SEEK WAY TO CONTROL ALL PRODUCTION

AMERICANS DENY RIFT AT LONDON

Delegation Headquarters of World Conference Spikes Report Circulated Through British Press; Ten Percent Reduction in Tariff Presented to Conference Today

London, June 19.—(AP)—Flat opposition to President Roosevelt's price raising program was laid by the French before the world economic conference today.

They urged the world to adopt governmental agreement regulating production and to accept action on the basis of raw material.

London, June 19.—(AP)—While sections of the British press were printing sensational stories today to the effect that American delegates to the world conference were disowning the work of their expert important American delegation headquarters emphatically denied there was any rift in their ranks.

Submission of the main agenda proposals for a ten per cent reduction of tariff was announced by Chairman Hendryck Colgin at this morning's session of the economic commission.

This was done despite the statement last night by Senator Pittman, American delegate, that the proposal had not been acted upon by the American delegation was as not indorsed by them.

Colonel Freeman, who was 40 years old, had been in bad health for several months and for the past few weeks had been desperately ill. He entered the sanatorium on June 6. Little hope had been held for his recovery for the past few days.

Funeral services for Colonel Freeman will be held at 11 a. m. Tuesday at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Goldsboro. Father A. R. Freeman, rector of Sacred Heart Cathedral, Raleigh and a brother of Colonel Freeman, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Willowdale cemetery, Goldsboro.

Prior to the United States' declaration of war against Germany, he had been active in the North Carolina National Guard and served with the Second North Carolina Infantry which took part in the Villa punitive expedition to Mexico. He was an active member of the State Democratic party and in 1922 was chairman of the Wayne county Democratic executive committee.

Colonel Freeman was the son of Arthur Baker and Georgia Raine Freeman of Goldsboro, and was educated in the Goldsboro schools and the University of North Carolina.

GIVES POINTS ON FARM ACT

Farm Agent Says Success of Legislation Depends Largely Upon Farmers

By E. F. ARNOLD, County Agent

Success of the Agricultural Adjustment Act and its administration depends very largely upon farmers themselves. This is made clear in a statement by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

"The right sort of farm and national relief should encourage and strengthen farmer co-operation. I believe we have in this new law the right sort of stimulus to that end.

"Unless, as we lift farm prices, we also unite to control production, this plan will not work for long. And the only way we can effectively control production for the long pull is for you farmers to organize, and stick, and do it yourselves. The Act offers you promise of a balanced abundance, a shared prosperity, and a richer life. It will work if you make it yours, and if you will make it work."

George N. Peek, federal administrator of the act, has declared that "Unless farmers will work with each other and with government in not producing and sending to market more goods than consumers at home and abroad want and have money to pay for, government can not maintain fair prices and restore prosperity to farmers—no body can."

TWO INJURED IN CAR WRECK

Ayden Young Men In Hospital After Car Crashes Through Signboard Sunday

Edison and Royce Pierce, of the Ayden community were seriously injured when the automobile in which they were riding left the road and plunged through a signboard on a tree on the Greenville-Cox Mill Road, a few miles from the city yesterday afternoon.

They were rushed to the local hospital for medical attention and were reported as getting along nicely today in spite of the severity of their injuries.

The wreck occurred on a curve as the two young men were returning from a fishing trip to Morehead City officers said. They were headed toward Greenville when their car was said to have grazed the side of a machine driven by Hank Cox, of Colcksville, got out of control and crashed through a large signboard on the left side of the road. After going through the signboard, the machine struck a tree, practically upsetting it.

The car, believed to have been driven by Royce Pierce, was practically demolished. He was reported to have been internally injured in the chest, while his companion received a fractured spine. While neither was expected to survive, it was said today they were getting along all right and would probably recover.

Cox was reported to have told officers that he saw the car coming around the bend at a high rate of speed and pulled off his side of the road to prevent being hit but that his car was grazed as the speeding machine shot by and then went out of control and crashed through the signboard.

BEGIN DENTAL CLINIC HERE

State Department of Health to Conduct Clinic At Third Street School

A dental clinic for children whose parents have been receiving aid through various relief organizations of the community was opened at Third Street school today by the State Department of Health, assisted by the local Health Department.

The clinic is being conducted by Dr. E. A. Underwood, of the dental department of the State Board of Health. He will be at the school each day to make examinations for the correction of dental defects of children who were operated on in the tonsil and adenoid clinics, and others who have received aid through the public school milk fund or other agencies.

The clinic will continue through the next four weeks, it was stated, and was expected to play an important part in the widespread campaign inaugurated by the state and county health departments with a view to improving the health of school children.

Over four hundred children were operated on in the tonsil and adenoid clinics concluded about two weeks ago, and while it was impossible to say how many would receive attention in the dental clinic, it was believed the number would be large.

The parents of these children who were operated on at the tonsil clinic are asked to bring these children and their other children immediately, beginning tomorrow morning.

The teachers of the Greenville schools and the P. T. A. members are asked to spread this announcement immediately.

RIOTING OCCURS IN LITTLE FRENCH TOWN

Amiens, France, June 19.—(AP)—Rioting peasants protesting the sale for taxes of goods belonging to a farmer named Salyvaud at Bonfray battled today with gendarmes. Two civilians and two gendarmes received cracked heads.

The taxpayers numbering several hundred, sang the "Marseillaise" as they attacked the mounted gendarmes with clubs and other weapons after the gendarmes, with their sabres unsheathed, had charged the crowd. A number of persons were knocked down by horses.

Friends of the farmer bid $480 for two automobiles, three horses and an empty cask, satisfying Salyvaud's failure to pay a social insurance contribution.

Ten persons were arrested.

TO OBSERVE COTTON WEEK IN SOUTHLAND

Secretary Wallace Seeks Support Of Growers In Reduction Movement

Washington, June 19.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace today announced his cotton plan calling for the levying of maximum processing taxes and the leasing of up to 10,000,000 acres of cotton contingent upon the willingness of southern planters to co-operate in the program.

Cotton producers will be asked to sign a contract offering to lease a definite amount of their acreage to the secretary. A special cotton cotton week campaign will be conducted beginning June 26 through the cotton belt during which an intensive effort to obtain the co-operation of growers will be made.

Wallace, indicating confidence that the growers will co-operate, put the burden of the final determination up to the planters by specifying he will not accept offers to lease unless a sufficient number have been received to justify the reduction program.

Unless acreage is capable of taking 2,000,000 bales of cotton out of production he said, that he did not believe there would be any use of applying the program.

The average yield in the south is one third of a bale an acre and 6,000,000 acres have been taken as a minimum.

CHECKING UP ON CONGRESS

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE

Washington.—(AP)—Big battering ram in the government's wide-spread attack on the forces of the depression is the $3,300,000,000 industrial recovery-public works measure.

The money it authorizes is to be spent on various kinds of construction with the aim of stimulating business generally and with the expectation also that business practices will be modified in such a way as to put the maximum number of unemployed back to work.

The expenditure of this huge sum of money on construction, in a program estimated by some as promising re-employment of 6,000,000 jobless men within a year, is calculated to give tremendous impetus to consumer purchasing power—keystone in the arch of business recovery.

The business regulatory features of the measure are designed to pro-

MILLIONAIRE BREWING HEAD IS SET FREE

St. Paul, Minn., June 19.—(AP)—William Hamm, Jr., kidnapped millionaire brewing head, was released today near Wyoming, Minn., and arrived at his home unharmed.

The police who had withdrawn from the search at the request of relatives of the Hamm family in the hope that this would speed negotiations for his release, immediately threw their full staff into the hunt for the kidnapers.

WILLIAM HAMM, JR., AFTER RECEIVING RANSOM

Hamm's release came after three days of anxiety and intense effort to obtain his freedom.

Freeing of the 39-year-old millionaire business man followed a series of developments which reached a climax Saturday when H. J. Charles, attorney for the Hamm Company, announced "We have made arrangements which we hope will bring Mr. Hamm back Sunday morning. We have definitely made contact with his abductors."

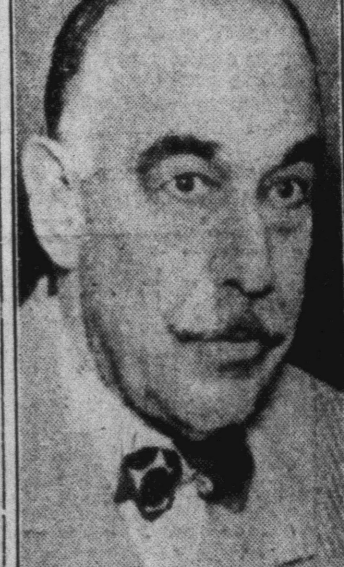

First reports were that a brewery truck had been sent out with the ransom money Saturday night. Another was that the ransom had been paid near Anoka, Minn. Then came word that contact with the kidnapers or their agents had been made between Pine City and Rush City Saturday night and the money had been thrown out of a moving car.

Turned loose 45 miles north of here, Hamm came home with Police Chief Thomas Gahlil and detective Thomas Brown.

Gahlil and Brown sped out of town to get Hamm as soon as word of his release came from Dunn, Hamm's business associate who was in Duluth.

Dunn was the leading figure in the negotiations and had been in Duluth since late Saturday night, a short time after the ransom, an amount less than the $100,000 originally demanded, had been kicked from a Theodore Hamm Brewing Company car between Pine City and Rush City.

INFRACTIONS OF LAW DROP

City and County Officers Reported Few Arrests Over Week-end

From the standpoint of law infractions, it was rather dull in and around Greenville over the week-end, it was revealed by records in the offices of city and county authorities today.

Sheriff Sam Whitehurst said that not a single arrest of any importance was made since the later part of last week, although a few minor infractions were reported in widely scattered sections of the county.

Chief of Police George Clark stated that only a minor number of charges were aired in mayor's court this morning. They consisted largely of fights among colored people and one or two charges of taking more or less whiskey than the law allows.

Violations have been on the wane in this county for the last several months and only a few week-ends have been marked by acts of violence.

The most important thing occupying attention of city and county officers the last month was the rounding up of a band of thieves charged with widespread box car and wholesale robberies in various sections of the state.

Chief Clark stated today that all members of the band had been apprehended and were being held in jails of various cities awaiting preliminary hearing.

TRY TO HOLD IMPROVEMENT NOW NOTED

Washington Believes That Temporary Agreement Worked Out At London Will Not Involve Fixation of Dollar Value; Plan Would Be Elastic in Nature

Washington, June 19.—(AP)—The administration has now made clear it will not subscribe to any immediate currency stabilization plan that might interfere with further improvement of American prices.

In view of this it was taken in Washington today that any temporary agreement for control of fluctuation of currencies which may be worked out at the London conference within a week as forecast there would not involve any fixation of the dollar value and would elastic in nature.

London, June 19.—(AP)—Official negotiations for controlled stabilization of the major currencies which France adamantly insists must be achieved before the world economic conference can make any real progress on other problems were understood to have come to a complete standstill today.

Everything was said to hinge on further word from President Roosevelt.

In American delegation quarters it was stated nothing was expected from the president pending conversations with George Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve bank of New York, who is now enroute from London to New York.

The continental gold bloc headed by France will still try to find a compromise solution and indicated they were not so hopeful.

Then it was expected President Roosevelt might order the American representatives here to kill the stabilization proposal entirely.

The second shipment of three cars was made later in the week and brought $2 a barrel f.o.b. this point. It was impossible to get an offer from local buyers on this last shipment, Falls says.

NOT A PARTY QUESTION

There are those of course who will endeavor to gain support for the prohibition repeal amendment in this state on the ground that it is a party issue and as Democrats we should vote for it but Governor Ehringhaus is right in his recent statement in which he declares that the vote on the prohibition repeal has nothing to do with partisan politics. During the 1928 presidential campaign when the churches here and elsewhere used the prohibition question to aid in the defeat of the Democratic candidates it was our contention then that the matter was a moral rather than a political issue and should be treated as such.

There are wets and drys in the Democratic party, there are wets and drys in the Republican party and there are wets and drys who claim no party at all, and as we see it the question is one to be decided upon by the individuals regardless of party lines and any effort to make it a partisan political issue in this or any other state should be nipped in the bud.

Allgood, rural mail carrier of Greenville.

The gavel fell as Mr. James Wilkerson declared the grange duly closed until its next meeting on Monday night, after the first Sunday in July.

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: When she returns from an afternoon in London, Georgie Bancroft finds her uncle's housekeeper, Mrs. Lovelock, so ill she must be sent to a hospital. Her uncle comes home somewhat the worse for whisky, and in an argument over the missing Lovelock, flings Georgie against the stair rail. Now Nicholas Boyd, formerly a film star, is walking toward her home, ruminating over the accident that has marred his face and ruined his career. He decides to call on Georgie, whose romantic attachment for him has led her to introduce herself to him.

Chapter 19 THE CALL

The door was half-open and Nicholas could see into the hall. That looked dingy too, though thanks to Mrs. Lovelock it was scrupulously clean. Nicholas rang the bell; it went clanging unmusically through the house, dying away in a faintly protesting tinkle, and then for some seconds there was unbroken silence. He rang again, and this time there was a step in the hall, a light step which could only belong to Georgie, and a moment later her hand had pulled the door open wide, and she was looking at him. It was Nicholas Boyd who spoke first.

"What in the name of Heaven have you been doing to yourself?"

"How did you hurt your eye?" Boyd asked.

The hot blood rushed in a crimson wave from her chin to the roots of her hair, and she put up one hand to cover the ugly bruise which was disfiguring the left side of her face. "Nothing—I knocked myself," she said with a rush. He looked at her silently for a moment, knowing well enough that she was not speaking the truth, and then he said— "He read the denial in her eyes, but she said: "There's nobody here—only me." "It is you I came to see." "Oh—" she drew a quick breath. "Well, come in please." In her mind she was wondering into which room she ought to ask him; not to the drawing-room certainly, for the blinds were still undrawn and she knew it would smell stuffy; not to her uncle's study for as yet she had not cleared up after last night and there would be used tumblers and general untidiness; not to the dining room for that too would be in a muddle. She said helplessly: "The kitchen's the best place—if you don't mind." He followed her across the hall. "Is your uncle out?" "Yes; he's gone to London to make a will." There was a note of ironical amusement in her voice; she knew well enough what the contents of that will would be. Everything would go for the formation of a Village Club again, and nothing for her.

There was a fire in the kitchen and it was all fairly tidy. Georgie drew forward Mrs. Lovelock's chair with the red cushion. "I suppose I ought not to ask you in here," she said with a feeling of helplessness. "But Mrs. Lovelock is ill and I've got it all to do and I'm not very good at it." She did not explain what "it" meant.

Nicholas said: "Won't you sit down?" "I'll sit on the table if you don't mind." Nicholas leaned against Mrs. Lovelock's high-back chair. "How did you manage to hurt your eye like that?" he asked again and again the red flags of distress flew to her cheeks. "I told you, I knocked myself. Wasn't it silly?" she was speaking in quick, nervous tones. "It looks worse than it is. It looks an awful sight I know."

"Does it hurt very much?" "It aches—rather." "Have you done anything for it?" Suddenly Nicholas held out his hand. "Come here!" "No." "Why not?" "Because—" then she covered her face with both hands and began to sob.

Nicholas crossed the floor that divided them, and very gently took her wrists in his grasp, drawing her hands down from her face. "Your uncle has been knocking you about, Robin?" "No—no. I fell. He didn't know what he was doing; he'd had too much to drink. As a rule he's kind, but last night—" she stopped, the tears running down her face, her lips quivering. Nicholas said gently, "Why do you stay with him, Robin?" She managed a broken laugh. "I told you before—because I've got nowhere else to go, and besides, it is my home. I suppose."

She gulped down a sob. "I'm silly to cry. I know you hate to see people cry but—well, everything seems to have gone wrong since I came home. And now Mrs. Lovelock's ill. They've taken her to the hospital."

"Mrs. Lovelock?" "The housekeeper. She had a bad pain and Dr. Dudd said she must go to the hospital, and he came just now and said they were going to operate on her; she's got appendicitis, and uncle is furious. As if she can help having appendicitis."

"Tell me, Robin. This Mrs. Lovelock, is she kind to you?" "Kind?" Georgie considered the point. "Well, you wouldn't call it that exactly," she said at last, "but she's someone to talk to. I miss her dreadfully though she only went away last night." She added with a faint smile, which faded into quick apprehension as the front door bell clanged again. Georgie slipped down from the table.

"I'll go and see who it is. I'll shut the door because I don't suppose you want anyone to see you

Furthermore, enough producers must agree to co-operate in the program so that the total output of a given commodity may be controlled. Adjusting production on a few scattered individual farms will not give this degree of control.

Here again, responsibility for the success of the act lies upon farm people. Administration of the regulations in connection with the act is to be decentralized as far as possible and placed in the hands of the farmers.

"The machinery will not work itself. Farmers and distributors of foodstuffs must use it and make it work," Secretary Wallace has said. "The government can help map lines of march, and can see that the interest of no one group is advanced out of line with the interest of all. But government officials can not and will not go out and work for private businesses.

"The growers, the processors, and the carriers and sellers of food must do that for themselves. Following trade agreements openly and democratically arrived at, with the consumer at all times represented and protected from gouging, these industries must work out their own salvation. They must put an end to cut-throat competition and wasteful disorder. The emergency adjustment act makes it lawful and practical for them to do so."

Miniature Golf Echo. A city editor friend who has been ransacking his files sent me a publicity blurb he received in January 1931—two short years ago—from a then newly formed miniature golf association. The item was preserved as he was doing some research in amusement fads. It read in part:

"The game is no longer a fad nor a novelty. Miniature golf is here to stay. And it should be treated with as much dignity as tennis, baseball, football or other pastimes."

Ho, hum. One still may play miniature golf, by the way, in Madison Square Garden, but the once huge course—almost as expensive as some outdoor club greens—has been sliced down to about half size. As for all those miniature "golferies" that temporarily filled so many stores and lot vacancies, few even remain where they were.

"While in the state," the News said, "he is conferring with party leaders and with those interested in the prosecution of the campaign for abolition of the prohibition law."

"The fight for this purpose is expected to start July 8 when young Democrats are to hold a rally at Wilmington to be addressed by Senator Reynolds.

"According to information from the Washington office, the junior senator will follow the address with several others, perhaps as many as seven in various parts of the state."

JOBLESS, HOMELESS WOMEN THRIVE ON CAMP LIFE IN NEW YORK STATE

The first group of homeless and unemployed women is at Camp Terra, Lake Tiorati, N. Y., reported enthusiastic about the routine at the camp, set up by federal agencies at the suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Here they are shown at recreation and sports. On the right, Miss Marian Tinker, director, is giving reading suggestions to an unemployed sales girl.

By NOEL THORNTON. Lake Tiorati, N. Y.—(AP)—Fragrant cheeks girls from the sidewalks of New York are building up new health and spirits here amid 200 acres of green hills on the banks of Lake Tiorati.

"Unless you've walked the hot pavements of the city and gone hungry for months," one of the girls said, "well, unless you've done that, you just can't appreciate how wonderful all this is to us."

These are the first 20 girls to be admitted to Camp Terra where federal relief agencies, at the suggestion of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, are conducting an experiment to solve the problem of unemployed, homeless women. Each week will see 20 others arriving until Camp Terra's quota of 200 is filled.

With more than 15,000 women seeking homes and jobs in New York City, and with comparable numbers in other big cities, workers and saleswomen. The others are factory workers, seamstresses and there is one professional dancer.

Most of the women have been out of work for more than a year, while several of them have existed on part time jobs for more than two years.

Typical is the case of M. T. Born in Virginia, she came to New York four years ago at the age of 16. Two years ago she and her mother separated and since then has lived by infrequent jobs as a salesgirl and occasional dollars she could borrow from her landlady.

Although some of the women appeared to be undernourished, they had managed to keep neatly dressed. They are in high spirits over this opportunity to spend the summer in a camp.

camp similar to Terra are planned for other states.

The ages of these first 20 range from 20 to 36, and all of them are without resources on which to live.

The camp is essentially a place in which they will be able to rebuild themselves physically, mentally and spiritually, and they have no work to do except what vocational training they may request from counselors. Several of the women are especially happy that they will be taught sewing, because as one explained, "it will certainly save us plenty of money when we return to the city to look for work in the fall."

The case histories of the first group to arrive offer an excellent cross-section picture of the army of unemployed and homeless women now existent.

The "white collar" element is dominant, more than half the group being stenographers, clerical and factory workers, seamstresses and there is one professional dancer.

DORIS KENYON WEDS NEW YORKER

Neighborhood Hero. Catching a bit of atmosphere in a rough and ready spot between Hell's Kitchen and the deep, blue river the other night, I witnessed the visitation of a neighborhood hero.

No sooner had he entered than I could see he was no small fry. He was an elderly man who seemed to bear his dignity for a reason. His garb set him apart from the other fellows in the place. He wore a coat and sported a tie.

"The customers drifted toward him admiring and solicitous. When he smiled tolerantly and condescended to speak the fellows clung to his words with fascination."

I inquired of the proprietor who this distinguished visitor happened to be. He told me—

Here was a man whose son was about to go to the chair for murder!

Talking to the fellow and to those who crowded about him, I learned that he and they had a common grievance. The state, in exacting its punishment, had set a "strict limit" upon the number of persons who would comprise the audience. Apparently there would be no way for some good and deserving friends of Hollywood—Here's encouragement for the girls who would like to emulate their screen fashion plate heroines in dressing. It's much less expensive now, unless prices zoom suddenly.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS & SOUNDS

Constance Bennett's pictures are important as fashion parades as well as stories, and Connie rates in the list of Hollywood style leaders. If a girl wants to dress as Connie does in her picture, she can do it easily enough on an allowance of $270.23.

That's per costume of course—or what did you think?

Some More, Some Less. The figure is based on the average cost of the 51 outfits that Connie wore in three recent films, and if you have any sneaking hunch that these movie gowns are faked or imitation materials you should take a peek at a Bennett wardrobe cost sheet.

In "Our Betters" Connie portrayed a rich woman with a wardrobe of just seven costumes that cost about $3,473. It included a wedding gown and real lace veil that set back the department $548.

When Connie got married in "What Price Hollywood?" her gown cost only $182.12. But that was just a movie star's wedding, you see.

The least expensive item on a Bennett picture wardrobe appears for the same picture—$12.55 for the waitress' outfit Connie wore before becoming an actress. Even her bathing suit cost more—$18 and $35 respectively. To play tennis in a costume befitting a style leader in "Our Betters" Connie required an expenditure of $198.

The most expensive item for the three pictures was the beaded evening gown and cape she wore in "Rock-a-Bye" just $831.01. And the least costly, a grey crepe costume in the same film, was $39.95.

The Others Inherit. Again and a gain—not by Connie but again and again—not by Connie, but by lesser featured players, then by bit players, finally by extras.

But Walter Plunkett, studio designer, remodels them each time.

CHECKING UP ON CONGRESS. (Continued from page one) that it is his purpose to get all possible public works projects started within a year. Secretary Frances Perkins of the Department of Labor has received reports from the states that $2,000,000,000 of projects can be under way within a few months.

Estimates presented to the House ways and means committee are that expenditures of $3,000,000,000 would directly provide jobs for 3,000,000 men. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has estimated that 6,000,000 men can be put to work under the terms of the construction program.

Senator Wagner of New York has stated that provision of jobs for the latter number would result in the absorption of the remaining 6,000,000 of unemployed into industry and trade.

The public works program covering a wide range of federal, state and local projects, includes the following major types of construction activity:

Highway, parks and forest roads construction.

Cleanance of slums and construction, under public regulation, of low cost housing.

Construction of public buildings, such as schools, courthouses, asylums and water supply plants.

Conservation and development of natural resources, such as a water power, flood control and construction of river and harbor improvements.

Naval construction, army housing and aircraft construction and modernization of army units.

The far-reaching effect of such a program on industry in general is not indicated merely by listing the types of public works. Highway construction, for example, benefits labor employed in quarries, cement plants, railroads and trucking, steel mills, blast furnaces, machinery and equipment plants.

In the construction of public buildings, indirect employment is provided and money put into circulation through purchases of building materials and equipment and through their transportation to the building sites. The steel, stone, cement, brick and lumber industries are but a few of the enterprises that are benefitted.

Similar stimulation of business and of purchasing power is achieved throughout the industrial structure by the launching of flood control, river and harbor improvements and power developments.

BILIOUSNESS. "My trouble was biliousness—the whole spring and summer I was almost down, felt so sluggish, tired and dizzy," writes Mr. S. W. Taylor, of Joplin, Mo. "I remembered that at one time Black-Draught had helped me. I went to the drug store and bought a package and began taking it at night. After then, I felt as well as anyone. I am full of pep and get out on the farm and do a real day's work. So I feel that I owe my good health to the use of Black-Draught."

Free from the sickening after-effects often felt from taking mineral drugs. Costs only 1 cent or less a dose.

Meet Farmer Roosevelt Of Warm Springs!

By GLENN RAMSEY. Warm Springs, Ga.—(AP)—Testing grounds of the nation's farm policy—President Roosevelt's 2,000 acre farm—are within three miles of the "Little White House" on Pine Mountain.

Long before he became President—in fact, before his election as governor of New York—Mr. Roosevelt began his farming operations here, where treatment in the medicinal waters aided him in the fight to regain his health.

The Roosevelt farming operations began when he bought his first property on the mountain in 1925. The next year he increased his acreage and employed E. B. Doyle as overseer. He recently appointed Doyle United States marshal.

Doyle, a 38-year-old "dirt" farmer, has been aided in development of the President's property by the advice and direction of the staff of the agricultural extension service of the University of Georgia.

There are no expensive barns; no sheds filled with costly machinery nor power lines running here and there. The old-fashioned oil lamp is still used.

Most of the accessories and equipment usually found on the farms of successful men appears to have no place in the Roosevelt plan. Doyle, discussing farm experiences of Mr. Roosevelt and himself, said their problems were those common with their neighbors.

He said they first tried peaches. There were 22,000 trees bearing fruit when the land was bought by Mr. Roosevelt, but 2,000 of these were destroyed immediately, due to their diseased condition.

Cotton was tried next without success. No money was lost during the cotton experiment, but under prevailing prices Mr. Roosevelt sought to diversify his program.

A beef cattle specialist was called in. At his suggestion a herd large enough to graze the mountain was started. Mr. Roosevelt had his own ideas about the type of cattle to be used in developing the herd.

"If we are going in for beef cattle," he said, "we will go into it on a scale which can be easily duplicated by our neighbors. I will buy a few native scrub cows, and I want you to select and buy me a registered bull. By process of breeding we will raise a herd of superiors for beef cattle."

Today, five years later, the herd has grown to one of 125 cattle with few of the foundation stock remaining. He has since purchased several registered Herefords and is breeding his cows from them.

Doyle says all the feed for the cows has been raised on the farm, and virtually all of the farm is now under fence so the herd has full access to the acreages after the crops are gathered. The pastures are in grasses native to Georgia.

Shivering with Chills Burning with Fever. Sure Relief for Malaria!

Don't try homemade treatments or newfangled remedies! Take that good old Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Soon you will be yourself again, for Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic not only relieves the symptoms of Malaria, but destroys the infection itself.

The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic kills the Malaria infection in the blood while the iron it contains builds up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and fortify against further attack. The twofold effect is so suitably necessary to the overcoming of Malaria. Besides being a dependable remedy for Malaria, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is also an excellent tonic for general use. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get bottle today at any store.

SPORT SLANTS

So that big tournaments were just to be happy-hunting ground for the "hard boots," the playing professionals of the royal and ancient game, when Bob Jones retired from competition?

So what? It's a sad story, men, and maybe we haven't heard the last of it.

The first year after the Georgian left them to themselves the professionals had George Von Elm, the big "business men," riding hard on them. Finally the issue was put squarely up to Bill Burke, the Connecticut iron worker, who outlasted George in a recordbreaking 72-hole playoff at Inverness in the 1931 Open Championship.

The professional organization known as the P. G. A. was to grateful for this magnificent fight by Burke to make the Open safe once more for the boys who play-for pay that they forgot him almost entirely in selecting the 1933 Ride Cup team and only managed to squeeze Bill into the tenth and last place three days before the team sailed for Europe. It took a political campaign to put Burke on the squad, at that, but he made it.

It's A Sad Story
Now let's wander back to Fresh Meadow. First there was a swartzy fellow from the Argentine, Jose Jurado, who threatened to romp off with the big prize. Then there was T. Phillip Perkins, ex-British amateur champion, leading the field on the final day of the 1933 Open Championship until Gene Sarazen came along with a record score of 66 on his final round to make the title safe once more for the professional democracy.

Sarazen had also won the British Open. He was the king, at least for the year, and optimistic enough to think he should be given the honor of captaining this year's Rider Cup team. The others didn't agree with him, however, and selected Walter Hagen again.

Anyway, ten good professionals and true sailed out for England and the international matches with England but was the Open Champion of the United States among them? Not by a jugful of Johnny Goodmans!

Insult To Injury
Picture the following embarrassment of the professionals during the Open Championship of the Third Year After Jones:

Not a one of them within six full brassie shots of the bantamweight amateur star from Omaha, Johnny Goodman. Not a single member of the P. G. A. with a chance to even take him down the stretch or take advantage of his last round slump.

Approximately one hundred merchants from all parts of the state took part in the conference.

At the start of the meeting Maxwell announced that no final decision would be reached today but that the meeting was called "so you merchants could tell me what to do."

TOBACCO MEN OPTIMISTIC AS CURING SEASON REARS

Moultrie, Ga.—(AP)—Indication that this year's bright leaf tobacco crop will produce one of the heaviest yields per acre in Georgia's history is bringing hope to farmers.

This year's acreage is not so large as that of 1930, when Georgia's crop was more than 100,000,000 pounds as compared with total sales in the state last year of less than 12,000,000 pounds.

The 1933 crop, say farmers, will ripen 10 days earlier than usual Georgia's bright leaf crop generally is the first of the season to reach the markets. As the crop in this state is disposed of the tobacco reaches the Atlantic seaboard through the Carolinas into Virginia.
