RESCUE EXPEDITION BEGINS SEARCH FOR MATTERN

Four Fliers Off At New York To Search For Texan

PLAN TO MAKE FULL PLANS AT NOME, ALASKA

Expedition Headed by William Alexander, Expects to Make Systematic Search For Missing American Round the World Aviator; Mattern Disappeared After Leaving Khabrovsk, Siberia; Search to be Made in Squares

New York, June 30.—(AP)—The Jimmie Mattern "rescue expedition" soared away today from the Floyd Bennett field for Alaska.

Before leaving, William Alexander, in command of the rescue plane, said that on reaching Nome he and his three companions would divide the map into squares and search systematically for the lost flier.

Mattern, a Texas man, who was on a flight around the world, took off from Khabrovsk, Siberia, more than two weeks ago and vanished. The rescue plane is the large craft in which Clyde P. Brown and Hugh Herndon flew around the world. It is now owned by a brewer.

With Alexander were Fred Buttermann, mechanic, who put the Mattern plane in condition for the flight; Earl Peterson and Thomas Abbey, motorcycle officer who obtained a furlough to make the flight.

Alexander announced he planned to stop at Dayton and Akron, Ohio, to pick up additional equipment.

The next stop was Winnipeg, where he hoped to land before nightfall. Then the fliers will proceed to Edmonton, Alberta, White Horse and Nome. The latter city was Mattern's goal when he hopped off from Khabrovsk.

PUBLIC POOL DRAWS CROWD

Good Attendance Follows Opening of Westbrook Pool Last Wednesday

Westbrook swimming pool, which was thrown open to the public last Wednesday, was reported today to be receiving considerable attention from people of the city enjoying this form of recreation.

Good crowds have visited the pool the last two days and indications were that interest would continue to increase as sweltering weather holds sway over the community.

The pool was made possible through donations of the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs which contributed sufficient money to make one thousand tickets available to children who otherwise would not be able to enjoy this pastime.

The tickets are being distributed daily, greatly swelling the crowd each morning and afternoon.

The pool is operated by the Greenville Recreational Association. B. B. Sugg is president and J. H. Rose, secretary-treasurer. Directing the operation of the pool are W. C. (Scup) Porter and Junior Rivers.

Physicians of the city have given their hearty endorsement to the pool, and will keep close tabs to see that it meets all sanitary requirements. The water has been analyzed from time to time and is classed among the best in the state for its purpose.

In a resolution issued several weeks ago, the doctors requested that the pool be reopened this year to offset the danger of children swimming in the treacherous water. (Continued On Page Four)

ROBBER TAKES $65 FROM MAN AT HOME HERE

Intruder Escapes After Terrific Fight With W. W. Williamson Last Night

After a terrific fight, an unidentified robber escaped with $65 taken from the pocket of W. W. Williamson, local insurance man, at his home on 7th street this morning about 3:30 o'clock, Williamson reported to the police department today.

Williamson said he awoke and saw a man standing in his room with his trousers in hand. He jumped out of bed and grappled with the intruder. A terrific hand-to-hand fight carried Williamson and the robber to the back porch, where the latter broke away from Williamson and dashed out of the back door and escaped.

Williamson said the man was white, wore a Panama hat, white shirt and black trousers.

Reported to have been painfully hurt when hit over the head by the robber, Williamson went to the local hospital for medical attention but he was able to leave a short time later.

Police today were investigating the story, although they had little clue upon which to work. Williamson said it was dark in the house and he was not able to establish identification.

The money taken by the robber was said to have been a part of insurance collections made by Williamson yesterday.

Cuban Secret Society Backs Welles Mediation

By J. P. McKnight
Havana, (AP)—Evolution of a political party strong enough to affect Cuba's future course, is the predicted destiny of the A B C secret society.

Long relentless in its opposition to President Gerardo Machado, the organization has accepted the American ambassador, Sumner Welles, as mediator in the island's political impasse.

New York Junta Dissolves
Members of other opposition groups have been gravitating to its banner, one of the most notable actions in this direction coming when the revolutionary junta organized in New York a year ago was virtually dissolved.

Its president, Dr. Carlos de la Torre, told the members they were free to join opposition groups in Havana in accepting mediation by Mr. Welles.

The A B C's emergence as an active organization dedicated to the furthering of reform in public life would be looked upon favorably, if it is known by nearly all those now engaged in seeking to find the solution to Cuba's political problem.

Furthermore, the same idea has long been in the heads of those actively directing the society's campaign.

NEGRO KILLER DENIED BOND

Jasper Reddick Remanded to Jail Following Preliminary Hearing

Jasper Reddick, alleged slayer of David Gorham, also colored, here during February, was given preliminary hearing in mayor's court here this week and remanded to jail without bond.

The slaying was the aftermath of a card game in the colored section of Greenville. Reddick according to witnesses heard in the preliminary hearing accused Gorham of taking money from the card table that did not belong to him and demanded him to return it to the owners. Gorham said to have declined and Reddick pulled his gun and opened fire. Gorham rushed from the building and dropped dead. (Continued On Page Four)

SEES DANGER IF ECONOMIC CONFAB FAILS

Robinson Warns Rotarians of Danger of Economic Warfare In Future

Boston, June 3.—(AP)—United States Senator Robinson of Arkansas, today warned that should the London economic conference end in failure the economic warfare now being experienced would become "fiercer and more disastrous." "International commerce will likely continue and the depression may be prolonged," the senator warned in a speech before the convention of Rotary International. "Conflict of national interests can be completely reconciled but they may be so far harmonized that fair currency arrangements may be negotiated and arrangements made calculated to aid business and general world conditions."

COLLECTIONS OF INTERNAL REVENUE JUMP

North Carolina Makes the Best Record in June of the Last Three Years

Raleigh, June 30.—(AP)—Gilliam Grissom, United States collector of internal revenue in North Carolina, said today the June collections of his office will total more than $30,000,000 and that the month will rank as one of the best for collections for about three years.

Tomorrow Grissom will retire as collector of revenue for the state, having served through the last two Republican administrations and he will be succeeded by Charlie Robinson, Hillsboro Democrat.

"It is gratifying that the last month of my service saw such a fine collection," he said.

The business upturn which was first evidenced in April and continued in May will be increased in June if collections of this office can be considered a barometer.

Grissom said actual June collections this year will be about $8,000,000 above last June.

The retiring collector explained that the official June figures may not reflect full collections of the month, the books already having been closed for the purpose of turning over the affairs of office to Robinson.

The total of $30,000,000 for this June will exceed collections of any June in the last four years, that month in 1930 approaching the mark with $29,442,721.

COTTON DRIVE SLOWED UP BY BLANK PAUCITY

Lack of Contracts Temporarily Stalls Sign up of Control Campaign

Lack of contract blanks has caused a slowing up of the cotton production control campaign in this county as well as in other parts of the state, it was made known at the farm department today.

Blanks were expected to arrive at any time, however, and the sign-up will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible.

Eighty blanks were received the first of last week but they were not sufficient to take care of more than two townships, and the sign-up has not extended beyond that scope.

Township meetings have been held to inform the growers of the plan of the federal government to pay them to plow up their cotton and at the same time receive an option of 6 cents a pound on all staple plowed up. Signup meetings were also held but lack of blanks also caused this to be postponed until they are received.

A general meeting of township committee was held at the courthouse Wednesday to determine the progress made among the growers, while the committeemen were ready to do business nothing could be done on account of the lack of contracts.

It was stated blanks, which had been expected to arrive every day this week were looked for today and if they come the campaign will be rushed to completion as early as possible.

E. F. Arnold, director of the government drive in this county said the first of the week that the outlook for success was bright, as numbers of large growers had signified their intention of cutting acreage to help the government in its effort to relieve the congested market and boost prices.

ROBT. GREENE BURIED TODAY

Final Rites For Owner Of First Automobile Seen Here at Episcopal Church

Funeral services for Robert Greene, former Greenville citizen, who died at Raleigh early yesterday morning were conducted from St. Paul's Episcopal church at 11 o'clock this morning by Rev. W. A. Lillycrop, rector of the church. Burial was made in Cherry Hill cemetery.

The last rites for the former prominent business man, were largely attended by relatives and friends and the floral tribute was an indication of the esteem in which he was held.

Mr. Greene's death followed an illness of about a year.

He was the son of the late Robert and Sally Smith Greene, and at one time was one of the most prominent business men of this section.

He had the distinction of having owned the first automobile ever seen in Greenville, and as he drove down Greenville's then unpaved streets he was the cynosure of all eyes. Owing an automobile 30 years ago when automotive transportation first came to this section was something out of the ordinary, and many of the young business men of today who were boys then remember the awe with which they watched Mr. Greene speeding from one part of town to another in the conduct of his business.

He was prominently connected, his family being numbered among the oldest and best known in this part of the state.

REVIVAL WILL CLOSE TONIGHT

Evangelist Tyson to Deliver Final Sermon at Free Will Baptist Church

Tonight will mark the close of the series of services at the Free Will Baptist church.

Last evening in his discourse Evangelist Tyson very beautifully likened the story of the rich man and Lazarus to a great drama of which Christ was the author. He declared that this drama contained four scenes.

The first scene contrasts the life of the rich man and Lazarus. Jesus first presents the rich man with all his luxuries and riches. Then following this, He presents the poor man, Lazarus, in all of his poverty.

The second scene portrays the story of the death of these two men. Lazarus, being unable to live longer on the crumbs, died. He then was carried by the angels into the bosom of Abraham. There he was free from all of the torments that he had suffered on earth.

The rich man, with all of his riches, was no table any longer to stay the hand of death; so he like Lazarus also died. Instead of being carried by angels into the bosom of Abraham, he was buried. Later he lifted his eyes in hell and saw Lazarus in the bosom of Abraham afar off.

In the third scene, a very vivid view of their destination is described. Here on earth both had lived together. But after death there (Continued On Page Four)

ASSOCIATION HEAD SPEAKS AT VA. BEACH

Lays Cause of Decreased Trade to Poor Market Conditions in Foreign Countries; British Trade Has Fallen Off; Says Increased Yield Expected This Year Not Regarded As Excessive

Virginia Beach, Va., June 30.—(AP)—Opening dates for tobacco markets in the different belts for the sale of the 1933 crop were announced today by the sales committee of the Tobacco Association for the United States as follows:

Georgia, August 1; South Carolina, August 15; Eastern North Carolina, August 23; Middle Belt, September 10; Old Belt, September 26; Dark Virginia, November 7.

Virginia Beach, Va., June 30.—(AP)—The financial position of the tobacco trade was pictured today by A. B. Carrington, president of the Tobacco Association of the United States, as "very much better than it has been for a number of years."

He said the trade, generally speaking, "is in a very vigorous condition." Addressing the 33rd annual convention of the association, Mr. Carrington said that the trend of the trade is toward a cheaper product with the medium grades of tobacco finding a good market.

A sharp decline in the tobacco exports was attributed to three factors, the decreased production during the last year, disturbed exchange conditions of the world, and decreased use by foreign manufacturers of American grown tobacco.

Commenting on this last factor, which he termed of "a serious nature," Mr. Carrington said that for the first month of 1933 Great Britain purchased from the United States 133,000,000 pounds of unman-

WALLACE GETS MORE POWER

Roosevelt Gives Secretary Power to Deal With New Feature of Recovery

Washington, June 30.—(AP)—To clarify the relations between the national recovery administration and the farm administration, President Roosevelt today delegated to Secretary Wallace all power to continue the industrial recovery act relating to the handling of milk.

Tobacco and all foods and food-stuffs except those provisions relating to hours of labor and rates of pay and other conditions of employment were included.

The move—made in an executive order—was intended to avoid difficulties which have arisen through certain industries handling foods applying to the two organizations headed by Johnson and George N. Peek, administrator of the agricultural adjustment act.

In a joint statement Johnson and Peek said the executive order would facilitate close cooperation between the two administrations.

An "eat more fruit" campaign started in Great Britain in 1923 is considered successful, the importation of apples having been more than doubled between 1921 and 1932.

HIGHWAY 11 SHOULD BE EXTENDED

A movement now on foot to have the extension of Highway 11 north of Bethel to Oak City should have the attention of the highway commission and it is to be hoped that this project will be included in the earliest possible plans. The paving of this road would not only be a great convenience and benefit to those people who reside in the territory through which it passes but would prove likewise a great benefit to the general travel in view of the fact that it will considerably shorten travel from this section and points below here to northern cities and vice versa. Pitt County citizens and those of the counties to the south of us would do well to join together in this effort to get this piece of highway paved.

HAS CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT

(Williamston Enterprise)
One newspaper man in North Carolina has a just complaint against "hard times." He says that when we really had "hard times" he did not object to a whole neighborhood borrowing their neighbor's paper and reading the news which had cost him considerable money to gather and print.
Now, he says since peanuts have gone from one to two cents a pound and cotton from less than six to 10 cents, these folks are still lending out his paper. Frequently he says they are to be seen in groups of a dozen or more looking over each other's shoulders, under their arms, and from every other angle, reading the interesting news that he has "dug up" at a great sacrifice.
He also says he realizes that there is no law against lending out newspapers. However, he does feel that the rules of self-respect forbid the cultivation of the habit of continually borrowing a neighbor's newspaper.
This habit has almost gone out of style in most sections, yet this particular editor says his folks, many of them, at least, will walk a mile to read the good news before they will pay a cent to have it delivered at their door.

By the World FORGOT

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: Georgie Bancroft has been taken from her home in rural England, and plunged into a round of London gaiety by her mother, just arrived from her home in America. But her heart is with Nicholas Boyd, the film star whose career has been blighted by a heroic rescue which left him with a scarred face. Boyd is in Germany for an operation that may do away with the scar. And his wife, Bernie Boyd, has come from America on the same boat with Georgie's mother, perhaps because she has heard that Nicholas has inherited a large sum of money recently.

Chapter 29

THE MEETING
One night when they were dining in the hotel restaurant instead of going out as they usually did, Bernie Boyd walked in.
Georgie saw her first, broke off in something she was saying, and stared and stared at the vision in white that was slowly advancing down the room, happily conscious that she was the center of all eyes. There were two men with her, and for one wild moment Georgie thought that perhaps one of them might be Nicholas, but of course it was not, and she caught her breath with a quick sigh of disappointment.

Bernie was dressed in white chiffon with a fleecy wrap of some expensive looking fur, and one of the men with her was carrying a bouquet of crimson roses which he laid beside her plate when they sat down at her table.
"Georgie—what are you staring at?" Evelyn asked, but almost at once she saw for herself.
"Bernie Boyd! Well, now you see!"

"See what?" Georgie asked.
"The attention she gets," Evelyn said rather tartly. "That tall man with her is Lord Silbury. The other I suppose is her husband. Why men will run after common women is more than I can understand. Women never run after common men. They are far too sensitive."
"I wish she'd come and speak to us," Georgie said.
There was a flush of excitement in her cheeks, and her eyes looked darker than usual.

"I suppose she thinks that it is my place to go and speak to her," Evelyn said. "Everything is upside down nowadays. But very probably I shall go and speak to her. I should like to meet Lord Silbury. You're not eating anything, Georgie."
"I'm not hungry," Georgie said. Georgie looked at the two men who were with Bernie. Lord Silbury was tall and thin; "Hungry looking," Georgie thought; he reminded her of one of the Peers in "Iolanthe," of which she had seen an amateur performance. Mrs. Spears had been in the chorus and she had given Georgie a ticket on the second and most unsuccessful night.

The other man who Evelyn had vaguely supposed to be Nicholas was young and fair and effeminate, with a waist to his coat and hair too carefully marcelled.
"If you've finished, Bishop, we may as well go to the lounge," Evelyn said.
And it was in the lounge, over coffee and liquors that Georgie was introduced to Bernie.
"My daughter Georgie, she's a film fan. Miss Boyd. She knew all about you directly I mentioned your name."
Bernie turned starchy, black-lashed eyes on Georgie.

"How sweet," she said; she smiled at the girl and sat down beside her but she still talked to the men, seeming to single Bishop out for special attention.
Georgie watched her with a feeling of unreality.
She was so fair and small, like a doll.
Of course Nicholas must love her.

Men always liked that type of girl much better than anyone dark and brown-skinned like herself.
A long mirror on the wall opposite reflected the little group they made, and Georgie studied it with sombre eyes.
She was wearing a brown frock tonight which made her look even darker and more elfin-like.
Evelyn had said it was a clever touch when the dressmaker (who called herself Irene, with an accent on the second syllable), had suggested brown.

"If you are sunburnt, you might as well make use of it instead of trying to hide it," she told Georgie. "You're a brunette and can never be anything else, so we must make the most of it."
But tonight Georgie hated herself; hated her dark eyes, and her thick wavy hair, and longed to be fair and all pink and white like the girl beside her.
Even Bishop looked at Bernie admiringly with the tired eyes that lately had seemed to take no interest in anything.

Bernie was speaking to her now and Georgie roused herself with an effort.
"You must come and see me," she was saying. "Come and see me make a picture. No, I didn't mean to do any work over here, but they made me such an attractive offer I simply couldn't refuse."
"I should love to come," Georgie said.
She knew that she was trying hard to hate this girl who was Nicholas Boyd's wife, but somehow she could not. There was something so friendly in the blue eyes and smiling lips, something in her voice that made one feel as if she was really pleased to meet one.

"And your husband?" Evelyn asked graciously. "Is he to make any pictures in England?"
Bernie half shrugged her white shoulders.
"My husband is in Germany," she said without much interest. "I really don't know what his plans are, but I think it is very unlikely that he will make any more pictures, not for a long time at least."
Lord Silbury spoke in a bored voice.
"Boyd's been damned unlucky, poor devil."
"Unlucky?" Evelyn echoed; she looked up into Silbury's face with her most engaging smile. "That's very sad. Nothing serious I hope."
There was a little silence, then Bernie answered.

"He had an unfortunate accident some months ago. I thought everyone knew. He very stupidly stopped a runaway horse, and injured his face."
There was an acute silence. Georgie was staring down at her folded hands.
"How very, very sad," Evelyn said. "And is there no—I mean, will he never recover?"
Bernie made a little grimace.
"I really know so little about him," she said in a voice that seemed to express sorrow and demand sympathy. "You see, we're not such good friends as we used to be," she sighed. "Marriage is so difficult, I think."

The silence fell again and Georgie found herself wondering in bewilderment why it was that she could more easily feel jealousy now she was sure that Bernie did not love Nicholas, than when she had been afraid that she did love him.
"Marriage is all wrong," Silbury said in his tired way. "The trouble is that none of us find it out till it's too late."
Georgie spoke quickly.
"It isn't always like that."
She felt that everyone was looking at her.
"Darling," Evelyn said in her most maternal voice. "You are so young and untried! It's beautiful, isn't it?" she addressed the others. "To find anyone still with ideals!"
The effeminate youth spoke for the first time.
"She'll soon lose 'em," he said.

Bishop changed the conversation. "And the picture you are to make, Miss Boyd? May we know what it is, or is it to be a secret?" Bernie smiled.

"Can anything be kept a secret nowadays?" she asked. "No, there isn't any secret about it at all. It's a picture to be called 'By the World Forgotten,' about a famous actor who lost his popularity and the girl who stood by him. It's good 'sob' stuff, I'm told."

There was a little rustle of skirts beside her, and Georgie had gone, heedless of her mother's cry.
"Georgie, where are you going, Georgie?"
She went up the wide staircase like a whirlwind and into her room, shutting and locking the door behind her.

Then she stood in the darkness sobbing.
"Haden't any of them got a heart? Wasn't there one spark of pity in Bernie for the man whom she must surely once have loved?"
"By the World Forgotten." How could she bear to act in such a story known that somewhere, miles away, Nicholas was fighting against the tragedy that had ruined his life?
"By the World Forgotten." Well, the world might forget. Who cared about the world?
Georgie folded her arms over her breast as if to still the pain that was there.
"I'll never forget my precious, never," she sobbed aloud, to the man who was not there to hear.

Banks That Stand Higher Now Than Ever

Good bank management was not as generally appreciated three years ago as it is now.

Then, the banker who kept a firm grip on the money he was holding in trust for his depositors, was not always popular. Promoters, and borrowers of a certain class, did not like him.

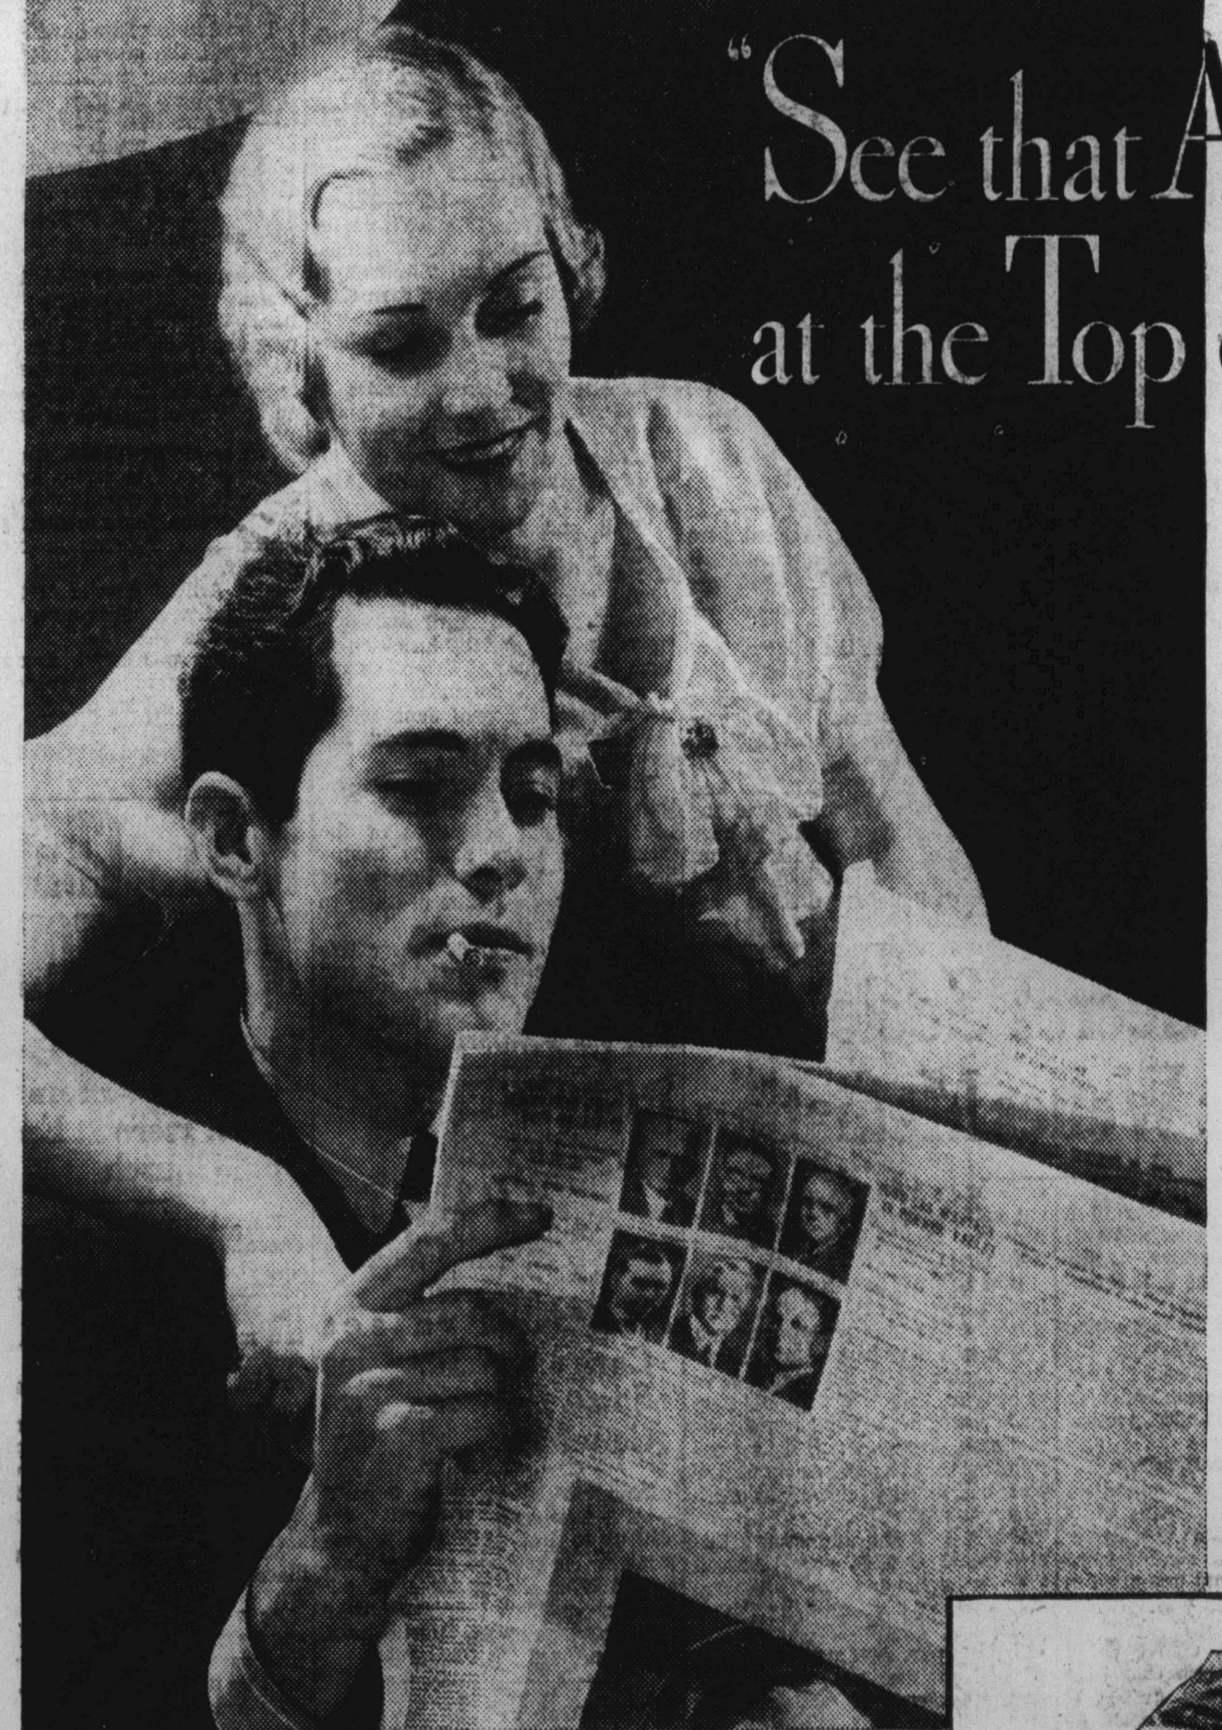

However, today depositors trust him, and know that he has kept faith with them under difficulties. This is his reward.

The real test of a good banker is not popularity, but FIDELITY.

KINSTON HOPS TO THE TOP WITH LOCALS

Kinston stepped in yesterday and broke the Greenville-Ayden monopoly of the top of the Coastal Plain league by defeating Ayden at Ayden to the tune of 11 to 2. As a result Kinston and Greenville were tied for top honors today and Ayden was in third place just slightly ahead of the cellarite Snow Hill club, which is just a game and a half from top.

Greenville and Ayden had been playing peek-a-boo for the first place since the opening of the league. One day Greenville was perched on top only to be knocked off the next day by Ayden. It was one of the closest races for first place honors ever seen in this immediate section and fans in all towns of the circuit were speculating as to when Kinston and Snow Hill would be able to pick up enough steam to hop out of the cellar and offer some competition for the top.

The change started the later part of last week with Kinston and Snow Hill showing renewed punch. Snow Hill has defeated Greenville twice since that time and Kinston chalked up enough wins to leave Snow Hill and enable the Lenor county lads to really offer something of a fight for honors.

The Ayden game yesterday made up for a contest prevented from being played by rain last Wednesday. Other clubs of the league were idle. Greenville went to New Bern to play a return game but the weather man was in charge of the situation over there and offered so much rain that play was postponed.

Greenville went to Ayden this afternoon to attempt to push the club further into the cellar, but whether they would be able to do so was problematical. Ayden usually shows surprising strength after a defeat and if the local boys win they will have to put up a real fight.

Kinston went to Snow Hill to play the cellarites and the outcome of the contest was being watched with interest all over the league by reason of the "comeback" qualities displayed by both clubs recently. A victory for either one, however, is going to dash somebody's hopes to earth. It will mean Kinston either will hold her top perch with Greenville or that Snow Hill will be thrust further in the cellar.

KINSTON GETS 20 HITS
Ayden, June 30.—Kinston banged the offerings of Lefty Fuqua for 20 hits to get a 11-2 win over the locals today in a Coastal Plain League game.

The visitors hit hard throughout but especially in closing innings after they'd already piled up a comfortable lead for themselves.

Douglass pitched for the visitors and held Ayden to seven hits, three of which were made by Snoozy Morris. Topping the visitors attack were Surret, with four hits, and Biddle and Humphreys, each with three. Stephenson caught for Ayden; Dudley for Kinston.

REVIVAL WILL CLOSE TONIGHT

came a separation. One was enjoying happiness in the bosom of Abraham, while the other was suffering torment in hell. In their new home, each possessed his original mental faculties, and was himself. The fourth scene gives a picture of the door of probation forever closed to the rich man. He, being conscious of the turmoils of hell, desired relief. It was too late for such for the door had been closed on him forever. Being unable to receive relief for himself, he wished that he might be instrumental in having mission work done. He beseeched Christ to send Lazarus down to talk to his five brothers that had been left on earth concerning their soul's welfare. This Christ thought to do because he said that Moses and the prophets were there to teach them, and let them hear Moses and the prophets.

ROOSEVELT IN CANADA

Fighting down a four-day fog, Mr. Roosevelt sailed out into the sunshine of his home harbor yesterday free of the contest with the elements and delivered to his neighbors of Canada a message for the struggling Geneva conference. "I was thinking as I came along," he said, "that this reception is the finest expression of the friendship between nations that we could have. I am glad that I had with me the American chairman of the Geneva conference, Norman H. Davis. Now he will go back and tell them he has seen with his own eyes what a border without fortifications can mean between two great nations."

Capital officers were asked to take the negro into custody and a few days later he was returned here in the custody of Chief of Police Clark who had no trouble getting extradition papers honored by District of Columbia commissioners. Reddick has declined to say anything regarding the shooting. He will face a first degree murder charge in the August term of criminal court.
