LOS ANGELES FLIER AHEAD AT HALF WAY

Lands at Wichita, Kansas, and Speeds Away Three Minutes Later After Refueling; Making Flight From New York to The West in Effort to Capture Speed Record

Electricity put to use to kill pine beetles. Portland, Ore. — (AP)—Seeking a more effective and less expensive method of exterminating the western pine beetle which was blamed for destroying $3,000,000 of Oregon timber last year, forest service officials are experimenting with electricity.

Research scientists are working on the type of current which will be required. The insects would be electrocuted by shooting current through them on dead or heavily infested trees by means of portable apparatus.

APOLOGY FOR 'UMP' ATTACK

Snow Hill Player Regrets Hitting Ken Beatty in Game Last Saturday

Within a week after he was struck by a player during a Greenville-Snow Hill baseball game at Snow Hill, Kenneth Beatty of Greenville, league umpire, had received a public apology from the player.

The player was Horace "Horse" Mewborn, short stop of the Snow Hill club.

The attack came while Beatty was umpiring bases. He called Mewborn out at first, but instead of returning to the dugout, the player continued to where the umpire was standing and struck him a terrific blow on the jaw. Beatty grappled with the player and in a few moments a free-for-all fight was in progress, precipitated when a number of fans rushed on the diamond.

G. V. Smith, president of the league with the assistance of several others, halted the fight and the game was resumed with Snow Hill emerging with the big end of the score.

The apology from Mewborn was received today on the eve of the visit of the Snow Hill club to this city, where it will attempt to take the third game in a week from the league leading Greenville club.

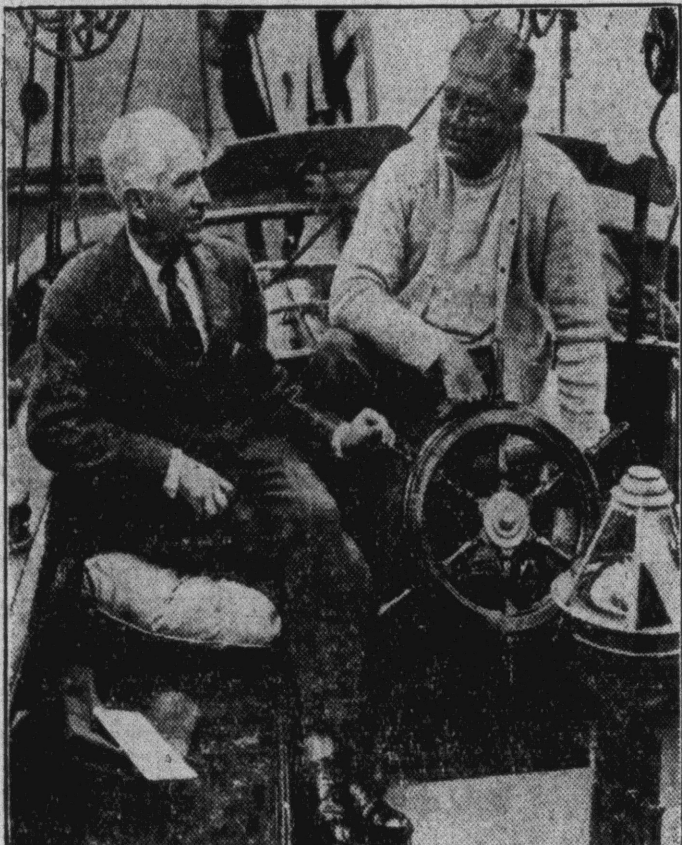

Mewborn's letter of apology follows: Dear Ken: "I wish to offer my sincere apology for my most discourteous act to you on the diamond in Snow Hill Saturday. I do so sincerely regret that I should so let my temper get the best of my better judgment that I should forge the ethics of the game.

"Trusting that you will accept these apologies so humbly and sincerely given. I am Most respectfully yours, 'Horse' Horace Mewborn."

MILLS WORK ON NEW CODE

Adjustments Being Made to Find Employment For 100,000 Idle People

Washington, July 1—(AP)—Cotton textile makers today began the tremendous task of adjusting organizations to the code of competition decided upon June 17 by which 100,000 idle are to be put back to work.

These efforts were spurred by official commendation in the agreement guaranteeing minimum wages of $12 a week in the south and $13 in the north for not more than 40 hours of work.

This was the first agreement reached by one of the big ten industries under the national recovery act.

If President Roosevelt signs the agreement by Monday it will become effective July 17, if not it will become effective after he does.

HOOKS MADE POSTMASTER FOR AYDEN

Democratic Leader Appointed to Federal Position Last Nite; At Work Today

W. E. Hooks of Ayden, for years chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee, received notice last night of his appointment as postmaster at Ayden. He was sworn in this morning and immediately assumed his duties, it being the beginning of the new fiscal year of the government.

News of the appointment was received with interest by the many friends of Mr. Hooks, who realizing his splendid service in behalf of the party over a wide space of years declared he was fully deserving of this recognition by party leaders.

Largely through the untiring efforts of the executive chairman Pitt county has been able to pile up a huge Democratic majority for the last several years, even during the Republican ascendancy, and never lost its reputation of being one hundred per cent Democratic, although some of the other sections of the state departed from the ranks in a former presidential battle.

Prominently identified with the party all of his life, Mr. Hooks once served as engraving clerk in the North Carolina Legislature. After moving to Ayden he threw his influence into the county politics and soon gained prominence in the county organization. He has been chairman of the executive committee for years, and was indefatigable in his efforts to always get the greatest number of voters possible to the polls.

Several months ago he took over the ownership and editorship of the Greenville News, weekly publication here, and has used its columns in the advancement of the best interests of the party.

He recently relinquished a position with the state as oil inspector to give more time to the operation of his paper.

He was the recipient of many congratulations today upon the appointment to the federal office.

MILLIONAIRE OF CHICAGO IS KIDNAPED

John Factor Taken From Automobile And Spirited Away Early Today

Chicago, July 1—(AP)—Kidnapers ambushed John Factor on a North Side thoroughfare early today abducting the millionaire in his car as Mrs. Factor and son looked on as the abductors sped away with their captive.

They dragged Factor and his friend Al Epstein, an attorney from the rear seat barked a curt command: "Go ahead, kid, we don't want you!" to Jerome Factor, the son, and ignored the following car which Epstein, friend of the stock broker and frequenter of night clubs who was with him told the story. He was turned loose after a short ride with the kidnapers and picked up a ride back to the hotel where the frightened woman had gathered.

It was the second time in the last few weeks that the Factor family had been victimized by kidnapers. Jerome, student of Northwestern university, was kidnapped April 13 from the front of the apartment of the first Mrs. Factor. Rumors were that the father paid a reward for his son's recovery but the fact was denied by them.

Angst under the leadership of Murry Humphreys, public enemy No. 1 was enlisted in Factor's aid.

COTTON DRIVE BLANKS REACH PITT COUNTY

Production Control Campaign to Get in Full Swing With Receipt of Contracts

The shortage of contract blanks which has been holding up the cotton production control campaign in this county the last several days, was relieved yesterday with receipt of 1,000 blanks from Washington City, E. F. Arnold, director of the Pitt County Department of Agriculture, said this morning.

The blanks were immediately distributed among the committeemen in various townships of the county and the extensive sign-up campaign will be pushed to completion as early as possible.

Mr. Arnold said the sign-up drive would be completed July 8 unless an extension of time is granted by the federal director.

Although the lack of blanks was a temporary setback to actual signing operations, Mr. Arnold said committees were busy in the fields of scores of planters during the intervening time making inspections required in the course of the sign-up campaign. He was unable to estimate the number of acres which would be taken out of cultivation but expressed belief the county would be on a par with other cotton growing counties of the state.

Numbers of the largest planters in the county several days ago signified intention of plowing up the required number of acres thereby taking advantage of the government offer to pay growers to help cut the nation's cotton supply and improve prices.

Eighty blanks had been received prior to the receipt of 1,000 yesterday. They were distributed in two townships, the first to get started in the movement to cut acreage.

ITALIAN FLIER DIES IN WRECK

Three Others Injured As Armada Ship Capsizes on Landing At Amsterdam

Amsterdam, July 1—(AP)—An accident probably involving one fatality marked the end today of the first stage of the flight of the Italian armada of 25 seaplanes bound from Italy to the Chicago exposition.

The plane meeting the accident was one which descended some distance from the landing place of the armada. It was several minutes before assistance could reach the scene. Harbor boats immediately started search for the missing aviator.

CITY STARTS OFF ON A NEW FISCAL YEAR

Mayor and Aldermen Sworn in at Ceremonies During The Noon Hour

Members of the Board of Aldermen elected in the municipal election in May were administered oath of office in ceremonies at the city hall at the noon hour today.

Immediately after the process of taking oath had been completed, the members held a brief session to prepare to go into business of the new year at the regular meeting next Thursday night.

Today was the beginning of the new governmental fiscal year. The five members of the board were sworn in by Mayor R. C. Flanagan, who shortly before had been administered the oath by Larry Brown, Notary Public.

The ceremony was simple, although witnessed by several members of the various city departments and private citizens who happened to be in the city office building at the time of the exercises. Those taking the oath were: Mayor R. C. Flanagan and the following aldermen: L. B. Fleming, First ward; N. O. Warren, Second ward; H. H. Duncan, Third ward; J. H. Boyd, Fourth ward; A. E. Hobgood, Fifth ward.

All of those taking oath today were re-elected with the exception of Fleming who was elected to fill the seat formerly occupied by Closs Hearn, who resigned when he moved out of the city.

Considerable hand-shaking and back-slapping followed the ceremony as officials congratulated one another upon their ability to come through one of the worst years in history of the city government with a clean slate.

Mayor Flanagan congratulated his associates on their effort for economy and said this was largely responsible for the city ending the year with all obligations of the year fully cared for. The budget for the year was $56,000 and each department remained within the bounds by steering close to the economy program inaugurated the first of the year. THINK DELAY IS CAUSED BY SLOW WIRING

Information From Cambello That Countries Will Have To Wait For Stabilization Causes Flurry Of Excitement; Statement Represents Another Victory For United States

London, July 1—(AP)—Delegates for the gold standard countries waited in vain as the morning passed without word from President Roosevelt on a joint declaration favoring control of currency fluctuation.

Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain, chairman of the world conference, informed Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley, that he was ready to call a meeting as soon as a statement from the president was received.

Several of the gold countries who have waged a relentless fight for currency stabilization or fluctuation control were planning to take noon trains or afternoon airplanes for their respective capitals.

It was stated that the delay incurred from the American executive was due to failure of communication facilities at Cambello Island, N. B., where Mr. Roosevelt is spending his vacation.

Information from Cambello that countries will have to wait for stabilization excited some wonder in conference circles where the delegation of the French and other gold nations were interpreting as not implying stabilization but merely a move to iron out peaks of fluctuation regarded as largely speculative.

Important American circles expressed the opinion that in view of the vague form in which the statement was drafted they could not see how any one could have objections to it.

Important conference quarters were frank in saying the statement represented another victory for the United States, America having failed to commit itself on the stabilization question.

Financial quarters in London were frankly skeptical over the proposed declaration. The statement as finally determined up, it was learned on good authority, is virtually as follows:

The gold standard countries declared the gold basis should be maintained. Nations off the gold standard shall return to gold when possible.

Each country independently shall determine and maintain their positions at all costs.

Countries with depreciated currencies should note the stand taken by the gold countries.

Evangelist Delivers Final Sermon in Series of Services At F. W. B. Church

In the book of Job 31:14, these words are to be found: "What then shall I do when God riseth up, and when He visiteth, what shall I answer Him?" It was these words of Job that served as a text for Evangelist Tyson last evening, during the revival at the Free Will Baptist Church. In the very beginning, he impressed upon the minds of the audience that Job realized that he was in possession of a soul and that he was responsible to God for it. Realizing this Job began to think about the welfare of it. While meditating over his soul's situation, he spoke the (Continued On Page Two)

A WISE SELECTION

We presume that the appointment of Ed Hooks to the postmastership at Ayden meets with the approval of this home folks at Ayden and from the standpoint of the rest of the county we are sure that the matter meets with hearty approval. For many years as chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee he has labored unceasingly in behalf of the party and no doubt these efforts have been a great factor in helping Pitt County to rank as one of the banner Democratic counties of the whole nation. We consider this appointment of Mr. Hooks a fitting recognition of party service and congratulate Congressman Warren and Senator Bailey for their part in having this appointment made.

TAKE YOUR TIME

Each week-end takes its automobile accident toll and the fact that the Fourth of July holiday follows closely on the present week-end no doubt traffic will be heavier and the dangers along the highways thereby increased. As we have done many times before we again urge our people to exercise great caution when traveling in this holiday traffic. By so doing it may take you just a little longer to get where you wish to go and to return home but it will mean a safer and happier holiday.

THE SALES TAX

Today North Carolinians began to pay a three per cent sales tax on all purchases out of which it is estimated that the state will actually receive one cent of every three cents collected. We were told at the time that the sales tax law was enacted that it was a temporary emergency measure but it is a safe bet that with upwards of 100 people more holding jobs as a result of this law that the next legislature will have a task on its hands to do away with the sales tax and the jobs created by it. Our only hope lies in the fact that maybe by that time the masses of the people of our state will have become so fed up on this obnoxious form of taxation that the legislature will be compelled to back track.

A New Serial by Ruby M. Ayres

SYNOPSIS: While the guests of her mother and step-father in a great London hotel, Georgie Bancroft meets Bernie Boyd, the film actress. Georgie is interested because she knows Bernie's husband Nicholas, and because he has given her reason to believe that perhaps he cares for her. Bernie, marvelously gowned and surrounded by admirers, declares she is about to make a picture about an actor who lost his popularity—and Georgie runs away weeping. For Nicholas is now in Germany trying to have removed the scar that has cost him his career in the films.

Chapter 30

WORD FROM GERMANY

It was a day or two following her meeting with Bernie Boyd that Georgie ran into Nelly Foster. There was a cold East wind blowing, and Nelly was hurrying along, the collar of her cheap coat held closely about her chin, and her nose a trifle blue.

She gave one glance at Georgie and would have passed on, only Georgie barred the way.

"Nelly—don't you remember me?" It was only a few weeks since they had met, but so much had happened that it seemed to Georgie as if years must have passed since she had taken tea in Nelly's crowded little room.

"I thought perhaps you didn't want me to speak," Nelly said, and then, "My word, aren't you smart!" "Am I?" Georgie glanced down at her clothes; she supposed with faint satisfaction that they were rather nice.

Nelly said defensively, "I thought you'd done with me, putting me off that week-end as you did, and then not writing."

"Such a lot of things have happened," Georgie said. "I'll tell you all about it. Come and have some coffee."

They were outside an expensive looking Bond Street tea shop and Georgie had turned towards its door before Nelly said quickly:

"Not in there, thank you. I'm not dressed for places like that."

Georgie felt rebuked; until recently she would not have dared to enter such a shop herself. She thought it was wonderful how quickly one grew acclimatized to changed conditions.

"We'll find another, then," she said.

Nelly went with her silently, her eyes on Georgie's dainty clothes, and as soon as they were seated at one of the marble topped tables she broke out: "Has someone left you a fortune?"

"No, nobody," Georgie said. "But I'm living with my mother now and she's well off."

"Oh, do you like it?"

"Sometimes I do and sometimes—well, I suppose people always want the things they can't have."

"I shouldn't have thought there was much you couldn't have," Nelly said shortly. She was feeling a little sore; life had dealt her many unkind knocks, but somehow she had expected Georgie to be different from other people, and apparently she was just the same.

Georgie seemed to read her thoughts for she said with sudden earnestness, "I've never forgotten you; don't think that. But it's been so difficult to do as I want to do. I suppose people never can when they've got a mother to consider," she added quaintly.

"I don't see what difference it makes," Nelly said; she was stirring her coffee rather viciously. "I see your Nicholas Boyd has had a operation," she said.

Georgie's eyes flew open wide. "Where did you see it?" she asked breathlessly.

"Oh, in the paper, just a tiny paragraph about him. I suppose you knew though," she added maliciously.

"Which paper?" Georgie asked.

Nelly fumbled in the pocket of her coat and produced a crumpled newspaper.

"It's somewhere there," she said. She watched interestedly while Georgie searched every column.

"Has he thrown you over?" she asked suddenly.

Georgie shook her head.

Nelly gave a short laugh.

"And you wouldn't admit it any way if he did," she said.

Georgie had found the tiny paragraph, and was devouring it with hungry eyes.

It was a very tiny paragraph, probably only put in at all to fill up an awkward space, and it gave the brief announcement:

"Nicholas Boyd, the film star, who has recently retired from his screen activities, underwent an operation in Berlin yesterday. He is said to be doing as well as can be expected."

"Appendicitis I suppose, wasn't it?" Nelly asked. "It's what they all seem to have when they want a bit of publicity, but I don't see why he need have gone to Germany for it. Silly, I call it." She glanced at Georgie's untouched bun. "You are not eating," she said.

"I'm not hungry," Georgie answered. "I really don't want it."

"I'll have it for you," Nelly said quickly, so quickly and eagerly that Georgie asked in swift concern:

"Haven't you had any breakfast?" Nelly laughed rather mirthlessly.

"No, I haven't. I'm economizing"—she paused, and washed down a mouthful of bun with some coffee before she added with bravado, "I'm out of a job."

"Oh!" Georgie's face was beautiful in its concern. "But you'll get another job?"

"Shall I? Goodness only knows." "You mean you can't get a job?" Georgie asked in horror. "How long is it since you left the other place?"

"A fortnight; but don't you worry about me, I shall be all right. Tell me about yourself."

But Georgie could think of nothing but her friend's tragedy.

"I'll ask Bishop," she said eagerly. "He's my stepfather, and I should think he knows nearly everybody in London. The telephone is going all day, and we get heaps of visitors. He's nice. I'm sure he'll find you a job if I ask him."

Nelly made a little grimace.

"He might tell you that he would try, because you're pretty and he probably likes you, but he don't be so keen when he's seen me. Men are all the same, if you haven't got a silly, dolly face they don't think you're any good. However, it's kind of you to suggest it," she added.

Nelly touched the sleeve of Georgie's coat. "It must have cost a lot," she said. "It's better than anything we ever kept in our place. It cost at least $25, didn't it?"

"I'm not sure," Georgie said. She knew that it had cost a good deal more than the $25, which seemed the height of costliness to Nelly, and it made her feel a little ashamed. Surely it was not right for one girl to spend so much money on mere clothes while another girl went without her breakfast?

"You can have the newspaper if you like," Nelly said, as Georgie still kept it in her hand. "I've cut out the advertisement page, and that's all I bought it for."

Georgie thanked her as gratefully as if she had just been presented with the Crown Jewels.

"If you're sure you don't want it," she was careful to ask.

Nelly at the last crumb on her plate, following it up with a loaf of sugar from the basin.

"And now I'll be going," she said. Georgie hesitated, then said diffidently, "I hope you won't mind, but won't you let me lend you a little money, just till you get another job."

Nelly flushed and drew on her gloves with a vigorous tug.

"No, thanks; thanks all the same. I've never borrow money yet, and I'm not going to start; thanks all the same. I'm all right; don't you worry."

But Georgie worried a great deal; there was a heavy cloud on her horizon as she went slowly back to the hotel. Life seemed so terribly unbalanced, like a see-saw; you were either up in the full glare of popularity or else you were down in the darkness; to her sensitive mind Nicholas Boyd and Nelly Foster seemed suddenly to have joined hands and be standing together looking at her with unfriendly eyes.

So Nicholas had had his operation and was doing as well as could be expected; she wondered what that meant. She knew it was the kind of thing doctors always said about sick people, and yet Nicholas was not exactly sick in the ordinary way.

Her heart seemed to be straining away from her body in a vain attempt to reach him; she wondered if they were kind to him; if they had hurt him very much and, most of all, if they had been successful in making his face well again.

Not that it mattered. To her at least he would always be dear and beautiful whatever happened, perhaps a little more dear if he was always to be the "ugly devil" he had once described himself.

She searched the hotel till she found her stepfather.

MIAMI BEACH RESIDENTS TO VOTE ON ADVERTISING

Miami Beach, Fla.—(AP)—Freeholders of the municipality will vote July 11 on a proposal to levy a tax of one or two mills for publicity and advertising purposes for the next two years.

The proposal is to make the levy two mills. Under terms of a charter amendment passed at the recent session of the state legislature the electorate will vote every two years on the publicity and advertising levy.

If the proposed increase to two mills is voted down, the sum will be automatically fixed at one mill.

U. S. SPENDING SEEN AS ISSUE IN G. O. P. ATTACK

Different Interpretation The developing issue is not over the amount of money authorized for expenditure. Republican and democratic figures are in substantial agreement. The question in dispute is just what these figures mean in terms of the burden they impose on the taxpayer.

The democratic thesis is that current running expenses of the government (that is, the regular departments) have been greatly reduced, and that special authorization, including principally the $3,300,000,000 bond issue for public works, cannot properly be counted as a present expenditure because the government is "borrowing the money and will pay it off over a long term of years."

Representative Smell, calls this "trickery bookkeeping", intended to deceive the public into thinking the reality it has not. He says any individual living beyond his income might similarly "keep two sets of books", entering his current living expenses on one and his accumulating debts on the other, but that such an operation would accomplish nothing but an eventual trip to the bankruptcy court.

The Gague Of Battle A great deal more will be said on both sides of this question when the congressional campaign really gets going.

It is an issue already prepared beforehand; no matter whether general recovery is accomplished or not the republicans are preparing to charge and the democrats to deny that whatever has been attained was purchased at the expense of public extravagance.

Thus one of the oldest issues of American politics is the first to enter the lists for 1934.

Thus one of the oldest issues of American politics is the first to enter the lists for 1934.

Evangelist Tyson implied that very few people here on earth ever stopped and deeply and seriously thought about the spiritual things as Job did. Job was aware of the fact that he some day would have to stand face to face with God and give an account of his life spent on earth. Just as Job was conscious of the needs of his soul, every individual should also be concerned about the same thing.

The question of Job concerns every one now as much as it did Job. His question was: What shall I do when I stand before God? Through all the ages only three answers have been offered for this question.

The first answer was given by Adam when he said: "I will not face the issue." Mr. Tyson emphatically explained that this answer was not acceptable because everyone would some day have to stand in the presence of the Lord and face his record in heaven. He called attention to the fact that in the final day some would call upon the mountains and the rocks to hide them because of their embarrassment to face the throne of judgment.

Another answer that has been offered for this question is one that Job himself gave. He said that when he came to stand before his God he would tell Him of his good works. "People are Christians not because of their good works but because of the atoning blood of Christ," declared Mr. Tyson.

The third answer is the answer that a Christian has to give. The Christian, when facing God, will be able to answer, "I have been saved through the blood of Jesus Christ." Mr. Tyson made clear the fact that when the blood of Jesus is applied, no matter how bad the record may be it is cleared.

inside the budget figures was a monumental task in view of unexpected expenses from time to time, but by putting their heads together and figuring cuts at other places, the aldermen were able to make ends meet and emerge the beginning of the new year with a slate as clean as an urchin's face after repeated ablutions accompanied by a brush and a plenty of soap.

A brief session of the board was held last night to conclude business of the old year.

After being sworn in the aldermen re-elected George Clark chief of police; H. H. Duncan as mayor pro tem; J. O. Duval, city clerk, and Wash Patrick, assistant city clerk. Other government posts will be filled at the regular meeting next week.

Stores however, will remain open Wednesday afternoon, the half holiday observed during the summer.

As customary all public buildings and banks will join in the closing and while hundreds will remain in the city, others will make a pilgrimage to seashores and other places in an effort to draw the most out of the occasion.

In keeping with a custom made extant many years ago, the Daily Reflector will be closed Tuesday in observance of the celebration of national independence. The usual edition will be issued Monday afternoon and Wednesday but there will be none on Tuesday.

Advertisers and contributors are asked to take note of Tuesday's holiday.

day and submit all copy and advertising matter in time for Monday's edition.

No exercises of any kind had been planned for the day. The Coastal Plain league will provide a full card for the occasion with a double header scheduled for all clubs. Greenville will play at Ayden at 10 a. m. and Ayden will play here at 4 p. m. in the afternoon. Big crowds were expected at both games in view of the tight race for top position honors.

AIR RACE LID OFF THE LADY BIRD

Los Angeles—(AP)—Woman's place in the aviation sun, cramped in other years, draws a front row seat at the national air races which will be run at the municipal airport here July 1-2-3-4.

If there was reason in the past for a feminine complaint about lack of opportunity to win cash, glory and whatever else goes with triumphs in aerial speed, 1933 comes forward with a broad welcome to women as contenders.

The races this year will allow Miss Flier to enter, with one exception, every event on the four-day program. Possibly opportunity will be premature for her ability, but the chance will be there.

As race time draws near, two women stand out as the likely leaders of the dashes against time and men. Mae Hazelip, wife of the cross country speed champion, Jimmie Hazelip, of St. Louis, and Gladys O'Donnell, air school owner of Long Beach, Cal., graduated from the novice class so long ago that the ranking with the men has come to be accepted.

Few followers of aviation will forget the dazzling speed which Mrs. Hazelip established at the races in Cleveland last September when she gave a tiny speed ship the gun and flew down a straightaway course at 225 miles an hour. And if she could have found a plane, no doubt she would have challenged the men and precedent in the super closed course classic, the Thompson trophy race.

This year Mrs. Hazelip will have the flying equipment to do all the speeding she desires. Jimmie Wedell, who grew almost overnight into an outstanding designer and pilot, by sweeping all three places in the transcontinental dash with his planes, taking one of them himself last year, has given her the black-bodied "OW" in which her husband flew in 1932 to victory in the cross-country event.

Gladys O'Donnell, winner of the women's classic last year, the Aero trophy race with a purse of $3,000, which she walked away with at a speed of 185.47 miles an hour, has kept her plans for 1933 to herself, as in the past, but she will be present to worry the men fliers.

MRS. WORTHINGTON HONORED AT KINSTON. Kinston, N. C., June 30.—Mrs. H. T. Gray entertained at a tea and shower recently complimenting her niece, Mrs. Walton Woodrow Worthington, formerly Miss Inez Taylor Rollins of Waterville. The party was given at the Moore log cabin near the city.

The guests were met and directed to the punch bowl by Mrs. J. L. Rollins, mother of the bride, Mrs. Worthington and Mrs. Gray. The punch bowl was presided over by Mrs. Bruce Heath and Mrs. Robert Raeford.

The registration book was in charge of Miss Bettie White. A very interesting bride's contest was given out. Miss Bettie White received this prize, a lovely Irish linen handkerchief. She presented this to the bride.

Each guest was asked to write their favorite recipe in the bride's cook book.

A sudden tap was heard at the cabin door and Master Lemuel Taylor Gray walked straight to Mrs. Worthington with a floral package, it proving to be a beautiful shoulder corsage of pink roses and snapdragons to match the lovely afternoon dress of pink crepe that Mrs. Worthington wore. The little fellow then asked her to follow him. They were met on the porch of the cabin by little Misses Annie Doris Heath daintily dressed in blue crepe and Mary Elizabeth Wooten in yellow. They presented a laundry basket laden with beautiful gifts to the honored guest. The basket was topped with a huge rolling pin tied with pink tulle. The color scheme of pink and green was carried out in decorations and refreshments. Tea was poured and sandwiches passed by Miss Ernestine Rollins, sister of the bride, and Miss Susie Harper.

The bride is widely known in this city and has a host of friends all over the state. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Lemuel Taylor, Sr., of this city.

Camera Caught It. Disdaining Net Fighting Salmon 'Lands' Self. You've heard of the fish that leaped into the boat, but it's a rare thing for a photographer to catch him in the act.

The scenes above were snapped by an Associated Press camera man on vacation at Grand Lake, Maine. The unwilling principal was a landlocked salmon, a fighting game fish and a prize for any angler.

The catch was made with a fly on a five-ounce split bamboo rod. In the top photo the salmon just has been hooked; in the second he has leaped clear of the water in a desperate effort to escape.

The lower picture is the prize of the lot, snapped by a stroke of good fortune just as the fish, in a last leap to escape the net, landed squarely in the boat, the photographer was not aware he had gotten the remarkable shot until the film was developed.

albeit with somewhat more difficulty than if the gardner had been a bit less lenient, up to now.

Most persons know that an insecticide must be used that does not harm the tender bean foliage, and that such a spray is: Magnesium arsenate, one fairly well-rounded tablespoonful; water, one gallon. They know, as well that a proper dust is made by mixing: Calcium arsenate, one part; sulphur, one part; lime, 4 parts, all by weight. Another dust formula is: Magnesium arsenate, one part; lime 6. It is well known, too, that the sprayer or duster must have an upturned nozzle, so that the material may be applied to the undersides of the leaves where the bean beetles always feed.

What many gardeners overlook however, is that the dust or spray applications must be made at certain intervals, and following a fairly specific schedule, if they are to be effective.

To wait until the leaves have been riddled is to have waited too long, for riddled leaves are past restoring. On the other hand, many gardeners lean over backwards in that they spray so early that when the need for the poison has arrived much of it has washed off, or else so much new growth of foliage has taken place that the plants are relatively unprotected, the gardner, however, having done his spraying blithely unaware until he finds that a veritable horde of beetles has gotten on his plants anyhow.

No schedule can be laid out that will fit all cases, but here is an approach to a plan that many gardeners have used and found satisfactory:

"If the wintered-over beetle damage seems severe, dust or spray. Then begin keeping sharp lookout on the undersides of the leaves, for egg-clusters. When the first of these is seen, dust or spray, and TEN DAYS LATER, whether you think the beans need it or not, dust or spray again."

Modifications of this schedule may have to be made. For example, a rainstorm may wash off enough of the material to take replacement necessary. If dust has been used while a considerable breeze was blowing, portions of the row may have to be re-dusted. A good plan would be to mark certain egg-clusters to see whether they take place within a day or so after hatching has taken place. What-ever modifications need be made, the main structure of the schedule will be found to hold, and if the work has been done in a thorough manner quite satisfactory control of the Mexican bean beetle is assured.

Modifications of this schedule may have to be made. For example, a rainstorm may wash off enough of the material to take replacement necessary.

AYDEN FALLS GAME BEHIND AS LOCALS WIN

"Lefty" Sigmon, recent acquisition of the Greenville club of the Coastal Plain league, hurled Greenville to a 6 to 1 victory over Ayden yesterday afternoon.

The victory gave the local club a tighter grip on the top of the circuit being a full game ahead of Kinston which is fighting hard to push Greenville off the top.

The game was one of the finest exhibitions seen in the circuit this season. Sigmon had complete control of the situation from the first inning on and the only run obtained by Ayden came in the fifth frame with a circuit clout by Wall, Ayden left fielder.

Both Flythe and Johnson were used in an effort to halt the batting attack of the Greenville club which resulted in one run in the sixth, three in the seventh and two in the eighth. Neither club was able to tally until the fifth when the circuit drive gave Ayden the first marker.

Flythe yielded seven hits in seven and a third innings and Johnson gave up one in one and two-third innings.

Sigmon allowed the Ayden club only three hits for the entire game and they were so well scattered that only the one for four bases counted for anything.

Bostic and Rogers did the heavy stick work for Greenville, the former being credited with a double and a single which counted for as many runs, while the latter came in for two singles.

In addition to pitching airtight ball in pinches, Sigmon had the distinction of going the entire nine frames without issuing a single free pass to first. He was credited with five strikeouts, while Flythe and Johnson registered nine.

Snow Hill came to Greenville this afternoon in an effort to make it three straight in a week. The Greenville club downed the locals on their home ground last Saturday and again Wednesday.

Manager Milton Harrington announced today his club was losing R. Dean, second baseman, who has been called back to Duke on account of business. Dean has made a fine showing with the locals and aided materially in their gaining the top rung of the circuit.

THEY SHOULDN'T BE UP THERE

But What Can You Do With A Team Like Those Giants

Above are three reasons why their critics contend the Giants have no business leading the National League. Critz and Ryan can't hit, much; Mancuso is erratic and O'Doul can't peg a ball from here to there. But they can win ball games, which after all, is the main idea.

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York—(AP)—One of the most pleasurable afternoons available this vacation season is one spent in the press box at the Polo Grounds, observing the puzzled expressions worn by the baseball experts of the metropolitan sector.

They are the same jolly group who had a peck of fun late last season with Bill Terry, who at that time was very serious about rebuilding his Giants.

"Yesir," Bill would say, "we might not win that flag next year, but we'll be up there in the race." And how the boys would chuckle and wink wisely when Bill wasn't looking. It was good—Bill wrecking a second division club and making a pennant contender out of the pieces.

Slightly Flabbergasted
So they're sitting there each afternoon now, watching those Giants win ball games and feeling—well, flabbergasted. They don't believe it. The more they watch the "Jints" the less they believe it.

"It must be what they call a 'team of destiny' or something" one veteran observer sighed after watching Bill's rascals make five errors and four hits and win a ball game going away. They've done that so many times this season it has ceased to be a novelty.

Maybe it is 'destiny.' It's bound to be something. The Giants have been getting sensational pitching from Hubbell, Fitzsimmons and Schumacher. That's granted, but even pitching isn't enough to account entirely for the miraculous success of a team with so many uncertain links.

A Bunch of Sluggers
The club can't hit. Only Mel Ott and Johnny Vergez of the regulars are over the 300 mark. At last reports Blondie Ryan, the club's shortstop was pasting that apple at a .204 clip. Hughie Critz at second was hitting .216 and Gus Mancuso, catcher, had a .244 average.

But what do you think of this, my dear Watson? Ryan, with 38 hits, had driven in precisely the same number of runs as has Chick Fullis of the Phillies with 94 safeties—3 apiece. Ryan had knocked in only seven less than Pepper Martin of the Cards, with a .249 average. Then there's Critz. He, like Ryan, has a habit now and then of kicking a ground ball all over the infield and then heaving it into one of the better box seats. He and Ryan at times collaborate in kicking the ball around until they have filled the bases and brought down the wrath of Giant fandom.

Then, with that setting, they'll come up with a couple of chances that would knock your eyes out, retire the side with a flourish and trot to the dugout with the huzzahs of the multitude ringing in their ears. It's almost uncanny.

What A Catcher!
Mancuso they call 'butter-fingers' in the press box. In Mid-June he was leading the backstops of both leagues in passed balls. Some of his attempted pegs are frightful to behold and more than one observer has come down with the jitters after watching him stagger around under a high foul. But in the tight spots he looks like a combination of every good catcher who ever trod on an umpire's bunion.

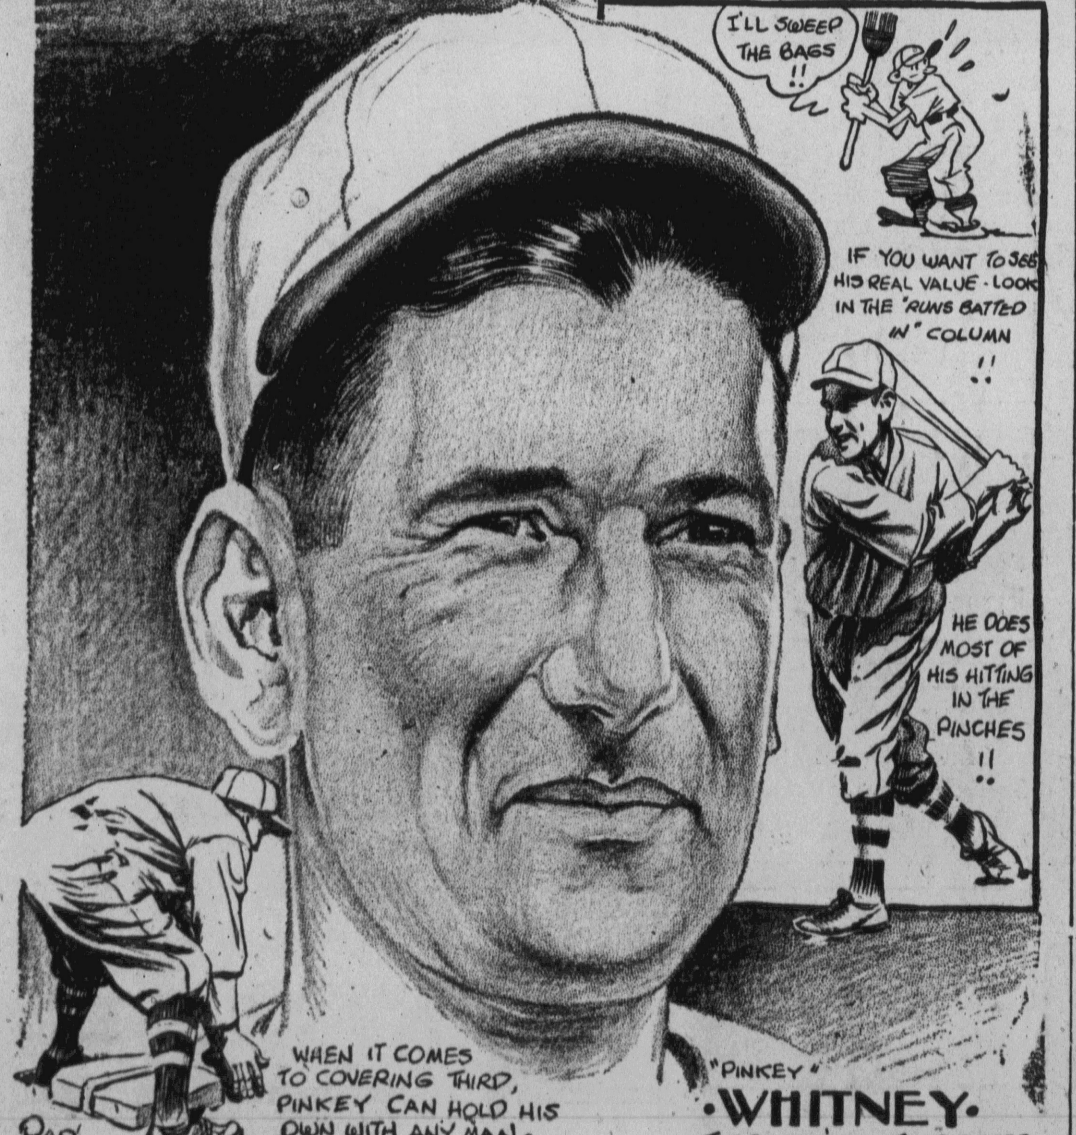

The latest addition to the 'destiny' team's family circle is Frank 'Lefty' O'Doul, late of the Brooklyn, who couldn't peg a ball from left field to second base with a sling-shot. However, if you think the fact is of any moment you don't know the Giants.

Chances are that any baserunner who tries to take advantage of Lefty's weakness will fall and break three bones and be tagged out while he lies there in pain.

SNOW HILL WINS
Snow Hill, July 1—Snow Hill defeated Kinston 12-11 here today to drop Kinston from a top - place tie and boost the local cellarites within a game and a half of the Coastal Plain loop top.

Snow Hill outthit the visitors, 13 to 9, with Nelm getting four to set the pace. Duke, Newborn and Fulghum hit homers, each with two on for Snow Hill. Campbell and Brinson each with two hits led Kinston.

Batteries: Kinston—Register, Ogden, Faulkner and Dudley. Snow Hill—White, McGowan and Potts. Snow Hill plays at Greenville tomorrow.

WHEN IT COMES TO COVERING THIRD, PINKEY CAN HOLD HIS OWN WITH ANY MAN. PINKEY WHITNEY. THE BRANES NEW THIRD SACKER.

New York Cotton

New York, July 1—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady 14 to 19 advance on higher Liverpool cables and rise in foreign exchange.

Renewed commission house and trade buying with revival of confidence to President Roosevelt's attitude on stabilization as well as favorable interperation of the weeks end trade views and continued dry hot weather in the western belt carried cotton up one dollar a bale during the early season.

The July position advanced to 10.20 compared to 9.99 at close of Friday while December gained 23 points to 10.56. Prices at end of first hour were within a few points of the top.

Futures closed steady 10 to 14 higher, spots quiet, middling 10.30.
