Jimmie Mattern Reported Lost North Of Bearing Sea

No Word From American Flier In Last Two Days

BELIEVE GAS EXHAUSTED LAST NIGHT

Along 2,500 Mile Hop From Khabarovsk no Ship or Land Settlement Has Reported Sighting Aviator; Searching Planes Held up Pending Information

Nome, Alaska, June 16—(AP)—The sparsely settled northland of the Bearing sea today held the fate of Jimmie Mattern, American round the world flier unreported since leaving the Siberian coast two days ago.

On the ninth and most difficult leg of his solo flight, Mattern's gas supply, had he remained in the air would have been exhausted by 11:30 (EST) last night.

Along the 2,500 hop from Khabarovsk, Siberia, no ship or land settlement had reported sighting him.

Searching planes were held in abeyance today because of the frequency with which the lost planes had turned up in Alaska, and aviation men recalled that Mattern had said before leaving Siberia several days ago on his first attempt to reach Alaska, that his plane was in fine condition.

ATTENDS BEE CONFERENCES

Farm Ggent Says Industry in This County is Showing Improvement

E. F. Arnold, director of the farm department here, went to Wilson today to attend the regional bee conference to be held there during the day.

Bees from all sections of eastern Carolina were expected to attend and listen to lectures dealing with this industry.

The bee business has picked up considerably in the county the last several years, Mr. Arnold said, and growers are realizing good revenue from the industry.

The proceeds from the business is nothing compared with other fields of labor it was said, but constant development of bee hives was expected to be instrumental in bringing more money to the county in years to come.

Several farmers of the county have apiaries of which they are very proud, Mr. Arnold said and constant development of their hives presages the development of the industry.

Among the most important bee keepers of the county is C. E. Case of Fountain, who has around 35 hives. Mr. Case recently introduced the Italian queen bee in some of his hives and good results were anticipated in the near future.

NAB ANOTHER MEMBER OF THEFT 'RING'

Dewey Williams Moved From Rocky Mount to Wilson by Local Officers

Another member of a band of robbers which has been operating in this part of the state the last several months was put behind prison bars last night, it was made known today by Chief of Police George Clark.

He was Dewey Williams of Florida, and he is being held in the Wilson jail awaiting several preliminary hearings in various towns of the eastern part of the state where the band operated.

Chief Clark went to Rocky Mount last night and took Williams in custody and saw to it that he was properly located in the Wilson jail before returning to Greenville. The prisoner was said to be a desperate character having escaped from the state road forces while serving two and a half years for robbery. He was captured by Rocky Mount authorities a few days ago.

Three of the band are being held in jail here awaiting preliminary hearing for breaking in Bezzo and Duncan's wholesale house during the latter part of May and obtaining cigarettes valued at approximately $300. Part of the stolen property was recovered, officers stated.

Those held here are Martin Bryan, Jimmie Hill and M. P. (Railroad) Ray, receiver of loot and known as the ringleader of the band. Police said four other members of the band were in jail at Goldsboro, Rocky Mount and other points. They are not connected with the robbery here but are being held for robbing freight cars, filling stations and wholesale houses in various other towns of this part of the state.

The prisoners to face trial here will also be transferred to the other areas for trial as soon as the court gets through with them here.

They face a prolonged stay in jail however, as the next term of criminal court will not be held here until August, and it isn't likely the prisoners will be allowed bail, officers stated.

GIVE PASSES TO KIDDIES

Children Under Ten Years Old Get Free Admission to Baseball games

Sixty-two children with their parents called at the Chamber of Commerce Friday morning and received a season pass to attend all the ball games that will be played at the third street park this year. The directors of the baseball club were glad to issue passes to these children. A special space has been reserved for the children in the left field bleachers.

Any child who has not yet received a pass and is under ten years of age can secure a pass by coming to the Chamber of Commerce with his parents or by bringing a note from his parents that it is satisfactory for their child to attend the ball games.

The directors voted last night to charge 10c for grandstand seats. The grandstand has been enlarged and the roof has been extended to keep the sun out of the spectators eyes. This small charge is placed on seats to cover the amount of expense that the club had to pay to provide the grandstand.

PROVIDE FOR PUBLIC POOL THIS SUMMER

Westbrook Swimming Pool to be Opened To Public in Next Ten Days

Plans had been perfected today for the opening of Westbrook swimming pool within the next ten days.

The pool this year will be operated by the Greenville Recharge Corporation which had charge of operation last year, and the pool will be improved to increase sanitation and meet demands of the hundreds of people who enjoy this form of recreation during the hot summer months.

B. B. Sugg was elected head of the corporation and J. H. Rose secretary-treasurer.

The pool was being drained today in preparation for filling in the lower end and reducing the depth about three feet so as to permit more complete drainage. A hole will be drilled into the side of the pool at this place through which the water will run out and produce perfect drainage.

In addition to this, it was stated, plans are being considered for adding 30 feet to the pool for children to wade in. Other improvements are being contemplated and when completed the pool was expected to meet all requirements.

The movement to reopen the recreational center came after doctors had signed a petition urging such action in order to protect life from the treacherous currents of Tar river. The petition was endorsed by the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs in addition to other organizations.

The Westbrook property is owned by the Blounts and they agreed to again turn the pool over to the recreational corporation for use this season.

Arrangements for water and insurance had been virtually completed today, it was stated, and these features will be ready when the opening date rolls around.

Water will be changed three times a week this year to boost sanitary conditions and the pool will be left empty one day to permit it to dry out. It was drained twice a week last year.

HARD FIGHT MARKS FINAL DELIBERATION

President Roosevelt Sends Note Thanking Legislators For Fine Spirit of Cooperation With Executive Branch of Government; Independent Office Appropriations Bill Also Given Final Okay

Washington, June 16—(AP)—The Roosevelt congress, carver of mighty legislative program for national recovery, adjourned at 1:31 o'clock this morning after chalking up a final notable victory for the president.

Its last act was acceptance of the president's economy program which booked hundreds of millions for balancing the ordinary budget.

The senate fought to the last the same fight that had held up adjournment since last Saturday but balked by the utter refusal of the house to accept an enlargement of the spending for ex-soldiers, it gave in and voted 45 to 32 to accept the compromise offered by the administration and passed the $650,000,000 independent office appropriation bill an adjourned.

The house that had waited throughout the night was quick to hear the yelling and relief at the last minute a letter from the president.

In it he thanked the senators and representatives for "making possible on the broad average a more sincere and wholehearted co-operation between the legislators and the executive branches of the administration to an extent that has not been witnessed by the American people for many long years."

Funeral For Prominent Simpson Lady Held Yesterday Afternoon

Funeral services for Mrs. S. D. Tucker, 62, of the Simpson community, who died Wednesday morning at 6:15, were conducted from her late home yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. I. J. Strawbridge, pastor of the Simpson Methodist church, assisted by Rev. W. S. Harden, pastor of the Greenville Presbyterian church.

The final rites were largely attended and a large floral tribute attested the high esteem in which the deceased was held throughout the community.

She had been a member of the Methodist church since girlhood, joining the old Salem church at an early age. She was of a lovable christian character and remained active in the service of the church until illness forced her to retire from active life.

She is survived by her husband and several sons and daughters in addition to other relatives.

Discovery of the burrowing owl in Florida first was reported by Robert Ridgeway on July 4, 1876.

GIVE IT YOUR SUPPORT

There is a movement under way backed by the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs whereby the old Westbrook swimming pool might be opened to take care of the children of the city for the balance of the summer. Under the plans now being considered the pool would be operated as a free proposition with no admission charge. Certainly it is to be hoped that the undertaking will be put across for as stated before in these columns many times, our children are without a safe place to swim and unless some provision is made several lives might be lost in the river during the summer months.

There is however, another swimming pool movement taking shape in this city that will take care of the future summers in the way of a large swimming pool well located in a central site in the city and we sincerely hope and trust that when this undertaking actually gets under way it will have the hearty support of our citizens who are able to give financial aid. This new pool would be modeled after the municipal pools in other cities and would be large enough to take care of our needs along this line for years to come. Already there have been offers of support in the way of contributions for the project and just as soon as definite plans can be reached a drive for funds will likely get under way.

In view of the fact, however, that this project could not be completed in time to be of much service this summer, it is to be hoped that the movement for the re-opening of the small pool now under way will have the public support in order that our children might have a protected place to swim now.

ABOUT ADVERTISING

(Washington Daily News) According to the figures furnished by the Department of Commerce, newspaper advertising in April increased while expenditures for radio advertising declined. Newspaper advertising rose 20 per cent in April, and was about 15 per cent under a year ago. Radio advertising declined in April to a level of over 30 per cent under a year ago. While radio has never been a dangerous competitor to newspapers for advertising, it has, during the past six or eight years, developed a considerable advertising clientele. This was to be expected. However, the limits of the radio field have already been reached. Possibly a reaction may have set in. Any kind of publicity may be classed as advertising, but primarily, the advertising agency of the SYNOPSIS: Georgie Bancroft goes up to London to see her casual friend Nelly Foster, whom she met on the ship returning from America. She goes to a movie, and there Clifford Asher introduces himself to her and promises to write her. When she reaches her home village that night she sees the doctor's car in front of the inn, and learns that Nicholas Boyd, to whom she is greatly attracted, is ill. Nicholas has fallen from stardom in the movies to obscurity because of an accident that marred his face. Georgie determines to go see him next morning.

Chapter 17 LOVELOCK AGAIN When Georgie got home she went straight to the kitchen to tell Mrs. Lovelock the result of her trip to London. But the kitchen was deserted, and dark save for the red glow of a well-banked-up fire. "I wonder if any house in the world is as lonely as ours? Georgie sighed as she turned away and went up to her room. She felt depressed; it seemed so useless having adventures if there was nobody to whom one could relate them; she threw her hat down on the bed, and at the same moment she heard her name called by Mrs. Lovelock from across the landing.

Something was the matter! The girl's heart missed a beat as she ran to obey that call which had sounded somehow weak and pathetic. "I thought you must be out," Georgie said breathlessly, and then "Oh, are you ill?" Mrs. Lovelock lay flat on her back, still wearing the faded cotton frock of the early morning, and her face was drawn and pinched with pain. "It's here," she gasped, her hand on her side. "I'll get some brandy," Georgie said. She flew down the stairs and brought a tumbler from the kitchen.

She raced up the stairs again, spilling the brandy as she went. Then she slipped an arm beneath Mrs. Lovelock's head and made her swallow a few drops. "How long have you had the pain?" she asked. A wry smile crossed the white face. "How long? Before you went away."

"Have you been alone all afternoon?" Georgie asked. "Yes. Who do you think would be here?" She moved restlessly as if in acute pain. "I'll get the doctor," Georgie said. Mrs. Lovelock's thin lips moved in protest. "What's the good of a doctor?" she asked. "What's the good of having a pain when it might be cured," Georgie answered practically.

She went out into the road hatless and ran the short distance to the house of the village doctor. But the doctor was out and Georgie's heart fell. "But I want him," she said, as if that remark helped matters; "Mrs. Lovelock is ill, and I want him at once."

"The doctor is not at home," was all the satisfaction she received, and then seeing the distress in the girl's eyes, "Maybe you'd catch him at the Boar's Head."

"Oh, thank you," Georgie fled on again, and gave a sigh of thankfulness when she saw that his car was still drawn up at the inn door. The doctor was in Mrs. Spear's sitting room; Georgie could hear his voice mingled with the landlady's loud, cheery laugh.

She burst in upon them unceremoniously. "Mrs. Lovelock's ill," she announced. The doctor, who possessed the somewhat unfortunate name of Dudd, turned round quickly. He knew Georgie well, and was one of the very few people in the neighborhood who understood the dreariness of her life and pitied her.

"I'll come at once," he said. As she went out she cast a quick look towards the staircase that twisted away in spiral fashion to the room above where she knew Nicholas must be. Two people ill in one day! Mrs. Lovelock always said that things happened in threes. She wondered who the next victim would be.

"She seems very ill," she said. "She's got a bad pain." "Indigestion I expect," Dr. Dudd said absently, he seldom had anything more serious to diagnose for people like Mrs. Lovelock. Doctors were not very sympathetic she thought, or perhaps they were so fed up with other people's pains that they no longer cared. She rather liked Dr. Dudd; he had a streak of white hair over his forehead which she found romantic; he had been very kind to her too on several occasions when her uncle had been more obstreperous than usual; she gave a quick sigh of relief when they reached the Hollies.

"I'll go straight up," Dr. Dudd said, and Georgie led the way. Dr. Dudd bent over the bed, and for a moment there was silence, then he turned to Georgie. "Run away for a moment." "I'd like to stay," the girl insisted, but he shook his head. "Run away. I'll come down and tell you all about it," he promised. "As if I were a child," Georgie thought resentfully, but she obeyed and went down to her uncle's library, and joked the dying fire into a blaze. All the short way home she had tried to screw up courage to ask the doctor how Nicholas was, but somehow it had been difficult to speak his name; perhaps when he came downstairs she would have more pluck. She heard his footsteps and went out into the hall to meet him. "Is it indigestion?" she asked, and wondered why he seemed to avoid looking at her. "I'm going to take her along to the hospital," he said. "Hospital?" Georgie's eyes grew wide with alarm. "She'll get the proper attention there," he promised her. "And she can not be nursed here. I'll call on my way back and they'll send the ambulance."

"Ambulance!" Georgie gasped. "For indigestion?" "I'm afraid it's something a little more serious than indigestion," Dr. Dudd said. "But you need not worry; she'll be all right." Georgie felt as if the ground was slipping from beneath her feet. Lovelock seriously ill! What was she to do without her? "Don't look so alarmed," the doctor said again smiling a little; he laid a hand on her shoulder. "Where is your uncle?" he asked. "At the Boar's Head, I think." They looked at one another for a moment, then the doctor said, "Why didn't you stay in America, Georgie?" She shook her head dumbly. "This is not the place for you," he told her. "Why did everyone say that? she wondered. "It's the only place I've got," she answered. "Well, well—" he patted her shoulder and turned away. "I'll call in and tell your uncle," he said. "He won't care," she answered dispiritedly; she followed him to the door.

"Is Mr. Boyd very ill?" she ventured when he was well outside in the dark garden. "Boyd? Boyd? Oh, no, he's not very ill. Trouble with his leg, that's all. Well, I'll be getting along." She stood looking after him till he had driven away and the night was all quiet again, then she went slowly upstairs to Mrs. Lovelock. "They're going to take you to the hospital," she said gently. Mrs. Lovelock did not speak or move, and touched with some impulse which she could not explain Georgie took the woman's work-roughened hand in hers. "Is the pain very bad?" she asked, and was horrified to see slow tears creeping from beneath the closed lids. Lovelock crying! Georgie's own eyes were suddenly wet. And for the next hour life was like a bad dream! the ambulance which she had hitherto only connected with road accidents, standing at the gate, and two strange men carrying Lovelock away on a stretcher.

"It can't be true," Georgie told herself as she went back into the empty house and closed the door. She went to the kitchen because it seemed the most cheery spot and knelt down by the fire, shivering a little. She knew her uncle would be furious! he hated anything that disturbed the selfish routine of his life; he would rave and what Mrs. Lovelock always called "carry on." Nelly wouldn't be able to come down for the week-end now; everything would be different—disorganized. Georgie drew up the high-backed chair with the red cushion in which Mrs. Lovelock always sat and closed her eyes. The silence and the warmth of the fire on her face were soothing; presently she slept. She was awakened by the crashing of the front door; a crash that seemed to shake the house and which sent her to her feet still half asleep and trembling in every limb. (To Be Continued)

Prince Of Wales Nears 39, Still The Talk Of The Debs

By OSCAR LEIDING

London—(AP)—The world's most famous bachelor, Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David, otherwise the Prince of Wales, will be just one year from the 40-mark, on June 23. Slim, well groomed, and nattily dressed, he continues to wear his years with the air of a jaunty youth and one birthday finds him much as another—highly popular and obviously satisfied with bachelorhood. This anniversary will dawn on a match-making market in a state of almost complete depression. The public in general appears to have become reconciled to his unwed state and, for the moment, has ceased linking the prince's name on an instant's notice with princess or deb.

The one brisk revival in the game of marrying off the prince came last October when he went to Sweden and an "engagement" between Princess Ingrid and the Prince of Wales was boomed anew. Though his disinterest in matrimony has become traditional, the prince still rates high in the eyes of the girls, and one of the main parlor pastimes of the debutantes making their bows in Buckingham Palace this season has been speculation as to which of the five royal courts Wales would attend.

Part of the speculation is as yet unanswered—for one court remains to be held and that on the night of Wales' birthday. Because of King George's rheumatism, the prince has already attended two courts and whether he will round out his birthday by attending another is not known. Ordinarily, he attends only one court.

This year's anniversary will be marked, on its eve, by the first public screening of "The Prince of Wales," a film biography of his life. The prince is expected to attend the premiere. The film for which the prologue and epilogue are spoken by Wales himself, traces in picture his entire career, starting with the still photographs taken during his babyhood and childhood. Instead of being a chronological record of his life, the film takes up in turn his youth, his part in the war, the prince as a sportsman, his public and his travels. Characteristically for one who, in the past year, has devoted an enormous amount of time to stress the cause of the unemployed, the prince has signified that the profits from the film biography shall be handed over to the National Council of Social Service for its work among the jobless.

Sounding out the woman's clubs, he concluded he couldn't get much guarantee from them that fancy prices for such foreign lecturers would be forthcoming.

Library Goes Shabby The interior of the public library on Fifth avenue is sadly in need of some working-over. It has a pronounced air of poverty. And it is a very real poverty, you may recall, which prevented the purchase of more than a single copy of Sinclair Lewis' latest novel when it came out.

In the main reading room, the ceiling is positively unsightly, for one thing. It is an interior tending to be a bit gloomy, from the first. Now that the institution is getting that down-at-the-heels look, it certainly isn't a very inviting place.

Another thing, if the library isn't enlarged pretty soon, it is going to be necessary to put hooks in the walls and ceilings to hang up people who can't find chairs. Many unemployed men and women have become steady and serious readers which is all well and good. But the crowding problem has been made worse by bums who drift in and call for books, just as an excuse to sit down indoors. If old offenders are spotted and put out, newcomers from the derelict ranks take their place.

Some day the library may spread out to the west, over a part of Bryant Park. Such a plan has been bandied about.

Carnells Like The River Katharine Cornell and Guthrie McClintic, her husband and director, have homes on two rivers. Their town house is in Beekman Place, overlooking East river. They do much of their reading and rehearsing there. But their warm weather retreat is a cabin on the Palisades, along the Hudson. Their dogs, including the famous Flush, who appeared in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street", go with them. Up at the cabin, Katharine Cornell puts in a lot of intense study on several Shakespearean roles we may see her play, among them Juliet and Lady Macbeth. McClintic is her constant adviser. They have been married since 1921 and still respect each other's opinions.

"going Hitler" have been warned by the socialist leader Otto Bauer that his party is in no mood to tolerate such a change.

Sees Foreign Obstacles Advocates of such a restoration should realize, said Bauer, at a party conference here, that there also would be international obstacles and he added that Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia would not willingly accept a new Austria-Hungary. Nevertheless, said Bauer, it would be folly to disregard the possibility of an attempt to restore the monarchy. So he warned his fellow-socialists "we must make clear to the Austrian people that the Hapsburg Austria is in no way smaller than the Hitler menace." He added.

Compare Two Dangers "If the Hitler menace means that the orgy of barbarism raging in Germany would engulf us, too, that the bones of Austria's sons might be the price for some scheme to regain the Polish corridor—then we must keep just as clearly in mind that a re-union with Hungary never can mean anything else than that our sons will be sacrificed to regain Slovakia and Croatia for the future of Hungary." An attempt to punish this section of Bauer's speech resulted in confiscation of the socialist official organ, "Arbeiter-Zeitung", which later appeared with the offending passage removed.

Can Banks Be "Too Careful" About Loans? Some people who have vainly sought bank loans complain, at times, that banks are "too conservative." They forget that the loan they seek is the money belonging to depositors, and that the welfare of the entire community rests largely on how the banker handles this money. The banker asks himself three main questions about every loan: (1) Is it safe? (2) Will it be repaid within a reasonable time? (3) Will it tie up too much of the bank's resources in one type of loan? These three factors—safety, liquidity and diversification—are most important in connection with any bank loan. A bank can hardly be "too conservative" in its loaning policy if it is to remain strong and successful. Ask the Owners of The New Ford V-8 Model 40 Examine This New Car, Then Compare It With Any Car Selling for Less Than Twice Its Price

The New Ford V-8 is built for economical transportation in the 1933 manner. Nothing less than eight cylinders, nothing less than greater economy, nothing less than perfect security at all speeds, and nothing less than a low first cost and a minimum operating cost would be in the 1933 manner. Let's compare the features of a few cars selling for more than the new Ford V-8 in the price range of the New Ford (Delivered price in Greenville) 5-passenger Coach).

Table comparing Ford V-8 with other cars (Ford, Pontiac, Plymouth, Dodge, Chevrolet, Buick, Chrysler, Auburn, Nash) across various specifications like Del. Price, Wheel base, X-Type Frame, No. Cyl-inders, Dev. H. P., Wt. of Coach, Aluminum Cylinder Head, Torque Tube Drive, Piston Displacement, Safety Glass in Windshield.

THE NEW FORD V-8 REPRESENTS THE WORLD'S BIGGEST AND BEST VALUE. COMPARE THE SIZE—COMPARE THE POWER TO WEIGHT RATIO.

One horsepower to 33 pounds weight. This means economy of operation, greater gasoline mileage, your motor is never in a strain.

Gasoline Mileage--Claims TESTS Prove the real gasoline mileage by a trip under the owner's own driving conditions—You will find that the Ford V-8 will exceed any other car in Mileage on gasoline if driven under the same driving conditions at the same driving speeds. The consumption of Gasoline goes up with the speed of the car driven, a comparison under actual driving conditions, a comparison in actual use will convince you of the real operating economy of the NEW FORD V-8. The New Ford V-8 has every advantage, it must operate on less gasoline at the same driving conditions—ASK SOME OF THE OWNERS OF THE NEW FORD V-8—We make no foolish claims, no coasting records, no impossible achievements—We do say "Let the New Ford V-8 tell you its own story." COOL WAVE DELAYS SHIPPING OF TOMATOES
Laurinburg, June 16.—Nose-diving mercuries blasted hope of Scotland county tomato growers that the crop, estimated as ten days earlier than last year, would begin moving in an important way today.

Scattered pickings are expected from the approximately 500 acres in the county but now it appears that June 27 will be nearer the date of carlot shipments than June 15 as was expected.

The tomato crop has developed in a highly pleasing way under almost ideal weather conditions until the small cold wave of this week which sent temperatures downward.

SNOW HILL TO PLAY LEAGUERS HERE TODAY

The Greenville club of the Coastal Plain league met Snow Hill this afternoon at Third Street school grounds in what was termed as one of the deciding games of the season. Greenville, which occupied the top of the standing of clubs column until the honor was snatched from them by Ayden Wednesday, will stage a spectacular battle to win from the Greene county leads today in the hope of regaining their place as league leaders.

Snow Hill, with only one game won and two losses will do everything possible to hold third place which they occupy at this time.

The local club will have another chance to boost their average when they meet Kinston here tomorrow afternoon. Kinston occupies the cellar but the locals had to go into extra innings to trim them last week.

With a greatly strengthened pitching staff, Manager Harrington of the Greenville club, was expecting to be able to offer greater resistance from this position from now on.

The club will go to Plymouth Sunday and Plymouth will come here Monday for two exhibition games. The club has several other exhibition games on tap between scheduled games of the league and local people will have the opportunity to see how the club stacks up against other clubs of this part of the state.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN GOULD

All the fistic picture needs now is for Primo Carnera, the man mountain from Italy, to pop over Boston Jack Sharkey in their title fight the end of June and be matched to fight Max Baer for the championship in September.

This would complete in many respects a gratifying change in heavyweight scenery from which the prospects of third bout between Sharkey and Max Schmeling already has been removed by the powerful forward thrust of the California Bear.

It's a good year to overhaul the business, anyway. We can think of no more attractive evening's fun than a clouting and showing match between Carnera and Bear, who should have an easier time with the game German puncher.

The trouble is that Carnera and his board of directors, if and when they are successful in getting the heavyweight championship actually under lock and key, may quickly decide to preserve that asset such as it is these hot days. The big crown is distinctly off the gold standard but it still carries more ballyhoo than any other.

Late Swing To Bear
Sharkey's defeat by Carnera would be much less surprising than the decisiveness with which Bear battered Schmeling to defeat.

There was a distinct swing in Bear's favor before the fight among our better critics, yet the general conviction remained that Schmeling possessed too much stamina and experience for the Livermore Larruper. A year ago the German was the best heavyweight in training.

The contingent from the west coast, led by Harry Smith, Pat Frayne and Bill Henry, seemed more hopeful than confident of Bear's continued success. Perhaps they were still a bit dazed over the big upset in their own back-yard when Jimmy McLarin popped over Young Corbett, Third, in less than a round at Los Angeles.

Ought To Be Examined
McLarin got his fistic start around San Francisco, as a baby-faced flyweight, but coast experts rated him on the short end against Young Corbett.

Corbett himself told the boys afterward it "must have been over-confidence," but they ought to examine the young man thoroughly if he is in the habit of crawling through the ropes, full of confidence, against any fighter with the punch and all-round ability of McLarin.

Jimmy may have slowed up a bit but he still hits as hard as any lad his weight and inches.

Stock Market

New York, June 16—(AP)—A further resumption of the dollar "jitters" appeared in the financial market today as harassed traders attempted to lift the mystic veil of foreign exchange gyrations.

Stocks after their severe trouncing of yesterday displayed rallying tendencies in the first hour with numbers of leaders retrieving one to around three points of the previous loss.

The mining stocks were nervous. Homestead dropping 14 at one time to $201.

Only a few days ago this issue sold at $250.

Although Union Pacific and Santa Fe showed some resistance their rails generally were indifferent.

The list firm in the late trading with numbers of leaders staging rebounds.

The transfer was 5,600,000 shares.

So Tired and Nervous She Couldn't Sleep Well
"I was in a very nervous condition," writes Mrs. J. S. Odum, of Waycross, Ga. "I did not sleep well at night. I would get up in the mornings feeling all tired and worn out. My appetite was poor. My mother-in-law thought Cardui would help me. After I began taking it my appetite increased. I rested better at night. I kept taking Cardui until I felt well and strong. I know it did me a lot of good. It is splendid for nervousness and other troubles that young women have."
Cardui is sold at drug stores here.
