INVESTIGATORS TO EXPOSE MORE MORGAN DATA

Partnership Agreement Of Huge New York Bank Will Be Given Publicity

PERCENTAGE OF INTEREST TO BE AIRED

Action Taken at Washington Bank Probe After Counsel for Morgan Had Been Permitted to Object to Publication of Private Affairs of Institution; Tremendous Crowd Attends The Hearing

Washington, June 1-(AP)-The senate committee investigating J. P. Morgan and Company today decided to make public a part of the partnership agreement under which the huge bank operates. In an hour after the time for starting the hearings, it was determined that the names of the partners and percentage of their interest in the firm would be omitted from the partnership list to be placed on public record. Senator Byrnes, South Carolina, divulged this to newspapermen while Morgan and various of his partners were awaiting resumption of examination by Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel. John W. Davis, of counsel for Morgan, had been allowed to renew his protest to the committee against publication on the grounds that information was strictly private. Again the huge hall was crowded but all on hand were able to give thanks for the cool day.

BETHEL 'SPUDS' BEGIN MOVING

Carloads of Irish Potatoes Shipped This Week; Larger Shipments Later

Movement of the Irish potato crop got underway in the Bethel area the first of the week and hundreds of dollars were pouring into the community from sales in various sections of the county especially on northern markets. Bethel is one of the largest potato growing sections in this immediate section of the state and thousands of barrels of "spuds" are shipped from there each season. Twelve carloads left the station yesterday afternoon and similar shipments were made during the earlier part of the week. As high as thirty carloads have left that market in a single day in previous years and it was expected similar shipments would be made during the latter part of this week and next. A pronounced improvement in the price situation has taken place since last season and if this remains firm the growers may be able to make a small profit off their products. The market price yesterday was from $2.25 to $2.50 per barrel, almost a $1 increase over the previous year. The "spud" season is short, lasting over two weeks, but during that

Shaking Off Gangland's Stranglehold On Business

By NOEL THORNTON New York-(AP)-Law enforcement agencies are discovering the alarming menace of the new era in racketeering lies in the fact that it is a direct onslaught on legitimate business. Until a few years ago racketeering was largely confined to intragang warfare for supremacy in illegal liquor traffic and control of votes. As the flood of easy money from these two activities began to trickle away, the underworld czars began inflicting their strong arm extortion tricks upon legitimate trades, and especially upon the small business man. The first trades to be forced to pay toll were cleaning and dyeing plants, laundries, and milk, fish and poultry dealers. The racketeers organize their plans so cleverly that

"Gentleman agreements" for the conservation of gold and for the coordination of internal policies is hoped for as an early American accomplishment. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State and head of the delegation, and his colleagues spent a quiet day aboard the steamship banning conferences and statements.

ROOSEVELT IS NAVY SPEAKER

President Urges Graduates at Annapolis To Cultivate Friendship

Annapolis, Md., June 1-(AP)-Graduates of the Naval academy were told today by President Roosevelt to cultivate friendship with their fellow men. Mr. Roosevelt came here to hand out commissions to the new class of officers for the navy at the graduating exercises. "I ask you" the president said, "to avoid any exclusive relations to your own clan, your own clan of the navy or to some other special government service, or to the clan of your professional and civil life. "Remember to cultivate the friendship of the people-not alone your class or profession-but the average run of people-the same folks you would have known and liked and affiliated yourself with if you had not been chosen to enter and graduate from this highly specialized institution of service. "This I ask of you not only for your own sake but for your country. You who become officers of the U. S. Navy are not set apart as a clique with different interests and ideas from those of the rest of the country. "Those of you who are to enter civil life are in the same way and in no sense a clique. "Almost half of the class were returned to civil life. These men were given diplomas of their graduation. The exercises were held in the famous Dahlgren Hall which was crowded by relatives and sweethearts of the graduates. The president and Mrs. Roosevelt motored here from Washington. The president spoke briefly. Manufacture of dry ice, from the carbon dioxide which is one of the elevating forces in the mud volcanoes in the Imperial valley, Cal., has begun.

JAPS TO BEGIN DRIVE AGAINST CHINESE THUGS

Invaders Will Attempt to Clear Manchuria of Harrowing Bandit Raids

Tientsin, June 1-(AP)-Japanese military leaders, the sanguinary five months offensive in North China ended with a truce, today considered employing their effective war machinery in a new task. The armistice, brief, simple and considered a relief, was to release most of the 50,000 invaders for service against Chinese bandits in Manchuria and for a proposed eventual acquisition of the Kalgan area in Chahgar province of inner Mongolia. Political aspects of the Japanese drive south of the Great Wall and the treaty signed yesterday by which the invaders agreed to evacuate an area in North China about the size of Connecticut also remained for consideration. It is assumed that General Hwang Fu, Chinese national government representative in North China, and the Japanese minister to China will soon confer on the political aspects of the situation. The armistice came after nearly two years of intermittent warfare in Manchuria, the Chinese province of Jehol and in North China during which it is estimated the Chinese lost more than 50,000 men and the Japanese 10,000.

Greenville Delegates Highly Pleased With Wrightsville Beach Meeting

Delegates of the Greenville Rotary club who have been attending the 57th district conference of the organization at Wrightsville Beach returned home last night high in their praise of the welcome accorded them in Wilmington and of the splendid program enjoyed during the two-day session. Those attending were K. W. Kobb, newly elected president of the local club Mrs. Cobb, and son, Charles; J. C. Gaskins, secretary and daughter, Miss Naomi. The highlights of the convention, they said, was the election of Ross McMillan, of Red Springs, as president, and selection of Greensboro as next year's meeting place. Greensboro won the attendance prize from the standpoint of miles and Red Springs captured the award for having the largest number present. Charles Phillips, of Greensboro retiring president, was presented with a silver loving cup and a check. The high light of the closing day's session was an address by Cameron Beck, executive of the United States Stock Institute, who is trying to improve the condition of the millions of boys of the nation. He made a powerful appeal in behalf of greater consideration of the boy problem and urged that nothing be left undone in this connection. Claude Gaskins, of the Greenville club, received special recognition as (Continued on Page Four)

EMERGENCY FARM MORTGAGE LEGISLATION TO BE OUTLINED SATURDAY MORNING

The local representative of the Federal Land Bank of Columbia and of the Farm Loan Commissioner has stated to a representative of this paper that the meeting of persons interested in farm loan mortgages to be held at 10:00 o'clock Saturday morning June 3rd at the Court House in Greenville, will be for the purpose of giving to the county general and detailed information concerning the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act as it may effect the people. Also it was stated that it is probable that at this meeting will be discussed the plan for contact between the Federal Land Bank, the Joint Stock Land Banks and Mortgages for the purpose of reaching a basis for refinancing existing farm mortgage debts. It is felt that this is a very important feature of the meeting. General plans for refinancing seems to have been made but there seems to be need to set up details to govern the individual farm mortgages, the Joint Stock Land Bank and the Federal Land Bank to put into action the farm loan relief intended by The Emergency Mortgage Act. Also, it was stated that the primary purpose of this meeting is to serve the farm interest under the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act. Other business interested may attend the meeting primarily as observers.

MORGAN KNEE HOLDS MIDGET

Tiny Circus Woman Gives N. Y. Banker Surprise of His Life At Senate Probe

Washington, June 1-(AP)-J. P. Morgan had the surprise of his life today. All of a sudden a little touch of femininity, a circus midget, sat upon his lap. Plied by an enterprising agent, Miss Lydia Graf, who has seen 31 years but grown hardly a mile, gave a circus touch to the senate Morgan probe scene. It will be remembered that Senator Carter Glass, the press agent against tactics, said it was like a circus, adding "all we need is peanuts and pink lemonade." The refreshments were missing when tiny Miss Lydia headed through the crowd to the Morgan group which awaited the beginning of the hearing. She shook hands with several and walked to the dignified head of the powerful banking firm. Laughingly, Morgan shook hands with her and sat down again. Then unexpectedly the press agent placed the midget on the banker's lap. He looked nonplussed but submitted gravely. Soon his face became stern as the picture was taken. Notified quickly of the incident, the senate banking committee warned photographers if the pictures were used these taking them would be barred from the hearing. Before Miss Graf was placed on his lap, Morgan chatted amiably with her.

NEGRO WINS IN CIVIL SUIT

Robert Clemmons Awarded Judgment For $300 Against Insurance Company

Robert Clemmons, Greenville colored man, was awarded judgment for $300 against the Metropolitan Insurance Company in the civil term Superior court here yesterday. The case was the only one heard during the day although the court accepted compromises in the major part of the cases set for hearing during the day. Clemmons, administrator of a negro youth who has not been heard from since his disappearance seven years ago, filed suit against the insurance company when they failed to pay him $300, the amount of a policy carried on the youth. Clemmons claimed the youth had been gone so long that it was assumed he was dead. The insurance company declined to pay in the face of lack of concrete evidence regarding the death of the boy. The jury held the boy was dead and returned a verdict for the full amount of the policy. Several other actions set for hearing during the day were compromised before they reached court and consequently work was not as heavy as customary. Court today delved into the remainder of the calendar with the hope of relieving the docket as much as possible before the end of the two-week term the latter part of the week. This will be the last sitting of Superior court until next August when the regular term of criminal court will be held.

DENIES PART IN HANDLING WALKER FUND

Russell Sherwood Located in New Jersey After Absence of 21 Months Said Safety Deposit Box he Rented Contained None Of Walker Money. Says He Disappeared to Prevent Exposure of Private Matters

New York, June 1-(AP)-The New York Herald said today in a copyrighted article that Russell Sherwood, long hunted mystery man of the James Walker case had renounced a now famous deposit box which he rented held wealth belonging to Walker. Gray, thin and nerve-wracked since he vanished 21 months ago, Sherwood was found living with his family in a fashionable section of New Jersey. His immediate whereabouts was not disclosed but reports said he was living in New Jersey, near Summit. Sherwood displayed emotion as he denied he ever was Walker's fiscal agent. He disappeared because, he said, Investigator Samuel Seabury delving away at the inquiry, would pry into Walker's private affairs. The long missing witnesses, described by Seabury as rising from an obscure accountant's post to handle $1,000,000 in various cases, said he was now broke. Newspapers said he is now living in a $200 a month apartment.

Book Turns 'Talkie' For Blind; It's Done By Electric Gadgets

Detroit, Mich.-(AP)-A machine that makes books talk is the newest device upon which Glenn E. Watson, inventor, is working. With a rough working model constructed at his laboratories here he is seeking to perfect the device so that the blind may read books and newspapers as well as the limited publications now available in the raised letter or Braille, system. Watson utilizes a device that was exhibited in London in 1914 which differentiated between printed letters by an electric eye, or selenium cell. The famous Steinmetz and his engineers developed it until a different "buzz" or sound could be made for each letter, but eventually dropped the idea as impractical. Translating the buzzes corresponding to each letter and punctuation mark was a task too great for the mind, especially when the various sounds had to be grouped into words. In Watson's device at a guide rod supports a letter scanner which the reader moves across the printed page at will. A pencil of light strikes the page and is reflected back to the selenium cell. The characteristic impulse of the letter selects through a system of condensers the proper magnet which releases a tiny phonograph disc upon which has been recorded the corresponding spoken letter. The disc revolves once and the letter is heard through earphones. There is a small disc about an inch in diameter of each letter of the alphabet. A less expensive variation of the machine, Watson says, could be made to raise Braille characters, instead of actuating the pronouncing system, for readers familiar with the raised letters.

PARKING LAW SHOULD BE ENFORCED

For a long time we have had a city ordinance that limits parking in the business section on Evans street, East Fifth street, and Dickinson avenue to one hour, but for recent months little or no attention has been paid to the enforcement of this law.

This ordinance was passed not to hinder shoppers from necessary parking on our streets to carry on their business transactions but to prohibit the taking up of all parking space by those workers and others who leave their cars parked from the time they go to work until they are ready to return home.

The authorities would render the business houses a real service by enforcing this one hour parking law.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

E. V. Thompson writing in Nation's Business, declares that the above caption is one of the important questions of the day but that the question carries with it another and probably more important question that must be taken into consideration by every business establishment that would have business to be good.

Mr. Thompson says: "How's business?" On the trains and the streets, in clubs and stores—wherever business men meet, the inevitable question is: "How's business?"

The answer, whether "Good" or "Bad," should be followed by another question: "How's your advertising?"

The answer to that question is almost certain to have a direct bearing on the state of business as a whole, for whenever buyers are as busy as they are now, sales are dependent on advertising.

The ultimate purpose of sound advertising is to make profitable

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: Discarded by the movies because his heroic rescue of an extra girl had led to a hopelessly scarred face and an ineradicable limp, Nicholas Boyd sails gloomily for England, his home. His wife, Bernie, cannot face obscurity, and remains behind in New York. Just after the ship sails a timid, elfin girl brings a bunch of roses to the fallen star's cabin because she thought he looked lonely. But he flings the roses into the sea, and rudely turns the girl out.

Chapter Four GEORGIE BANCROFT George had been watching Nicholas Boyd all the morning. The long promenade deck was almost deserted. The sky was grey and overcast in spite of the intense heat, and there was an ugly heavy swell that made the great liner lurch from side to side like a drunken man.

George Bancroft, her hands thrust deep into the pockets of her red jacket, and her soft hair flying in the hot breeze, leaned against the rail and looked wistfully across to where Nicholas Boyd lay full length in a deck chair, his eyes closed, one hand hanging limply by his side.

They were two days out from New York and it was the first time she had seen him since she had tapped at his cabin door with her offering of roses.

"How awful! A real fallen star, isn't he? I'd rather be dead. No wonder he keeps out of everyone's way. I shouldn't be surprised if he doesn't jump overboard before we get to Southampton."

Georgie looked wistfully at Nicholas.

She was a cheery little Cockney soul who had been on a visit to a brother in Chicago.

"He paid my fare or I couldn't have come," she told Georgie with engaging frankness. "I should like to have stayed with him for ever, but his wife didn't hit it with me. She's from Boston."

She waited hopefully for some comment; she loved talking, but Georgie had no comment to make.

After a moment Nelly Foster tried again. "Where have you been?" "To New York, to see my mother."

Nelly's eyes opened wide. "Your mother! You don't say! Doesn't your mother live with you then?"

"No, she married again—an American, and they don't want me to live with them. I don't want to either. I'm quite happy."

"Do you live alone?" "No, with an uncle. He lets me do as I like."

The two girls looked at one another with mutual interest. "I could have married a man in the cannery business and have stayed in Chicago, but he was old—" she shrugged her shoulders. "He was fat, too, and his chin was all bristly when he kissed me."

"When he kissed you?" Georgie looked scandalized. "You didn't let him kiss you if you didn't like him?"

Nelly laughed. "Of course I did. That was the only way I could find out if I loved him or not. 'It's a good way, too,' she added shrewdly. 'You remember that. If you can't stand a man kissing you, you can't stand him at all.'"

"I've never kissed a man," Georgie said.

"Some of them don't know how to kiss," Nelly went on, with the air of one who thoroughly understands her subject. "Now Nicholas Boyd in the films was the one I liked. He made love just like—well! I used to wish I was the girl," she sighed ecstatically.

Georgie said "Pooch! that's not real lovemaking. People can't kiss really properly when they know that half the world is going to pay sales. Properly used, it will do just that. No business man should complain about the state of his business until he can answer to his own satisfaction the question: 'How's your advertising?'"

(Continued from Page One) in the MacDonald career. For years he has been preaching that good will and cooperation constitute the world's means of salvation.

None has been more impatient than he for immediate remedial action and he has clamored at the bit as delays have put off the big conference through the past year.

"The all-comprehending problem," says MacDonald, "is how to get the riches of the world enjoyed by the people who dwell in it."

With nearly 3,000,000 of her insured workers alone unemployed, her trade moving under reduced steam, and her markets cut by tottered currencies, Britain has at first hand a lesson in the need for remedies.

To attain the objective of prosperity, British opinion is generally agreed that certain salient steps must be taken. They include raising of prices for raw produce, removal of trade barriers and ultimate stabilization of currencies.

It is a definite opinion of the English also that the return of prosperity will depend largely upon the settlement of war debts. But that subject is not on the agenda of the conference.

Britain's prices in common with the rest of the world have been swept precipitately downward in the general crumbling of values. The extent of the decline is evidenced by government figures which show that with 100 as the whole sale price index in 1929, it had slumped to 88 in 1930, 76 in 1931 and 74 last year.

British conditions to the working out of a satisfactory panacea for the world's ills further include another interwoven factor—removal of trade barriers.

Excessive tariffs, quotas and exchange restrictions are viewed as leading obstacles to the flow of trade. And Britain, her free trade days now but a memory, has in her own tariffs a bargaining weapon she intends to use.

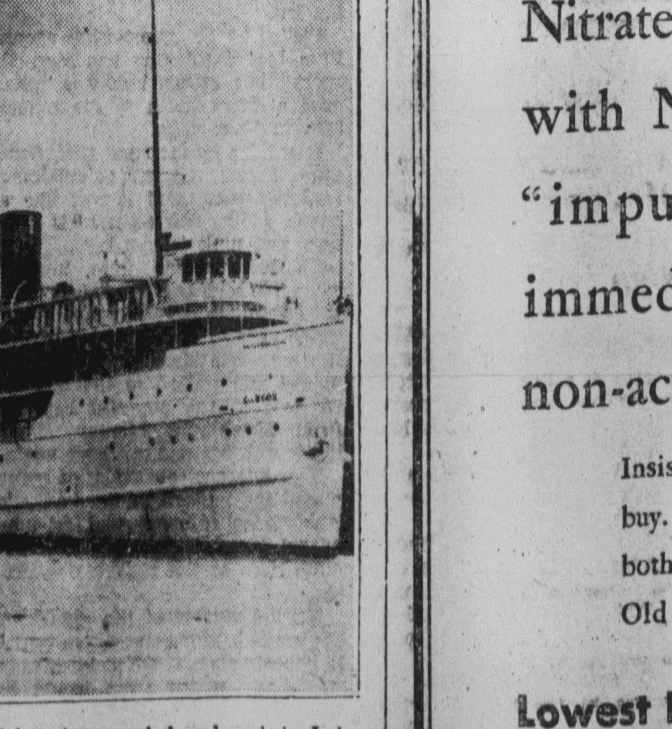

The country has a primary interest in seeking freer trade through out the world because, with a great population packed into a small area the livelihood of many of its people is dependent upon the success of export industries.

The ship gave a sudden tremendous lurch, causing Georgie almost to lose her balance, and when she had recovered it she saw that the book which had been lying face downwards on Boyd's knee had slipped and fallen to the deck.

It was an opportunity and Georgie took it unhesitatingly. (To Be Continued)

The scholarly more-than-six-footer from Ohio is rated high as a civil engineer. The President for weeks back has been turning to him for advice in determining suitable men to aid fulfillment of the Tennessee valley program.

The Tennessee valley project is in the field about which Morgan knows most. Since he started his engineering work, back in 1902 with only a high school education, he has planned and supervised construction of some 75 water control projects.

The ambitious St. Francis valley reclamation work in Arkansas and the Miami conservation project at Dayton, Ohio, are pointed to as evidence of his handwork.

In a Familiar Field In taking over the Tennessee program, he is returning to familiar territory. He was the supervising engineer in 1909-09 for federal government drainage investigations and was in charge of designing reclamation works in the southern states.

Also, he was at one time chief engineer of the Miami, Ohio, conservancy district for flood control, and later served in the same position in the Pueblo, Colorado, conservancy district.

He drafted the revised drainage codes for Minnesota, Arkansas, Ohio, Mississippi, Colorado and New Mexico, and has been consulting engineer on drainage and flood control projects all over the nation.

No Mere Theorist That he is regarded as a practical engineer and not a theorist is evidenced by the enthusiastic reception of his appointment to the post by the Ohio senators. Senator Bulkley of Ohio, long before his appointment was announced, declared that Morgan was fit in every respect to take over the job.

Incidentally, in taking this government position Morgan leaves the same college that Senator Feas of Ohio left to enter the senate. Feas was president of Antioch college for 10 years.

In Chicago the state's attorney is seeking Murray Humphreys, credited with originating the modern idea of racketeering. In 1929 he was arrested on a charge of conspiring to violate the general business law by organizing the milk trade, but witnesses failed to appear and he was discharged. Later he tried unsuccessfully to organize New York's taxi drivers, demanding $1 a month "dues" from each driver.

Law agencies and the American Federation of Labor have been alarmed by a system whereby racketeers sift enough of their members into a union local to vote out the regular officers and vote in their own regime. In addition, a number of "outlaw" unions have been organized which are not in any way affiliated with the Federation of Labor.

Washington—Those who registered surprise when President Roosevelt chose a college president to direct the vast Tennessee valley conservation program and sniffed that the "brain trust" gets a new member, seem to have another guess coming.

Arthur E. Morgan of Yellow Springs, Ohio, can qualify for membership in the Roosevelt professional group. But he had other qualifications that the President may have considered in choosing him for the task of administering his pet project.

Law agencies and the American Federation of Labor have been alarmed by a system whereby racketeers sift enough of their members into a union local to vote out the regular officers and vote in their own regime. In addition, a number of "outlaw" unions have been organized which are not in any way affiliated with the Federation of Labor.

Washington—Those who registered surprise when President Roosevelt chose a college president to direct the vast Tennessee valley conservation program and sniffed that the "brain trust" gets a new member, seem to have another guess coming.

Arthur E. Morgan of Yellow Springs, Ohio, can qualify for membership in the Roosevelt professional group. But he had other qualifications that the President may have considered in choosing him for the task of administering his pet project.

The scholarly more-than-six-footer from Ohio is rated high as a civil engineer. The President for weeks back has been turning to him for advice in determining suitable men to aid fulfillment of the Tennessee valley program.

The Tennessee valley project is in the field about which Morgan knows most. Since he started his engineering work, back in 1902 with only a high school education, he has planned and supervised construction of some 75 water control projects.

The ambitious St. Francis valley reclamation work in Arkansas and the Miami conservation project at Dayton, Ohio, are pointed to as evidence of his handwork.

In a Familiar Field In taking over the Tennessee program, he is returning to familiar territory. He was the supervising engineer in 1909-09 for federal government drainage investigations and was in charge of designing reclamation works in the southern states.

Also, he was at one time chief engineer of the Miami, Ohio, conservancy district for flood control, and later served in the same position in the Pueblo, Colorado, conservancy district.

The Browns say hello to all the Greens a dozen times a day, and the comings and goings of a neighbor are matters of some moment.

Party In The Zoo. The annual garden party given by the president and trustees of the New York Zoological Society and the woman's auxiliary, a late spring event at the Bronx zoo, had for its main attraction, as usual, the most recent arrivals in this animal kingdom.

This year's crop of youngsters included a pair of black leopard cubs an infant—an almost microscopically infantile marmoset, a baby penguin, a white-headed hornbill and a wrinkled hornbill.

Scenically it was quite an affair, the trees so fresh and green and bushes full of blossoms and a distinguished list of guests around the tables in the open—against the background of animal houses and stockades. There was the usual bedlam set up by the birds in the cages and the birds on the outside making such a twitter about having the freedom of the trees.

She appealed to superior court and is held here in default of bond.

Advertisement for Kelvinator refrigerators. Text includes: "YOU SAY you are going to 'wait awhile'? WE SAY 'Read the following statement!' ALTHOUGH more Kelvinators were purchased in April than in any previous month in our history, and although May far exceeded even this all-time record, there must still be many women who want a Kelvinator—but who have thought 'they would wait awhile.' That is perfectly all right. And we do not wish to be accused of forcing an issue. But, on the other hand, we do want to present the following basic facts. Then, you make your own decision. Trend Is Upward—Commodity prices are advancing. Copper, zinc, lead, tin, rubber and other materials used in a Kelvinator, have increased from 22 to 63% since Kelvinator announced the present low prices. Washington says that all wages must be raised. Buying power must be restored. This can only mean a general rise in commodity prices. The Industrial Emergency Bill gives the President power to carry out this program. And already, the President has the authority to raise prices by the inflation of our currency. It is doubtful if this generation will ever again see prices as low as they are to-day. Prices Too Low—Electric refrigeration prices are too low. This is particularly true of Kelvinator—because Kelvinator prices apply to standard, full-quality 1933 Kelvinator merchandise. Kelvinator did not bring out "cheap" models—built down to a low price. The R-42 which now sells for $97 installed, plus freight, is full-sized, full-powered, full-value—a standard 1933 model. And it's the same throughout the entire line. Kelvinator's Position—Although we announced our prices would be increased when material costs went up, so far we have not had to do so. But, even the rigid economies effected in manufacturing would not have prevented an increase if it had not been for the tremendous volume of business during the past two months. In April more than 30,000 Kelvinators were shipped—the largest month's business in Kelvinator's 19 years in the industry. And May has established another new all-time record for Kelvinator shipments far surpassing that of the previous month. Prices have not been raised—so far... Receipts from the shipments were also expected to slightly ease the stringent financial situation which has prevailed in the Bethel area, like all other parts of the country, during the last several year. HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood—Leslie Howard is giving up a fortune in contract offers in order to go to England for a picture and a play.

Any embarrassment he might feel at turning down bids from leading feminine stars who want him for their films is concealed as he finishes his starring role in the film version of "Berkeley Square."

The English star explains politely that he is engaged to do a film in London for Gilbert-Milled, the stage producer who came to his aid in presenting "Berkeley Square" on the stage, that he owes a special debt of gratitude to Miller and would not think of falling him.

Up, Up—And Still 'No'
The bidding studios meet this explanation with offers of larger salaries, larger even than he asks—and Howard is a business man as well as an actor. But he is still going to London, to be away six months or more.

The latest job he refused was the lead opposite Garbo in "Queen Christina." Even if he had no agreement with Miller, it may be that a star of Howard's astuteness would not care to appear in a film which, if precedent is followed, will be "thrown" entirely to another star.

Howard has built his career on business as well as artistic principles, and business sense would dictate the keeping of a weather eye on his future regardless of present monetary inducements.

A Little Psychology
"Berkeley Square" is only one of three pictures currently filming that are challenging the screen's old bugaboo regarding "psychological drama." It presents the difficult task of projecting a modern man's thoughts and personality into a past era, forming a combination of comedy, romance and fantasy—the latter a word at which producers traditionally shudder.

Another is "Night Flight," requiring the director, Clarence Brown to convey the thought that the lives of four different characters are really one composite life. The task is as ticklish as it sounds.

A third is "The Power and the Glory" unique in that it begins with the hero's death and proceeds, through a series of highlights, to relate a life story ending with his birth.

ENDORSE PLANS FOR BANK REORGANIZING

Sanford, June 1.—Approximately 25 business and professional men of Sanford, depositors of the Page Trust Company, met at the Wilrick Hotel Tuesday evening to discuss the proposed plan for liquidating the affairs of the Page Trust Company and the organization of a new bank.

J. C. Pittman and T. S. Cross, who were selected at a former meeting to attend a meeting of depositors held in Raleigh on Monday, reported that they had ascertained that the proposed stock subscription of $300,000 for the new bank, to be made by the Page Trust Company, would be held in trust for the benefit of the present depositors until they had been paid in full. This phase of the organization plan had not been understood clearly heretofore. With this point definitely settled these present voted unanimously to endorse the plan recently submitted to the depositors.

June Heavens to Show Mars Victorious In Race With Jupiter

By ROBERT H. BAKER

Urbana, Ill.—(AP)—The planets Mars and Jupiter have been tacking back and forth for several months through the constellation Leo. Now they are set on their courses straight ahead toward the east again.

Mars is easily the speedier of the two. It will overtake Jupiter on June 4 and soon leave it far behind.

At the closest approach the space in the sky between these two bright planets will be half the width of the full moon. The event is scheduled for 5 p. m. (EST) June 4. By nightfall they will be a little farther apart, but still close enough to provide an interesting sight in the western sky.

The two planets are located nearly a third of the way from Regulus in the handle of the sickle of Leo toward the bright star Spica in Virgo. The line joining these stars is almost exactly the sun's path among the stars near the beginning of autumn. The autumnal equinox, where the sun stands when it crosses the equator on Sept. 23, is nearly two-third of the way from Regulus to Spica.

Many people have watched Mars and Jupiter in the evening skies of the past winter and spring. At first these planets were in the east. They were shifting eastward, too, among the stars; and Mars had nearly caught up with Jupiter, the brighter of the two.

In January both planets turned and began moving toward the west. By the middle of April Mars had retreated almost as far as Regulus. Then it turned toward the east again and resumed the pursuit of Jupiter which will end on June 4.

Venus makes its appearance low in the northwest in the early evenings of June. It crossed behind the sun on April 21 into the evening sky. Early in June it sets an hour after sunset. Venus will be the evening star for the remainder of the year.

The sun, now nearing the most northern point of its path among the stars, will be farthest north on June 21 at 4:12 p. m. (EST). Then summer begins.

League Team Prepares For Extra Games Here

The Greenville baseball club of the Coastal Plain league was gradually rounding into form today with indications it would be a smoothly working organization by the opening date of the circuit June 7.

Manager Milton Harrington today was arranging for a series of games to be played between now and the league opening and also for other extra contests to intersperse the regular schedule.

Monday, June 5, the strong Grimesland club will come here to display its strength against the locals, and if past records of the club are to be taken into consideration they are going to give the leaguers something to do.

Monday, June 12, Weldon will appear here for a single exhibition. Thursday, June 15, the local club will play a return game in Grimesland.

Harrington today was making an effort for an exhibition game here tomorrow and announcement to this effect was to be made sometime today.

No new players have reported for service since the two day before yesterday but Bob Long, of Farmville, outfielder, was expected to join the outfit sometime today.

Long is not only considered a fast fielder, but is a power with the bat and is expected to be instrumental in shoving many a run over the rubber here this season.

Practice is being held at Third Street athletic field each afternoon at 3:30 and crowds of interested spectators have been on hand each day to see what the Greenville team is going to resemble when the season swings into action.

Harrington said today he was highly pleased with the daily workouts and expected to be able to put a formidable machine on the field when the league is formally thrown open.

Baseball Cards Must Be Stacked Against Bridges

Tom Bridges of Detroit has seen his dream of a no-hit, no run game go winging on a single safety, once after two were out in the ninth.

Three times in less than a year Tom Bridges of Detroit has seen his dream of a no-hit, no run game go winging on a single safety, once after two were out in the ninth.

Detroit—(AP)—If Tom Bridges, Detroit's sturdy pitching ace, hurls just one more one-hit game there will be no further doubt that the baseball cards are stacked against him.

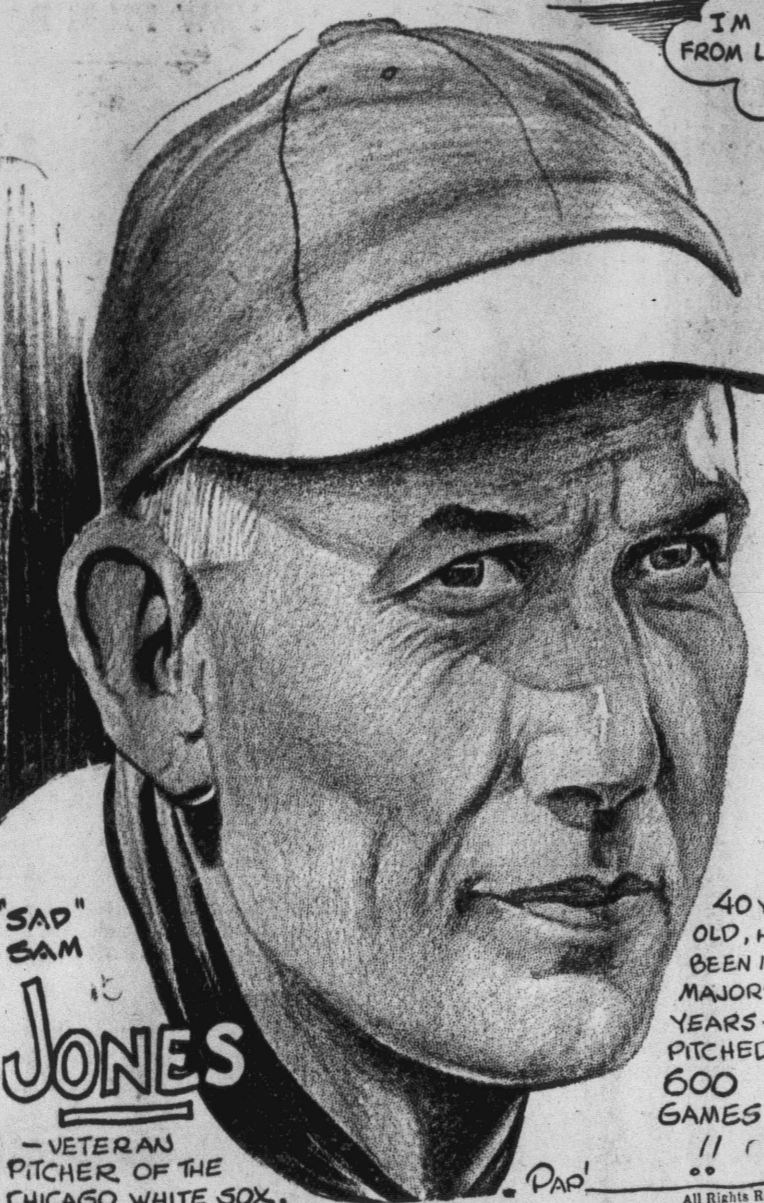

Three times since late last season Tom has stood on the threshold of diamond immortality, only to have the door slammed in his face. It's enough to discourage anybody, but Tom still is determined to achieve that "no-hitter."

The Tiger star's run of misfortune began in a game last season against Washington, when he pitched eight hits for eight and two, thirds innings, only to have Dave Harris, a pinch-hitter pound out a single.

It continued to hound him early this year, when Sam West of the St. Louis Browns singled in the eighth round to spoil an otherwise perfect performance.

Again the other day Bridges sailed along for seven chapters without allowing Washington anything resembling a safety. Only one man had reached first base.

But in the fateful eighth Joe Kuhel, Senators' first baseman, slammed a home run over the right field fence. That was Washington's only hit but it added another grey hair to Bridges' collection.

New York, June 1—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady six to eleven points decline in response to lower Liverpool and under liquidation.

After selling of 9.10 for July and 9.51 for December, or about 10 to 12 points net lower, cotton steadied.

By the end of the first half hour July was selling around 9.18 and December 9.58. Selling became a little more active after publication of the weekly weather report which interpreted as indicating favorable crop progress over the greater part of the belt.

Prices sagged to 9.05 for July and 9.47 for December, making a net decline of 13 to 15 points.

At midday July was selling around 9.12 and active months showed rallies of some 7 to 8 points from the lowest.

Stock Market

New York, June 1—(AP)—The financial market stepped into new month with a generally firm trend today although scattered profit taking troubled the tone and tended to impend progress in some sections.

Almost all equity groups followed a narrow range but the metals responded to copper revival with advances of around three points.

Among the best of these were Anaconda P. & Smelting, Calumet and Hecla, Kennecott, Cerro de Pasco, and American Metals. Oils were steady and firm.

Gains of fractions to a point or so were recorded by Standard of N. J. and California.

So-called wet stocks up on to two included National Distillers, Owens Illinois, and Industrial Alcohol.

Farm shares were steady except which jumped four points.

American Telephone, American Can, DuPont and Allied Chemical gained about a point each.

Strength was impaired to the list in the late dealing by renewed demand for rails.

The turnover was 4,300,000 shares.

MAKES DARING ESCAPE FROM WAYNE BASTILE

Goldboro June 1—Robert Peterson, Goldboro white youth who escaped from Wayne jail late Friday afternoon, was recaptured at the railway station in Faison Tuesday night by Faison police and was returned to Goldboro.

Young Peterson was being held for superior court to pass on a suspended roads sentence, terms of which he had violated. Jailer Price had let the prisoners out of the cells to take shower baths. When they went back, Peterson, instead of entering the cell climbed on top of it. When Mr. Price told him to get down, he jumped to the floor, dashed for the stairs, and down to the ground floor, and out of the building. Peterson has a long court record for one of his age. He has been given several suspended sentences, but judges have hesitated to send him to the roads because of his age.

A MOTOR FUEL THAT Guarantees SMOOTHER PERFORMANCE

TOMORROW you will have a chance to test for yourself a new motor fuel development perfected and endorsed by the world's largest oil organization. No doubt you are tired of the "Super" claims that are making gasoline advertising so hard to believe. Exaggerated descriptions of quick-starting, anti-knock, power, pick-up, economy. The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey makes no claims for Essolene. We merely state that we have spent millions to make a better fuel at regular price than has yet been made for the modern motor. We stand squarely back of Essolene as such a fuel. We make this statement with full knowledge of our responsibility to the public, as the leader in the oil industry. Try Essolene tomorrow. It will speak for itself—and you can furnish your own superlatives. Essolene will be sold at all Esso Stations at regular gasoline price and is Colored Orange to Prevent Substitution
