. Hilda Zontlein of New York sat North as one of the joint possessors of a dazzling conglomeration of cards in the following deal:

(DEALER)—NORTH
♠ 4 3 2
♦ A J 5
♣ AQJ654

WEST EAST
♠ J94 ♠ KQ10753
♥ J96 ♡ KQ97
♦ 1086432 ♣ AKQ107652
♠ 4 2 ♠ AKQ107652
♥ A A ♠ K107

North opened the auction with one club. East said a heart and South two spades, a forfe. West passed and North jumped to four clubs. East passed, and South amazed everybody, especially his partner, by bidding seven spades.

A club was opened, trumps were drawn and then South spread for success at his grand slam contract with a bonus for honors.

And then the kibitzing started: "I picked out the best lead," said West. "You surely had nerve to try a spade grand slam. Holding three clubs to the king, with your partner strongly bidding clubs, you should have thought the chances were that my partner could ruff clubs on the first round."

South countered: "That's one of the chances I had to take along with the chance that you did not hold all five outstanding spades or four to the knave."

East chimed in: "Lucky your partner had the ace of clubs." South dissented: "What could she have opened the bidding on and then made a jump bid in clubs if she did not have the ace?"

"I held the ace of hearts and the ace-king of spades and the king of clubs."

Deductions From A Jump
East had an answer: "She could have done the same bidding, not vulnerable, if she held the same clubs minus the ace and a diamond suit headed by the ace-king."

South agreed that would have done for an opening bid, but would not have sufficed for the jump to four clubs over two spades. North confirmed his statement.

"Besides," South rejoined to East, "you made an overall in hearts of the one-club opening. You did not have the ace of hearts. You are not addicted to poor overcalls. Therefore the chances were you had something in diamonds, of which I had none. I did not bid seven no trump because of the possibility that you held the diamond ace. All in all it seems to me seven spades was best."

William J. Huske, grand master of the game, who had been sitting behind North kibitzing, ended the discussion:

"South made the great point count possible because of the spade honors. But the safest contract was seven clubs, which would have recognized the possibility of the adverse spades being bunched Aces in the North and South hands could have been shown by the four and five no trump conventions, but a no trump grand slam would have been set, if the adverse spades were all in one hand or if West held our to the knave instead of three.

Here's A Real Name
One of the finest jobs of name-whittling in movie annals was that which made Rasmus Karl Thekelson Gottlieb plain Karl Dane, although Richard van Mattimore's change to Richard Allen was no mean accomplishment.

Among the players who carry their own names into profession Heather Angel probably has the most "theatrical," but she really is Mr. and Mrs. Angel's little girl and she was named after the Scotch flower.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
Hollywood—in a town where Gustavson becomes Garbo and Gladys Smith becomes Mary Pickford it was scarcely to be expected that a name like Peter Samish could escape unscathed.

Peter, a young stage actor who came out with a contract spent an anxious week trying to find out just what Hollywood was going to call him, and it seemed for while that Hollywood couldn't make up its mind.

There were conferences, suggestions from whole studios, intimate confabs in which high-salaried directors, writers, executives took part.

Peter didn't know from one hour to the next whether he was Conrad Miles or Richard Dorn or Peter Allen or Paul Adams or Peter Adrian or even Peter Samish.

His own studio finally settled on Peter Allen but C. B. De Mille, to whom Peter Samish was loaned for a role didn't like it. He preferred Paul Adams.

Dressed Up Names
In most of its name-changing Hollywood has the fan's interest in mind, for obvious reasons. It may change plain Anna McKim to Ann Dvorak, but on the other hand it gave us Gail Patrick instead of Margaret Fitzpatrick, and Lupe Velez instead of Guadalupe Villalobos. And Rudolph Valentino has six other names under which a marquee or a memory might have groaned.

The movies "dress up" their players with names as well as with clothes. Jane Peters doesn't sound as swanky as Carole Lombard, nor Lillian Bohny as appealing as Billie Dove. Harlan Carpenter is an intriguing name, but lacks the snap of Jean Harlow.

Few of the names bestowed by Hollywood, incidentally, sound less "theatrical" than their own rightful ones.

Joan Crawford's is one. She was Lucille Le Seuer. Paul Muni's is another. He was Muni Weisenfreund. Not forgetting Anita Page who was Anita Pomares. Janet Gaynor is just a little neater, as names go, than Laura Gaior, but the difference is slight.

SPORT SLANTS

Critical but hopeful eyes will be trained on Henry Ellsworth Vines, Jr. when that gifted young man umbels his racquets in the East and starts firing across the net again...

The question now is whether the rigorous campaign of last summer and winter, which saw Vines playing tournament tennis for almost 12 months, has left the lanky Californian's stamina and game unimpaired.

If Vines is hitting the ball and covering court as he was in the Stade Roland Garros last summer and at Forest Hills in September, American engravers can get out their instruments and stick to a place on the big silver trophy in which to again imprint the name of this country.

Thrives On Hard Work Friendly observers who have watched the development of Vines in three years from an awkward youngster to the No. 1 of the world believe the lanky Californian is another Tilden, who thrives on hard work and doesn't really get right until he has played in three or four tournaments.

Bernon S. Frenchie, chairman of the United States Davis Cup committee, seems to agree with them, as he is urging Vines in for American zone play when there is no need of his services to assure victory and also is sending him abroad to defend his Wimbledon singles title in a tournament which ends a bare two weeks before the interzone final and only three weeks before the challenge round against France.

Would Have Sued Tilden That is a dish which would just suit Tilden in his prime, except that Big Bill always preferred European tournaments exclusively in preparing for Davis Cup play.

There is the possibility that Wilmer Allison, with the burden of doubles play removed, may be able to register a victory either against Cochet or Borotra, but that is a gamble. George Lott and John Van Ryn should have the edge in doubles over any team the French send against them but Vines must win both his matches to make victory secure.

All the above is based, of course, on the assumption that America does not stub its toe on the way to the challenge round. Preliminary play in the European zone indicates there is no team there that would have more than an outside chance against the Vines-Allison-Lott-Van Ryn quartet, and certainly there is nothing to stop them on this side.

Manager Bats 620 Houston, Texas. (AP)—Manager Carey Selph didn't exactly handicap his club when the Houston Buffaloes started a winning streak that took them into first place in the Texas League. Over a period of a week he batted .620.

C., default having been made in the conditions as set out therein, the undersigned will on Saturday, June 3, 1933 at 12 o'clock noon before the court house door in Greenville, Pitt County, N. C., expose to public sale to the highest bidder for cash, a certain lot or parcel of land lying and being in the town of Greenville, county of Pitt, state of North Carolina, more particularly described and defined as follows:

Leaves Plenty Of Work. Raleigh, May 16.—(AP)—The 1933 legislature has gone but the memory lingers on.

For the first time in nearly five months Governor Ehringhaus sat in his office to receive a steady stream of visitors in which legislators were in the majority.

The governor has been at his office every day but most of his callers have been conferees.

A. J. Maxwell could be found studying the new "cleaning and pressing stamp act."

Designs are now under consideration. The legislature decreed every package of candy must be stamped with a state tax stamp.

The plan now under study contemplated the background of the stamp, being a picture of the state capitol and the figures 1833-1933 will appear on each side as this is the centennial of the erection of the present capitol.

Charles Johnson, state treasurer, has so many titles now that he had his secretary prepare a list.

The principal clerks and office forces found final work in connection with the 132-day legislative session which closed yesterday.

Fires Damage Suit. Fayetteville, May 16.—(AP)—Mrs. J. S. Jones of Fayetteville today filed a suit for $10,000 against Rep. Harris Newman of New Hanover for injuries alleged to have been received when the Newman car was wrecked March 19.

Order Election in McDowell. Marion, May 16.—(AP)—McDowell county commissioners today unanimously ordered county wide election on June 27 for a vote on legalization of par-mutual betting at horse races when a threatened injunction sought by a group of taxpayers was not served.

D. F. Giles, Carter Hutchings and P. G. Story, Marion attorneys acting for a group of citizens, had warned an injunction would be sought restraining the commissioners from calling the election.

The attorneys, however, merely presented the notice saying a restraining order would be sought to prevent actual holding of the election.

They claimed holding of such an election would be unconstitutional. A hearing will be held in Hendersonville May 29 before Judge P. A. McLeroy and at such time Judge McLeroy will decide whether to grant an injunction preventing the election.
