Late News Flashes

To Make Token Payment. London, June 12—(AP)—Britain is making a new move tonight reported in government circles to involve proposal of a small "token" payment to the United States toward Thursday's installment, to bring the war debt discussion to a crisis.

A token payment by the British of the debt due the United States would involve the transfer of an amount less than the installment falling due. It would be tantamount to an acknowledgment that payment was due and that Great Britain recognized the validity of the American claim.

A FINE EXAMPLE

While Vice President Garner's action in declining to give radio talk on public affairs once each week for a year at a price of $1,000 per speech was, as we see it, nothing more than his duty, his action is certainly so far above the usual attitude that we feel he is entitled to congratulation for this show of real patriotism.

A NEW LIBERTY LOAN

It is gratifying to note that on Saturday the Senate adopted a resolution by Senator Bone, Democrat, Washington, that would make possible the borrowing by the government of the necessary money to meet all the present needs to cure the depression without any additional tax burdens.

The carrying to conclusion of this "New Liberty Loan Drive" would place the government in position to carry out all of its projects to end the depression without any tax increase whatever.

According to Foreign Service, official publication of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, here is the Bone plan in brief:

The Bone Plan would reduce the war time rate of interest being paid by Uncle Sam to those who have him in debt as the result of the war.

It would make unnecessary further taxation to provide money for doing justice to the veterans and for public works to provide jobs for the jobless.

It would enable this country to borrow safely up to $20,000,000,000 at the new low rate of interest without increasing taxes.

This could be done by what Senator Bone calls "A New Liberty Loan Drive."

The bond holders would be called upon voluntarily to reduce the war time interest on the money the Government owes them.

The debtor is being dealt with leniently in these times. Why should patriotic American men of means not do as much for Uncle Sam whose credit is the best in the world?

British bond holders agreed to cut the interest rate to the French Government when the French Government appealed to their patriotism.

British bond holders cut the interest rate on money they had loaned their country when the British Government asked them.

Why should not the American Government do what the British and French Governments did.

If Senator Bone's plan is successful, money will be provided for: Jobs for the jobless. Just pensions for the veterans of all wars. Relief for the needy, who cannot otherwise be helped. The President's battle to end the depression.

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: George Bancroft hangs weeping over a gate. On her way home to England from visiting her mother in New York she has tried to comfort Nicholas Boyd, the former film star. Boyd, through his own heroism, has maimed his valuable face for life, and walks with a limp as well. When his contract was canceled, his wife Bernie, deserted him. He turns George away brusquely, but without knowing it, he has come for rest to her home village.

Chapter 13 NICHOLAS AGAIN

But George did not stop, and suddenly she was humbly conscious of a step behind her, and then, as she did not look up, of a hand on her shoulder and a voice which said:

"I told you there were to be no more tears, Robin." George did not look up but something warm and delicious seemed to flow through every vein in her body, as if someone had poured healing balm into a wound, and after a moment Nicholas Boyd said: "It's no use pretending. I've been watching you for at least five minutes."

She groped in a pocket and produced a handkerchief, dabbing her eyes with a hand that was not quite steady. "You don't seem very surprised to see me," she said resentfully. "I'm not in the least surprised," he answered calmly. "Why should I be? I heard your voice this morning talking to Mrs. Spears, and besides I followed your example and read the label on your trunk just lion dollars interest charges on its public debt—most of which goes to holders of Liberty Bonds that were sold back in 1917-1918 to finance the war. When this money was loaned to the American government it was a high dollar, for a dollar at that time would buy very little, but the lenders have been paid good interest on their investment and in addition it has been tax free. With the purchasing power of the dollar at this time greatly increased over what it was during the war the bond holders could well afford to accept a lower interest rate to help their government and to ask them to do this is asking them to do no more than has already been forced upon the war veterans, government employees and every kind of industry in order that the credit of the nation might be maintained. A great majority of these bonds are held by those citizens who have urged these other economies.

The carrying to conclusion of this "New Liberty Loan Drive" would place the government in position to carry out all of its projects to end the depression without any tax increase whatever.

George considered the point. "I like him," she said at last. "So you may, but he is not a fit guardian for you. Haven't you any other relations?"

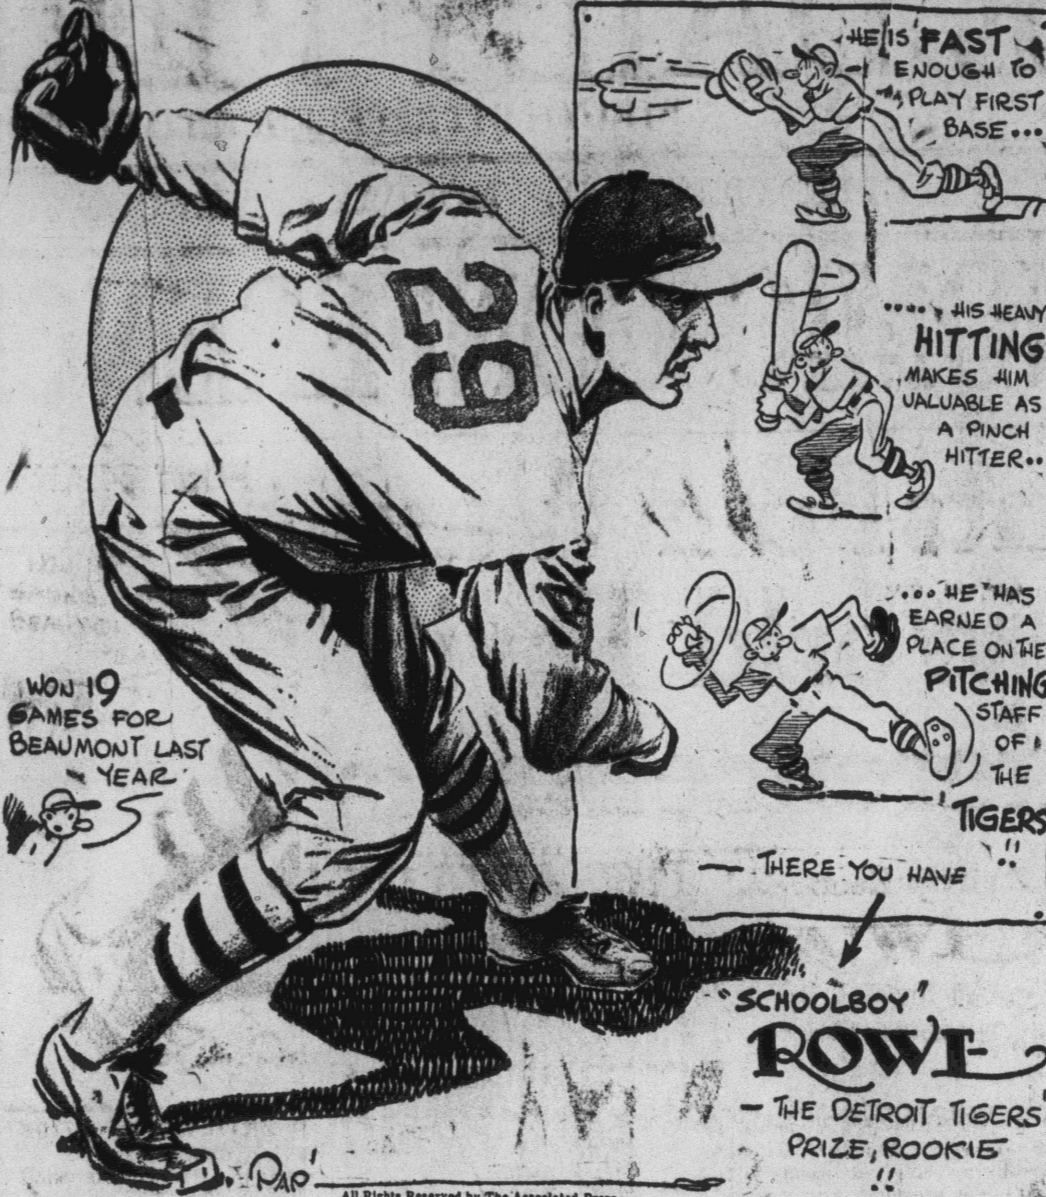

"No." "Or friends?" "Not in the village. Not anywhere as a matter of fact."

She looked up at him with rather puzzled eyes. "Why isn't he a fit guardian for me?" she questioned. "I am quite able to look after myself."

"So I have discovered." She laughed a little and Nicholas looked down at her. "You seem happy enough now," he said, and George answered impulsively. "That's because I'm with you."

A second later she cried out in confusion. "That was a silly thing to say. I didn't mean it; at least—"

"I know quite well what you meant," he said, and then, half hesitatingly: "Your uncle has asked me to visit you."

Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington. — An interesting sidelight of the controversy between President Roosevelt and congress over the reduction in payment to veterans was the fix in which the house found itself on the question.

Popularly the senate rather than the house is the branch of congress generally conceded to be most conservative. Elected for a term of six years compared with two for representatives, senators are expected by some to eye legislation with more care and not so much for political effect.

Take the payment of the bonus, for example. Last year, while the capital was filled with members of the ragged B. E. E. demanding payment of their adjusted service compensation, the house by a sizable vote passed the Patman bonus bill.

Then The Barrage

Two days later, however, an avalanche of Senate votes buried all hopes of the measure being enacted into law.

The drive to revise the provisions of the economy act in behalf of the veterans probably was as intense as any to which members of congress ever have been subjected.

Letters by the thousands poured in. Veterans' organizations marshaled their forces.

Yet when the measure which offered opportunity for expansion on the subject came before the house, the President was upheld and the bill sent almost intact to the senate.

What the senate did is now well known. It accepted the so-called Connally amendment limiting reduction in payments to veterans to 25 per cent.

The house seemed delighted at such action. The senate had done what it apparently wanted to do, but couldn't.

The representatives' pleasure was short-lived, however. Their leaders were summoned to the White House where they were told the house either would eliminate the Connally amendment or raise new taxes to make up for the loss, or stay in session all summer.

A Reversal

They had to decide, and, oddly enough, they found themselves being forced into a position of protecting the administration's policy as to veterans from action of the senate.

The whole thing may have seemed a bit ironical to the representatives. Had not the house been the President's mainstay in the working out of his emergency legislative program?

Have members of that body approved administration legislation in many instances, when they've hardly had a chance to read it through?

And has it not been the house with its strict rules and huge majority, which has furnished the driving force for the President during most of this special session?

Yet it found itself facing the necessity of making such a decision as this.

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN BUDGET REVEALED BY TOMB RECORD

Cairo.—(AP)—The tomb of the controller of finances of Pharaoh Khufu, builder of the second pyramid about 3,000 B. C., has been found by Professor Selim Hassan near the fourth pyramid.

Inscriptions on the walls revealed that the Egyptian budget of that period totaled about $10,000,000.

The tomb was 15 feet below the surface. On top of a large sarcophagus in the burial chamber was a small casket containing face powder with a large scarab on one side and an alabaster headrest on the other.

Besides the sarcophagus was a small offering table, holding numerous daggers and pieces of pottery.

The mummy was a poor state of preservation. A heavy gold brace, let was on the left wrist, a massive gold circle on the left ankle and a string of semi-precious stones around the neck.

In Morgan Inquiry

Those insisting on payment further argue that with the decline in value of the dollar in relation to gold, it would take even smaller amounts of foreign gold or goods to get dollars.

Some have argued that Europe could easily pay the debts if she would reduce armament. The answer given is a double one: first such savings could not necessarily be turned into dollars, since basically dollars only go abroad in payment for goods, or through lending or in exchange for gold, and the armament savings would fall in none of these classifications; second, armament reductions depends on political considerations and can be reduced only if everyone agrees to reduction.

Entirely aside from the technical aspects, the argument is enveloped with political and emotional discussion.

Total Funded $22,000,000,000. The total of the debt, interest and principal as founded was about $22,000,000,000 of which $11,565,000,000 was principal and the balance interest. The principal now owed by 15 main debtors is approximately $11,400,000,000. About $715,000,000 has been paid by these debtors in principal an $1,891,000,000 in interest. Some of these payments were made before the debts were funded at $11,565,000,000, accounting for the still large principal.

How CARDUI Helped

Weak, Nervous Woman "I was nervous and weak and my back hurt," writes Mrs. Emma Nichols, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. "I could hardly rest. I had a nervous, weak trembling in the lower part of my body, and a bearing-down feeling. I had read of Cardui and decided to take it. After my first bottle, I felt better and kept taking it. It helped me. I took three bottles, and by then I was much improved and rid of the nervousness, so much so that I have recommended Cardui to my daughters and friends. I think it is a splendid medicine to build up the whole system."

Take Cardui to give you a better appetite, to give you more strength from the food you eat—to build up and increase your feeling of well-being. Aches and pains go away as you build up with the help of Cardui. Sold at drug stores here.

KINSTON DROPS 11-INNING TILT TO GREENVILLE

Greenville defeated Kinston Saturday afternoon 14-13, in an 11-inning game to remain atop the Coastal Plain league.

Greenville got a total of seventeen hits while Kinston got sixteen hits. Greenville managed to put across 8 runs in the first three innings and when Kinston came to the bat in the fourth they put the same number across the plate. It was then that Page who had started pitching the game was relieved by Taylor and he shortly retired the side. Harrington replaced Taylor in the fifth frame and pitched the remainder of the game allowing only six hits while his teammates had together allowed a total of nine hits. For Greenville Bostic was the outstanding hitter. Out of six trips to the bat he made a total of four safeties, two of which were for two bases and also brought in the winning two runs in the eleventh frame. Miller, third baseman, hit a home run in the second frame and brought in two men ahead of him. Lang also had a good day at bat getting three hits out of 6 trips to the bat, and accounting for two of his teams runs.

For Kinston, Biddle centerfielder was the outstanding hitter of the day, getting three hits, two of which were for extra bases and brought in a total of 3 runs. S. Oden pitched the entire game for Kinston and even though he was hard hit his teammates showed that they had confidence in him by letting him remain. Both sides made a number of errors and accounted for a large number of runs.

Giants To Turn Collegiate As Schumacher Gets Degree

New York—(AP)—Members of the New York Giants will make a unique baseball pilgrimage June 12, when they travel to St. Lawrence university at Canton, N. Y., to see their teammate, Hal Schumacher, receive his shepkin.

Hal Schumacher, brilliant young righthander of the Giants, will receive his degree from St. Lawrence college June 12 while his teammates applaud discreetly.

Hall, who has been pitching bang up ball this spring, winning five of his first seven games, is to receive his Bachelor of Science degree. After the ceremonies, Schumacher and the rest of the Giants are scheduled to play the St. Lawrence varsity nine.

Has Attended Part-Time
 Schumacher is believed to be the first major league player ever to receive a college diploma during an active campaign for the pennant. For the past two years he has attended school on a part-time basis, joining the Giants at the first blush of spring.

An old Dolgeville, N. Y., boy, Schumacher was one of St. Lawrence's greatest all-round athletes. He was an outstanding backfield man in football, a crack center in basketball and brilliant on the pitching mound.

Hero Around Canton
 In three successive games against Cornell, Syracuse and Union, he struck out a total of 54 batters, an average of 18 to the contest. He's still such a hero around Canton that newspaper clippings of his latest victories are pasted all over the store windows.

Among those who will receive diplomas along with Schumacher is Ogden L. Mills, former secretary of the treasury. His is of the honor brand. Owen D. Young, president of St. Lawrence College Corporation, also will be on the platform.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

It still seems open to considerable argument whether American track and field followers will "take" to the newly adopted system of measuring the foot-races in meters.

So far the use of the metric system by the Amateur Athletic Union and Intercollegiate A. A. A. has failed to convince the majority of college coaches that it is worth while to sacrifice ancient traditions for establishment of an international standard. It is a shock to them and they think, an injustice to the athlete not to be able to accurately compare the performances of Princeton's Bill Bonthron, winner of the classic 800 and 1500 meter races at Tarvard Stadium with the time-hallowed feats of John Paul Jones of Cornell at the half mile and mile distance.

Veterans like Jack Moakley, Tom Keane, Harry Hillman and Jack Ryder are no more vehement on the subject than "Dink" Templeton, Stanford's young coach, who says: "Why for the sake of some athletic policy of the ideas of a few, should we overthrow the traditions, the standards and convictions of the majority? I'm willing to bet we hold the next intercollegiate championship meet on the old yardage basis."

Not A National System.
 To Dean Cromwell, however, it seems a logical development. The Southern California coach does not think traditions enter so much into the argument.

"The best argument against it," he says, "is that we in athletics are adopting a system of measurement that is not a national system. Opponents should insist that if and when the government goes on the metric system, it is time for the I. C. A. A. A. to do it."

"To me, however, the one word in international covers the case. If a runner in Poland or Italy or Finland does a remarkably fast 3,000 meters, we should like to know how it compares with the best our boys have done. Then when the Olympics come around, we have a common basis of knowledge about our athletics. It will take a lot of education of course to bring out track followers around to this viewpoint.

"I understand, however, that the high schools in California will go in for the metric system next year. By a gradual process, we will become accustomed to it and probably like it."

The Pace That Kills
 "It isn't the distance but the pace that kills," quoted Tom Keane, famous Syracuse coach, in a discussion among track coaches over the advisability of limiting distance running to boys who have matured and under any circumstances, to those who have been rigidly examined before-hand.

"So far as the colleges are concerned, every necessary precaution is taken now to protect the boys, whether they run short or long distances," said Keane. "As a matter of fact, and I think I am in a position to judge the situation fairly well, I would say it takes much more out of a boy to run the quarter mile or 400 meters than it does to compete in the two miles or 3,000 meters. The quarter is the toughest of all foot-races, especially when the competition is above the average."

DR. HENDERSON TO GET 3RD HONORARY DEGREE
 Chapel Hill, June 11—Dr. Archibald Henderson, distinguished mathematician, historian and liberator, will soon be in honorary degree class of President Frank Porter Graham of the University of North Carolina and President Ray Lyman Wilbur of
