DENIES MORGAN SOLD STOCK TO BRITISH ROYALTY

Refuses To Give British Position On 'Debt' Policy

CHANCELLOR AWAITS MOVE BY AMERICA

Chancellor of the Exchequer Declines to Divulge Negotiations With United States; Says Washington is Already in Possession of British Attitude on the Debt Question

London, June 2.—(AP)—Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain during debate today in the House of Commons on foreign affairs again refused to disclose Great Britain's war debt policy but intimated the government is awaiting some new move from Washington. Chamberlain said he feared that any word of mine, however innocuous in its intention might be subject to misunderstanding on the other side of the water.

He added he was not prepared to "take any risk of saying anything which might, however inadvertently, prejudice a satisfactory solution on a very delicate question."

The chancellor asserted the United States government was in full possession of the British viewpoint on the subject.

Chamberlain declined yesterday to reveal the British government's viewpoint in regard to the $75,000,000 debt installment due America on June 15.

CITY FATHERS TALK BUDGET

City Remains Within Budget Figures This Year in Spite of Emergency Demands

Regardless of what other towns may have done in the matter of handling finances during the present year the City of Greenville has lived within her budget.

This fact was revealed at the monthly meeting of the Board of Aldermen at the city hall last night. The session was devoted largely to consideration of the budget, paying bills and receiving reports of the various departments of government but solemn remained on the job for quite awhile before their work was completed.

Mayor Flanagan, after opening a round table discussion with the various members of the board, congratulated them upon the fine way they had responded to his constant plea for economy. He revealed the fact that every department had spent frugally and lived within the limit of the amount set for it to spend at the beginning of the new fiscal year. The budget provided for $56,000.

It was revealed that tax collections had not come up to budget figures, but it was explained that if a pick-up was shown in tax payments this month the year would come to an end with the budget balanced.

The city has remained within the confines of the budget figures in spite of the fact that $2,500 was spent for emergency purposes during the year. This sum was paid out to meet the constant demands made upon the government for various emergency causes, and the aldermen felt like patting one another on the back after finding they had stayed within the budget after paying out the amount not provided for at the beginning of the year.

With the new fiscal year beginning soon, the aldermen turned their attention to discussion of some of the things they desired to accomplish. No definite action was taken. (Continued on page Three)

OFFERS NEW SUBSTITUTE FOR TAXATION

Chairman Harrison Shows Government Way to Finance Public Work Plan

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—A complete substitute for the House plan of taxation to finance the $3,300,000,000 public works section of the industrial recovery bill was laid before the Senate finance committee today by Chairman Harrison.

Under its provisions the existing law is strengthened against private bankers and partnerships.

Explaining it was his individual plan, Harrison told newspapermen before going into executive session that the substitute would raise $237,000,000 and provided:

A tax on corporate dividends withheld at the source, $70,000,000. Re-enactment of the one-tenth of one per cent of the capital stock tax, $80,000,000.

Removal of the private bank exemption from the capital loss deduction provision of last year's revenue act and denying the individual right to take upon personal returns the distributive share of any partnership loss, $15,000,000.

Increase of one per cent in the gasoline tax $62,000,000. The Harrison program eliminates the House income tax increase, reduces the House gas increase by one quarter of a cent and changes the corporate dividend tax so it would be collected at the source and thereby save additional administrative expense.

The committee chairman said the public works bond issue requires only an annual revenue of $220,000,000 for interest and sinking fund by his program and therefore provides the necessary revenue and allows for a margin of safety $7,000,000.

HAWKS FLIES TO NEW YORK

Noted Flier Making Test Flight From Los Angeles With Robot Control

Los Angeles, June 2.—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander Frank Hawks, flying a robot-controlled, 14-cylinder airplane, took off from municipal airport at 5:15 a. m. today on a non-stop flight to the Floyd Bennett airport at Brooklyn, N. Y.

He planned to test the automatic pilot and was necessarily seeking a speed record.

Revival 'Wall Street Issue' Seen In Senate Hearing

By BYRON PRICE
It is far too early to forecast all of the results of the senate banking and investment hearings, but several points seem clear enough: The income tax law, already in process of temporary patching as a reflex of the Morgan disclosures is likely to be overhauled thoroughly at the next session of congress to impose heavier levies on the wealthy. Still more banking legislation, supplementing the Glass-Steagall bill, may be looked for after the senate investigation is concluded.

BOARD DEFERS SCHOOL PLANS

Baseball Club Given Permission to Use School Grounds This Summer

G. V. Smith appeared before the Board of Trustees of City schools last night and asked permission for the local club of the Coastal Plain league to use the new Third Street Athletic field for its games during the summer months, and also for concession rights during the season.

The board granted the request. The board met principally for the purpose of determining whether Greenville would seek an extended school term for next season or operate on the regular eight months' schedule.

No action was taken because the board was not in possession of sufficient information regarding the operation of the new law to take immediate action.

Another meeting, however, will be held in the next several days and it was expected some definite decision will be reached at that time.

MRS. HASSELL TAKES OATH

First Woman Member of Board of Aldermen Inducted at Noon Hour

Mrs. Blanch Hassell, the first woman ever to become a member of the Board of Aldermen in this city was formally sworn in as alderman from the Second Ward by Mayor R. C. Flanagan today at the noon hour.

She succeeds her late husband, J. L. Hassell who had been connected with the board from time to time for many years and who one time served as mayor-pro-tem.

The induction ceremony took place at Mrs. Hassell's home on Pitt street and was witnessed by her daughter, Miss Margaret Hassell, and Chief of Police George Clark.

The ceremony was brief consisting mainly of administering the oath by the mayor. This was followed by congratulations on her becoming the first woman ever to occupy such an important public post here.

Mrs. Hassell pledged her best interest in behalf of the city administration and declared she would support the economy movement inaugurated by the board several years ago and which has been emphasized repeatedly by the present administration.

Mrs. Hassell was named by the board to fill the unexpired term of her late husband.

NEW FEATURE FOR COLLEGE FINALS HERE

Academic Procession Will be Used For the First Time by Teachers

The Academic Procession will be used at East Carolina Teachers College commencement this year for the first time. The faculty will appear in full regalia, wearing the caps and gowns that indicate their degrees.

The colors in the hoods that hang down the back indicate the universities and colleges from which the degrees were received. The band around the hoods indicates the field of scholarship in which the wearer has specialized.

For Sunday the procession will form in the Campus building and will be seen only in the auditorium. On Monday the procession will form at the Austin building, and the line of march will be in front of the dormitories and by the fountain to the Campus building.

The order of the procession will be as follows: President Wright and the speakers; Doctors of Philosophy; Masters of Art and Masters of Science; Bachelors of Art and Bachelors of Science; Candidates for Bachelor of Arts; Candidates for Normal School diplomas.

The faculty will occupy the seats in the front rows of the side tiers, and the graduates who in the middle tier. The undergraduates will march in before the procession does.

There will be no other reserved seats on Sunday. On Monday seats will be reserved for the parents of graduates, and cards will admit these to seats within the ribbons. Those wishing good seats on Monday should secure them before the students march in.

Everything about the regalia has some special significance or meaning. The gowns of the Doctors have full bishop sleeves with stripes of velvet across them, and the caps have tassels. The gowns of the Masters are worn open in front and have sleeves that hang down with slits for the arms to pass through. Those of the Bachelors are worn closed and have sleeves hanging loose. The candidates for degrees wear plain black gowns without hoods, and the candidates for normal school diplomas wear blue gowns, school diplomas wear blue gowns. The colors of the band around the hoods are, white for liberal or the general subject known as the humanities, yellow for science the green for medicine and red for theology, of course will not be represented in Teachers College line of march.

The black tassel on the cap is permissible for all subjects, but whenever color is used, it indicates the specific subject, as white for English, blue for Education, pink for music, yellow for science, and other colors for other subjects.

PLANS STRING LIFE LINES IN AUSTRALIAN COAST TEST

Melbourne.—(AP)—A new method of communication with wrecked ships has been tried by the Royal Australian Air Force. It is intended for use on the long stretches of the Australian coast far from any life-saving station.

A barge representing a wreck was moored about a mile from shore. An airplane flew out to the "wreck" and dropped the weighted end of a line aboard, and then circled back to the beach paying out the line as it went. Stens are now being taken to design breeches buoy gear which can be carried by the plane.

The new method enables communication to be established over a much longer distance than by rocket or life-line-guns.

GEO. WHITNEY REFUTES NEW IMPLICATIONS

Investigators Told That Firm Did Not Sell Bargain Prices To French Politicians as Suggested by Sen. Reynolds; Whitney Declares he Never Heard the Suggestion Before Washington, June 2.—(AP)—A suggestion that some of the bargain price stocks offered to clients by J. P. Morgan and Company went to British royalty and French politicians drew denials from George Whitney, partner in the firm, today before the Senate investigation.

Senator Reynolds, Democrat of North Carolina, asked about disposition of bargain price stocks allotted to Morgan and Company's London and Paris offices.

"Have you heard that the allotment to the London offices was distributed to members of royalty?" "I never heard the suggestion before," Whitney replied.

Questioned further Whitney said he had not heard that some of the stocks went to King Albert of Belgium.

Whitney turned now and again to confer with Leonard Keyes, the Morgan office manager, who sat near where Morgan was smoking a cigar, an attentive listener.

John Davis, white-haired Morgan counsel, sat smiling back of Whitney. At one point Whitney told the committee that bargain price stocks sold to John Kephart, Pennsylvania Supreme Court justice, was paid for by his wife.

BIG BILLS TO GET PASSAGE

Quick Enactment of Measures Now in Conference Predicted in Congress

Washington, June 2.—(AP)—Just eight days remaining until the originally set congressional adjournment date, a pile of legislation was wedged in conference and committees today but quick enactment was cited for several big bills, the Glass bank reform act leading them.

This bill, its redrafting of the present banking practice, becomes of increasing significance in the light of the Morgan investigation, was followed by quick agreement in the Senate and House conference after President Roosevelt himself had taken a part in getting the disagreement adjusted.

Senator Glass of Virginia, its author, after a White House round table session, predicted the final compromise would be obtained today. One more bill entered the final passage. The Wagner measure to reorganize the federal employment system to make it more helpful to the states was passed by the House yesterday and sent back to the Senate for action on several minor changes.

The representatives quickly turned to the railroad re-organization bill, also already passed by the Senate, taking it up under a plan of procedure which indicated passage sometime tomorrow.

Many amendments were made to it in committee.

Also advancing was the industrial recovery act in which the Senate finance committee plans to make changes on the tax rate by the House and probably incorporate a new briefly phrased amendment to permit the President to take hold of the oil industry and allocate its (Continued on page Three)

'Weeding Out' Process Gets In Full Swing On Local League Ball Club

The weeding out process was started on the Greenville entry in the Coastal Plain league yesterday and promised to gain momentum this afternoon with release of players who have not been able to make the grade.

Stanley, pitcher and outfielder from Florida, was given his release yesterday and some of the eighteen or nineteen men who have been going through workouts here since last Monday were expected to receive their walking papers this afternoon.

Two new players appeared on the scene yesterday. They were Rainey of Erwin, and Weaver of Weldon. Rainey is an outfielder and Weaver is an infielder or general utility man. They have been playing semi-pro ball for the last few years and were expected to make a determined bid for berths on the local club.

Manager Milton Harrington said today that the following players were showing excellent form and were making a strong race for various positions: Poole, Miller, Bostic, Forbes, Taylor, Kitchin, Lang, Brown, Hicks and Rogers.

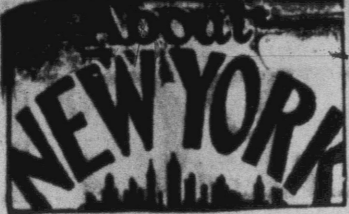

Forbes and Taylor are pitchers of local fame but there are one or two others expected to receive considerable attention when play actually gets under way.

Harrington made every effort to arrange for an exhibition game today but found that every team in this immediate part of the state had games during the afternoon. However, he has a game scheduled here Monday with Grimesland and two other extra games to be played between scheduled league contests. Other exhibitions will be arranged during the season to keep the club in full trim for the three games a week schedule arranged for the circuit.

Workouts have been staged at Third Street school grounds each afternoon this week and the players are gradually rounding into form. They were expected to be in excellent trim when they meet the strong Grimesland club Monday afternoon.

Harrington said he was satisfied his club would be in position to make a determined bid for honors when the league formally opens next Wednesday afternoon, and urged fans to turn out in large numbers to give the boys a good send-off on a schedule that will carry them through the summer months.

NEW YORK

By WILLIAM GAINES
New York—(AP)—The personal items in the classified sections of metropolitan dailies are a constant source of interest, amusement and sometimes mystery.

With the alleged intellectual it's a favorite indoor diversion, reading these columns. And some fairly entertaining short stories and a couple of novels have been inspired by some freakish suggestion such as—"BROTHER—come home. Alex has buried the ax."

Recently a swanky East River hostess gave a party at which the principal game was piecing out fiction stories from personal advertisements collected from all the New York papers.

It's too bad that this particular ad came along too late for the paper. One of our leading morning papers printed it in a Sunday edition:

"ROSEBUD—How does new tooth fit?—Herman."

Of course, the business of such a vast city as New York must require that its officials get about a great deal; so don't suspect that this memo is entered with any form of criticism.

All I wanted to say is that it's still difficult to catch some one in some of the offices of the city government who knows anything about the affairs of those offices. If one phones or visits in the morning it's apt to be too early; in the afternoon, everybody in authority has gone. But you know how those things are.

The Rockefeller have been so much concerned with the complications of the Diego Rivera murals that the sad plight of another Rockefeller center plant job must have escaped their notice.

You may remember that the elevated railway structure in front of the Rockefeller center theatres was considered an eyesore, and so a coat of aluminum paint was applied to the steel. It all looked very fancy when the theatres were opened—that stretch of a couple of blocks of "L" trackage.

But already the dirt, soot and hard usage of the big city have had their telling effect. The "L" no longer is resplendent in shining silver; it is the splattered gray of warships just out of battle, displeasing to the eye and unbecoming to the general environment of highfashion modernistic architecture.

Maybe Diego could do something about it.

Casualty stragglers inquire: "Why don't the big Fifth avenue business houses set up electric signs like those on Broadway?" Well the obvious answer should be that sedate Fifth avenue doesn't want any such bizarre displays. But—if you want the detailed dope—there's a so-called "sign-law" which absolutely forbids Broadwayish electric displays on the world's most hoity-toity avenue.

NEW PRUSSIAN SECRET POLICE GUARD AGAINST ANTI-NAZIS

Berlin—(AP)—Hermann Goering Prussian premier and right hand man of Adolf Hitler, has started a secret police system in the big state which embraces two-thirds of Germany.

In a brief communique to the public he explained that the new department would busy itself with discovering and combatting all plots regarded as dangerous to the state.

Other sections of the Reich are expected to follow the Prussian example.

Goering's announcement came in the midst of the sweeping "Reichschaltung" or "equalization" wave. This government fostered movement was designed to bring into line with the centralized leadership idea of the Nazis, every phase of German life. It affected business, art, agriculture, education, the church, labor and sports. Particularly it left no government department unaffected.

One of the main factors of the secret police force is that Hermann Goering has complete control over it. Its officers report to him directly.

The Berlin headquarters also has been made the center of supervision of the press, mails and telephone, the secrecy of the latter two having been rescinded in February. Strict orders have been issued that the officers of the secret service are to be recruited only from "absolutely trustworthy" national ranks. Special emphasis is laid on the fact that the secret agents possess full police powers.

Under the new law, subdivisions of the Berlin headquarters will be established in every administrative district of Prussia. Secret agents, combing the country, dispatch their reports speedily, either to their district offices, according to the importance of their observations.

MUSIC THRIVES IN RURAL COMMUNITIES OF CAROLINA

Guilford College, N. C.—(AP)—Rural school children, 4,000 strong, sang together in one big chorus here at a county-wide music festival.

Directed by Max Noah, head of the music department of Guilford college, the festival was the result of two years preparation in 17 schools of the county. Professor Noah, assisted by Miss Gail Weber, visited the schools and laid the foundation for the work, which teachers carried on.

The chorus of 4,000 voices was accompanied part of the time by three pianos and at other times by the Greensboro high school band. The students were from high schools and grammar grades.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

The reputed high cost of maintaining an intercollegiate rowing establishment at our leading Eastern schools led to the cancellation of the Poughkeepsie championship regatta this year. At the same time a lesson in economy in this time-honored sport has been furnished by the University of California at Los Angeles, which took up rowing for the first time this spring.

Major Goodsell, the Australian coach and sculler, installed crew as a varsity sport at U. C. A. A. at a maximum cost of less than $5,000 for the season. Points out Mr. Paul Zimmerman, this is remarkable considering that the Bruins were in possession of no equipment when they started last fall, and that they must travel thirty miles to a course.

The former world's professional single sculls champion of Australia obtained gifts of shells from Washington, California and a boat builder on the Pacific Coast. The oars also were presented to the school. A Los Angeles harbor company constructed a boat house for the oarsmen without cost.

Two second hand automobiles, seven passenger size, were purchased. Gasoline was presented by an oil company. The Bruins had one race and that was the triangular test over the Long Beach Olympic Marine course with Washington and California. Expenses for the regatta, including the underwriting of the trip costs of the invited schools, were covered by the gate receipts.

Goodsell's Ambition
To increase interest in rowing in California has been an ambition of Goodsell, now an American citizen, for years. He has discussed plans with Stanford to return to coast rowing. The University of Southern California has been an attentive listener and appears to be in the notion of dipping its oar into the sport. Goodsell persuaded Long Beach Junior college to take it up and the school was ready to launch its crews when the earthquake came, disrupting athletic programs.

It was through Goodsell's efforts that the national regatta between eastern and western university eights was arranged for July 8 over the Olympic site.

Not Underestimating French
Although it is no secret, American tennis leaders feel this is the year to regain the Davis Cup from France, if it is to be brought back at all by the current generation of participants, they are under no delusion as to the ability of the French to make another heroic stand.

"We would only be kidding ourselves if we under-estimated what Cochet and Borotra can do in the Challenge Round," said one official recently. "We all realize that the French point exclusively for this event and that the undoubtedly will be at their best against us, granting we have no serious trouble reaching the final round."

The courts, the circumstances and the emotional elements all favor the defenders. No one who has not been at Roland Garros can quite understand the atmosphere of intense partnership there much as we may be accustomed to partially in American sporting crowds. Sometimes it has strange effects upon players and officials alike.

The Seventh grade of Greenville schools defeated the Snow Hill Seventh graders here yesterday afternoon by the score of 13 to 3.

The locals previously had been defeated by Snow Hill and the victory was received enthusiastically by the youngsters here.

Games are being arranged with Robersonville in the near future, it was said today by J. H. Rose, superintendent of City Schools who has inaugurated the baseball plan in the hope of giving the youths some diversion during the summer months and keeping them off the streets.

Wesley Philathea Class Meets

The Wesley Philathea Class of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Sudie Corey on Second street. Mesdames W. S. Smith and W. L. Brewer were assisting hostesses.

Mrs. K. T. Futrell led the devotions and gave a most inspiring message. After the calling of the roll and reading of the minutes by Miss Lill Wilson, an article taken from the North Carolina Christian Advocate was given by Mrs. Milton White. She closed this interesting talk by saying: "When we church people begin to find more time and energy for the doing of these things that are not for the glory of God than they have for the carrying on of the work of the kingdom, just then the church begins to lose its power and the high position of influence which it deserves." She also said the most eloquent sermons for righteous are not always those uttered from the pulpit, but those expressed by the lives of Christian men and women. She made a strong plea for us to put first things first, thus letting God have the right of way in our lives.

The class then enjoyed a social hour. Mrs. Wiley Brown gave several humorous readings after which the hostesses served fruit punch and wafers.—Reported.

REVIVAL WALL STREET ISSUES SEEN IN SENATE HEARING

A First Act. It should be remembered that what has taken place thus far in the hearing is only a curtain-raiser. In those first four days of inquiry into the Morgan operations not one question was asked which indicated that either prosecutor or committee member was charging any violation of the law.

The officials of several other Wall street firms remain to be questioned. Prosecutor Pecora is too clever a strategist to throw his whole strength into the opening skirmish and let the proceedings thereafter suffer from anti-climax.

It is the inescapable conclusion that the committee investigators have some highly surprising information still in reserve.

Whatever the collateral effects may be with regard to such matters as taxes and general banking, the strongest implication of the testimony is in the direction of further securities and stock market regulation.

It was that phase of the situation that the committee set out originally to investigate. It is to that subject principally that the committee report, still months away, will be obliged to address itself.

Already, in the case of the Morgan-controlled United Corporation, with its vast utilities stock holdings, the committee has found food for thought.

Fitting: The Paris Together. How does all this fit in with the Roosevelt policies? The question cannot yet be fully answered, but should not be forgotten that the senate inquiry was revived this session with the express approval of the President.

And incidentally it is worth noticing that the administration's gold clause repeal proposal was preceded by just a matter of hours by new senate disclosures about the mammoth concentration of wealth in the financial district of New York. Accident or not, the one was a powerful popular springboard for the other.

BIG BILLS GET PASSAGE

But the Senate itself was not ready being still deep in the question of veterans' appropriations. The bill carrying fees was to have been passed the first of the week but oratory, amendments, and action on recommendations have left it unsettled.

Waiting for passage also are the gold clause cancellation and the $2,000,000,000 plan for refinancing home mortgages.

CURB THE THRILL SEEKERS

This deliberate reckless automobile driving in our city by the young folks apparently seeking a thrill resulted in a real thrill for some of them last night when their car turned over a couple of times just a block from the heart of the business session. Fortunately no one was seriously injured but the escape was apparently providential.

Since the approach of warm weather and the close of the city schools the young folks have been able to borrow the family automobiles, and most any night in the various sections of the city these cars can be found racing each other or cutting corners, the crowd of young folks in one car endeavoring to lose the car behind. According to reports of last night's accident, this was the result of just another one of these affairs, two cars having chased each other around the same block several times before one of them failed to take the corner at high speed and was sideswiped by an approaching car. We would not try to take one bit of the fun from the young folks just so long as they can enjoy themselves without becoming a menace to themselves and others, but an automobile is a most dangerous thing in the hands of irresponsible young folks out seeking a thrill and we urge parents to put a stop to this danger before it is too late to save someone's life.

WHAT ABOUT OUR SCHOOLS

Some of the cities of the state have already taken definite action as to elections for supplementing the state operated schools for the next term in the way of teachers' salaries, selected courses or extended terms, but so far Greenville is numbered among those places that have taken no action. It is a matter, no doubt, in which the school board hesitates to take action lest it come in for criticism by those who would term such action as in behalf of the school officials and teachers or vice versa. This is a matter in which the public should be concerned but like ourselves, they probably know little or nothing about what we have in store for us in the way of schools on the present state basis. We are aware that we are to have an eight months school term operated by the state but beyond this we know nothing. We are unaware as to the standard

By the World FORGOT

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: Nicholas Boyd, the famous film star, has played the hero once too often, and been rewarded with a hopelessly scarred face, a limp, and cancellation of his contract. Now, deserted by his native wife (he has sailed for his native England, anxious only to be alone. But Georgie Bancroft, introduced, brings him a gift of roses which he rudely flings away. And now, on deck, she watches Boyd, and finally sees an opportunity. His book has fallen to the deck.

Chapter Five SECOND ATTEMPT

Georgie made a quick dive across to Nicholas, snatched up the book, and then had to clutch at the head of Boyd's chair to save herself from an ignominious fall.

"Oh!" she said with a gasp. Nicholas pushed back his hat and opened his eyes.

"You're very kind," he was looking at her without interest, and after a moment he held out his hand for the book.

"Thank you." She gave it to him reluctantly. "Is it a nice book?" she asked. "I haven't read it."

There was a great fat coil of rope close by, and Georgie sat down on it, elbows on her knees, chin in her hands.

"It's very rough," she volunteered. "Is it?"

"Um." She nodded, her bright eyes on his face. "Nearly everyone's sick." He raised himself a little, shifting to an easier position. "Except you, apparently," he said.

"Yes, except you and me," she agreed. "I'm a good sailor. Nothing ever upsets me."

The faintest smile crossed his eyes. "Or discourages you," he added quietly.

"What do you mean by that?" she asked very directly. "If you mean that you wish I would go away, I think it's a pity. It's not good for you to be alone all day with nobody to talk to. "I like being alone, and I don't want anyone to talk to."

"I do," she said. "Well," he laughed, without much mirth. "I believe there are several hundred people on this ship, and they can't all be sick."

"I don't think any of them want to talk to me," Georgie said. "I tried one or two but it wasn't easy. Nelly's not so bad, but she's sick too."

"Is Nelly your sister?" "No—she shares the cabin with me. I didn't know anything about her when we started, but now I think I know as much about her as she knows about herself. She loves talking."

"You don't seem to object to it." Georgie went on rapidly. "I know you hate it because I'm here, but you wouldn't dislike me so much if you knew me better. I wrote to you once, months ago, and asked for your autograph. I don't suppose you remember my name." "What is your name?" "Georgie Bancroft."

"How old are you?" he asked brusquely. She told him at once. "I'm twenty one. Nelly is twenty-two, but she must feel years older than I do because she says she hasn't a single illusion left."

"And you, apparently, are still full of them," he said. "That all depends what you mean," she answered gravely. "I still believe in love and happy endings."

"You must be a good deal less than twenty-one," he said grimly. "I'm not," she assured him. "I was twenty-one a month ago, the day I sailed for New York. My mother lives in New York with her second husband. I don't live with them because he doesn't like me. I live with an uncle in England, and I think it's all for the best," she added quaintly.

"And does your mother think so too?" "Yes, she seems to. She's got a well apartment." "And so your mother is well off, is she?"

Georgie nodded. "Her husband is."

"But he doesn't like you." "No; not that I've ever done him any harm, but I suppose there are some people who don't like children at all."

"I should hardly call you a child." "Wouldn't you? I think I am, in some ways," she said naively. "Nobody has ever kissed me, for instance."

"You mean no man?" She nodded gravely. "Nelly says that it's the only way to find out whether you love a man or not—letting him kiss you. I mean."

"I suppose she didn't tell you how many men it would be necessary to kiss before you found one you did like?" Nicholas asked dryly.

"No, she didn't, and anyway, I think I could find out without that."

"You'd not dislike me if you knew me."

Youth Sought

Every known haunt of 17-year-old Balfe Macdonald (above) was searched by Michigan police seeking to question him about the slaying of his mother, Mrs. Grace B. Macdonald, wealthy widow of Flint, Mich. (Associated Press Photo)

I always know my own mind. "I see." "My uncle says I ought to have been a boy, that it isn't decent for a girl to be so sure what it is she really wants, and then try so hard to get it."

"What sort of an uncle is he?" "Georgie picked her brows. "Well, he drinks, but I don't mind that. He's very kind to me in his own way, and he lets me do what I like."

"Even to running wild on American liners, and talking to any strange man who happens along?" She looked at him steadily. "You're not a strange man," she said. "I've known you for ever so long. I saw your first picture. I expect you remember it, too. It was called 'Against His Will.'"

Nicholas laughed. "Yes, I remember. It was a very bad picture." "I thought it was beautiful," Georgie said earnestly. "Do you remember quite at the end where the girl who had been in love with you for so long and you wouldn't have her, lost her home and all her money and you came along and she just looked at you and said: 'I've lost everything, and you picked her up in your arms and said: 'You've still got me.' I thought that was beautiful."

Nicholas laughed. "Yes, I remember. It was a very bad picture." "I thought it was beautiful," Georgie said earnestly. "Do you remember quite at the end where the girl who had been in love with you for so long and you wouldn't have her, lost her home and all her money and you came along and she just looked at you and said: 'I've lost everything, and you picked her up in your arms and said: 'You've still got me.' I thought that was beautiful."

"Beautiful rubbish," he answered shortly. "The absolute antithesis of what would have happened in real life."

She looked at him solemnly. "What would have happened in real life, then?" she asked.

Nicholas laughed. "Well I should have passed by on the other side of course and have pretended I didn't see her! That's how people treat you in real life, when you've lost everything."

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER
 Washington — (AP) — With the President's emergency legislative program apparently nearing fulfillment, political observers already are speculating on the regular session of the seventy-third Congress which meets next January.

It's not particularly what the regular session will accomplish in the way of legislation that seems to interest them most. Rather, it's how the Congress itself will act after a respite from the terrific course it has run since a few days from the inauguration of Mr. Roosevelt.

In the opinion of many, a very significant thing occurred "on the hill" the other day. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., governor-designate of the farm credit administration, Paul Bestor, farm loan commissioner, and another expert in this department made a trip to the capitol.

In the caucus room in the House office building they met some 100 Congressmen. Queries began to come fast on what was contained in the farm mortgage bill that Congress had passed shortly before.

The explanation was that their constituents had been bombarding them with questions which they were unable to answer.

This particular bill was passed by the House with only eight hours debate. It is illustrative of how much of the legislation passed in and red, the national colors.

this special session has been handled.

Members of Congress, especially the House, will be going home soon to face these constituents. Where one will sit down and write a letter to Washington, there are probably 10 back home waiting with a question.

And unless all signs fail, these members will do some very serious thinking. When they come back in January, it may that they'll have an entirely different slant on things.

That regular session, too, will perhaps have more meaning to the average congressman than the present one. There are no elections to be held this summer. There will be following the January session. And that vast throng of new members in the House, serving their first terms, will be on the lookout.

All of which suggests that President Roosevelt and the leaders of the House probably will not have as easy going then as they are having now.

The real test of the leadership of Speaker Rainey and Floor Leader Byrns will come. They will have a big Democratic majority, but the chances are they won't be able to manage that majority as smoothly as they are now doing.

Hendenburg Gets New Flag

Berlin — (AP) — The Nazi government has bestowed upon President von Hindenburg a new presidential standard, in which the familiar black eagle on the golden field has been edged with black, white and red, the national colors.

This is a picture of the new Sinclair Service Station on the corner of Fifth and Greene Streets which will be thrown open to the public tomorrow. It will be known as Ficklen Service Station. Holmes Ficklen is the manager. The station is one of the finest in the city and is among several erected by Sinclair in Pitt County.

New Sinclair Station Will Open Tomorrow

The new Sinclair Service Station at the corner of Fifth and Greene streets, will be thrown open to the public tomorrow.

The station is one of the most modern in this section of the state and is one of several the company has erected for the service of its patrons in Pitt county.

Greenville has been made headquarters for Sinclair in the eastern half of the state and representatives connected with the office are located here.

R. N. Pendergraft is special representative for this part of the state and is making his home here.

T. W. Grissom, district auditor, also lives here, as does George Hadley, general salesman.

Tom Foley, traveling auditor of Sinclair, and who visits various sections of the country, is a Greenville boy.

The new station here will go under the name of "Ficklen Service Station", and Holmes Ficklen is the manager. The structure is one of the finest erected by the company in this part of the state.

Illinois Farmers Cut Expenditures More Than Half

Urbana, Ill. — (AP) — Low prices have forced Illinois farmers to slash their cash expenditures to half of their 1929 spending level.

This is revealed in an analysis from financial records of 2,000 Illinois farms, made by the department of agriculture economics at the University of Illinois.

Percentage reductions from 50 farms in one county, the object of particularly detailed study, were typical for the state as a whole, says P. E. Johnston, who conducted the survey.

"Their expenditures averaged $2,894 in 1932," he reported, "compared with $6,278 in 1929—or a decrease of 54 per cent in the four-year period."

"This drastic decline was forced by a drop of 57 per cent in cash income for these farms during the same years."

Pean Orchard in City

New Orleans — (AP) — One of the largest pecan orchards in south Louisiana lies within the boundaries of the city of New Orleans. It is located on a plantation below the immigration station and contains 2,500 trees in good condition.

Imperial Car No Bargain
 London — (AP) — A 45 horsepower automobile built in 1926 to the order of the ex-kaiser, but never delivered went begging when offered at 75. Here's the rub: the car does only 8 miles to the gallon and its tax amounts to $225 a year.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

Hollywood — (AP) — The movie men who at will make time stand still, turn back or lean forward seem to be using more discretion about it.

Grease-paint and wig artists who are responsible for making your screen favorites look like screen youth with considerable thought, and in this particular movie era they have need of it.

Colleen Moore who with Spencer Tracy ages gradually in their new film, commented the other day on the improvements made since she climbed the years similarly in her silent "So Big."

"In that picture," she said, "we must have forgotten that I was supposed to be a woman of 50 or 60 at the end. The make-up made me look at least 90!"

The need for convincing aging is especially apparent now as another rage for life-cycle drama is here. Besides Miss Moore and Tracy, Sylvia Sydney and Donald Cook, Gary Cooper and Fay Wray, Preston Foster and Zita Johann are among screen romancers passing through lifetimes in single pictures.

Wally Westmore of the grease-paint clan of Westmores, points out one important innovation in aging methods. They don't use pencils any more. Instead all lines are painted in with brushes, for a softer, more natural effect.

"Just as actors now underplay scenes," he says, "we try to underplay age make-up. The suggestion of age is better than the exaggeration of it."

Surprising to some may be the information that it is more difficult to make a young actress look old than to "rejuvenate" an older woman.

Shadows, lighting, painting in lines, in the natural "frown wrinkles" of a girl, covering her hair with a wig, all aid in dimming the luster of youth, but there's one thing the make-up magicians can only work "around."

It's the sparkle in a youthful eye.

New York Cotton

New York, June 2.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady three lower to one higher on lower Liverpool cables but with fairly good trade demand.

Initial offerings were absorbed and the market stiffened. July contracts sold from 9.14 to 9.29 and December from 9.54 to 9.70, making advances of 11 to 14 points.

The early advance met sufficient realizing and selling to cause reactions of from 6 to 8 points but the market rallied late in the morning.

At midday July was ruling around 9.27 and December 9.67 or 9 to 10 points higher.

Futures closed steady 1 to 12 higher; spots quiet; middling 9.25. (Courtesy Speight & Co.)

Stock Market

New York, June 2.—(AP)—After some hesitancy in early trading the stock market sprang forward today at a pace unequalled thus far this year as gains of one to three points were recorded over a wide stretch of issues.

Utilities generally gave the best performance. Gains of one to about two to four points in this group included Public Service of N. J., Consolidated Gas, North American, National Power & Light, Standard Gas and Columbia. Others up one to three included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Motors, Delaware & Hudson, Santa Fe, DuPont, Allied Chemical, American Can, Delaware & Lackawanna.

Leaders up fractions to a point were Union Pacific, Erie, Standard Oil of N. J., General Electric, Kennebec, Anaconda, American Smelting and Radio. Neither the tobacco nor so-called wet stocks commanded much attention from the market which was steady in late dealing.

The turnover was 6,800,000 shares.

Late News Flashes

After the recess was taken Pecora refused to reply to questions from newsmen whether the question had any connection with the question of income taxes.

Previous testimony before the committee had disclosed that the 20 Morgan partners made a total of $48,000 income tax in 1930.

The Senate banking committee was taken behind the scene of the financial drama of the chaotic days of late 1929 by the Morgan partner who told in matter-of-fact fashion how a few bankers with $250,000,000 had supported the crashing market.

It was a profitable operation.

Whitney testified that although loss had been expected the 1,146,609 shares purchased were sold for $1,067,255,000 more than the cost exclusive of interest.

The massive purchases lasted some three weeks.

Senate probes obtained a list of officers and directors of corporations to whom personal loans were granted from 1927 to 1931 inclusive by the powerful bank.

With Whitney testifying the committee produced the list. It named E. W. Marland, now representative from Oklahoma, and Frank Stearns a friend of the former President Calvin Coolidge.

To Declare Debt Holiday.

Berlin, June 2.—(AP)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German Reichstag, indicated today that early next week a moratorium would be declared on all German foreign debts, both long and short term.

At the conclusion of a five-day international conference with bankers, Dr. Schacht read to news correspondents a joint communique issued by all delegates.

The his voice raised and he added: "This puts the decision for further action straight up to the Reichstag. Our decision which is irrevocable, will not permit further shrinkage of our gold."

It was taken by everyone as announcement that Germany will declare a moratorium until the decision of the world conference, is made known.

Siloam Springs, Ark., June 2.—(AP)—Lewis Bechtel, one of the 11 convicts who escaped from the Kansas penitentiary Tuesday, was captured at noon today at a farm house about a mile and a half from Gripping Springs, Okla. He admitted his identity.

Poses were close behind two of his companions.

The scene of the capture was 8 miles west of here, where the search had been centered in a remote hill
