NEW YORK PLANS NEW DRIVE ON GANG LEADERS

Recent Daring Slayings Causes Mayor To Seek Strict Law Enforcement

NEW KILLING REPORTED IN 'SLOT' RACKET

John Firsca, Member Of Slot Machine Racket, Gunned to Death in Automobile And Thrown Into Street; Described as Pal of George Kennedy, Shot to Death Tuesday With Kitty O'Brian

New York, May 26 (AP)—Racket bosses grown so bold they send killers forth to do battle under Broadway's bright lights, stirred New York today to a new drive on gangsters. "Stiffened spines" was Mayor John Firsca's prescription for the social malady that is killing scores and draining millions from New York's pocketbook every year.

Calling the police commissioner and five district attorneys in the city, he demanded "more backbone" in enforcement of the law. "Racketeering in its devious ways must be driven out," he said "and racketeers either expelled or sent to jail."

Even as he spoke racket men were riding a new foe to death. Unlike Wednesday night when two women fell before bullets "big enough to kill an elephant" the latest killing occurred in the byways of Brooklyn.

John Firsca, lined by police with the rich slot machine racket was gunned to death in an automobile and thrown into the street. When passersby saw his bullet-torn body his hands still clutched an arm strap from the tonneau of the automobile. He was described as a pal of George Kennedy, who was shot Tuesday night along with Kitty O'Brian, show girl of Long Island.

Strife in the slot machine racket was blamed by police for this shooting too and detectives surmised that Firsca died because he knew too much about the murders.

PITT FOREST WORKERS OFF

County Quota Leaves For New Bern Where It Will be Sent to Fort Bragg

Pitt county's quota of 107 men and 13 alternates for the Federal Reformation program left today for New Bern where they will be turned over to government agents for the first lap of their trip to the mountain area where the forest work is under way.

Part of the contingent left Greenville in charge of K. T. Futrell, director of the Department of Welfare, under whose direction the men were assembled for service, and others were dispatched from Ayden and Farmville. The Greenville group was conveyed to the Craven capital on two trucks and two trucks were used also at Farmville and Ayden.

Although the young men stood preliminary examination here in the elimination contest, they will undergo a more grueling examination at New Bern. They will then be sent to Fort Bragg for a two week training period before actually being sent out for forest service.

The contingent was selected from a total of two hundred applicants 150 of whom were actually examined for service. The alternates were taken along in case any of the 107 are refused in the second examination at New Bern.

The young men all have dependents and when they reach camp the major part of their $30 a month pay will be returned to their homes to help keep the wolf from their doors. In other words they represent that faction without visible means of support and employment and the money they send back home each month was not only expected to help the families keep the wolf away from the door but was also destined to put additional money in the channels of trade.

The reforestation program was recently passed by congress as a part of President Roosevelt's effort to relieve the unemployment situation and start the wheels of business and industry humming a joyous tune of returning prosperity.

PREPARE FOR MEMORIAL DAY

Poppy Sale Here Tomorrow to Usher in Observance of Honoring Dead Veterans

Although no exercises had been planned for Memorial Day next Tuesday, the graves of men who fell in action during the World War will be decorated by the Pitt County Post of the American Legion and its Auxiliary on Sunday.

They also members of the Auxiliary will conduct their annual sale of poppies tomorrow and millions of the tiny flowers denoting the sacrifices which American soldiers made on foreign battlefields will be worn by the appreciative public.

Poppy headquarters have been established in the building next to the Greenville Banking and Trust Company and from that vantage point members of the Auxiliary will rally forth on their mission of carrying joy to the hearts of disabled veterans suffering in various hospitals of the country from wounds received during the terrible conflict overseas.

The tiny red flowers are fashioned by the hands of the disabled veterans and every cent paid to the Auxiliary for the flowers will go to make life just a little bit easier for those who risked their lives for the preservation of American ideals and are now suffering because of it.

Members of the Auxiliary expressed the hope that the public would buy liberally of the flowers and help them raise as much money as possible for the cause of the veterans.

The decorating of the graves of the men who fell in the World War will be carried forward by the Legion assisted by the Auxiliary on Sunday and every grave of the soldiers will be decorated in keeping with the significance of the occasion.

Although no actual exercises have been prepared for Memorial Day on Tuesday, the hundreds of veterans in this county will remember the men who fell in that great engagement across the sea and bless the cause for which they served.

DAMAGE SUIT NON-SUITED

Claim For $46,000 Against A. C. L. Railroad Completed In Civil Court

After all evidence had been submitted, Judge Henry A. Grady this afternoon non-suited the $46,000 damage claims of M. S. Minnie Baker and Jacob Williams against the A. C. L. railroad as result of the death of Mrs. Baker's husband, Heber Baker, which occurred on the outskirts of Williamston, August 4, 1929.

The action came after the court had spent a day and a half in the hearing of the two cases which had been consolidated and heard as one because of the similarity of the evidence.

The taking of evidence was completed shortly before the noon recess and Judge Grady immediately announced that the case of Williams was non-suited. He made known his ruling in the case of Mrs. Baker at expiration of noon recess.

MORGAN PROBE WATCHED BY GOVERNMENT

Chairman of House Ways and Means Committee Plans to Go After Tax Evaders After Completion of the Morgan Investigation; Will Make Law so Tight Tax Jumpers Will Have Hard Time Getting By

Washington, May 26 (AP)—Plugging holes in the income tax law is the private job which Rep. Doughton of North Carolina has set for himself.

As chairman of the House Ways and Means committee he is in position to give his idea some impetus. The idea took form after testimony of J. P. Morgan before the senate banking committee but the basic thoughts have been incubating for a long time in Doughton's head.

Some of them, his associates said dated back to the Pugo investigation of 1912 when the head of the House of Morgan was the famous J. Pierpont.

Doughton was a member of the committee which conducted the hearing. One of the witnesses was J. P. Morgan.

Doughton is a livestock raiser and farmer by occupation according to his autobiography in the congressional directory. He has been representative from the 8th North Carolina district since 1911, serving continuously a string of terms beginning with the 62 congress.

In his more than 20 years on Capital Hill he has learned how to say no and how to get the other fellow to say yes. His "no" generally is emphatic and final and his determination to get things done has been notable around the cloak room.

BEGIN INSECT FIGHT IN PITT

County Agent Issues Information on How To Battle Dangerous Pests

(E. F. ARNO, D. County Agent) The next sixty days farmers will have various kinds of insects to contend with in the different crops grown in the county, especially is this true of tobacco.

The budworm does thousands of dollars worth of injury to the growers of this county annually and is one of the most easily controlled insects we have. If each farmer will go over his field of tobacco at this time and drop in the bud the amount of corn meal and poison that he can hold between the index finger and the thumb and repeat every week or ten days until the plants are topped, he should have no budworm injury. It is a very simple remedy and yet 100 per cent effective if properly used. The poison mixture calls for 1-2 or 2 pounds of arsenate of lead to 50 pounds of corn meal, the meal to be free of husks. Twelve pounds of this mixture is sufficient for one acre. Those who are having trouble with insects relative to tobacco may secure from this office circular No. 174, which gives instructions for insect control of this crop.

We also have a supply of Farm and Home Garden Manuals for distribution among the growers which have information on growing and insect control.

Farm Relief Act. The press carries daily accounts of farmers pouring milk into sewers in the great cities which have long breadlines and hungry children. Apple crops are going unharvested on the ground and yet these apples are needed for food supply.

Some people ask the question: Is there really a surplus of farm produce when people are going hungry in the cities? However, we are faced with a condition of large surpluses existing side by side with breadlines and that these same surpluses cause economic waste of human effort. The truth is, consumption of food has not declined very much. In one way or another the people are being fed and still there is an unsal-

Working at top speed under the urge of leaders the assembly disposed of preliminary yesterday in rapid fire order.

Late News Flashes

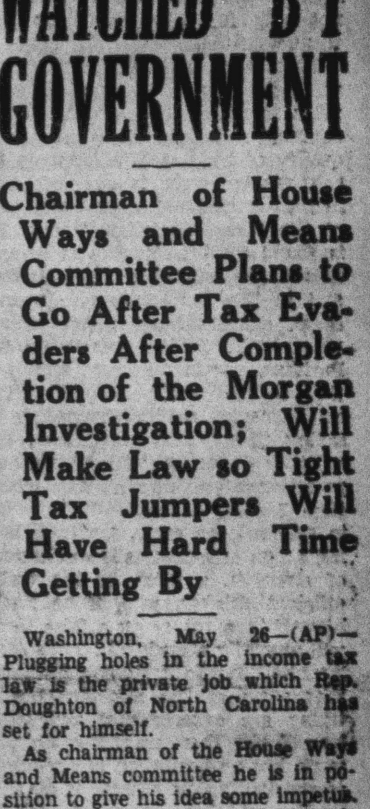

Postpone Investigation. Washington, May 26 (AP)—Suppressed tension over the Senate Morgan investigation burst forth in dispute at today's hearing in the wake of disclosures that the wealthy banking house controlled United Corporation, utilities stock organization which in turn is affiliated with companies doing 22 per cent of the electric and gas output of the nation.

The investigation was recessed today until next Wednesday after a bitter debate over the course of the inquiry. Senate clerk of Virginia fumed over the prospects of Fernand Pecora who as counsel for the inquiry, has had J. P. Morgan and one of his partners, Geoffie Whitnew, under examination for the past three days and today drew further evidence of Morgan activities from George Howard as president of the United Corporation.

The Virginian demanded throughout the excitement of the crowded audience to know the exact course of the inquiry and hurried questions about Pecora's retention as counsel. Pecora returned in time to draw applause with the veiled hint that his resignation could be had if the committee asked it.

Because she refused to support her injured husband, Mrs. Mary Martin, 60, Philadelphia wash woman, was sentenced to 30 days in jail. (Associated Press Photo)

Slight Fire At Proctor Hotel

Fire, originating in a trash box in the check room of the Proctor hotel yesterday afternoon caused considerable excitement in the business district but the blaze was quickly extinguished by the hotel's sprinkler system with only slight damage.

The fire department responded promptly to the alarm but the blaze had been extinguished by the time of their arrival.

Considerable smoke drifting into the lobby increased excitement but when it was learned that the sprinkler system had done its work promptly and effectively the crowd of business people who rushed to the fire area returned to work with the fear of fire dissipated.

The origin of the blaze was not determined but it was supposed to have originated from a cigarette or match tossed carelessly into the refuse box.

Chapter 47
SUE'S HIDING PLACE
 I flung myself toward her, and grasped her arm, and wrenched the pistol from her hand.
 "You are ill-fitted for this," I said. "I know what your purpose is here of course. I supposed they promised you a lot of money to impersonate Miss Tally later on."
 She looked at me sullenly. She said with a touch of defiant triumph:
 "I've seen you, too, when you didn't know it. I followed you all over the hotel yesterday afternoon and you didn't know it. But you nearly caught me there at the door of 34."
 It was this girl, then, not the priest. I showed the letter I still held crumpled in one hand into my pocket and said:
 "What have they done with Miss Tally?"
 "Don't you wish you knew?" she gag, that she wasn't hurt, but she ching to me, and I could feel her heart beating and her breath.

 All at once I realized that we must get out of the ill-omened room. I took her cautiously into my room next door. I put her in a chair—she was trembling with cold and with the reaction of released terror.
 I took my heavy flannel dressing gown and put it around Sue, and I took her wholly into my arms and held her, and I kissed her and kissed her and was never so happy in my life.
 She told me briefly how the Lovschiefs had been there in the corridor beside her room. She'd gone to turn on the light, and Lovschiefs had simply clapped his fat hand over her mouth and lifted her into the corridor and some woman flashed inside the room and Grethe whispered sharply that if Sue screamed, the woman would go into Sue's room and kill Sunday.
 "I have the token," I said rapidly. "It was hidden in the priest's room."
 "You have—" She paused. "But how did you know what it was? It can't be—you don't know."
 She watched me unroll the small thin paper. I held it toward her and she gave a little gasp.
 "Why—you! It was a sort of gasp. This—is this the token—but it is not my half. It is my brother's half."
 "Then your brother—"
 "The priest—was my brother. The priest was Francis!"
 (To Be Continued)

I wrenched the pistol from her hand.
 said with more spirit than she'd yet displayed.
 "Yes," I said truthfully. "Tell me, was it Lovschiefs who killed Stravsky and Marcel and the priest?"
 Her eyes shone with hate, and she was all at once powerful and vital. She said: "If it was Lovschiefs, I'll kill him, and he knows it."
 I said slowly: "So it was Stravsky. He was your connection—"
 "Don't speak of him," she cried. "He was a man. Lovschiefs's a jellyfish."
 "Look here," I said, feeling rather as if I had unleashed a revengeful panther. "Tell me where they've got Miss Tally, and I'll—if I can—I'll help you out of this."
 "You may be right," she said finally, giving me a black look. "But I don't know. They promised me a lot of money."
 "What good will money do you? Stravsky—can't be brought back. It was not as brutal as I thought it might be. She was fully aware that life was still to be lived, and that money was not a bad thing. She said again:
 "They promised me a lot of money."
 I dared not wait. I dared not tempt her with the necessary care.
 "What's your name?"
 "Elise." I think she was rather accustomed to being beaten in life's struggles, for she said it dully.
 "Tell me at once where they've got Miss Tally. Hurry up."
 Probably I had strengthened what must have been a growing distrust of the Lovschiefs. Which fact gave a curious sidelight on her life. She said, watchin me:
 "She's in the White Salon, I suppose? I was there. Grethe and Lovschiefs pushed me, made me hide—that night."
 Elise said, "Lovschiefs; Lovschiefs then, was not the man in the courtyard." I said:
 "What do you mean? Quick." She hesitated. "In the fireplace. It's just an old cupboard up above the ledge. I was there this morning when you found the priest."
 "What! Did you know the body was there?"
 "No! No! I swear it!" her words burst out in a rapid flood. "I was in the north wing and I heard you and Sue Tally coming, and I hid in the White Salon. First I was going to get behind a curtain—that's

Then I was at the door of the White Salon. I laid a cautions hand on the knob, and holding my revolver before me tried to peer into the darkness of the room.
 There was no sound, and it was entirely black.
 I went to the fireplace. My eyes were becoming accustomed to the dark, but I longed for some kind of light. I could see no closet.
 "Sue," I whispered in the silence.
 "Sue."
 There was a little rustle from inside the wall about the height of my head.
 I bent over and rolled up the fire screen. The space seemed very large. I ducked under the mantel breast.
 I groped into the darkness, met cold wall—and a ledge. And my groping hand suddenly encountered two feet bound together at the ankles.
 It was Sue.
 She said, when I removed the

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
 Hollywood—A little more than two years ago Victor Jory played the role of a lieutenant in a story of the French foreign legion starring Warner Baxter, with C. Henry Gordon as his superior officer in the film.
 Today Jory is playing the role of a lieutenant under C. Henry Gordon, in a story of the French foreign legion starring—Victor Jory.
 Nobody noticed the Jory who played that minor role in the Baxter film, and nobody was excited or alarmed when he left Hollywood, shortly after that, and returned to the stage. As he explained later, he preferred being a bigger fish in the little (and remunerative) pond of stock.

Always Hard-Boiled
 So Jory was a "new discovery" when Fox signed him last year after seeing his performance in a local stage production. He was glad to be in pictures again, and hoped for the best.
 What he drew as acting assignments were a couple of hard-boiled gangster roles in inconsequential pictures. They then gave him another bit also hard-boiled in "State Fair" Jory must have fooled them, for he took what was given him and played it in a way that brought some critical praise and also one of the four leading roles in "I loved You Wednesday."
 Things looked promising but he wasn't exactly happy. He had heard

"WE MAY MAKE MISTAKES"
 (The Atlanta Journal)
 "Do not deny that we may make mistakes of procedure. I have no expectation of a hit every time. I come to bat. What I seek is the highest possible batting average, not only for myself, but for the team."
 Those were, perhaps, the most revealing words in President Roosevelt's recent radio speech. They showed the temper of his mind, the quality of his heart. Willingness to acknowledge error is one of the highest intellectual virtues and one of the rarest Christian graces. It is found most frequently in scientists whose only objective is truth, and in the few saints who would break out laughing if you called them such. It is never found in Puritans, nor in autocrats, whether they be petty or ponderous. Who could imagine a Philistine reformer saying, "I may make mistakes"? Or a Hitler declaring, "I have no expectation of making a hit every time I come to bat." Willingness to acknowledge error, far from being a sign of weakness is an element of strength, a mark of the truly efficient thinker, who, if he finds himself in a rut or on a false trail will promptly abandon it. Thus Mr. Roosevelt, while frankly admitting that some of the measures he is trying are experimental and that he will give them up if they do not work, has no hesitation in assuming responsibility. His courage is all the readier and his change of success the likelier because he is not encumbered with pride of opinion. And the country's confidence in him is all the heartier because it knows that he seeks the highest possible batting average not merely for himself, but "for the team."

GREENSBORO FIRM IS PUT IN RECEIVERSHIP
 Greensboro, May 26—The A. K. Moore Company, one of Greensboro's largest realty firms, was placed in receivership today in Guilford Superior court, in a friendly suit brought by Julian Johnson, a minor creditor. A. K. Moore, president of the firm, was named receiver and is operating under $5,000 bond.

 able surplus of basic commodities in the channels of trade.
 For instance, at the beginning of the present crop year we had on hand a wheat carry-over of 250,000,000 bushels in excess of normal; of flue-cured tobacco, 150,000,000 pounds in excess of normal; of cotton, 7,000,000 bales in excess of normal.
 Therefore it has become necessary in the Farm Act to provide means for reducing these surpluses in spite of the fact that people are going hungry and without sufficient clothes. To ignore these surpluses would mean that the farmers would go on producing for a market that does not exist, one that there is no profit in. The Act recognizes that farmers cannot buy from industry until prices of farm produce go up. It also recognizes that prices cannot go up in the face of unsalable surpluses. Therefore machinery has been created for the purpose of reducing surpluses.
 The Act provides several ways whereby the acreage to these basic crops may be reduced. For instance, the government proposes to rent land devoted to these crops from the farmers who will reduce their acreage. They have authority to give farmers options on cotton at low prices for the purpose of reducing acreage. They may enter into agreement with manufacturers of farm products whereby prices may be maintained, provided farmers in turn reduce their acreage for these better prices.
 There is one outstanding advantage in these provisions in that the farmers who participate and cooperate with the government get the advance price through these rental payments and other provisions regardless of whether or not the price of commodities go up. The farmer who does not cooperate and produces the surpluses will be the man who suffers.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

The New York Sun's persistent sport-page slogan—"Don't bet on fights"—still is an appropriate, if unheeded injunction to the followers of the fistie realm, but no developments have occurred so far to sway our notion that Max Schmeling and Jack Sharkey will be returned the victors in this June's brace of heavyweight jousts, thereby paving the way for the third and, we hope final championship match of their series, in September.

The ballyhoo has been very brisk indeed, under the stimulation of Jack Dempsey, for the big slugger from California, Max Bear. It emphasizes a bigger, tougher, harder-hitting fighter who thrives under punishment, likes the rout and packs a right-hand with devastating power behind it.

There is no question about Bear's gameness or ruggedness, yet I do not think he compares with Schmeling for consistent punching ability and steady workmanship over a 15-round distance. If Bear has improved, so has Schmeling, and it would be difficult to imagine a heavyweight with any more endurance than the German boxer.

Bear, to our cool and calculating eyes, seems to be a large edition of Georgia's Bill Strubling, and that kind of a rough-and-ready scrapper is made to order for Schmeling.

Has Sharkey Slipped?

As for Sharkey and Carnera, the main question is whether the heavyweight champion, in a year's idleness, has slipped far enough back to have any difficulty outpunching and outboxing his huge rival.

Sharkey gave the Italian an artistic pasting two years ago and but for one of his characteristic brainstorms would have been the winner by a knockout. Since that time there is no question Carnera has improved but not even the tragedy of Ernie Schaaf served to convince any close observer that the voluminous Venetian had acquired a real punch.

If he is any slower than he was against Schmeling last year, Sharkey will be under a handicap trying to reach Carnera's somewhat vulnerable chin. He may tire over the 15-round route, as he did against the German, but he is still too good a boxer and hitter to figure anything but a winner.

It seems reasonable to suggest, however, that if there is an upset, neither of the big fights in the metropolis sector, Carnera is the one likely to spring it. Anything can happen when Da Preem hoists himself into the ring.

Jack Has A Foothold

Meanwhile, after payoff this June it will be interesting to see where Dempsey fits into the metropolitan fight picture.

More than three years ago, after Tex Rickard died, Dempsey refused $50,000 to cast his lot with Madison Square Garden as front-man on the promotion side of the business. The boom was on at the time $50,000 looked like so much small change to the old mauler and he chose to continue cashing-in as a fetic variety man.

Now, he has gained a foothold in the Big Town, with influential backing and may look with more favor on a possible hookup with the Garden, which is due for a re-organization before next winter.

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMBER

Washington—Whether or not the farm relief plan which has now become law fulfills the hopes and promises held out for it, Secretary Henry C. Wallace and George Peek who is to administer the new agricultural act, are enthusiastic regarding plans to help the farmer.

Secretary Wallace for example, in explaining provisions of the act to newspaper men, reiterated expressions of his determination to make all concerned acquainted with the "bar facts."

And Peek, in a recent statement outlining the principles and goal of the act as he visualizes them, repeated the phrase "to raise farm prices" three times, and in each instance underlined it.

New Determination
Not only among those charged with the responsibility of administering the bill, but with members of congress and the public generally appears a spirit of determination that something be done.

And it's important as a development of the times.
It hasn't been so long ago that many of the non-agricultural groups in the country were in the habit of looking on the farmer as a victim of circumstance, who must pull out of his straitened condition the best he could.

Every effort to help him brought from opposing groups bitter denunciation—and loud cries that this or that proposal was nothing more than a raid on the treasury.

Now It's Different
Now there seems to be a spirit of cooperation generally. As it appeared in representations made to Washington, more and more the attitude of the country seems to be that under the present-day economic system the farmer can't save himself without outside aid, and that unless something is done to help him everybody suffers.

Thus, all sorts of plans and schemes looking to this end made their appearance on capital hill while the bill was being framed. Some were accepted some rejected.

Proposals which before were never given much consideration, such as the Thomas amendment providing for inflation, were made a part of the law. Of course, objections were heard and dire warnings of disaster raised, but they were shouted aside.

There seemed to be a definite belief that the time has come to recognize agriculture as a basic industry and do something about it.

CHILE TRIES MILITARY DRILL TO BALANCE RED TEACHING

Rangoon—(AP)—Reports from the Tavoy district near the Siamese border relate that prospectors are opening tin mines in 60 square miles of virgin jungle in Nyoung Choung only recently made accessible by new roads. The tin is said to be the purest obtainable in the Tavoy district.

Translations Hit Spain's Authors

Madrid—(AP)—Spanish novelists complain that translations of foreign works have cut the demand for native fiction so they have to give up writing or turn to memoirs or adventure stuff. But publishers aver that if the authors would write as interestingly as their foreign contemporaries, the books would sell.

Chile Tries To Develop Oil.

None of the big oil companies has shown that it considers the deposits important commercially.

New York Cotton

New York, May 26—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady eight to ten advance in response to higher Liverpool cables and in trading and commission house buying.

Trading continued active after the call with July advancing to 8.90 and December to 9.11 1/2 about 16 to 20 points higher.

The early advance of about $1.00 a ball met with new wave of liquidation and some selling from southern sources.

July reacted from the rally high of 8.70 to 8.65 while December dropped off from 9.12 to 8.97 or within four points of yesterdays close but there was sufficient trade and commission house buying to steady the market with prices at midday about 7 to 10 net higher.

The market was active and strong late in the day on the proposed abandonment of the gold standard. Futures closing strong 39 to 42 higher.
