HILITER ENDORSES ROOSEVELT'S PEACE PROPOSAL

Chancellor of Germany Promises Co-operation With Disarmament Move

SAYS NATION WILL GO FAR AS ANY OTHER

Nazi Leader Declares Germany is Ready to Do as Much as Any Other Country in Disarming; Ready To Scrap Entire Armed Forces If Other Countries Will Do Likewise; Denies Germany Contemplates Invasion of France or Poland

Berlin, May 17—(AP)—Chancellor Adolph Hitler in an impressive speech before the Reichstag today gratefully endorsed President Roosevelt's plan for relieving the international crisis and promised co-operation with Mr. Roosevelt's efforts.

He denied that Germany contemplated an invasion of France or Poland, emphasizing his nation was devoid of all instruments of aggression.

"Germany," the chancellor said, "is ready to join any non-aggression pact in the realization that the high-minded proposal of the American president to inject the mighty United States and guarantee peace in Europe would mean great tranquillization for all who desire peace."

Detailing with figures the extent to which Germany is disarmed under the Treaty of Versailles and presenting statistics to show that other nations are bristling with armaments, the chancellor demanded:

"What more concrete security can France want?"

His government he pledged, would proceed on no other basis except that prescribed in the international treaties but he asserted that Germany would under no circumstance sign any paper which continued her disqualification.

Japan Not In Accord With Roosevelt's Plan For Peace

HITLER STAND APPROVED IN THIS COUNTRY

Position Taken by German Leader Viewed With Satisfaction at Capital

Washington, May 17—(AP)—State department officials today described the speech of Chancellor Adolph Hitler of Germany on disarmament as encouragingly conciliatory.

Disarmament experts at the department noted especially that Hitler expressed approval of President Roosevelt's dramatic appeal for abolition of offensive weapons, declared his willingness to accept the international conference on disarmament and stated Germany was willing to count its national police force and storm troops as part of its armed forces.

Hitler's announced approval of the MacDonald arms reduction plan was seen as a hopeful sign of progress at the Geneva conference which will open tomorrow.

Special importance was attached to the statement that Germany was not thinking of war of aggression and did not want to rearm but rather wanted other nations to disarm.

A willingness to obtain modification of the restrictions of the Versailles treaty by peaceful methods rather than by armed force was the interpretation placed on the Hitler words.

SPOKESMAN SAYS NATION EMBARRASSED

War Office Official Declares Suggestion For Abstaining From Sending Armed Forces Over Borders Would Interfere Nation's Plans in Manchuria; Foreign Office Refuses to Comment

Tokyo, May 17—(AP)—A war office spokesman declared today that Japan because of her present operations in Manchuria would be embarrassed by President Roosevelt's suggestion that nations should abstain from sending armed forces outside their borders.

"Japan is second to none in loving real peace," he said, "but if the assurance of peace means maintenance of status quo regardless of circumstances Japan would be unable to subscribe to the suggestion."

He expressed belief, however, that Japan might agree not to oppose disarmament if such a conference were held.

The foreign office beyond characterizing as "very important" declined to comment at present on the statement which had been made direct to the emperor.

Soon after a spokesman explained. The foreign office is unable to advise comment on the president of the United States communication sent direct to the Emperor of Japan.

Music night was observed by the Greenville Rotary club in the regular session this week and one of the most delightful programs of the year was provided under direction of W. W. Lee, director of regular club singing.

One of the highlights of the program was two solo numbers by Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, who several years ago was designated as the "Sweetheart of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion" because of the excellence of her singing at regular Armistice Day exercises.

Mrs. Waldrop, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. A. Tyson, Jr. club pianist, rendered two numbers, "Where Heaven Is," and "Trees," and was heartily applauded.

The Carter Twins, who appeared in the Mother's Day program at State Theatre Monday also rendered a number of vocal selections which were favorably received.

NEGRO LIQUOR DEALER SENT TO THE ROADS

Several Other Defendants Find Way to Roads in County Court Sitting

John Moore, colored, of the Fountain community was convicted of a charge of selling whiskey in the regular weekly session of County court here yesterday and sentenced to ten months on the county roads.

The negro was described by officers as an "old offender" in the illicit whiskey traffic and several times had appeared before the court on similar charges.

Court continued its sitting today but indications were that the docket would be completed by the early afternoon. It was the first sitting of the court in two weeks and the docket was unusually heavy.

James Evans, described by police as a ringleader of a band of chicken thieves which has been giving much trouble in the Winterville community in recent months, was sentenced to six months on the roads. Robert Tyson, also colored held in connection with the same case, was released with suspended judgment hanging over his head.

Nemiah Garris, charged with cruelty to animals, was sentenced to thirty days on the roads but filed notice of appeal to Superior court. He was alleged to have permitted his stock to go for considerable length of time without receiving proper feed.

Judgment was suspended in the case of Skelton Dennis, of Ayden, charged with possessing liquor for the purpose of sale.

Annie Coward colored, charged with shoplifting in a local store, was sent out to the county home for a period of 90 days.

Annie White, colored, also received a sentence of four months to the county home when convicted on a charge of possessing whiskey for the purpose of sale.

John Taft was fined $25 and put on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. John Atkinson, held in connection with the same case was adjudged not guilty.

DRUNK, NEGRO RAISES RUKUS

Reported Killed by Police During Arrest Frank Clark Appears in Court

Frank Clark, negro, who was reported to have been killed so badly by police the first of the week that he died from his injuries, was given preliminary hearing in Mayor's court this morning on a charge of drunkenness and released upon payment of cost.

Clark, according to his own testimony in court, decided to get on a spree the first of the week and after getting soaked to the gills, lay down for a nap on the Coast Line railroad tracks.

Passersby noticed the dangerous position of the negro and informed police of it. Officers Wooten and Whichard were dispatched to take the negro in charge. When they arrived, Clark was sleeping peacefully but when they attempted to arouse him he offered such violent resistance that the officers had to hit him once or twice to bring him under control.

Clark stated he thought the officers were negroes fooling with him and attempted to knock them off without opening his eyes to see what it was all about. One Negro was said to have been so powerful that it knocked Patrolman Wooten over the railroad embankment.

Free Exhibition By Neman Already Has Created Much Enthusiasm In Greenville

The free exhibition which is to be staged by the Nemaners here Friday, May 19th, has already created much enthusiasm in Pitt and adjoining counties.

Madame Neman, in an interview touched briefly on the psychic side of the wonderful drive. She said some people called it "transference of thought," and generally it was termed this and that. However, she declared it was the science of mind action and reaction similar to wireless waves. She claims no supernatural powers in the act of directing her husband, Professor Neman in their free exhibition or what is generally termed the blindfold drive.

In order to be able to direct the acts of theirs, Madame Neman stated it is absolutely necessary that the one who receives the broadcast must recline into a state of suspended animation and that in suspending the animate, the normal and conscious mind must be put to sleep. The subconscious mind must be awakened.

"This through my normal and conscious being," she explains, "I am able to direct through telepathic waves, the acts of Professor Neman."

The many merchants who are cooperating to give the people of this community a special day in bargains are delighted with the high type of exhibition in prospect. Professor Neman will give away many presents on the streets in front of the stores he visits on Friday, May 19. Anyone may be luck as he is blindfolded and through Madame Neman's directions places the gifts into the hands of certain spectators.

Madame Neman about two years ago was forced to abandon her work at the controls of the car on account of illness. Directing is much harder than receiving, she avers, but her physician advised against a return to the wheel.

She was originally the driver of the automobile. Professor Neman then broadcasted. She made her debut as a driver in London after her graduation from Alexander.

Her drive was through Trafalgar Square, where the traffic is probably the most congested in the world. The drive was witnessed by the King and Queen of England and Madame Neman was personally complimented by both who acclaimed the act the most marvelous feat the mind could conceive.

A MASTER STROKE

President Roosevelt's daring effort at world peace at this time is not only an example of statesmanship of the highest degree but should convince the other nations that America is ready and willing to resume her proper place in world leadership toward procuring peace.

Most of all, President Roosevelt's action should bring a thrill to those Americans like ourselves who have felt that our country made a grave mistake when we did not enter the League of Nations as proposed by Woodrow Wilson.

TENDER WITH THE BANKS

(New York World-Telegram) When a bank fails, when the depositors hunger for their cash, and when the banking officials of the government are called before official investigations, the question usually is: "Why didn't you take action when you first found that the bank official was crooked and the bank in a bad way?"

The frequent answer is: "We hoped to save the bank. We didn't want to disturb business and banking." In Washington on Wednesday before the Senate Judiciary Sub-committee appeared John W. Dole, former Comptroller of the Currency as a witness in connection with the closing of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company.

Senator Robinson of the committee, retorted: "You should have had the crook arrested at once and promptly prosecuted. It would have been a very wholesome influence." "I think not," answered the former Comptroller. "It would have created such excitement that it might have been heard throughout the United States. The banking situation was critical. We were endeavoring to keep the banks open, and some of the bankers themselves had to be encouraged to go on."

The White Cockatoo by Mignon G. Eberhart

SYNOPSIS: Three murders have centered around an attempt to secure the token by means of which Sue Tally must identify herself to her brother whom she has not seen since childhood. The token represents her share of her father's fortune. Francis Tally, suddenly arrives, is refused permission by the police to take Sue to a safer place. Back in the hotel that is the scene of the crimes, Jim Sundean, himself only just relieved of suspicion, learns from Sue that she has lost the token, finds that his signature on the hotel register is a forgery. Sundean goes upstairs.

Chapter 39 SCARLET SLIPPER

Lorn and Tally had drifted into the chilly parlor again, and Sue had made some excuse about taking off her coat and was also coming up stairs. I did not wait for her until I had passed beyond the gallery and into the corridor and thus was beyond the range of vision of anyone on the first floor.

"Now then," I said, "tell me all about the token." "But I don't know," said Sue in what was almost a wail. "It is just gone. And I thought it was so safe." "When did you lose it?" "Sometime last night."

"You don't mean anyone got into your room during the night?" I was frightened. I had her by the arm gripping it so hard that she winced. "Oh, no, no. The door was locked and bolted all night."

"But you—how could you know that?" "I hated taking time, especially when it was so simple. "Oh, you wore them so much—wore them that first night when you had been out to walk on the bridge—would you wear scarlet evening slippers with narrow high heel for a walk along cobblestones unless there was a reason?" I was impatient.

"But I didn't wear them in the daytime," she protested. "Naturally not," I said. "But there wasn't so much danger then—or you probably thought there was not. Or perhaps you removed it during the daytime. Or perhaps it was very well hidden. Go on—when did you discover it had been stolen."

"She looked a time a moment before she said: 'It was well hidden. I felt safe about it—when I glanced at it (it was in the heel of the right slipper)—it showed no sign of being tampered with. I thought I could have told at once if it had been removed.' "So I said the priest had taken nothing from my room. I only discovered it late last night. I felt I must be sure, of course—and I opened the heel and the token was gone."

"What did you do?" "Nothing. There was nothing I could do then. Everyone had gone to bed; I—I was afraid to venture out into the black corridors." She shivered, and I said quickly, taking a long breath at the thought of white might have happened had she done so: "That was right."

"I felt rather as if I had walked without knowing it to the very edge of a precipice and only looked down at the last step. Suppose she'd gone out into the corridors—murder—murder—black— "That was right!" I repeated inadequately. Then that feeling of urgency, that there was not much time, nudged me, and I went on: "But you should have told us at once this morning."

She hesitated, looking at me with steady but troubled eyes. "But I couldn't tell Lorn." "Couldn't—oh—oh, I see. After all, he's in the employ of your brother. And your brother's interests would come first with him." "Exactly," said Sue. "And I couldn't search the priest's room this morning myself. I was still, somehow—," she paused, and her breath caught a little as she admitted—"afraid—afraid—you had warned me too well. But I was just or that incompetence would somehow turn into competence and that public confidence in the bank would grow out of dwindling confidence. There should be only one rule regarding banks in difficulties and crooked bank officials: Close the bank if relief can not be obtained in a reasonable time, and move against the crooked official. It is certain that governmental and other agencies are guilty of the loss of many thousands of dollars by persons who in good faith put their money in the Harriman Bank during the many months it was allowed to operate after its president had become involved in allegedly questionable banking transactions.

going to tell you, in the White Salon, you know when— She stopped completely there.

"So that was why the priest was murdered. He had had the token, and someone knew he had it and murdered him. A small incident in the lust for that waiting gold."

This left three possibilities—that is, if we granted that the priest had stolen the token, and I thought I was safe in doing that—first, the murderer had taken it from the priest, and it was in his possession. Second, it had been on the body of the priest; and the police now had it; this I thought was highly improbable, as the murderer had had hours after the priest's death to search the body unobserved. Parthenetically I thought of the hideously uneasy night I had passed trying to sleep in that death-haunted wing.

The third possibility was that the priest had hidden the token successfully or had passed it immediately to a possible accomplice; this last was, also, unlikely. "Do you want to tell me what it is?" I asked rather diffidently. "You mean you want to try to find it again for me?"

"She considered this gravely. "It's rather dangerous knowledge," she said at last. "And I must be able to tell Francis that I have kept it a complete secret. That, of course, is the pressing thing. I didn't intend to ask you to find it for me. I think that's rather a hopeless task now."

"And besides I—I have already placed you in too much danger. The thing I wanted to talk to you about is what to do now. What to tell Francis. Oh, it's—it's so dreadful, so ironical. If he'd only got here one day sooner. He's waiting now, I suppose. He hinted that when we returned from interviewing the police we would go into what he called the—'formalities.' He means, of course, the token."

It was true that that was the urgent and immediate thing. How to meet Francis' inquiries at that moment. To tell him lamely that the thing had been stolen but that we were searching for it would be to convince Francis once and for all that Sue was only another impostor. "You'll have to bluff your brother. Get the papers from Lovschiem; make him hand them over; give those to your brother to digest. Then refuse to show your own token until he shows you his—I gather they are identical? The chances are he will be reluctant to show that. However, you'll indicate it tactfully. Don't hesitate for an instant. Be firm and cool and sure of yourself."

"Yes I can do that," said Sue. "And it was true; she could—no one better.

"But suppose—suppose he believes me—suppose he is ready to match his token with mine. Suppose, she said with a ghost of a smile which did not lighten the tense look in her eyes and the taut line around her mouth, "suppose he calls my bluff."

"He won't," I said with more confidence than I felt. "He'll want to think about it awhile—talk it over with Lorn. And in the meantime prehaps—"

Her eyes quickened, and she grasped at the hint that I had not intended to convey. "Do you mean—" she whispered—"that you—that perhaps—that you know something—are on the trail of—"

"No no" I said at once. I've only a faint notion. Don't bank in it. Don't hope for anything. I mean it. I'm counting on Lorn and Lorn only. Unless the Paris detectives get here first."

"It had not convinced her. I could see by the eager, questioning look in her eyes that it had not. I felt vaguely embarrassed for I pretended to no ability as a detective. Still, two and two makes four, by whomsoever added. It was the uncertainty of the digits that troubled me."

Prize Winner Ridicule Politics

New York.—(AP)—For the second consecutive year the Pulitzer prize is awarded to a play that points a satiric finger of ridicule at national politicians.

Last season it was the musically sardonic "Of Thee I Sing." This year the honor goes to "Both Your Houses," penned by Maxwell Anderson, whom many critics rank second only to Eugene O'Neill among this country's dramatists.

Anderson, born in Atlantic, Pa., grew up in the Mid-West and for the last ten years he has been one of Broadway's most bitterly crusading playwrights.

In his "What Price Glory?" he depicted war as a rowdy, senseless burlesque. He was mercilessly vindictive towards the courts which tried Sacco and Vanetta in his "Gods of the Lightning." Now, in "Both Your Houses," he hurls a crashing bolt towards Capitol Hill.

Simply stated, "Both Your Houses" is the story of a youthful Congressman of the "new deal" era who wages a futile battle against old-time politicians. Their cases are succinctly stated in speeches of the two.

An Old-Timer Speaks The old-time politician says: "Do you want me to point you the road to prosperity? Loot the treasury, loot the national resources, hang fortunes on the Wall Street Christmas tree."

"Brigands built up this nation from the beginning. They stole billions and gutted whole States and empires, but they dug our oil wells, Wasted here."

"American Girl Friend" "Denmark's American Girl Friend," one headline writer termed

Mr. Owen. "What about etiquette, rank, seniority, etc?" was a question raised by a columnist and illustrated by a sketch of a lady diplomat, surrounded by bowing, braid-decorated gallants.

"Den Kvindelige Gesandt" (The woman envoy) was its title, and it ran on something like this: "Say about the Americans whatever you like, dumbbells they are not. Now they have appointed a woman to be Minister in Denmark, and having overcome our first surprise, we are all exclaiming: Yes, of course; that was the only thing to do."

Spirit of Selection Praised "I do not only think of the fact that an important post will be filled with such an eminent woman as Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, who has the finest reputation both here and in her native country—but I am contemplating the very spirit which is behind such an appointment, the fine understanding of the diplomatic qualifications of women."

Commenting on the custom of ranking diplomats in order of their seniority in a capital, this columnist, whose signature is "Kenderen," says: "Mrs. Owen will be the youngest. But would not a lady always remain that—among diplomats?" The news story clipping which used the American phrase "Girl Friend" said: "The greatest interest is attached to this appointment because of the great love Ruth Bryan Owen has for Denmark, which she visited with her family in a big tourist car in the summer of 1931."

And, farther along, it comments: "She talks quite differently from many women who try to imitate the men—she talks with refinement, restraint and culture."

"Friend of Denmark" In an editorial, Berlingske Tidende, oldest Danish paper, said: "We are waiting with great excitement when we can receive Mrs. Owen. We can promise she will be popular. Her coming to Denmark is like a wonderful fairy tale come true."

Mrs. Owen Wins Over In Denmark

By BESS FURMAN Washington, D. C., May 17.—(AP) Danish columnists had their chuckles and Danish editorial writers philosophized over the appointment of a woman, Ruth Bryan Owen, as Minister to Denmark.

With a zest flavored by personal acquaintance, for Mrs. Owen had met Danish people in a motor caravan trip two years ago, the newspapers "played" the story. And clippings came to Danish Minister Otto Wadsted here.

WEAR THEIR FLOWER AND REAWAKEN THEIR SPIRIT

To America, now going forward in a great drive against the economic enemies which have invaded the country, comes a message from the men who fifteen years ago were giving their lives in defense of the country against an armed enemy. It comes in the form of the little red poppy that we will all be asked to wear on Poppy Day, May 27. It tells us to serve and sacrifice for our country now with the same patriotic spirit that those men served and died among the poppies in France in 1917 and 1918.

The poppy is a symbol of remembrance for the World War dead. Poppies glowing on every coat on Poppy Day will show that we still remember and honor the supreme sacrifice our war dead made for America. A country which remembers deeds such as theirs cannot be indifferent to present calls for patriotic service. As long as the memory of our heroes is kept bright, America can be confident that their heroic service will come from its citizens in every hour of need.

The women of the American Legion Auxiliary, who will bring us the poppies on Poppy Day, are carrying out a very valuable work for the country. With their memorial flowers they are helping keep alive a memory more precious than vast material riches—the memory of men who were willing to die that America might live in freedom and happiness. With the poppy contributions, they are helping carry on for the disabled veterans and fatherless families. With the poppy they are calling to us all to carry on for America in the spirit of those heroic men the flower commemorates. Every American who is a true American should show his response by wearing a poppy on Poppy Day.

ARRESTS OF 'DRUNKS' REVEAL A DECLINE. Fayetteville, May 17.—Arrests for drunkenness in Fayetteville have declined 37 per cent since the legalization of beer. For the first 14 days of May there were 29 arrests, compared with 46 arrests for the same cause during the first 14 days in April. Both periods contained two week-ends, when the largest number of arrests occur. The police refuse to say that the decrease in the number of drunkenness cases is due to the sale of beer.

For Disorders Due To CONSTIPATION

"I have used Black-Draught for a number of years and I find that it is about the best medicine I can take for headache, biliousness, a tight feeling and for gas and spitting up of my food," writes Mr. Bert Smith, of Carthage, Mo. "Taken in broken doses, Black-Draught will relieve this. It will also help (as a laxative) a cold and hoarseness. When I feel 'all down and out,' I take Black-Draught and in a few days am feeling all right. It is also good for bad breath and other little troubles of this kind when due to constipation."

A. A. U. W. Meets.

Mrs. R. J. Slay and Mrs. Adelaide Bloxton entertained the Greenville branch of the A. A. U. W. in the last meeting of the school year, Tuesday night, May 16, in the college home economics practice house, in Jarvis Hall.

The talk of the evening was given by Miss Louise Hunter on "America's Contribution in the Field of Motion Pictures" as a concluding part of the year's study of the development in the Arts in America in the last fifty years.

Pointing out that the "moving picture industry is less than fifty years old, Miss Hunter said "For the first time in history we see the complete flowering of an art in one generation."

The Peep Show, the forerunner of the moving picture, first appeared in 1840 on Broadway. And the first moving picture on a screen showed the surf beating on the shore and caused spectators to rush from their seats to escape the waves.

She traced the development of the art through the first feature pictures—"The Great Train Robbery" and others of similar nature; the first Mack Sennett comedy, in 1912; the first Charlie Chaplin hit, in 1914; the stupendous "Birth of a Nation," in 1915, which brought out the comment that in this "the movies" caught up with their elder brother, legitimate drama.

From 1897, the McKinley inauguration, historical events have been recorded, but there was no news reel as we have it today until Wilson's inauguration.

The United States, said Miss Hunter, produces 95 per cent of the world's films and shows them in 70 countries.

There are 132 organizations now engaged in producing pictures in America, 1,000 occasional actors, 300 first class ones, and about 70 real stars.

Miss Hunter gave color photography, with the first popular colored film in 1925, and sound pictures, beginning with the "Jazz Singer" in 1927, their place in her history.

Having called the roll of prize-winning plays since 1920, the speaker gave the stars whose names are household words, such people as Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart"; Clark Gable, "God's gift to a leading woman"; Constance Bennett, the highest salaried woman in the world, with a salary of $5,000 a working day of eight hours, and many others.

As for America's contribution to this art, said Miss Hunter, the entire industry is American.

Mrs. E. L. Hillman gave a most interesting report from the state meeting at Raleigh in April, to which she was a delegate.

The program committee, under the leadership of Mrs. J. H. Rose, has blocked out what promises to be a stimulating series of programs for next year. Given its choice between New Trends in Foreign Education and Leading Recent Books or Authors in Various Fields, the group voted to accept the first named.

Delightful refreshments and a social hour closed the evening.

DR. CURRAN GIVES LOCAL LECTURES

We like to learn of new methods of planting, reaping, sewing, cooking. And improvements in factory, farm and household mean we do the same amount of work more easily; they mean we have more spare time for recreation; they mean we can save more money.

For the most part these advantages have to do with our bodies. But am I all body? No. I have a mind—it too should have some little attention.

It is true we must have money and we must work, but rivalry in 1933 is keen and we must keep abreast with the latest. And to be able to understand the things that are about my body I must keep my mind awake and use it—just as the only way to keep soil fertile is to constantly add those elements which growing crops take from the ground.

A tin cup will give years of service if it is shined daily and dried after every use. I have to use my mind to care for my horse as well as to cut out a new dress. A man need be but an ordinary thinker to refrain from a new idea.

Put Your Liver To Work--Make This Test

Take Sargon Soft Mass Pills and watch constipation, gas, sour stomach, headaches and nervousness vanish. Don't be misled. Calomel, salts, oils, mineral waters, laxative pills, etc., have no effect on the liver. There are only two generally recognized substances which actually stimulate a sluggish liver to increase its production of bile. Sargon Soft Mass Pills contain both of them.

Only one for a full 30-day treatment. Ask your druggist, or write S. E. Willis, Inc., Atlanta, Ga.

alize that in order to be a success in the line of money and the things which money buys he must be able to think well.

A chance is at our fingers' ends to get our minds sharpened. A nationally known speaker will make a three-day visit here, starting May 21 and he will remain May 22 and 23. This man, the Rev. Dr. Edward Lodge Curran, has a dynamic personality. He is a graduate of Columbia University and of Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University.

Dr. Curran's long and successful radio career brought him, in one instance in 1931, in a national hookup for 26 weeks over WEAF. His 1932 radio addresses over WLWL brought before his listeners important every-day topics.

Dr. Curran is president of the International Catholic Truth Society, and he was formerly dean of Cathedral College, Brooklyn, one of the largest educational institutions on Long Island.

This three-day treat, which we are to receive from Dr. Curran, will be a sort of Chautauqua affair, although there will be absolutely no charges and no collections. Dr. Curran finds his greatest pleasure in giving enjoyment to others and in helping men and women to improve their condition in life. Nobody should miss these lectures. It is a wonderful chance that does not always pass our door.

After a wholesome talk that will hold a very special interest for each of us and that will give us a new view of life, Dr. Curran will answer questions. Let's have a glad crowd for this unusual event. Our community will be the better for Dr. Curran's having passed this way. If it is worth while to learn new methods of planting, harvesting or dressmaking, it is still more worth while to give these three evenings to learning about better ways of using our minds. Our minds will be filled with noble and beautiful thoughts. After the lecture Dr. Curran will distribute booklets, which will give more information about the points on which he has lectured. Remember the dates, May 21, 22 and 23. Everybody welcome.—L. V. Avery, Publicity Director.

TAR HEELS SET RECORD AT TENNIS

Chapel Hill, May 17.—The University of North Carolina tennis teams has just rounded out what is believed to be the greatest record ever made by a college tennis team in this country.

The 1933 team put in a fourth undefeated season, won a third national team championship on another undefeated tour of the East and topped its season by sweeping all honors at the Southern Conference Tournament which ended here Saturday.

In the six seasons since John Kenfield became coach in 1928 the Tar Heels have won 76 matches, tied one and lost only two.

The 1928 team was beaten only by Georgia Tech, the 1929 team only by Princeton.

The last four teams have been undefeated and the only tie was by Tulane in 1930.

During the last three years the Tar Heels have played the best tennis in the country on long, hard northern trims, and have come off without a defeat to give North Carolina the leading claim to the national championship each year.

In addition to putting out the strongest team in the country Coach Kenfield has also inherited and developed at Carolina a long line of brilliant individual stars who have swept all honors in the last six tournaments except for the singles title in 1928 and who have taken most of the titles at the conference tournaments in which they have participated.

Heading the individual stars have been: Bryant Grant, national clay court champion in 1930, who won the state singles championship in 1931 and 1932 and captured the doubles title with Hines in 1931 and who, while he never got to play in a Conference tournament was runner-up in the National Intercollegiate last summer.

Wilmer Hines, former national junior champion, who won the state doubles title with Grant in 1931 and with Harley Shuford in 1932, and who this year won the State and Conference singles titles and parried with Lenor Wright to capture both doubles titles.

Ed Yeomans, who was singles runner-up in the Conference tournament in 1931, and Hinkley Hendlin, who paired with Yeomans to win the Conference doubles title that year.

George Gibson, Pittsburgh's greying master mind, has himself a fine looking ball club these days, a confident, cohesive team that is going to be hard to stop short of a pennant.

One look and I'm about ready to string along with the consensus which picked the Pirates to engage in what has come to be known as the "great fall classic." They still have the Cardinals to look, but their superior balance should tell down the back stretch.

It's a baseball treat to watch Gibson's boys perform. They're not "cocky," but they give you the impression of a serene confidence in their ability. There isn't a trace of strain. They play with a grip, snapping up hard hit balls and flipping them around the infield with an ease and assurance that borders on carelessness. They're relaxed.

I watched them pin back Carl Hubbell's ears in their season's debut at the Polo Grounds. They worked the great southpaw over for eight hits, taking the kinks out of his renowned "screw" ball before it had a chance to break.

The score was close, 7 to 6, but for some reason or other you got the idea along about the second inning that the Pirates had it wrapped up. Every time the Giants pulled up close, the Traynors and Wangers and Lindstroms just let out another notch and soon it wasn't close any more. They made it look easy.

There no longer can be any doubt that in young Floyd Vaughan and Tony Piet the Pirates have one of the classiest keystone combinations extant. They are smooth, effortless and they're a headache to opposing pitchers who like to ease up on the bottom end of the batting order.

It was this pair that "cracked" late last summer and left the hole through which the Cubs slipped to the pennant. Unless the eyes deceive, it won't happen again. They look steady, sure of themselves.

Vaughan gobbled up an easy roller, set himself and lined a peg three feet over Gus Suhr's head at first base. It let in a run and left a couple more on the sacks. Someone said Vaughan looked shaky.

The next batter slammed a vicious hopper just out of Traynor's reach at third. Vaughan raced over lunged and speared it with his glove. Deliberately he straightened up, set himself and plunked a perfect strike into Suhr's glove to stop the rally cold. That was the pay-off on the 1933 Vaughan as far as I'm concerned.

among colored people that the negro was so badly beaten he died sometime later. This was refuted today when Clark appeared in police court to face trial, apparently none the worse for his run in with the law.

One other case was disposed of in police court today that being the charge of speeding against L. C. Bunch, who was released on payment of cost.

Late News Flashes

authorization for $3,300,000,000 public works program to be carried on by federal, state and local government through federal finances.

Senator Wagner of New York who introduced the bill in the Senate explained in a formal statement the purpose of the industry controlled plan was to "secure co-operative action within industry with a view to eliminating unfair competitive practices and thereby to reduce unemployment, improve standards of labor and rehabilitate industry."

Initiative to make arrangements for control of the production would rest with trade association and such tax would not become effective until approved by the President.

Any group or association within the industry would be authorized to prepare a code of fair competition covering trade and competitive practices within that industry.

CRANMER STRESSES DUTIES OF GRAND JURY

Louisburg, May 17.—The May term of criminal court in Franklin county superior court convened Monday with Judge E. H. Cranmer of Southport, presiding.

"Truth and honesty are the basis of all that is noble in man's character. We have got to get back to these two virtues and the fear of the Lord, or this country cannot live," said Judge Cranmer in his charge to the grand jury. After outlining the structure and functions of the criminal courts, he pointed out the obligations resting upon the grand jury. "This body," he said, "is by far, the most important part of the system. You are the watchdogs of the county. You are the guardians of the homes. And our homes are the keystone of the community, for here the fundamentals of truth and honesty are taught."

F. W. Hicks was selected foreman of the grand jury.

For Chesterfields to Satisfy

It takes barrels of money — put away for 30 months

THEY ARE MILD and yet they Satisfy

Four miles of warehouses are used to store our tobaccos. The crops now in storage are worth about $70,000,000... most of it for Chesterfield Cigarettes.

The Domestic kinds are packed away in wooden hogsheads that weigh 1,000 pounds and stand as high as a man's head.

Like fine wine, tobacco improves with age. So after our buyers select, from the various markets, the right kind of tobacco for Chesterfield, we put it away for 30 months or more to become mellow and sweet.

This ageing process is expensive, but there is no short-cut to make tobaccos milder—to make them taste better. It just takes money and time to make Chesterfields.
