NATIONAL COTTON REDUCTION DRIVE A SUCCESS

World Conference Will Continue To Consider Monetary Problems

Action Comes After Speech By James Cox

POSITION OF AMERICA IS EXPLAINED

American Delegates Induce Steering Committee to Continue Work; Federal Reserve Veto Did Not Apply to Actual Consideration of Central Bank Cooperation as First Thought

London, July 13.—(AP)—New life was injected into the drowsy world economic conference today by James M. Cox of Ohio who convinced his colleagues of the steering committee that the parity could usefully continue despite refusal of the Federal Reserve Board to consider cooperation of central banks.

In a fighting speech which one delegate said "curled the hair of the leaders of the conference," Cox gave a clear exposition of American difficulties and induced the committee to agree to keep working at the problem of silver and commercial indebtedness.

Indeed there was expectation today that the central bank controversy might after all be dealt with by eliminating features of the resolution which were objectionable to the Federal Reserve authorities.

It was understood this possibility was being taken up with Washington.

The Federal Reserve Board was reported yesterday to consider such discussion premature but it developed today that the board really considered that the agreement at this time on central banks cooperation was premature.

Will Business, Need Roosevelt's Tonic

By BYRON PDICE

The big question agitating Washington just now is whether some of the major projects of the Roosevelt recovery program ought to be put to effect at all.

The sustained business upturn, coming before the administration had a chance to try its new powers, has surprised politicians and "brain-trusters" alike. They are pleased in a way, but confused as well.

They are like a group of surgeons, gathered in their white robes to perform a desperate emergency operation on a patient who suddenly sits up on the operating table and shows a hearty disposition to go places and do things.

BAD WEATHER HALTS LINDY

Flyer and Wife Remain at St. Johns Waiting Improved Flying Conditions

St. Johns, N. F., July 13.—(AP)—Unfavorable flying weather along the New Foundland coast prevented Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh from continuing today on their aerial mapping expedition.

The famous flying couple had looked forward to meeting General Italo Balbo's flying squadron at Cartwright but General Balbo led his planes southward from there today for Shediac.

MRS. AYCOCK IS RAIL HEAD

Wife of Former Governor Named President of N. C. State-Owned Rail Line

Raleigh, July 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Charles Brantley Aycock, wife of the late governor, today was appointed president of the state controlled North Carolina Railroad, and Herbert Peele, publisher of the Elizabeth City Advance, was named secretary-treasurer by Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus.

The governor's appointments, which are in the form of nominations, are to be presented at a meeting of the stockholders to be held in Greensboro today.

As the state owns controlling interest in the railroad, the governor's proxy, Gilbert Powell, Greensboro attorney, was instructed to vote for the full slate of appointments.

Norman Sheppard of Smithfield, was named attorney and Ed Thonison of Charlotte, was selected expert.

The railroad appointments are considered among the choicest of state political plums. The president gets $800 annually, the secretary-treasurer, $2,400 yearly; the attorney draws $900 a year with all directors getting railroad passes. The officers have no duties except to attend meetings.

Then He Acts

In the matter of the wheat program the President said "go ahead."

The maximum processing tax was imposed, even though the price rise already had accomplished a large part of the improvement the processing tax itself was designed to accomplish.

In the matter of inflation, he has exercised virtually none of the inflationary power given him by congress. Apparently, he is giving no thought whatever to using the extreme power of revaluing the gold dollar.

KIDNAPPERS FREE FACTOR

Chicago Man Released Near Place Where He Was Abducted; Two Others Missing

(By Associated Press)

Two of three recent kidnap victims remained in the power of abductors today.

John "Jake" Factor of Chicago, was released in LaGrange, Ill., a few miles south of where he was kidnapped July 1. He said he paid no ransom, though officers believe he did.

John J. O'Connell, Jr., of Albany, N. Y., abducted July 7 from near his home, and August Luer, aged banker of Alton, Ill., who was taken from his home July 10, are still missing.

FILES ACTION AGAINST CITY

Negro Seeks $15,000 Damages For Injuries in Contact With Live Wire

Claiming to have been permanently disabled when he came in contact with a live power line, Arthur Mavis, colored, of the Ballard's Cross Roads community, filed suit for $15,000 damages in Superior court today against the City of Greenville and the Water & Light Commission.

Papers were filed with Clerk of Superior Court J. F. Harrington late yesterday afternoon and were to be served on the defendants sometime today.

Mavis claims that he sustained painful injuries when he came in contact with a broken electric wire of the Greenville power plant at the home of Alex Moyer, who resides a short distance from Ballard's Cross Roads.

The complaint alleges he was walking across the yard and was knocked unconscious as his shoulder came in contact with the wire which was broken and dangling in the yard in front of the house.

As a result, it is claimed the plaintiff was terribly shocked and burned, suffering injuries to the arm and shoulder which rendered him permanently disabled.

FOGLEMEN TO DIE IN CHAIR

Father of Three Children to be Executed at State Prison Tomorrow

Raleigh, July 13.—(AP)—Clay Fogleman, 30-year-old Rockingham county man and father of three children, prepared today to be executed at State prison tomorrow.

This morning Clay's head was shaved and later prison attaches turned the electric chair.

Fogleman asked that he be baptized, saying he had accepted the faith when he was 15 years of age but had gone back on it a few months later.

Dr. Eugene Few, pastor of Edenton Street Methodist Church, said he would perform the rites this afternoon.

"An innocent man will go in there," Fogleman told newspapermen as he nodded toward the end of death row where the small death chamber is located.

He steadfastly maintained he was not guilty of murder.

Governor Ehringhaus, to whom Fogleman's aged mother and young wife had carried their plea for clemency, announced he would not interfere.

HELD FOR COURT IN TRAGEDY OF HIGHWAY

Kinston, July 13.—Clem Chavin, negro chauffeur for Mrs. W. A. Erwin, Jr., of Durham, has been bound over to superior court on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the fatal injuring of Mrs. John T. Whitefield a short distance from the City some weeks ago. He was given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate H. L. Pate.

The case is expected to be heard during a criminal term of court to begin August 21. An automobile Chavin drove collided with the Whitefield car, driven by Mr. Whitefield who testified he put out his hand to give a signal before making a left turn. Witnesses testified the Negro was speeding. The defense put on no evidence.

POSTMASTERS NAMED AT THREE STATE POINTS

Washington, July 13.—The Post office Department, today, upon the recommendation of Representative Lindsay Warren, named acting postmasters at Gates, Sunbury and Pungo. Gates and Sunbury were third class offices, which recently went to the fourth class, thereby causing vacancies, while at Pungo a fourth class office, there was a resignation. Riddick W. Gatling was named at Gates; Frank L. Nixon at Sunbury and Dennis Swindell at Pungo.

PITT COTTON DRIVE GIVES BIG SUCCESS

County Goes Well Above Bale Maximum as Reduction Campaign Ends

The federal cotton production control campaign which came to a close last night found Pitt county farmers more strongly entrenched in the plan to take 3,000,000 bales of cotton out of production this year as a means of stimulating prices.

E. F. Arnold, director of the cotton control sign-up in this county, said this morning figures compiled last night by the committee here showed 1,104 contracts had been signed. They provided for the elimination of 4,587 acres, or the equivalent of 2,800 bales.

The total number of bales was well above the government maximum for the county, although acreage was slightly under the maximum and well above the minimum.

Mr. Arnold said there were a number of contracts in the hands of committees to be turned in today and that these would swell the county total to mighty near the acreage maximum.

With the national campaign virtually a success as reported from Washington today, farmers were anticipating orders to begin plowing up the part of the crop they agreed to take out of cultivation.

No action, however, will be taken until due notice to start the plows moving has been received from Washington City.

Mr. Arnold today received a copy of a telegram sent to Dean I. O. Schaub, of Raleigh, director of the state campaign, from C. A. Cobb, national director, asking that county agents provide the names of farmers who did not cooperate in the cotton reduction drive.

A previous message had stated that growers who had received loans from the government had refused to actively participate in the campaign, holding their crop with the expectation of letting the other fellow do all the cutting.

The information will be used in future action by the government. Just what this action would be was not known but it was believed growers refusing to cooperate will find it difficult to obtain government loans in the future.

FORGER BEING BROUGHT BACK

James Cox, Jr., Arrested in Washington, Returned Here For Trial

James Cox, Jr., of the Winterville community, wanted here on a charge of forgery, was being returned from Washington City today to face preliminary hearing here.

Sheriff Whitehurst left for the national capital yesterday to take the prisoner in charge after authorities there had notified local police of his arrest. The sheriff and his captive were expected to reach Greenville late this afternoon where Cox will be confined in the county jail to await hearing.

Just how Washington police obtained information regarding the forgery in 1931 was unknown in police circles here, but it was thought he might have been traced through banking circles.

Cox is alleged to have forged two checks for $12 each on Billie Branch, local tobacco auctioneer. The checks were cashed by the Greenville Banking & Trust Company and when the crime was discovered Cox had vanished.

Nothing had been heard of his whereabouts until Washington authorities notified the sheriff's office they were holding Cox for action in the county.

AIR ARMADA STILL FLYING

Italians Push Toward Shediac, N. B., On Trip To Chicago Fair

Cartwright, Labrador, July 13.—(AP)—Italy's powerful air armada took off today and roared down the Labrador coast on its 800 mile flight to Shediac, N. B., its next halting place on the journey from Orbetello to Chicago.

The seaplane piloted by General Italo Balbo, youthful bearded leader of the expedition, was first of the group to rise from the water at 8:30 a. m. (EST).

Other groups followed in formation until at 8:55 the entire fleet of 24 seaplanes were in the air.

General Balbo expected to reach Shediac in about five hours. How long the armada would remain at Shediac would depend on weather conditions, he said, but his men would stay long enough to attend receptions which are being prepared in their honor.

LANIER GETS FEDERAL POST

Local Attorney Appointed Expert in Tobacco Marketing Agreement

J. C. Lanier, prominent Greenville lawyer, and commander of the Pitt County Post of the American Legion has been appointed as expert in marketing agreements in relation to the tobacco division of the Farm Adjustment Act of the federal government.

Announcement of the appointment was made through the United States Department of Agriculture late yesterday afternoon and was received in this city today.

The action will become effective Monday.

Mr. Lanier will be stationed in Washington City. The position is permanent and is one of the most important in connection with administration of the new marketing act.

By reason of his close affiliation with the tobacco industry all of his life, Mr. Lanier is well qualified for the position. His legal talent also will stand him in good stead in the handling of complex problems dealing with marketing agreements as they affect this important industry.

DOCTOR AIDED MUTILATORS

Police Believe Physician Helped Assaults of Two St. Paul Doctors

St. Paul, Minn., July 13.—(AP)—A belief that one member of the gang which attacked two St. Paul doctors was familiar with the practice of medicine today heightened yesterday's mutilation case as police sought for a motive for the crime.

The two victims, Dr. E. J. Enberg, prominent physician, and Dr. W. H. Hedberg, president of the Minnesota Chiropractic Association, were not able to establish identity of their assailants.

Dr. Enberg was kidnapped in an attempt for him to mutilate Dr. Hedberg. Police said Hedberg continued to insist he did not have any idea who perpetrated the attack or what motive inspired it.

However, the physicians who are treating Hedberg were of the opinion that a hypodermic and anesthetic were given by a man more or less familiar with the practice of medicine.

If such were the case, it was pointed out, it would be difficult to explain why the operation could not have been performed by this man rather than calling on Dr. Enberg.

Logan Elm Rejuvenated. Columbus, Ohio.—(AP)—The historic Logan elm of Pickaway county, Ohio, is showing decided signs of rejuvenation as a result of steps taken to restore it and to provide its roots with rich plant food. The leaves this year are thick and green and terminal twigs this year have made a growth of six to eight inches as compared to one and two inches last year.

FARMERS TO RECEIVE BIG SUM OF MONEY

Administration Confident 3,000,000 Bales Will be Reached; Total Reduction May Reach 4,000,000 Bales; Wallace Commends Farmers For Intelligent Response to Government Campaign.

Atlanta, July 13.—(AP)—Southern planters figured their potential profit in millions today as cotton covered about all percent even and administrators described cotton acreage cut price stimulus a success.

Official figures on the curtailment drive that closed at midnight were not available but in Washington Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture, said he believed when all returns are in it will be shown that the south had made one of the greatest demonstrations of intelligence and unified action in history of American agriculture.

Unofficially it was said, the aggregate production cut by cotton planters might exceed the original goal of 11,000,000 acres.

Administrators were confident that the crop would be reduced by 3,000,000 bales with some expecting the figure to reach 4,000,000 bales.

SAYS HE WANTS TO DESTROY SALES TAX

Greenville, July 13.—"This is not an effort to enforce the law but to destroy it," declared D. Lacy McBryde, solicitor of the county court today explaining why he had issued warrants against two chain store managers for violation of the provisions for passing the sales tax.

Mr. McBryde stated the case would probably be tried in recorders court Thursday. He was waiting to hear from Attorney General Dennis G. Brummitt on the matter.

One reason for this prosecution he stated "it to get the sales tax before the Supreme Court with the hope that it will be declared unconstitutional. This step is necessary because the Legislature has denied relief by injunction against the collection of the tax.

COMMUNITY GARDEN YIELDS FOOD FOR NEEDY

Washington, N. C., July 13.—Approximately 2,000 ears of corn and 25 bushels of squash, gathered from the community garden Tuesday, were brought by truck to the office of Mrs. Jarl Bowers, Associated Charities superintendent, to be distributed among the needy families in the city.

Since May the vegetables gathered from the community garden have been canned at the high school building under the supervision of Mrs. J. W. Dudley, Jr., and Mrs. J. M. Kerr, appointed canning supervisors for the city of Washington. However, several times since the canning work was started, large amounts of produce have been turned over to the Associated Charities.

Late News Flashes

Fogleman Gets Respite. Raleigh, July 13.—(AP)—Clay Fogleman, Rockingham county man, scheduled to die in the electric chair tomorrow, received a reprieve from the governor this afternoon after a hearing in the governor's office during which Fogleman's counsel portrayed for the governor the circumstances surrounding the killing of W. J. Carter, filling station proprietor.

The governor granted a five day reprieve but under the state law Fogleman's death date is set for August 4.

In a dramatic scene the governor within two minutes after his newsmen he had not changed his mind in the case, directed Police Commissioner Edward Gill to prepare a reprieve of five days. The action came after Fogleman. (Continued On Page Four)

A GOOD MAN FOR THE PLACE

The announcement of the appointment of J. Con Lanier, of this city, to the post of marketing expert of Tobacco Administration meets with the hearty approval of his friends in this county and section.

From the farmer's standpoint, Mr. Lanier is himself the operator of several farms which gives him the farmer's viewpoint, his several years of law practice gives him the legal ability necessary to the post and his political record in this city and county makes his appointment acceptable to all classes, especially the tobacco growing interests.

ADVERTISING AND THE "NEW DEAL"

That advertising has played a great part in keeping our county to the front and will play even a greater part in the recovery of industry and business in general is the opinion of those in high authority now administering the affairs of the nation.

Postmaster General Farley, talking to a group of Chicago advertising men, said: "To the advertising man is due a great deal of the credit for the upbuilding of our country, making it the richest, the most prosperous land in the world. Advertising has created a larger demand for those things which make for better living conditions."

President Roosevelt, in a message sent to the recent annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America, said: "I hope the high standards which have made good advertising an economic and social force of vital importance to us will be continued. Your co-operation will be valuable to the restoration of the flow of trade. It will help business

Chapter 40 NICHOLAS EXPLAINS For a moment Georgie stared at Nicholas more like a child than ever in her distress; then she swayed a little towards him, grasping at her gloves and handbag.

"All right," she said faintly. "I'll go. I'm sorry I bothered you." But when she would have turned blindly away he spoke her name gently. "Robin."

"Yes," but now she would not look at him. "It's an impossible position, this friendship between us. It's tragic too. You've been so kind to me that I can't bear to hurt you, but I told you before, weeks ago, that I must end. No matter how innocent it may be people will misjudge us."

"I know. That's why I must protect you. The world is not a charitable place, and if it knew that you—" "That I was running after you," Georgie said ruthlessly as he stopped. "I suppose that's how the world would put it, wouldn't it?" "Possibly, and they would say too, that it is a damned shame for

"What reward do you want?" asked Bernie raised it to his lips. "Goodbye, my little girl." And Georgie was too happy to notice that he said goodbye. Bernie Boyd leaned her chin on her white hands and looked at Bishop from beneath her long lashes.

"You're such a dear," she said softly. Bishop flicked the ash from his cigar and raised his eyes. "Is that to be my only reward for financing your new enterprise?" he asked unemotionally.

Bernie's long lashes went down demurely and her reddened lips smiled. "What other reward do you want?" she asked. There was a little silence, during which both of them did some rapid thinking, then Bishop said: "Perhaps it is so great a reward that I hesitate to speak of it."

Bernie's white hand rested for a moment on his coat sleeve. "Am I so terrible?" she whispered. Bishop's sombre eyes searched her face, the face which to him was little more than a mask, a greedy mask perhaps, badly veiling the ambitions and aspirations of her mind.

She missed the irony of his voice as he answered her. "But I am an old man, and you, well, you have but to look in the glass." Bernie sighed, well pleased and sipped her wine, smiling at him across the table.

"To the granting of your reward, whatever it may," she said. He echoed her words gravely. "To my reward, whatever it may be."

"You know, you are a very strong man," Bernie said. "Different from any man I have known before." She usually began her conversation with a new admirer in this fashion, and she had never known it to fail.

"In what way am I strange?" he asked. She shrugged her slim shoulders. "You are so difficult to understand. When we first met, you took no notice of me at all."

"Perhaps I am cleverer at hiding my feelings than most men," Bishop said dryly. "Much cleverer," she agreed readily. "Most men are all on the surface, don't you think?" "And some women," Bishop supplemented.

ran a patisserie on the edge of Paris. The boy worked like a galley slave for two years in the bakery basement; the story of those two years makes up a good half of the book, and is one of the most interesting and pathetic that has come to light this year.

Once out of the basement, M. Hamp's rise was rather rapid, and is very pleasantly told. One by one the writer added outside interests, acquired additional knowledge. In order to learn English, for example, he took lessons on the mandolin.

English novels full of vicars, spinsters, titled gentry and such have had, perhaps, more than their share of ridicule. By no means every novel with a vicar in it is a bore, as witness "Once They Were Rich," by D. L. Murray.

The book is heavily laden with the stock characters, to be sure, and its motivating catastrophe is the familiar loss of the family fortune. But none of the characters is taken at all seriously, and some of them are delightfully insane—the sort of light caricature that is more difficult than the most uncompromising savaging.

Sir Valentine's family decides to raise chickens, as a matter of fact, in order to keep the wolf over the fence, and horses also enter the plot rather prominently. There is an adequate and smoothly handled "love interest" and a large number of remarkably neat lines.

Ishbel Ross has titled her latest novel "Marriage in Gotham," in spite of the fact that it really is about divorce in that locality. It is a competent study of one phase of the problem too, albeit some of the characters are a little insubstantial, and the problem is by no means a typical example.

How's Your Health

CANCER HOUSES. Before the discovery of the tubercle bacillus in 1882 by Robert Koch, statistical studies gave rise to the impression that there were such things as "tuberculosis houses" and "lung blocks."

These were districts and houses, usually located in poor and crowded sections, in which there were many victims of the White Plague.

In recent years the question has again been raised in terms of cancer. Do cancer houses or cancer districts really exist? The basis for such questions is found in statistical studies showing the number of cases recorded by houses or districts.

Statistical data, however, sometimes lead to bizarre deductions. Thus, for example, it was observed some 80 years ago that our infant mortality is highest when the asphalt is softest. This correlation is purely accidental and not causative.

Before the days of the refrigeration of food and the pasteurization of milk, epidemics of diarrhea, or as it was called, summer complaint, cost the lives of many children. Naturally, the hotter the weather, the more rapid milk soured and the more severe were the cases of infantile diarrhea. Incidentally, too, the asphalt was softened.

As in this case, so in the case of the alleged cancer houses, the statistical method can prove nothing. It is quite evident that in most crowded houses where the greatest number of tenants are to be found there would normally be the greatest number of cancer, of births, deaths, or other physiologic and pathologic phenomena.

There is only one condition which modifies these observations, and that condition is occupational and industrial. Thus in districts where workers are exposed to what are known as carcinogenic substances, that is, substances which are known to provoke cancerous growths, the incidence of cancer cases is higher than normal.

Beauty Hints

By MARGARET STRAND (Screen Actress)

I spend every moment I possibly can out of doors, drinking in sunshine and fresh air. I've been told, of course, that sun and wind are bad for the complexion, but personally, I'd rather have naturally rosy cheeks and bright sparkling eyes than the smoothest skin in the world.

But I believe, too, in caring for my complexion.

WILL BUSINES NEED ROOSEVELT TONIC

Some of those highest in administration counsels would rather not spend a penny of the $3,300,000,000 authorized for public works. With thousands going back to work in normal activities, they argue that vast employment expenditures no longer are necessary, and that the projected issue of public works bonds just now would do more harm than good.

So far, the new railroad administration scarcely has turned a wheel.

except for mediation in a wage dispute.

While it was getting ready, carloading jumped so unexpectedly that the men higher up began wondering whether it might not be better to let nature apply her own restoratives.

Not Unanimous Here. The hardest nut of all to crack is the industry control problem, because it affects the most people.

Many industrial leaders who, on a lower market, prayed to Washington for salvation, now are hanging back and making excuses when invited under the wing of the industries act. Some highest officials, too, who wince at hesitation.

Through two feverish weeks General Johnson and his industrial aids labored to have the textile practice code ready for the President's signature on his return from vacation. He returned. Nearly a week passed before he acted, and then his approval was given with reservations.

Predictions what Mr. Roosevelt will do in specific cases are just plain guesses.

The only safe prophecy is that he will keep a free hand respecting the vast power voted him, using those which from day to day appear to him desirable, and pigeon-holing the rest.

FOUR BASE DIRVE GIVES KINSTON WIN

All the king's men, not all the king's horses couldn't stop that Kinston club again.

As a consequence, the Lenoir county lads nosed out a 2-1 victory over Greenville at Third street school athletic field yesterday afternoon and sent the former league leaders hurtling to third place.

While Kinston was winning here, Snow Hill came out with the big end of the score at Ayden and sent the league leaders back to second place—a position they have held the most of the season with Greenville occupying the top rung.

The upset provided by the Kinston club, rated to lose, gave the standing of clubs column an entirely new complexion. It is the first time Greenville has dropped to the third position since the opening of the league nearly two months ago. Previously the club had played between first and second places with Ayden providing most of the competition.

With a new conqueror on the top in the form of Snow Hill fans were looking for something spectacular in the way of a comeback on the part of Greenville and Ayden within the next few days and if they don't get it, well it's possible there will be a pronounced change in lineups.

Douglas provided the highlight of the Kinston clash under clouded skies yesterday when he rapped out a home run over left field fence in the sixth stanza with one man on the paths to give his team a one run lead. It was a powerful drive and sent the ball over the fence and under the bleachers where the sphere was recovered with difficulty by a number of young baseball fans probably waiting for a home run act to be pulled off.

Greenville sent one runner over the rubber in early stages of the contest, and while runners were gotten on the paths several times hits were lacking to score them.

Stockton who lives up to his name because of his stocky figure, pitched a fine game for the visitors and held the local club hitless when the slightest kind of a single would have sent runners romping home with the bacon. He allowed only three hits.

Bob Forbes, who defeated Kinston with his dazzling curves last week, went like a house afire until the sixth frame when Douglas slipped the old pill out of the garden to put the game on ice. Sigmon was sent to the mound with two men on base at this stage of the game and went the rest of the way with out allowing a hit, although Forbes yielded up six.

Both teams fielded in airtight form despite the near soggy condition of the diamond and not an error was credited to either. White, the new Greenville second baseman, made his debut and drew applause with several fine stops.

Tomorrow Greenville will play at Kinston and Saturday at Ayden.

SPORT SEANTS

By ALAN GOULD

The great American ball game between all stars of the two major leagues not only attracted widespread interest and sowed the seed of a novelty that may lead to some far reaching changes in schedule-making for 1934, but it proved just one thing, from the competitive viewpoint.

It simply demonstrated that the one and only George Herman Ruth is still the greatest showman of them all, a player whose ability to rise to the heights of spotlight moments is unmatched by any other athlete over a period of two decades. And we have known that right along.

That can't even be much sting for my friends of the National league in knowing that it took one of the Babe's mighty blows, off little Bill Hallahan, to decide the outcome of a game bringing together the best players of the rival big leagues.

They are well used to being buffeted around by the Yankee slugger. The Giants, the Pirates, the Cardinals and the Cubs have known what it means to irritate the great man or to have him aroused at critical moments of world series play in the last dozen years.

National leaguers, from President John Arnold Heydler down to the bat boy, concede the Babe is the one man they can't stop so long as he can trundle himself up to the batting box. Their only solace is that he can't last forever, although his mere appearance in the park in future moments when his playing career is ended may tend to strike fear into the rival camp.

Relieves Monotony
To any but the most stubborn and hide-bound major club owner, it must have been apparent that the all-star game was a simulan, likewise proof that big league fandom is keen to have some departures in the old order.

Prehaps a series of mid-season games between such all-star lineups would help relieve the monotony that so often develops in the pennant races.

Prehaps the "break" could be better effected by adopting one of the several suggestions now under consideration for changing the schedules of the two leagues, either to provide a "split" season such as some of the minor leagues have adopted or conduct a round-robin playoff program similar to that now popular in big league hockey.

There has been a further proposal that inter-league games be scheduled during the regular season, the results to count in the standings in each race, and thus affording the opportunity for clubs like the Yankees and Giants, the White Sox and Cubs, the Pirates and Washington Senators, the Reds and Indians, for example, to fan natural rivalries existing outside their own established circle.

Needs Something
Tradition is one of the hardest barriers to break down in any sport, especially one that has so consistently stuck to well-mapped routes as baseball.

But times have changed, many treasuries are empty, some of the biggest parks are housing mere handfuls of cash customers and something must be done by the managers to put fresh life into a sport that still unquestionably has a firm hold on popular interest and imagination.

Snow Hill Defeats Ayden
Ayden, July 12—Stewart Flythe limited Snow Hill to four hits here today but he was kind with passes and his mates errors came at the wrong time, Snow Hill defeating Ayden 8-5 and taking top place in the Coastal Plain League.

The locals got ten hits off White the attack being led by Catcher, Stephenson, with three hits. Nelms with two hits, and Mewborn, with a homer led Snow Hill. Ogden caught for the visitors.

N. C. Cotton Report Incomplete.
Raleigh, July 13—(AP)—Some 30,000 of the state's 90,000 cotton growers agreed to cut acreage of this year's cotton crop by 180,000 acres though the state was set a quota of 393,000 acres. N. C. State College authorities said today.

Charles Sheffield, assistant state director of the cotton campaign, said no complete reports of the campaign were available and when an effort was made to secure permission from Washington to release figures up to noon today it was refused.

Sheffield estimated that cotton farmers of the state had signed enough to secure $3,000,000 in cash plus options on several thousand bales of cotton.

The assistant director received word from Washington that farmers may go ahead and plant other crops between cotton rows but that not a single row of cotton was to be plowed up until planters have been individually notified that the reduction program is effective.
